Last year the pamphlet sent out by the committee included some suggested curfew guidelines. That has been dropped in the current printing.

"We heard from the kids the times were too early. The parents thought they were too late," Knowles said.

"And that isn't what we are trying to accomplish anyway."

It is up to the parent to set curfews, he said.

"I will not provide nor condone the illegal use of drugs or alcohol in my home or on my property; and I will not allow parties in my home or on my property when I am not present."

People who signed the contract last year must sign again this year, Knowles said.

The committee hopes some of the residents will contribute to the program. Last year donations from the parents paid the costs of the printing and mailing.

"We don't want people to think they have to contribute," Knowles said. "There were people who contributed different amounts."

There was one donation of $100, from Paul Barry. Most other donations came in the $20 to $10 range.

Checks can be made out to "CADC Safe Homes" and sent to Safe Homes, Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee, Cohasset Town Hall, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Knowles expects the program to grow in time.

"We were pleased with the level of participation last year," he said. But he added that for a community-wide change to be felt, about half the teen-agers would have to be involved.

"We're patient. It requires a change of attitude, acceptance on the part of the community," Knowles said.

His group provided the impetus for plans for a Drugfree Weekend scheduled for Jan. 30, 31 and Feb. 1. A citizens group has taken over the planning process for that weekend which will involve events sponsored by civic groups as well as the schools.

Cohasset's Peter Reardon returns to New England

By Heidi Dallin

Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe's magical kingdom of Camelot comes to life at the North Shore Music Theatre in Beverly from Sept. 12 through Sept. 28. The Music Theatre production is a homecoming for Cohasset native Peter Reardon who first stepped on a New England stage as a three-year old in "The King and I". In the summer of 1979 as a college student, Reardon worked both onstage and backstage as a Music Theatre apprentice. Reardon returned to the Music Theatre stage in 1988 as Jean-Michel in "La Cage Aúx Folles".

Reardon plays King Arthur's natural son, Sir Mordred, in Lerner and Loewe's classic tale of passion and honor set against the spectacular backdrop of the idyllic kingdom of Camelot. The evil knight Mordred conspires for his father's downfall and the destruction of Camelot. Reardon shares the stage with Noel Harrison, actor, singer, writer, musician and son of legendary actor Sir Rex Harrison, starring as the idealistic King Arthur, and Teresa DeZarn who comes to Beverly directly from the Broadway hit "The Secret Garden" to play Arthur's Queen Guinevere.

A graduate of Cohasset High School and Syracuse University, Reardon has performed on stages across the country and on Broadway. He made his Broadway debut in 1986 as Jean-Michel in "La Cage Aux Folles", a role which he also performed during the two year national tour with Kenne Curtis and Peter Marshall. Other New York experience includes "Leave It To Jane", "Bird of Paradise" directed by Arthur Laurents, and the Broadway production of "Meet Me In St. Louis". As a musical actor, he has appeared as Tony in "West Side Story" at New Hampshire's American Stage Festival, Teen Angel in "Grease" at Pittsburgh Civic Light Opera and in "Tomfoolery" at the Actor's Theatre of Louisville. He has toured in "Camelot" and "Fiddler On The Roof". As a dramatic actor, Reardon has appeared as Jimmy in "The Rainmaker at Theatre by the Sea, Antipholus in "Comedy of Errors" at Syracuse Stage and Herod the Nut in "Butterfingers Angel" at New York's Uba Rep. This past season he made his concert debut under the direction of John McGlinn at The Egg in Albany, New York. His television experience includes the role of Bob Cole on "All My Children" and guest appearances on "Loving" and "The Doctors".

Reardon returns to the New England area directly from the West coast where he played the title role in the Long Beach Civic Light Opera's critically-acclaimed production of "Pal Joey" with Dixie Carter and Elaine Stritch. Earlier this year he performed in Stephen Sondheim's "Marry Me A Little" at Michael Cristopher's River Arts Theatre Festival and the title role in "Pal Joey" at Goodspeed Opera House.

Peter Reardon moves with grace through the action of 'Camelot' during a rehearsal at the North Shore Music Circus in Beverly. Performances run through Sept. 28.

(Peter Reardon can be seen as Mordred in "Camelot" from Sept. 12 through Sept. 28 at the North Shore Music Theatre; 62 Dunham Rd, Beverly. (Just off Route 128 at Exit 19) Performances are Monday through Saturday at 8 p.m. with 2 p.m .Matinees on September 14,18, 21, 25 and 26. For information, or to order by phone, call (508) 922-8500. Project Turnabout offers hope despite $$$ crunch

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The stories were simple. They took drugs and lost. They lost respect, they lost money, education, jobs. They became a drain on society at large and their own families.

Then for one reason or another, they ended up living at Project Turnabout in Hingham, a place where they learned how to take responsibility for their lives. A place they call "the house of pain."

Four men told their stories Sunday afternoon outside the old brick building that once was the town almshouse. The four are all graduates of the program that provides residential treatment for drug and alcohol addictions.

They told their stories for Community Awareness Day at Project Turnabout with the hope the program can continue to function at a time when state looks shaky.

The audience for the Community Awareness Day was relatively small. Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, was there. So was the Rev. John Edson of St. John's Episcopal Church, several other members of the clergy, and two reporters. Then there were members of the agency's board of directors, the staff and the nearly 30 men who live at Turnabout.

The program has already been hit financially by state budget cuts. Last year the Department of Public Health reduced the amount it contributes to Turnabout by $53,000.

George Smart, Turnabout's executive director, said he was not forced to reduce the number served by his project due to a one-time federal grant.

Now the state is considering another cut that would reduce money for the drug rehabilitation program. If changes in general relief go through as proposed, then $80,000 would be cut from Turnabout's budget.

Hedlund voted in favor of the cut. He pointed out that the choice in the committee was to make the cut in local aid or general relief.

Smart said the $80,000 cut would translate into the loss of five beds for Turnabout.

He said it costs $18,000 a year to keep a man at Turnabout. This compares with the cost of keeping the same man in a minimum security jail for $23,000 a year or in a maximum security jail for $28,000.

But the stories were the strong point of the day.

Steve stood up at the microphone, wearing a suit and tie, looking very much like a college student.

Indeed, that's what he is today. He lives in a suburban apartment with a family member. He has one more course to complete and is holding down a 3.7 average. He plans to go to law school.

"When I came here in August, 1989, I was very scared, very lonely. I was a boy then. Despite my age, I wasn't a man."

He said he was intimidated by other residents of the program and completely closed.

He talked about how he learned to deal with his emotions instead of running from them at Turnabout. He told the group that he found hope at Turnabout.

> "While I was here (Project Turnabout), I came to know myself, to take risks, to trust people."
> Angel

And he began working on his recovery as hard as he had worked to get his drugs.

"I'm grateful I stayed. Project Turnabout showed me how to live."

Steve spent two years living at Turnabout.

Now he knows what he wants from life and it isn't drugs. He wants to be a husband, father, friend and eventually an employer.

"I'm proud of what I've done," he said. He now works with both Alcoholics Anonymous and Narcotics Anonymous.

He said one of the biggest changes in his life is that he is no longer filled with guilt and self-hate.

Angel could have been at a Patriots game Sunday. But he chose to return to Turnabout to talk about how the program changed his life.

Angel got to Turnabout in July of 1989. He came directly from prison.

Angel said he had never been to a detox. When he started at Turnabout he wasn't sure whether he had a problem with alcohol.

He knew he had been in trouble. He was told about the program by Sue Malley, a staff member who died over a year ago.

"I didn't have nothing to lose," he said explaining his decision to try living in the therapeutic community at Turnabout.

"While I was here, I came to know myself, to take risks, to trust people.

"I had a lot of emotional stuff to go through. I was real self-centered, real angry.

"I blamed other people for my situation — but it was me.

"It wasn't anybody's fault. I had given up on myself. It was torture when I came here. I had to surrender."

Angel earned his General Equivalency Diploma while at Turnabout. He went to school for a trade. Today he works full time.

"I have problems today. I've had a lot of loss. It's not easy but I'm sober. I can deal with situations without picking up a drug."

Rick is a graduate of Turnabout who is now part of the program's staff.

He entered the program in 1981. At the time he said he was a career criminal. He blamed people, places and things for his problems.

At Turnabout he learned to become accountable for his actions, he learned social skills, work skills and discovered his own goals.

Tony grew up in Roxbury. He didn't work. He did drugs.

Then he met a man who had something inside that he wanted. The man told him to go to Turnabout to get it.

What he was looking for was sobriety.

Tony lived at Turnabout for 29 months before graduating.He talked about how it was sometimes difficult living in the suburbs as a black man.

"But I would come back to the house and talk about my experiences. I learned a lot about myself. I learned how to get along without being violent.

I learned about responsibility, how to appreciate life. Today I can make money, I don't have to steal it."

He said he was grateful for the program.

They all agreed, the rules of Turnabout are designed to develop coping skills and to promote responsibility.

Drug awareness information

There are 40,000 intrevenous drug users in the state. There are beds in rehabilitation facilities for under 400 of them, according to figures discussed by officials at the Community Awareness Day Sept. 8 at Project Turnabout.

George Smart, executive director of Project Turnabout, said it costs society $3 billion in drug enforcement, crime and other related problems.

"And that is just the tip of the iceberg," Smart said.

He pointed out that the problems caused by drug abuse trickle down into problems for families and friends. His point is that the state saves money by paying for treatment programs that work.

"Since Project Turnabout's inception in 1969, we have provided treatment services for over 1,000 individuals. In the last five years, Project Turnabout consistently graduated five or six individuals each year. Of those who complete our program, 90 percent have remained drug and alcohol free and free of involvement in the criminal justice system," a handout on the program stated.

There are beds for 30 men in the house located in the former ammunition depot off Beale Street.

Currently the average age of men in the program is 28. They have 11 years education. Some are ordered to the program as a condition of staying out of jail. Some enter the program voluntarily.

"Over 89 percent of them have had no type of medical health insurance coverage," the handout says.

"Many individuals come to us with specific job skills that have ranged from dentist and lawyer, to plumbers, electricians and other skilled persons. However most of our clients, including those with the skills just mentioned, have not experienced positive job performance and have difficulty holding a position for any length of time."

In the last fiscal year, there were 47 admissions to the program — 57.4 percent were white, 38.3 percent black, 2.1 percent hispanic and 2.1 percent other. At the timeof admission, 2.1 percent were working full time and 97.9 percent were unemployed.

They broke down to 80.9 percent never married; 2.1 percent married and 17 percent divorced or separated. There were 72.3 percent who were childless; 14.9 percent had one child, 8.5 percent had two children; 2.1 percent had three children and 2.1 percent had four children.

The drug of choice for 60 percent was cocaine or crack. Thirty percent chose heroin and 6.7 percent chose alcohol as their drug of choice.

The treatment program recently changed from an 18-month to two-year stay to nine to 12 months.

The goals of the program have remained the same.

Smart said the main reason for the change in the length of stay is economic.

to sign a letter of intent, agreeing that if terms can be worked out, then the town will lease to Cohasset Lightkeepers Corp., the name of the organization formed by the Government Island Duplex Citizens Committee.

The Cohasset Lightkeepers Corp. does not actually exist at this point. McElroy said he hopes to file the corporation papers after the selectmen sign the letter of intent.

Two weeks ago, selectmen told town counsel Richard Henderson to draft such a letter, taking care to insure the town was incurring no liability if the negotiations fail to produce a lease.

McElroy said he expects to see that letter of intent soon.

The committee is working to open the town-owned property to public use without ending the building's use for housing.

Half the building is currently occupied. While the people in the new citizens group have said the current tenant would be offered a chance to continue living in the old lighthouse keepers' house, town officials — and the committee itself — have not begun to negotiate with the tenant.

The town evicted a tenant in the other half of the building with the intention of renovating the unit and renting it again.

An article for $30,000 to renovate the kitchen and bath of the empty unit passed at the annual town meeting but was overturned by voters in the spring override election.

McElroy said the architectural plans will provide at least two proposals. He expects the plan to be ready in December.

The group itself has been talking about using the second floor of the building for two one-bedroom apartments.

One side of the first floor would be renovated into a meeting room for 25 to 35 people.

The other side would be a large kitchen and storage space.

Outside there would be new landscaping, several grills and picnic tables.

Exterior renovation to the lighthouse keepers' house would be minimal. A rear access might be required.

But phase 2 of a proposal on the table talks about an addition at the rear of the building or a stand-alone meeting facility to accomodate 100 people. The addition would incorporate a widow's walk and deck Part of the plan for new construction could mean moving the old engineer's shack from its present location, near the duplex, to a spot closer to the Minot's Light replica, under construction on the ground below the house. The corporation would pay to move the building — if that plan were adopted — but the Historical Society would end up with the use of the shack as a maritime museum to display information about Minot's Light.

"The downtown area needs more symmetry," residents agreed. "We must make the town more aesthetically pleasing."

"Get sidewalks and roadways repaired," said Martin. "Work on beautifying store fronts. Fill empty store windows. Enhance what passersby see when traveling through town."

"We must also educate the townspeople on the benefits of business," Martin said.

"Business men pay taxes to the town, which equals money. They contribute people to various boards and organizations. And, they can be equated with convenience, variety, and service."

The move toward revitalization is on. And the Chamber of Commerce asks only that Cohasset is thought of first.

"Don't be a creature of habit," said Martin, "give Cohasset Village a chance."

Federal aid for Hurricane Bob is on the way

Federal disaster relief will be available for Cohasset afterall, according to Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts.

Tebbetts said that US Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Cohasset, was able to add Norfolk County last week to the list of counties certified for the federal aid after Hurricane Bob.

The town's expenses are still being tallied, Tebbetts said. The direct costs toi the town amounted to about $10,000, but the federal aid will cover indirect costs as well.

around town

• Happy belated birthday greetings go to Brendan McCarthy this week. We certainly hope that your 18th birthday was a fine one, and wish you health and lots of happiness for your future.

• Another belated birthday greeting this week, this one goes to Karen Pompeo. We needn't mention her age, we will just say that we hope all of your dreams come true and may you stay as sweet and wonderful as you are.

• If you would like to get in on a celebration that includes the whole town, be sure to set aside this Friday (Sept. 20). The Bank of Boston is celebrating its first anniversary of the Cohasset branch. The celebration will go on all day long, with cake being cut and served at 2:30 p.m. If you are in the area of the Cohasset Plaza, be sure to stop in for the anniversary celebration.

• Congratulations go to Dina Potolicchio this week. Dina just earned her masters degree from Northeastern University on Sept. 12. Dina majored in speech pathology. She did her undergraduate work at the University of Rhode Island, and we understand that she is already hard at work. Good luck to you, Dina.

• Talk about a small world ... Patrick Milligan and Mike Brady can attest to the fact. Patrick, a student at the University of Florida, was entered in a tennis tournament in Gainsville, and when he met his doubles partner he turned out to be Mike Brady, a former resident of Cohasset and CHS grad. They didn't know each other while they were here as Mike is older than Patrick, but they went on to win the tennis tournament ... on top of that they were both Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic Tennis Players from CHS. What a great way to meet a neighbor.

• We hope that David LaVange is feeling ever-so-much better as he reads this, he certainly has had enough of not feeling up to par.

• Cohasset has a celebrity in its midst, Sigrid Carey of James Lane to be exact. Sigrid has just been published in the magazine Spin-off, a magazine for hand spinners that is distributed worldwide. Every English speaking country has copies of it. Sigrid is a hand spinner, weaver and knitter, and she has won many prizes and awards, but she has never been published before, much less at such a magnitude. Her article is in the Fall 1991 issue, on page 49, and can probably be gotten at Braid Aid or other stores of that nature. Her story is about mittens, and a pair that she knit that were two inches high was what inspired it. She has sold some at the South Shore Spinners Guild. Sigrid also spins exotic yarns and sells it, in case you are looking for something unique for yourself to knit with.

• Mary Ellen Maich asks all of us to fight cancer by taking a walk. On Oct. 5, rain or shine, join an estimated 3,000 walkers in the Third Annual Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk. The walk follows the official route of the Boston Marathon. You can choose your starting point: Hopkinton (26.2 miles), or Newton (10 miles) and the finish is at Copley Square Park in Boston. All funds raised benefit the Jimmy Fund at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. Pick up your application at any CVS store or call the Jimmy Fund at 732-3300.

• We welcome Lisa Matos as our newest police officer this week. Matos replaces Maureen Healey, who was an officer for 10 years in the Cohasset Department. We wish you well, and hope you enjoy our town.

• We are happy to report that Grace Silvia was spotted "around town" last week, feeling just fine and looking as great as ever. We'll bet bowling will be back in your fall plans Grace, let us know how you do!

• Happy birthday greetings go to Catherine Gavin, Mary Glines and Priscilla Thompson this week, we hope that your celebrations were joyous ones, with many more to come.

• The CHS sports schedule is finally available. Choose your favorite one, make plans and then go to support your athlete at his or her event. You will be glad that you did and so will they, they appreciate the following. Have fun!!

• That's the news from here, please call me with your latest. ...

A perfect day on the ocean in a rowing shell

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

More than a dozen hardy souls took part in the fourth annual Minot's Light Roundabout — a five-mile race Sept. 7 from the jetty at the entrance to Cohasset Harbor, around Minot's Ledge Light and back — rowing in low and sleek Alden ocean shells.

In addition, a barge from the Hull Lifesaving Museum competed against the lifesaving surf boat, John Warren II, which was restored last year by students in the alternative education program at Cohasset High School.

The late morning's light breeze and bright blue skies were slightly deceptive for all the rowers who, once outside the harbor, discovered huge swells as they passed Gull Rock and the Glades. It was about flood high tide.

Teens from the Hull Lifesaving Museum's rowing program used all their might in their barge to beat the Cohasset surf boat, the John Warren II, in the roundabout. On board were Miriam Wolfe, cox; Rachel Kelly, James Marsden, Sean Zeller, Chad Wolfe, Lodo Vico Sestito and Dieckmann Wolfe.

"The swells were very hard going out," said Jack Hubbard of Cohasset, who organized the event. "It was a pretty tough first leg.

"The big swells were from that three-day nor'easter. I was beginning to think I'm getting too old for this."

Hubbard, who readily admits to being 66, says he has been rowing seriously for 20 years. His friends report he rows just about every day.

The group also was competing for ocean space — albeit briefly — with the Cohasset Yacht Club's annual chowder race, the culmination of its racing season.

A cannon, signaling the start of various sailing races, echoed throughout the harbor, interspersed by the blasts of a horn for the staggered starts of the rowing races for the seniors, the women, the men, the two doubles and the teens in the barge and surf boat.

Jack Chesley provided his sturdy wooden Cinderella for the committee boat; David Bird served as judge and Jack Crandell assisted.

The Alden ocean shell was designed by Arthur Martin about 25 years ago, said Hubbard. At that time, Martin was living in Cohasset. He later designed a sleeker shell and called it the Martin.

Martin, who also wrote a book, Life in the Slow Lane, recounting tales of the South Shore, subsequently moved to Maine. He died last year.

Hubbard noted that this year's participation was somewhat smaller than in previous years which included dories, fixed seats and sea kayaks as well as the Alden sliding seat boats. But the weather was remarkable.

Last year, the weather was miserable — cold and gray — and in the middle of the race the skies just opened up for a torrential soaking.

"Hargy" Heap was the fastest rower, with an adjusted time of 55.1 minutes, but Dick Viall was deemed the fastest with a corrected time of 55.77.

Kate O'Brien was the fastest woman rower with a time of 58.45 minutes.

Both Viall and O'Brien were presented trophies in memory of Francis Hagerty by his son, Peter.

Peter and his wife and son watched the race from a three-seat kayak near the breakwater.

Hubbard explained that "the old-timers" are given handicaps for varying minutes and seconds.

The other rowers and their times were:
The Frykman double seater, 54.57
Jack Hubbard, 56.35
Ted Brainard, 56.70
Kate O'Brien, 58.45
Rick Crannell, 58.78
Seth Shattuck, 58.08
Cully and Lois West, 59.75
Paul Adams, 60.92
The Wilson single, 61.13.
Kinley Gregg, 61.32.
Jim McColgan, 63.45.
Rob Hardy, 66.53.

The barge, manned by a more experienced crew, beat the John Warren II by two minutes. The actual time was 78.10 minutes, compared to 80.25. minutes.

On board the barge were Miriam Wolfe, cox; Rachel Kelly, James Marsden, Sean Zeller, Chad Wolfe, Lodo Vico Sestito and Dieckmann Wolfe.

Their mentors, who coordinate the youth's rowing program at the museum, are John Liffmann, Deb Marinelli and Grahaem Marsden.

On board the John Warren II were Erin McAllister, cox; Liz Tringale, Alex Insley, Mike Equi, Joseph Clemens, Cecilia Candia, Jason Hunter and two adults, Craig Wolfe of the Hull Lifesaving Museum, and Jack Buckley, the teacher at Cohasset High School who supervised the restoration of the surf boat.

Buckley explained that the rowing program has evolved from the alternative education program at Cohasset High School first established in 1972.

"I met Ed McCabe, who is the marine skills program director at the Hull Lifesaving Museum, at an outdoor education conference in the winter of '89," said Buckley.

"It was 20 degrees out, and we chopped the boat out of the ice to go rowing. "We used a museum boat," he recalled.

"Ed gets youths involved in rowing and in maritime history and the history of lifesaving which began in this area," he continued.

Actually, today's Coast Guard traces its beginnings back to 1716, when the first lighthouse in the country was built in Boston Harbor.

In the mid-1800s, the Massachusetts Humane Society spearheaded the first volunteer lifesaving service to assist shipwrecked mariners, establishing its first lifeboat station in Cohasset.

The station built by the federal government in 1889 was the Point Alleton Life Saving and Coast Guard Station in Hull, now the home of the Hull Lifesaving Museum.

"Last year, the museum gave us a boat to restore in the alternative education program," Buckley continued.

"It's a 26-foot Monomoy surf boat. We named it the John Warren II after the John Warren which was an active lifesaving boat in Cohasset Harbor during the early 1900s.

"We also introduced a rowing component to the program," said Buckley.

"We've come a long way, and the program is still developing. Most of the kids today worked on the restoration," he added.

Clean the beach

Coastsweep, the statewide beach cleanup program, happens Saturday, Sept. 21.

Volunteers will meet at the Sandy Beach parking lot at 10 a.m.

It is the fourth annual Coastsweep, sponsored by the state office of Coastal Zone Management, CZM.

Sharon Becker of the board of health is heading up the effort again this year.

Last year the turn out of volunteers was relatively low. But the volume of trash trucked off the beaches was substantial.

Last year there were 4,000 people statewide who got involved in the effort. The number of volunteers in Cohasset was probably under a few dozen.

Last year the event was held later in the season and the chilly weather of October may have reduced the number of volunteers.

Nevertheless, there were more than 30 tons of debris taken from the 211 miles of shoreline in the state.

We all use the beaches. Indeed, the beaches are the town's top attraction.

We all have an interest in moving the litter off the shore.

Litter isn't just an aesthetic problem — although it certainly mars the beauty of our shoreline when trash accumulates. The long-term problem is the damage to wildlife.

"Almost three-quarters of all the items collected were either plastic or styrofoam, with the balance consisting of metal, glass, paper, wood and cloth," according to CZM.

Plastic litter is hazardous to the birds and fish since it is often mistaken for food and eaten. It is lethal to the wildlife.

This year volunteers are expected to retrieve more plastic, as well as debris from Hurricane Bob.

The August hurricane is listed as a 15-20 year storm, according to the amount of damage it reeked. The damage is estimated at $1 billion state-wide. Local numbers are still being developed but it is known that more than $10,000 damage happened here.

The storm would have created greater damage if it hit at a higher tide.

Information about the debris is collected as part of the program. Volunteers, who call ahead to register, will be given gloves and plastic bags for the work. There will be a raffle for participants with gifts of canvas bags or Stop & Stop certificates.

Call Becker at 383-1971 to register.

Help to keep a good thing going

letters

To the Editor:

The recent Cohasset Chamber of Commerce meeting, called to discuss the revitalization of the Cohasset Village business area, was interesting and well attended, albeit apparently more by interested citizens and town board members than by Village business people.

This revitalization is ongoing. It started a year ago with the 1990 Village Renaissance. A citizens group is continuing under that name and has recreated the Village Pump among other things. Two young women attendees who recently opened stores in the Village were clearly upbeat about present sales and future prospects. The very fact that this meeting was called is in itself a positive step. As Mark Twain once said, "The reports of my death are greatly exaggerated."

Cohasset's complete Village, incorporating the Town Common, Town Hall, churches, Community and Art Centers, Police, Fire, and other Town departments, and also professional offices and a wide selection of stores and services is unique. Hollywood thinks so, anyway.

Citizens have expended time, effort, and dollars in making the Village business area more attractive. Town boards have promised to help in any way they can. Support from these quarters is assured. There is genuine interest here. However, Town boards are designed to regulate, not to dictate. It is up to the business community to take the initiative in determining what it needs. Last year I solicited information as to helpful Zoning Bylaw changes. Suggestions were few, very few, and the Town adopted those changes, but getting those suggestions was like pulling teeth. There seemed to be a reluctance even to think about it.

The Chamber is right in its contention that more people ought to patronize the Village merchants, and that people should recognize what an asset the business area is to Cohasset as a whole. The Village is the heart of the Town. The business there makes of it a vibrant living whole.

I doubt if a business can achieve success by trying to convince the public that it is entitled to it. Generally, success needs to be earned. Businesses in the Village have been and will continue to be successful. Not everyone who opens a store will succeed. Some will do better than others. Some stores are better adapted, some merchandise better suited, some people better able to serve.

It seems to me that Village business as a whole would be better if all of its business people get together and figure out how best they can market the area as well as their own separate enterprises. Each individual business can capitalize on the strengths in its own field of service and expertise. By working and thinking together they can take advantage of the uniqueness of the Village area. They are not on the highway nor in the plaza; they are in a Village that is very special in a very special Town.

Their success is the Town's success - our success, but the ball is in their court.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is onto a good thing. We must help keep it going.

Sincerely,
Daniel C. Cotton
Former member Planning Board

Town could become like Randolph

To the Editor:

When I moved to Randolph in 1974, the town dump was a hole in the ground. The private landfill was limited to town-generated trash. Later, Browning-Ferris Industries purchased the dump and offered the town free trash pick-up, if outside trash could also be put in the dump.

When I moved from Randolph to Cohasset, the Randolph dump was growing. It stinks and sends pollutants into the surrounding wetlands. "Mount Randolph" is now visible from Route 25, and is reportedly close to 300 feet high and about a mile long.

I don't want to see that happen here. One of the proposed zoning changes for the Oct. 7 Special Town Meeting clarifies the definition of structure, and specifically includes a landfill resulting in a height limit of 45 feet.

I urge your support of this and all of the proposed zoning changes limiting a landfill expansion at the Special Town Meeting.

chamber chatter

By Paula Knowles
For the Chamber

September is here again, school has started, special Town Meetings are on the agenda, and the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is gearing up to start its fall schedule. Our "Little Piece of Home" packages for lonely graduates are almost ready to go, the School Forum is scheduled for October, Chamber members are monitoring town board meetings, and work is starting on our annual Chamber of Commerce auction in November. For those of you who don't know about the auction, let me explain.

The auction is easily our largest undertaking of the year and our only fund raiser. It involves months of planning, begging for gifts and donations, and much hard and dreary prep work. But in the end, it is worth it. A free dinner for all who attend, a night of bidding, buying, laughing and socializing with friends, and another year of Chamber activities financed...the Chamber business directory, the "care packages" for our graduates, our part of Harborfest (wasn't THAT great!!), help with the Easter Egg Hunt and the Government Island House renovation project, as well as our contributions to and programs for the private, civic and school groups who come to us each year. It all depends upon the auction.

In the next month we will be asking area businesses to help us with donations of goods, services, antiques, collectibles or good old American money for the auction. If any individual or group who is not a member would like to contribute, please don't hesitate to call us. This year's chairman is Keith Knowles, and he can be reached at his business, 383-6266 during the day, or at home, 383-1331, after business hours. All donations are tax deductible, and we will be happy to pick up any donations you have for us.

Set aside the night of Nov. 16 for the auction itself...you are all invited, dinner is on us and there is no admission charge accept a smile!!

So join us at the auction...Nov. 16, at the Community Center. It's a great night, and we need your support.

Police have agreed to go without a pay increase until July 1, but only after delicate negotiations that got the town to drop a rule requiring the officers to be cleanshaven.

State plans to up the landfill cost

By Mary Calandrella
Mariner staff

New regulations, which require all landfills to reapply to the state to continue operations, will offer more protection for drinking water supplies.

But the Solid Waste Management Regulations will increase the costs of operating landfills — which, in the case of municipal landfills, will be paid by taxpayers and by the rates of users of commercial landfills.

And the regulations have dramatically increased the state Department of Environmental Protection's workload.

According to DEP, all landfills will inevitably be affected by the landfill assessment requirements.

Existing landfills which are not expanding will be affected by the closure/post-closure requirements in the regulations.

While the new assessment and closure regulations will result in increased costs for services and materials, it will also result in better protection of groundwater as well as decrease the amount of leachate which must be collected and treated in landfills equipped with a groundwater protection system, DEP officials say.

The costs associated with design, construction, operation and closure of landfills must also be compared against the potential costs of remedial measures where landfills not designed, constructed, operated or closed in accordance with the new regulations pollute groundwater or surface water, DEP says.

Remedial measures are expensive, in many instances more expensive than replacing groundwater drinking supplies, it says. DEP estimates over $4 million to clean up problems at a hypothetical 10-acre landfill.

The filing deadline for landfills and transfer stations located in environmentally sensitive areas — where groundwater is drawn upon for drinking water, wellhead protection areas, unmonitored areas or sole source aquifers — was July 1, 1991. Landfills that handle more than 50,000 tons of waste a year also had to apply by this past July.

Other landfill operators must file an existing permit facility or, if the landfill will be closed by July 1, 1992, a final closure and post-closure plan.

Landfills which operated after April 21, 1971 but stopped operating before July 1, 1990, must also file by Jan. 1, 1992. They must submit documentation showing DEP approved their closure plans or comply with the new regulations for closure.

Transfer stations which are not in environmentally sensitive areas must file by July 1, 1993.

"If you don't file, your existing permit will be invalid," Deborah Gallagher, DEP manager of landfill assessment and cleanup, told about 20 landfill operators at a seminar on the repermitting process last week.

With the repermitting application, landfill operators, including towns, must submit detailed technical information and financial assurance that the operation is financially able to cover all landfill-related costs, including the cost of closing.

DEP estimates closure costs will run $80,000 to $90,000 per acre.

Word of the day...hope

By Richard Small
Mariner staff

Sundown Tuesday, Sept. 17, the holiest day of the Jewish calendar began.

The liturgy for Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), is the most profoundly moving in Jewish ritual.

The focus is on the weakness of humanity, that is shared by all of us, and the eternal mercifulness of God.

Every sin of omission and commission is cited. Each person sees how far short of the divine measure they have fallen.

There are also the remembrances of the afflictions of the weak, ill and oppressed. To the uninitiate this may sound depressing. It is not. There is a clear light shining through the miasma and chiaroscuro of human shortcomings. It is the redemptive light of God's love.

The somber tones of Yom Kippur are uplifted by the presence of the enduring parental love of the Creator.

Among the curiosities of the occasion is the ritual reading of the Book of Jonah. The shortest book in Scripture it details the efforts of perhaps the "least" of the "lesser prophets." What subtle religious irony is at work in reading this story of a not very appealing chap?

Scholars tell us that it was recorded sometime after the Babylonian captivity, 5th to 4th century B.C.E. He was probably of aristocratic heritage.

The three pages of this book are packed with images that have passed into biblical culture. Especially vivid is the description of the leviathan sent to swallow the hesitant, shirking prophet.

commentary

Why is this book read on the holiest of holy days?

The rabbis detail two major reasons. First, it affirms that God is the father of all people and loves all of his children. This point refers to the fact that Jonah was told to go to Nineveh, an Assyrian city (not Jewish), to preach.

The second and equally important reason, is that the book exemplifies God's mercy to repentant sinners.

There is no joy in the fall of the wicked. Joy comes when the wicked turn away from evil to God.

It is also an admonition to the stiff-necked and self-righteous. There is hope for everyone with God's Grace. Don't be so quick to judge.

Furthermore, the book illustrates the long-standing tradition of Jews talking—arguing if you will—with their God.

After all, from the Patriarch Jacob's wresting with the Angel comes the name Israel—which means "He who wrestles (argues/debates?) with God."

Yom Kippur is not a day for wrestling with God. It is rather a day of wrestling with oneself. On this day the Book of Life is sealed for the coming year. Believing Jews pray for self-improvement, the good health and fortune of their families, friends and the entire world.

It is a day of serious reflection that shines with the eternal promises of God's mercy, love, justice and hope.

SAFE urges support for resolution opposing Heights

SAFE recently urged Cohasset residents to attend the Oct. 7 Special Town Meeting and to support the SAFE resolution opposing the Cohasset Heights Landfill. CHL, proposed 27.5 acre Area V expansion.

SAFE is also proposing three zoning bylaw changes at this Town Meeting which would either limit or stop the Area V expansion.

"This resolution is a clear expression of opposition to the Area V expansion," said John McNabb, Jr., SAFE Vice-President.

"A vote in favor of our Area V resolution will help stop the landfill expansion."

"This 27.5 acre Area V expansion will more than double the size of the current 23 acre landfill," said McNabb.

"The expansion proposes to take in garbage, trash, and municipal solid waste," said McNabb, "which would be a major change from the current landfill, which is allowed to accept only demolition waste.

"According to letters sent by CHL to Cohasset residents in June," said McNabb, "the Area V expansion will receive 40 truckloads or more of garbage per day.

"The Area V expansion will triple the capacity of the landfill from 300 tons per day of demolition waste to a total of 900 tons per day of garbage, recyclables, and other materials," said McNabb.

"The Area V landfill will also involve a recycling facility located at the corner of Crocker Lane and Route 3A, and a materials reprocessing facility at an undisclosed location at the landfill.

"According to the Draft Environmental Impact Report for the expansion, Area V 'will be visible from Route 3A,' and will eventually 'reach a finished elevation of approximately 210 feet.' The DEIR also states that the increase in height of the landfill 'will eventually allow the daily activities (i.e. compacting, grading, covering) to be visible from Route 3A. '

"The existing landfill has been a source of noxious odors for many years," said McNabb, "and has damaged adjoining wetlands with leachate runoff and siltation. Do we really want to continue this environmental damage with another 5 to 10 years of landfill activity in Area V?"

The Town Meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 7, at Cohasset High School. SAFE will sponsor a resolution to oppose the proposed Area V expansion, or any other proposed further expansion of the Cohasset Heights Ltd. Landfill, for the disposal of garbage, solid waste, demolition debris, or any other types of wastes which may threaten or potentially threaten public health, private or public drinking water supplies, ground or surface waters, wetlands, air quality, or any environmental or natural resource values of the town.

After school program continued through fall

Due to the success of the spring after school programs for boys and girls in grades K through three, the recreation department will offer six week, fall programs, scheduled to begin the week of Monday, Sept. 23 at the Osgood School Field.

Programs will meet on Mondays, Tuesdays, and Wednesdays, from right after school, until 5 p.m. AM kindergarten students must be dropped off at Osgood at 2:50 p.m., However, all other students may stay after school as long as the form is completed, signed and returned to the recreation office by Friday, Sept. 20.

The programs are designed for fun and exercise and meet Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Children may register for one or more programs and the fees have been established to allow for maximum participation as follows: one day program - one child, $16 for six weeks; second child, $10; third child free. Two day program - one child, $28 for six weeks; second child, $15; third child free. Three day program - one child - $38 for six weeks; second child, $20; third child free.

Programs will include a variety of low-organized games, sports and activities each day and summer playground staffers George Umbrianna, Chris Conley, and Matt Pedderson will conduct the after school programs for grades K through three.

Children may bring snacks and juice boxes. Programs are subject to cancellation during inclement weather. If in doubt, call the recreation department office at 383-6791.

Ferreira completes real estate course

Arlene Ferreira, a resident of Cohasset, has recently completed a basic fundamentals of real estate course given by the Conway Country School of Real Estate, Inc., which is based in Hanover.

The course included basics of real estate laws, contracts, financing, mortgages, zoning, real estate appraisal and a review of state license requirements and laws. Successful completion of the course is a prerequisite to taking the Massachusetts real estate salesperson's license exam.

Oppenheim named leader in sales force

Don Oppenheim was recently presented an award for selling the most property through the Cohasset office of the Jack Conway Company at mid year.

The presentation was made by Conway President Dick Cahill during the company's "Circle of Champions" luncheon held recently at Plimoth Plantation. The luncheon served to honor those within the Jack Conway sales force who have consistently excelled in both selling and listing properties.

Oppenheim, a resident of Scituate, has been with the Jack Conway Company for five years. He has been awarded a number of incentive trips for his stellar sales efforts, and is a member of the Million Dollar Sales Club. Oppenheim is also very active in the Scituate Chamber of Commerce and the Rotary Club.

Dr. Garber joins Brockton staff

Brockton Hospital President Norman B. Goodman has announced that Cohasset resident Gary R. Garber, MD, is joining Brockton Hospital as the Medical Director of its new $1.2 million cardiac catheterization laboratory, opening in October.

Dr. Garber comes to the hospital from University Hospital in Boston, where he served as director of computer applications in cardiology and assistant professor of medicine. Dr. Garber has extensive clinical and computer experience in the field of cardiology and is board certified in both cardiology and internal medicine. He received his medical degree from S.U.N.Y. Downstate in Brooklyn, New York and served his internship and residency at Boston City Hospital.

"Dr. Garber is a highly credentialed and well-respected cardiologist. Under his direction, Brockton Hospital' s new cardiac catheterization laboratory will provide patients with access to an important procedure from a highly qualified health-care team," said Goodman.

Brockton Hospital is a 301-bed, not-for-profit community teaching hospital affiliated with Boston University School of Medicine.It is located at 680 Centre Street in Brockton .

Karate/women's self defense classes available

Dave McGlynn has recently moved his martial arts classes from Scituate to the facilities of the Cohasset Community Center.

Last year he started teaching a women's self defense class, as well as karate classes.

McGlynn, the father of three school-age girls, said he is concerned about the safety of women in our increasingly violent society. He wants women to overcome their fears, face up to the realities of life today and learn to aggressively protect themselves.

McGlynn has a number of elementary school boys taking the "kids" karate classes. He wants mothers and fathers to realize that it is even more important to enroll their elementary school aged daughters in karate classes. His nine year old daughter, Mary, is taking karate.

Through karate, girls and women can develop confidence. "Society says (to women), 'Be submissive,'" McGlynn says, "If you truly believe and know you can do something, you're less apt to be victimized."

The classes run in continuous ten week sessions, at a cost of $40 for once a week or $75 for twice a week. The children's karate meets on Wednesdays from 7 to 8 p.m. and on Saturdays from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. The adult (coed) karate meets on Wednesdays from 8 to 9 p.m. and on Saturdays from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The women's self defense classes meet on Saturdays from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. For further information and to register for classes, call the Cohasset Community Center at 383-0036 or McGlynn at 545-0515.

Skippers stall on the gridion in season opener

By Michael Farley

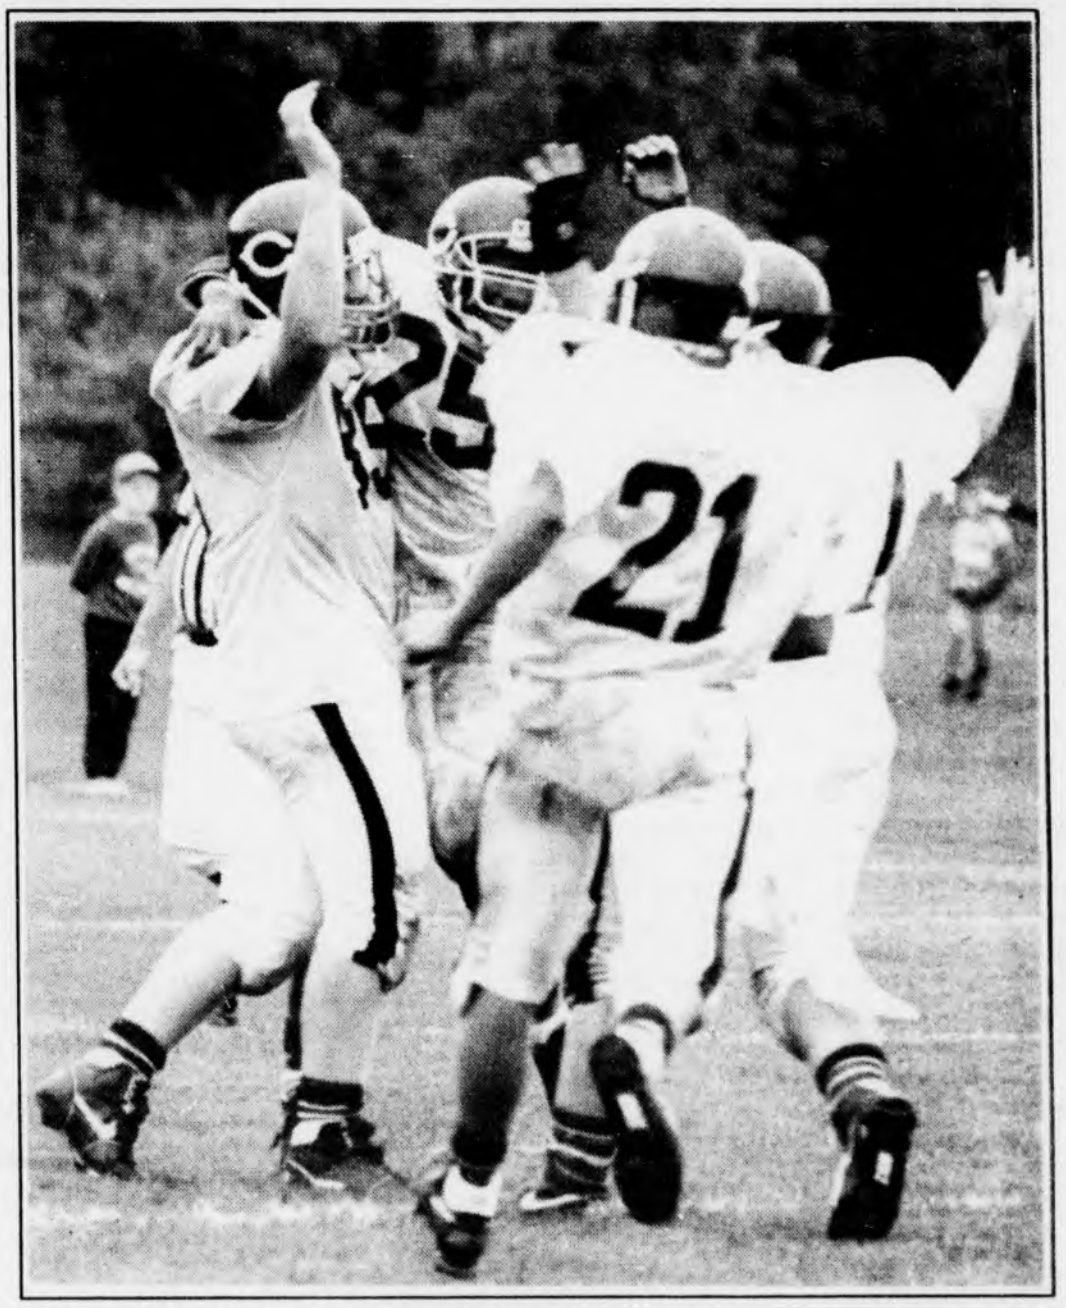
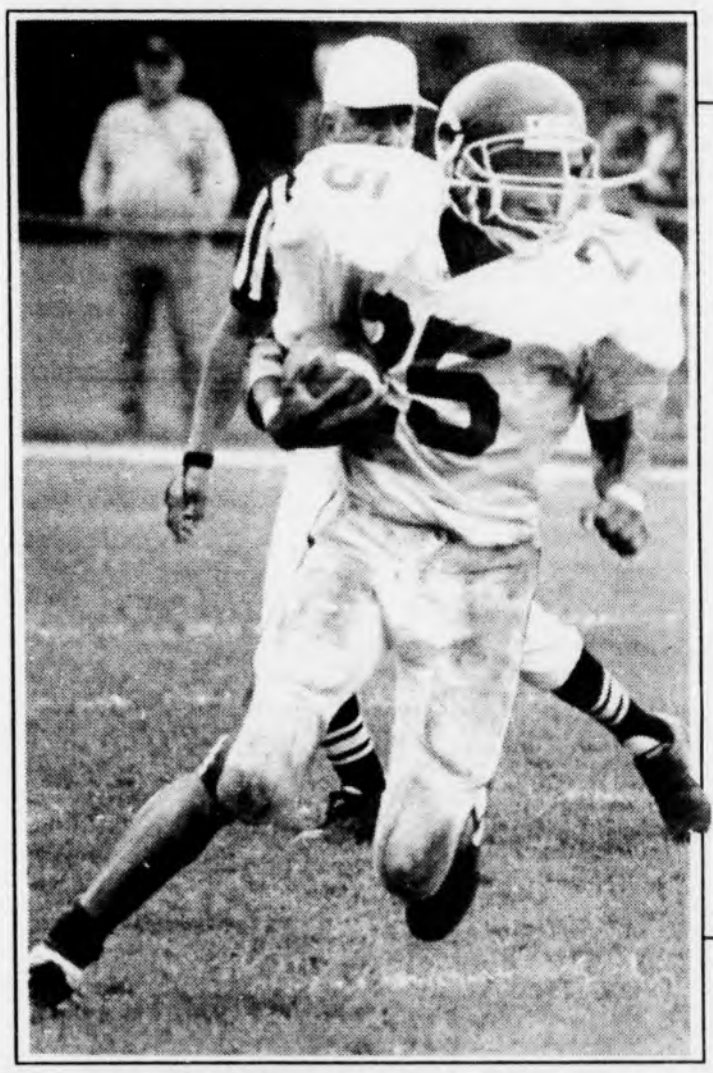
sports

Anybody who has ever worked or attended school for any prolonged period of time knows the feeling. It's the feeling of those first day back jitters. Working men and women across America have experienced it after vacation. Students across the country encounter it after their traditional summer hiatus. So, too, was the way Cohasset must have felt this past weekend while opening the 1991 football season.



Competing in its first varsity football game since the fall of 1989, the Cohasset Skipper squad sailed into West Bridgewater and rough seas Saturday while suffering a 36-6 opening day loss. Despite the lopsided score after the final gun, the Skippers found themselves in a tie ball game up until the closing minutes of the first half.

Cohasset received the opening kickoff and set up shop on its own 15 yard line. After taking advantage of a Wildcat penalty, sophomore running back Sean Milligan took a handoff from quarterback Matt Keefe and romped up the middle for 14 yards. Two additional plays earned seven more yards and Cohasset faced a third down and three situation from the West Bridgewater 48 yard line.



Coach McDermott decided to open things up; however, Keefe's pass went incomplete and the Skippers had to turn things over to their defense. The defense welcomed the opportunity. After the Wildcats reached Cohasset territory, sophomore linebacker Chris Rolandelli stormed into West Bridgewater's backfield for a four yard loss. The Skippers continued to press and forced West Bridgewater to punt. Junior punt returner Steve Harrington did the honors, and after juggling the pumpkin, managed to hold on and Cohasset began its march on the 10 yard line. The Skippers continued to eat up yardage with the ground attack. On first and 10 from the 21, Milligan scampered for seven yards around the right side. It was then junior Ray Jones' stage and he followed the right side of the offensive line for another seven yard chunk. Cohasset gave the ball to Jones again, this time on third down and he picked up six more yards and a first down.

Then the Skippers took to the air on first and ten from the 43 as Matt Keefe hit Brendan McCarthy over the middle to the Wildcat 41 yard line. Back to the ground, Jones galloped around the right end on third down and didn't stop until he reached the 29 yard line. Cohasset stumbled a bit on the next set of downs and encountered fourth down and 13 from the 32. Keefe had Jones streaking down the left side but the pass went off his fingertips.

So, with 4:43 remaining in the half, the Wildcats took the ball and pushed Cohasset for the first time in the game. A Wildcat back broke free off left tackle from the Skipper 43 and chugged his way in for six points. The conversion failed, and Matt Keefe brought the offense out with a little over 2:00 remaining in the half.

Following a nice return by Kevin Mulcahy, Cohasset worked the ball up to midfield and then called timeout with :40 to go. On second and ten following an incompletion, Jones went right for seven yards. With the defense focusing on number 25, Jones was hit for a 4 yard loss and Coach McDermott called another timeout at the 28 yard line. The fourth down decision was to go back upstairs, but Keefe couldn't connect with Jones on a slant in pattern and West Bridgewater took over on downs.

Apparently not satisfied with a 6-0 lead, the Wildcats kept the pressure on. With :23 ticks left before the break, West Bridgewater surged to the Cohasset 32 on a short sideline pass completion. The defense rose to the occasion as Mulcahy broke up a pass at the five yard line, and then on second down Jed Terry slapped down another pass attempt at the seven yard line. Time ran out in the half, but unfortunately for Cohasset fans the tide of disaster was brewing.

West Bridgewater made it 14-0 at the 8:27 mark of the third quarter, and Cohasset managed minimal yardage on its turn with the pigskin and was forced to punt. After a quick pickup of 20 yards, the Wildcats were forced into a fourth and four on the next series and Cohasset was able to regain possession. However, Keefe threw one up for grabs and it was picked off. The ensuing minutes would not prove to be suitable viewing for Cohasset fans under the age of 13 as the Wildcats punished the Skippers with a violent offensive surge that pushed the deficit to 36-0.

Although dynasties aren't built on such defeats, the Skippers provided a glimpse of future success with just :36 left in the game. After a steady thrust upfield, the boys from Cohasset were camping at their own 48 yard line on first down. Erasing several prior misconnections, the Keefe to Jones battery struck for a 52 yard touchdown connection as Jones beat double coverage down the right sideline, came back for the ball and soared into the endzone for Cohasset's first points of the season.

Perhaps it was not a victory by the numbers, but it was certainly a victory in spirit as the football Gods welcomed the Skippers back to the party for 1991.

Society Museums finish season

The Cohasset Historical Society's two museums at Cohasset center will complete their summer open seasons on Saturday, Sept. 28. The Maritime Museum and Capt. John Wilson Historical House are open each day Tuesday to Sunday, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Admission is free to Society members and to the general public. At the Capt. Wilson House the summer season closes with a special exhibit by the Society's Costumes Committee on the theme "Back To School." Fall outfits for adults and children from past times are displayed in a setting that includes artifacts from the Society's collection of Cohasset school memorabilia. At the Maritime Museum a unique collection of artifacts, ship models, documents and pictures evokes the town's illustrious seafaring history. Subjects represented include shipbuilding, fishing, storms, shipwrecks and lifesaving, and the story of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse. Also at the Maritime Museum is an extensive collection of general historical nature, from Indian stone tools to Civil War memorabilia and from early housewright's tools to cordwainer's equipment, from early Cohasset. On sale at both Historical society museums are selected items of quality relating to the town's history. They include volume one of the "Narrative History of Cohasset" by Rev. E. V. Bigelow, volume two of "Narrative History" by Burtram J. Pratt, as well as two other books, "Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains" by E. Pomeroy Collier and "Children's Coloring Book of Cohasset History" by Barbara Conte. Also available are new canvas tote bags carrying the Society's logo, and several other history-related items of interest.

The Society's Maritime Museum is an 18th century ship chandlery once owned by Samuel, later by John Bates. It served as the supply store and counting house for the Bates family fishing fleet at Cohasset Harbor. The Capt. John Wilson House is an 1810 Sea Captain's home, largely unmodernized and presenting a definite early 19th century ambience. It is furnished with an extensive collection of household furnishings and furniture, kitchenware, children's toys and artwork from the old homes of Cohasset. In 1810 the Wilson House, built by housewright David Nichols, sold to Capt. John Wilson for $475, it remained in the seafaring Wilson family until 1912, and was given to the Historical Society by William H. McGaw in 1936. For many years the early Sea Captain's home was the headquarters of the Society. Next door, the early ship's chandler represents one of the very few surviving buildings from Cohasset's early maritime years. Be sure to visit these unusual community museums to obtain a look at the past history of this small New England seafaring village.

Tour of museums, Oct. 12

On Saturday, Oct. 12 at 2:30 p.m. the Cohasset Historical Society and Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a tour of the Historical Society's two museum buildings at Cohasset Center, the Capt. John Wilson House and the Maritime Museum.

The tour will meet at the Maritime Museum on Elm Street. A donation of $1 per person will be accepted at the door.

The Capt. John Wilson House, built in 1810, was the home of a Cohasset seafarer and then remained in the Wilson family until 1912 when it was purchased by Cohasset businessman William Hamilton McGaw. In 1936 McGaw gave the house to the Historical Society in memory of his wife Priscilla Lothrop Collier, and it became Cohasset's first historical museum.

Today the Wilson House contains a collection of household artifacts from early Cohasset homes including children's toys, furniture, kitchenware and antique costumes. Artworks of local historical significance grace the walls of the house.

The Maritime Museum, dating from the latter 18th century, originally was the ship chandlery for the Bates family schooner fishing fleet. One of the few buildings remaining from Cohasset's seafaring and fishing industry, it was given to the Historical Society in 1955 by Mr. and Mrs. William Cox and moved to its present site from the Cove. The Maritime Museum contains numerous collections relating to the "Age of Sail" of a New England fishing village, as well as a general collection of historical artifacts from old Cohasset. Ship models, carvings, relics from shipwrecks, 19th century fishing gear, lifesaving memorabilia, old tools, stone artifacts of the Quonahasset Indians and numerous other items of historical interest can be seen at the Society's Maritime Museum.

Art Center lecture series

The South Shore Art Center has scheduled three lectures for the fall at their 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset facility. On Thursday, Sept. 26 at 7:30 p.m., George Grillo will conduct a lecture on "The Art of the Oriental Rug." Grillo, a Hingham resident, owns an oriental rug company in Rockland.

Chris Rifkin, also of Hingham, will lecture on "The Art of Contemporary Architectural Stained Glass" on Thursday evening, Oct. 24 at 7:30 p.m. Rifkin, President of the Art Center's Board of Directors, has worked with stained glass for many years.

"Folk Art Today" will be the topic of the Nov. 21 lecture given by Cohasset artist Jeanne Replogle. Replogle will curate the Art Center's Folk Art Exhibit November 15 through December 21. She will also be featured in the November/December issue of Colonial Homes, entitled "Christmas in Cohasset."

All lectures are at the Art Center and begin at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $6 per lecture for members: $8 per lecture for non-members. For more information about the Art Center's fall lecture series, call 383-9548.

Book Sale benefits library

The Friends of the Cohasset Library, Patience Towle, President, will sponsor a sale of used books at the Paul Pratt Library on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 27 and 28, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Proceeds of the book sale will be used by the Friends to enhance library services. Among the gifts from the Friends are family passes to the Children's Museum, the Aquarium, the Science Museum, and the Museum of Fine Arts.

The book sale includes books of every type: adult and children's fiction and nonfiction, hardcover and paperback.

Books remaining after the two-day sale will be given away on Sunday, Sept. 29, 2 to 5 p.m.

The Library has resumed Sunday openings, 2 to 5 p.m. Other open hours are: Monday 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; closed Wednesday; Thursday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Webber at cookout

Peter C. Webber, recently appointed by Gov. William Weld as Commissioner of Environmental Management, will be the guest of honor at the Cohasset Republican Town Committee's Annual Cookout. It will be held Sunday, Sept. 22 from 4 to 7 p.m. at the oceanside home of Ted and Julie Guild, 365 Jerusalem Road.

Webber, a former State Senator from the Berkshires, served five terms as one of nine Republicans in the Senate. While Senator he served on the joint committees on natural resources and agriculture, health care, banks and banking and public service. The Senator's interest centers on environmental and open space, child welfare, rural assistance and development issues.

The public is invited to attend, but tickets must be purchased in advance. Tickets are $10 each and should be made payable to the Cohasset Republican Town Committee by Sept. 18 and mailed to Grace Tuckerman, 393 South Main Street, Cohasset.

Further information may be obtained from Julie Guild at 383-6443 or Pat Buckley at 383-0304.

60 plus meets

Cohasset Sixty-Plus Club meets Thursday, Sept. 19 at the Unitarian Parish House.

Blood pressure taken at 11:30 a.m. by the Social Service Nurse.

Sandwich lunch will be served at noon. Business meeting follows.

A representative from the "SHARE" program will speak on its merits. Come and join in our first meeting of the year!

Cable schedule listed

Tuesday, Sept. 24

6 p.m. Children's Corner: Bob Detwiler reads Norwell resident Jan Brett's illustrated classic Puss 'N Boots, Supergrandpa, the true story of a sixty-six year old white haired Swede who rode his bicycle in the 1,000 mile Sverige-Loppet marathon race and won! Also read are Grandma's Bill and The Little Rabbit who Wanted Wings.

8:30 p.m. Bob Detwiler's Journal: "POW/MIA Discussion." Bob's guests Nguyen Can, Deputy Permanent Representative to the United Nations and Michael DePaulo, member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars who served with the U.S. Marine Corps in Vietnam, exchange views on the MIA issue.

Tuesday, Oct. 1

6 p.m. Children's Corner: Bob Detwiler reads Hurricane and another of Jerry Pallotta's alphabet book series the Underwater Alphabet Book.

8:30 p.m. Bob Detwiler's Journal: Justin Moss, General Director of the Boston Lyric Opera talks about "The Greater Boston Opera Scene and the Growing Importance of the Boston Lyric Opera." With the recently announced pending merger of the Boston Opera Theatre with the "Lyric" this program could not be more timely.

Sandy Beach cleanup

Volunteers are needed to make the Coastweeks '91 beach cleanup a success. Gloves, bags and data cards will be available at Sandy Beach parking lot Saturday, Sept. 21, at 10 a.m.

Spend an hour or so to help clean the environment. Call Sharon Becker, 383-1971 to sign up.

Cohasset Drama auditions

Auditions for the December production of "The Homecoming" are Sunday, Oct. 6 at 3 p.m. and Monday, Oct. 7 at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall.

This Christmas play is based on the book by Earl Hamner Jr. which also spawned the movie "Spencer's Mountain" and the acclaimed television series "The Waltons."

There are 22 parts available, including the mother, father, eldest teenage son, seven siblings from age 8 to 16, grandparents and 10 other adult roles.

Roles are also available for townspeople "extras" and a group of singers for the church chorus scene.

Scripts are available for preview at the Paul Pratt Library on Main St.

If interested in working on the play behind the scenes or questions regarding audition schedule, call Gayle Varalla, 383-2366.

The December production will be the 12, 13, 14 and 15. Note this change from last week's announcement.

LWV kickoff Sept. 25

The League of Women Voters of Hingham will hold its fall Kickoff Meeting Wednesday, Sept. 25. Current members are invited to renew old acquaintances and prospective members will find it a perfect occasion to find out more about the League. Cohasset residents are also invited.

Following a ,7 p.m. social hour, featured speaker Patricia Clark, executive director of Hingham Visiting Nurse and Community Service, Inc., will discuss delivery of healthcare services at the local level. In accordance with the upcoming LWVUS study on health care policy, the Hingham League is pleased to begin its year by presenting this timely topic.

The meeting will take place at the Old Ship Parish House, 107 Main Street. For more information about the kickoff or about joining the League of Women Voters, call 749-8432.

Neurologist lectures

Neurologist Sanford Auerbach, M.D., Director of the Behavioral Neurology Program and of the Sleep Disorders Center at University Hospital, Boston, will speak on "Diagnosis of Alzheimer's Disease and Management of Sleep Disorders in Alzheimer's Patients" on Wednesday, Sept. 25, at 7:30 p.m., at the Hersey House, 229 North Street, Hingham. The program is sponsored by the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore, Inc. (ADSGSS).

Dr. Auerbach is assistant professor of neurology and psychiatry at Boston University School of Medicine and Medical Director of the Mediplex Center for Traumatic Brain Injury in Newton.

ADSGSS is funded by individual contributions. For further information, call 749-5417.

Health Education Advisory Committee solicits members

The first meeting of the Cohasset School's Health Education Advisory Committee will be held on Tuesday evening September 24 at 7:30 in room 206 at the Jr./Sr. High School.

This advisory committee has been involved in the promotion of health instruction in the Cohasset Schools for more than ten years. The Committee welcomes any person interested in promoting quality health education for the students in the Cohasset Schools (K-12).

The purpose of the first meeting will be to review:

- goals for the school year 1991/92
- the Drug Free Schools Grant 91/92
- the new Child Abuse Prevention Curriculum

The Committee will meet a few times per year, or as needed. Input, ideas, and values are integral parts of our K-12 curriculum.

Pierson to Person schedule

Thursday, Sept. 19, Host Wigmore Pierson's guest on Pierson to Person will be Hingham Psychiatrist, Robert M. Beckhardt, who will review psychiatry today, the anti-depressant drug Prozac, and panic attacks.

The second segment guests will be Ed and Patty Kane, owners of STARS Restaurant at Hingham Harbor. They will be reviewing the restaurant industry, especially in light of our economic conditions.

The Pierson to Person television show is broadcast live each Thursday, 8 to 9 p.m. from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, and Scituate and on a tape-delayed basis in Marshfield, Weymouth, and Quincy.

The public is invited to be part of the studio audience each Thursday evening and those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m.

PSO fall meeting.

The Cohasset PSO annual fall meeting will be on Thursday, Sept. 19 at Cohasset High School. Guest speaker will be Peggy Charren, co-founder of Action for Children's Television. Refreshments will be at 7:30 p.m., Peggy Charren will speak at 8 p.m. The public is invited to see how television can work for and against children.

Season opener . . .

team was anchored by a strong defense played by veterans Jen Knowles, Lisa Schramn and Heidi Lincoln, who is playing a new defense position this season. Cohasset's next home game will be at Miliken Field on Friday, Sept. 20, 1991 at 3:30 p.m. Players to watch during the season include Corrina McMackin (defense), Amy Gallant (forward) and Heather Bass (returning goal keeper).

Lacrosse clinic set

Cohasset's second annual lacrosse clinic has been scheduled for Sept. 28 at the Deer Hill School, the Friends of Cohasset Lacrosse have announced.

The 1991 clinic will feature Roddy Marino, the captain of the 1990 USA World team, which won the world championship in Perth, Australia. Marino was also named the NCAA player of the year in 1986, and was pro lacrosse's Most Valuable Player in 1988. "He's the best player ever to visit Cohasset," said Cohasset High School coach Ken Ekberg.

The Cohasset lacrosse clinic will be held from 2 until 4 in the afternoon, and will be open to boys from grades 5, 6, 7 and 8. There is no charge for the clinic, which is co-sponsored by the Brine equipment company and The Good Sport, Inc.

Boys are urged to bring lacrosse sticks, if they own them, coach Ekberg said. Some sticks will be available for those who don't have them.

Cohasset High School lacrosse will begin its second year as a varsity sport this spring, said Ekberg. In its inaugural season, the Skippers posted a 7-3 record, and missed qualifying for the state tournament by a single victory. Skipper co-captain, Travis Coley, became the first Cohasset player selected for Eastern Massachusetts Senior All-Star game. "Activities like the fall clinic," said Ekberg, "have helped us build a base for the success we've had."

COA hopes fall brings expansion

By Lisa B. Eigner
Mariner staff

Cohasset's Council on Aging will have more room to spread its collective wings when the senior center begins its expansion project in the fall of this year.

"When the center opened five years ago," said Council on Aging Director Kathy Bryanton, "all we had to function with was a metal table and a telephone."

Now however, the staff and its members are grinning with anticipation over their new facility space that will include a one-story expansion on both sides of the existing building.

"Originally," Bryanton recalled, "the expansion plans included a two-story addition to be built just on the left side of the building. But the plans were redesigned over the summer."

Since it was welcomed to share space in the community center building in January of 1986, the council's 18 major programs have successfully functioned out of one office and one function room.

It's been a snug fit on North Main Street over the last five years, with many activities being run outside of the center due to space constraints.

"Ideally," said Bryanton, "our goal is to bring the COA together under one roof, with enough space to run all of our programs."

During its five-year stint with restricted space, the council received a leg-up from facilities like the Parish House, the Second Congregational Church, Saint Stephen's Church, and the Art Center.

It was by virtue of help from other town organizations that the council maintained its level of programming.

"We've just outgrown our space," said Bryanton," who has been juggling programs back and forth between the various locations.

Since 1986, the COA has served its membership with a plethora of programs including:

•OUTREACH, which offers seniors and their families at-home counseling;

Support lags for dump zoning articles

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

So far the articles aimed at halting expansion of Cohasset Heights have little official town support.

Selectmen Monday voted against backing one that would result in creating a height limit at the private landfill. The board took no position on two others that are in the warrant of the Monday, Oct. 7 special town meeting. But more than one selectmen said a position would be taken on town meeting floor.

During the course of the discussion, Paul Barry, one of the owners of Cohasset Heights, told selectmen the town would face a court challenge if the articles were adopted. Barry offered to sell the land to the town to end the ongoing battle.

A public hearing on all three citizen-petitioned zoning articles happens before the planning board at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 2, at town hall.

The first of the three articles changes the definition of a structure to include a landfill. That article would impose a 45-foot height restiction on the landfill. Plans currently under consideration by the state talk about a 65-foot height.

The other two articles would change the zoning map. Cohasset Heights and the land around it along Route 3A is zoned for light industry. The change would make the land highway business, rather than industrial, and limit the options. About a dozen land owners would be affected, according to Paul Barry, one of the owners of Cohasset Heights.

School committee questions system

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Is the way Cohasset students are grouped the most effective way to impart education and promote self-esteem? That is one of several questions the school committee will take up during the 1991-1992 school year.

With autumn officially underway, the committee took a look at past performance and began talking about goals and directions for the new school year.

The committee measures progress against a five-year plan for the school system. The plan consists of sections dealing with school facilities, staff development,

A conversation with Arne Gjesteby

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Special to the Mariner

Many years ago Arne Gjesteby ran a campaign for water commissioner.

After reading his campaign literature, a friend noticed that he and his family had escaped from Norway when the Nazis took over the government. The friend said: "This is too good to be running only for water commissioner. You should be running for something a lot bigger." Many people agree.

Arne comes from a family of politicians. His bride, Martha, is in her second term as a Cohasset Selectman. His sister serves in the Norwegian Cabinet as the Administrator of Justice (a position equivalent to the U.S. Attorney General).

Thus far Arne's only attempt at election has been for water commissioner. But he raised some eyebrows during his six years on the Cohasset Advisory Committee. Some people say his political teething was done on the board of selectmen this past year. Interesting, until one looks at where Arne's been, and you realize his mettle probably stems from the Nazi's topple of Norway.

As a 16 year old, Arne watched as a Nazi court prosecuted his father for crimes against the Nazis. His father, a labor union official, had also served in the Norwegian Parliament, and as a city counselor.

"When the Nazis entered Norway, they told our government to leave.... My father protested the take-over. And so a special court was set up.

"The presiding Nazi court officer asked my father, and I remember this, how it was that he happened to be the one who wrote the protest of the take-over of the government by the Nazis.

"My father asked him in turn how it had happened that 'just you' happened to be the judge in this court?"

Arne said this challenge was recognized by all as a veritable slap in the face to the Nazis. Accordingly his father went to prison for a year and a half.

Former attorney indicted

Atty. Gen. Scott Harshbarger announced today that a former Cohasset attorney has been arraigned in Suffolk Superior Court on charges of embezzlement involving the theft of $217,000.

Fred M. Dellorfano, Jr., 51, of Cohasset, was indicted by a Suffolk County Grand Jury Sept. 12 for seven counts of larceny over $250, allegedly committed while he was acting as the fiduciary of four trusts. He had served as the trustee since 1985.

"People place their affairs at the discretion of attorneys," said Attorney General Harshbarger. "It is most disappointing when an attorney violates the trust of his clients by stealing from them."

The complaint alleges that Dellorfano, who acted as an attorney and tax advisor, as well as trustee, transferred funds from the trusts' bank accounts on the pretense that the funds would be used to pay the trusts' tax obligations. A review of Dellorfano's bank records, the tax returns prepared by him for the trusts and the records of the IRS allegedly revealed that no such tax payments were ever made and Dellorfano used the funds for a variety of personal and business purposes.

Dellorfano was released on personal recognizance and is due back in Suffolk Superior Court on October 9, for a pre-trial conference.

Assistant Attorney General Howard Brick and Investigator Brad Chase, of the Criminal Bureau, are handling the case for the Attorney General.

Boy scouting diamond jubilee

Troop 28 observes the 75th Anniversary of Cohasset Boy Scouting with an afternoon of reminiscences, acknowledgements and renewed camaraderie at Kimball's By-the-Sea, Sunday, Oct. 20, 1-5 p.m. The Diamond Jubilee Committee has done its best to identify the whereabouts of more than 1,000 past and present Boy Scouts in order to invite them to the festivities. Invitations have been mailed to as far away as California and Florida. Approximately 500 Scouts have been located, 200 additional Scouts have been confirmed as deceased, and the search continues to notify almost 400 others. Unfortunately, Scout records are not 100 percent complete; so, anyone who has not received an invitation should contact Mary McElroy, 383-0505, Merle Brown 383-1625, or Linda Farrag 383-9519. A Sept. 23 suspense date for RSVP's has been extended to Sept. 30 in order to make allowances for any communications delays.

Cohasset Boy Scouting enjoys a proud history. Including within its ranks are 60 Scouts who have achieved the highest rank attainable: Eagle Scout. Past and present Scout leaders and Troop Committee members are local residents who have devoted decades of service to the youth of Cohasset. The anniversary jubilee offers a special opportunity to renew old friendships and foster the objectives of Boy Scouting which is to serve: God, Country, and Community by "Doing a Good Turn Daily".

Every five years, Troop 27 also endeavors to resource its Troop 28 Memorial Scholarship Fund. Established during 1986, scholarships are awarded annually to Cohasset Scouts/Explorers going onto college or

New leadership for OCRR

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Halfway through the game, the MBTA is changing its quarterback on the $600 million Old Colony Railroad Rehabilitation Project.

And instead of one quarterback, the MBTA will be using five officials to take over the duties of departing Senior Project manager Steve Polechronis.

Polechronis will be leaving the project and heading to California to work in the private sector at the end of the month.

Polechronis attended Thursday's presentation of the final environmental impact statment of the project at Braintree Town Hall.

At the meeting, where the status the Greenbush extension in Hingham, the Kingston station and the Abington station were discussed, Polechronis admitted to having mixed feelings about leaving the project as it nears federal approval.

"Anyone who does this type of work wants to be there at the groundbreaking," he said. "But a project like this takes a long time. It has been many years of hard work, but I'm proud of the contributions I've made and also of the contributions by the towns on the South Shore."

On Thursday night, the MBTA issued its final environmental impact statement to the Citizen's Advisory Committee and introduced the new leadership on the project.

The five officials who will be seeing the project to its completion are:

*Ernest Deeb, the assistant project manager.

*Peter Calcaterra, the project manager for development.

*Jane Chmielinski, the project manager for the environment.

*Rocco Mancini, the assistant director of construction.

*Bob Egan, the project manager for design.

"Of course we will have to break down and distribute the work that Steve did," Deeb said. "There will be a number of us working, but I'm confident in our abilities."

Citizens Advisory Committee chairman Terry Fancher said the project will miss Polechronis' touch.

"We will miss having that one person who we knows the answers to all our questions," Fancher said. "But the MBTA has shown its committment to the project by replacing him with five very competent people."

Thursday's meeting revolved around three stations on the Old Colony Railroad, the Kingston station, the Greenbush station and the Abington station.

The first issue was the environmental impact on Kingston with the location of the train station at the Industrial Park near the Independence Mall.

MBTA officials said the Kingston report would not be ready until Thursday, Sept. 26.

The section on Kingston will deal with the station's effect on the environment, as well as its impact on traffic, and the impact on the residents lives as a whole.

As for the Greenbush station, a review by the federal government on the impact of the line going through the Lincoln Historic District needs to be completed before any work can begin.

Deeb said this federal 4F review could delay the Greenbush line a year.

As for the Abington station, the location was moved, after a request by selectmen, from Monroe Ave. to Route 123.

Deeb said the CAC will have 37 days to review and make comments on the environmental impact.

After that period, the public and various town officials will have 30 days to comment on the study.

Deeb said the Urban Mass Transit Administration has already received the environmental impact study, minus the Kingston section, and he hopes to have federal approval on the project by mid-December.

"Rather than wait, we wanted to give them what we had and let them get started on it," Deeb said. "It will give them a head start and save some time down the road."

If all federal approvals are met, Deeb estimated the $453 million Middleboro/Lakeville, Plymouth/Kingston line would begin work in the spring and could be complete by July of 1996.

As for the seperate line running through Greenbush and into Scituate, because of the 4F study, the $130 million line could be complete by July of 1997.

A conversation with Arne Gjesteby; Life, politics and passion

Concurrently, Arne's brother was sentenced to a serve a year and a half sentence in a German prison.

At the conclusion of serving his sentence, Arne's father discovered he was on a special Nazi list of people to be resentenced. The Norwegian underground organization told him to flee from Norway with his family. They left for Sweden in 1944. Arne completed his schooling in a Swedish gymnasium.

In Sweden, Arne joined the Norwegian Air Force, and left to train in England.

"We landed at the Isle of Man, which was a screening camp. It was like a prison camp. After we passed screening, we were sent to pilot school near Toronto, Canada...a place called Little Norway,' " Arne said.

"After we (the class of 24) finished ground training, we were sent back to England, where we were training how to fly. In the middle of flight training the war ended. We were young and foolish, and we were unhappy when the war ended. We wanted to go and get them."

In 1945 Arne and his family returned to Norway, and Arne entered law school in Oslo.

Shortly after obtaining a law degree, Arne was invited to San Diego, where he was to serve as best man in a friend's wedding. The groom and Arne bought a 1939 Ford on the East Coast, and proceeded to see America as they drove to California.

When he arrived back in Boston (1952) Arne met Martha at a picnic. Like all men, Arne is very unclear about meeting her, and/or how meeting her changed his plans. A year after having a picnic with Martha, he married her. It must have been some picnic.

Initially, the budding young Norwegian-trained lawyer found work in New Bedford on a scallop boat; upon reflection, he says this lasted for about one week.

After being a scalloper, Arne started his own import company involving Norwegian radios and other products. For a brief, two-year period (1970-1972), Arne and his American family returned to Oslo, Norway, where Arne was director of sales for the largest publishing company in Oslo.

The job was fine, but his American-born children and wife opted to return to Cohasset. Arne, too, missed Cohasset.

In 1970 he started his own ship chandlery business in Boston. Arne and his youngest son, Nils, now operate the business. With humility, he says "Nils does all the heavy lifting." (Readers should note that this business put four children through private colleges and keeps Martha in leather suits).

And then there was life, business, raising children, Martha's political career (another story). In addition to running his own business, Arnie managed to achieve his MBA requirements from Northeastern University.

Arne is a life master ranking contract bridge player through the American Contract Bridge League. No mean feat. And, he's an excellent chess player.

Four lovely children, and five very busy grandchildren are the extra added attractions of a life. Arne's and Arne Gjesteby, second from the right, works at the forefront of town meeting as chairman of the advisory board. He recently completed his last term on the board, something limited by town bylaw.

Gjesteby warns TM to reject police contract

On Oct. 7 a special town meeting will be held, and at that meeting Arne Gjesteby said he will advise town meeting to reject the police contract and send it back to the selectmen with the message that the town will no longer accept any contract with a minimum manning clause.

This action would, Gjesteby said, "Send a message to the fire association. Also, town meeting should be aware that it should be prepared to give four percent raises to all other employees if it gives it to this group."

He pointed out that in fiscal 1993 and 1994 a four percent pay raise for all bargaining groups would amount to approximately $300,000 — which is already $50,000 above the monies which Proposition 2 1/2 allows.

"If voters want to take control of their future, raises should be given only subject to any override."

Additionally, Gjesteby warned: "If you agree the town should gain control of town affairs, make sure you show up at the special town meeting. Because the people who wish everything to stay the same will certainly be there."

He has no doubt that town meeting, with direction from the advisory committee and citizens, will have to play an even more important part in future town affairs. "It will be and it is up to Town Meeting to control the financial situation of town employees, town contracts and terms of labor."

Until the advisory committee informed town meeting members to the contrary, town meeting was led to believe it had to approve contracts negotiated by the selectmen.

One of Gjesteby's last actions as advisory chairman was to create a committee of advisory-appointed people to collect data for advisors. The invitation was made at annual town meeting, at which point selectmen asked town counsel to "research" the ability of advisors to "appoint" any committee.

According to Gjesteby, while he recognizes that the advisory committee cannot "legally" appoint anyone to a standing committee of its own making, there is nothing illegal about the committee's naming anyone or any group it wishes to study anything, after which advisors can choose to adopt the information if they so choose.

Why did the selectmen resist the creation of what is now known as the advisor's committee?

"I'm never going to understand that," Arne said. "As town leaders, they should be interested in how the town might save money by doing things differently. It's become apparent to me that the selectmen are never going to be able to negotiate a lesser minimum manning contact for the fire department. Over the years the selectmen and the personnel committee have negotiated away their management tools."

Asked why town meeting hasn't become more involved with contracts over the years, Gjesteby said:

"A lot of people at town meeting could certainly understand contracts, but in the past the contacts were never presented to them. On Oct. 7 the police contract will go before special town meeting. All in all, it's not a bad contract. But, the advisory committee and town meeting have to look at it within the context of the economy.

"Town meeting has to know, and the advisory committee has to tell town meeting, that the selectmen and the personnel committee are obligated to recommend this contract they have negotiated, in good faith. Town meeting should be very polite, and listen. But, it shouldn't believe a word of all the polite things being said about how great this contract is. This town may well be affluent. But if it chooses to not vote for an override next spring, affluency isn't going to matter."

He said town meeting should remember several important things.

1. "No law says we have to have a library.
2. "No law says we have to hire x-number of teachers.
3. "No law says we have to vote for any override.

"Remember, if an override doesn't pass next year, cuts will not come from our negotiated minimum-manning fire contract. Cuts will be made from the schools and from every other area of town government."

What should town meeting be doing?

"Town meeting should be very interested in the results of the police/fire study," because according to Gjesteby, this could be an area where major savings could be accomplished if the economy worsens and an override doesn't pass.

In view of predictions of a worsening economy, and the need for conservative spending, Gjesteby said he felt it imperative for the fire department to recruit and train a call roster, and prepare for downsizing. Additionally, he cautioned: "The fire chief has to know this and be directed to accomplish the same."

Asked if the selectmen or town meeting will take any of this advice, he shrugs.

Bryanton wins support as director of the senior center

Selectmen gave the Council on Aging some support Monday night as they agreed to talk to the personnel board about the job classification of Kathy Bryanton, director of the senior center.

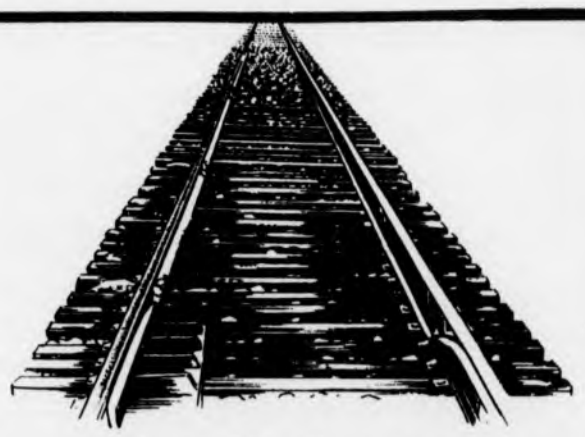
Bryanton is listed as a coordinator in the pay scale rather than as a director.

David Chittim and Gerard Keating appeared before the selectmen to ask for help in placing Bryanton at a higher level on the pay scale.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said the town meeting approved a director's position when the job was established.

Greg Doyon, selectmen's secretary, confirmed that he had checked old minutes and that the official vote was for a director.

"Let's talk with the personnel board and see what the problem is," suggested Selectman Diana Kornet.



Chittim said there are two issues the personnel board is concerned about. One is whether the list of services provided by the senior center are appropriate functions for the town to support and the other involved the job title.

The selectmen restated the board's official support for the COA and the senior center.

•SHINE, which provides seniors with a pre-retirement program and planning series;
•special needs exercise programs;
•home delivered meals;
•health and wellness clinics;
•recreation and socialization programs;
•employment assistance and placement counseling;
•educational programs; and •transportation assistance.

The COA, which is responsible for serving all of the 1,488 senior citizens living in Cohasset, plans to raise the funding necessary for the expansion through local fund raising.

"With the economy in the state it's in, federal and state funding just isn't there," said Bryanton.

"So we'll just continue growing through the kindness of town support and organizations like the community center."

"Five years ago, the council needed space and the community center provided it," Bryanton recalled.

"Now we need more space and their still willing to accommodate us. The support is phenomenal."

According to Bryanton, the community center also sees themselves as receiving a perk out of the arrangement.

"The center feels that the expansion will produce a multi-generational environment within the building," Bryanton said.

Once completed, the new extension will provide space for all ages, integrating both the young and old.

With senior citizens representing 22 percent of Cohasset's total population, the new office and activity space will become an asset almost immediately.

"The left side of the building will house three new offices and one 16-by-38-foot room designated for seminars, workshops, and conferences," Bryanton explained.

"The other side of the building," she said, "will include two classrooms for activities and a 30-by-9-foot function room doubling as a dining room."

The new space, Bryanton said, will give the council the ability to stay localized and concentrated in one area, where the location is familiar.

"The extension is a unique opportunity for the Cohasset community," Bryanton claimed. "It will mean that the community center will become the focal point for a great deal of activity."

The council has been hoping for a facility like this since our inception in 1967, she said.

"It will allow us to fulfill our ultimate goal of adding to the positive aspects of aging."

"It's important to remember," reminded Bryanton, "that it's cost-effective to keep a person at home and independent in their own community."

Edison agrees to improve its disaster work

By Judy Enright
Mariner staff

After a series of five meetings, a written agreement has been drawn up detailing future storm procedures to be followed by Eastern Edison in its member towns.

Most towns had complained, after Hurricane Bob, that an emergency plan, hammered out after Hurricane Gloria some years ago, was not implemented during or after the most recent storm.

"The primary problem," LeClair said earlier about Edison's response during Hurricane Bob, "was the failure of the company to communicate with the public and the fire chiefs in response to their problems."

There was also a failure on Eastern Utilities' part to provide adequate equipment to the towns to handle problems, emergency personnel said at the time. And, the company didn't designate a representative to stay with towns during the storm, so local officials had to deal with utility spokesmen in Brockton who had no knowledge of what was happening in the towns.

Officials also said Eastern Utilities appeared to be unprepared for the severity of the storm.

DECISIONS

Among decisions reached during the series of meetings, according to Norwell Selectman Chairman Donald LeClair, were that:

• A line crew and truck will be stationed with each town's fire service from the beginning of a severe storm, like a hurricane, until the town is secured;

Edison agrees to improve its disaster work

• A new radio frequency — for use only during severe weather emergencies when land lines are down — is being sought from the Federal Communications Commission;

• Each fire chief will meet individually with Edison to effect an updated priority list for restoration of power;

• Public relations (involving notification of town officials and the public about restoration progress and times and what's entailed, will be enhanced through local radio and cable TV stations;

Cellular telephones are also being considered, LeClair said, to improve communication between Edison and town officials when land lines are down.

LeClair said the Edison truck and line crew, stationed in each town with the fire service, will do "a cut and drop service," he said, to sever renegade lines and "try to keep the main integrity of the system going for as long as possible."

LeClair added that local officials from Norwell, Hanover, Scituate, Rockland, Abington, Pembroke and Cohasset, were taken through Eastern Edison's Hanover facility on Monday (Sept. 23) and shown newly-purchased testing equipment that will be installed in meter vans so downed wires can be tested on the spot to see if they're alive. They also got a complete inventory of available equipment and were told that it takes about 24 hours to round up and bring in outside crews.

NEW FREQUENCY

LeClair added that the group has already petitioned the Federal Communication Commission (FCC) for the new frequency to handle radio communications if land lines are down.

The new frequency, he said, will be tied into the fire network and will be used only if land lines are inoperable. The base station will be located in Hanover at Eastern Edison's facility there.

Edison will also provide the fire chiefs with mapping so the chiefs can become familiar with grids Edison uses in restoration of power. "It will be important to area officials to see how the grid works," LeClair said.

Representatives of the seven towns — all of whom are serviced by the Brockton-based utility company, have been meeting weekly in Norwell. The final group meeting was this Monday, LeClair said. Eastern Edison officials participated in two of the meetings, he said. LeClair added that Edison has responded to the towns' concerns "by sending the President of the company — John Carney — who brought a delegation of people who can make decisions and they did."

"I want to publicly thank the area chiefs, selectmen, executive secretaries and town administrators who participated for their cooperation in this effort," LeClair said. "I think this will be quite beneficial to all."

LeClair will write a summary letter back to the area towns advising them of the progress, changes made and disaster plans formulated. "Hopefully, this will address the main points the town found frustrating in the last storm."

John Seavey of Seavey Engineering and James Ogburn of Norfolk Conveyor appeared before selectmen to state the case against changing the zoning map. Both the engineering company and the conveyor manufacturing plant would be affected by the zoning change.

In one article the whole area changes to highway business. In the other article, a 400-foot strip along Route 3A changes to highway business.

The zoning articles were supported by a group of residents involved in the citizens group, SAFE, Stop Any Further Expansion.

John McNabb, Kevin O'Donnell of Fairoaks Lane and James Kinch of Forest Avenue acted as spokesmen for the SAFE group. They made a case for the zoning articles as being a way to limit possible expansion of the landfill.

In response to questions about whether it was unfair to target one business, McNabb said: "We're not talking about a restaurant on a postage stamp lot. We're talking about 50 acres. It's the right of the citizens of the community to change zoning as long as it is justified in terms of the zoning act."

He pointed out that the zoning act talks about public safety, aethetics and protection of the water supply. He said the zoning change is the way to go because a landfill cannot be eliminated as a use in an industrial zone.

Paula Knowles of Border Street spoke in opposition to the zoning changes, saying if this goes through any business or any resident could become a target.

Jim Ogburn of Norfolk Conveyor, a business that would also be affected by the change, told the selectmen, "You're bombing is not precision. This is not like Desert Storm. It's more like Hillside slaughter. I urge you to vote against it."

John Seavey of Seavey Engineering, which employs about 50 people, said he too hoped the board would oppose the change.

"You're taking away our rights. You're hurting our ability to expand," Seavey said.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby made a motion after the discussion to back the first of the three zoning articles. The vote was one-to-three with only Gjesteby supporting the article.

On the other two articles, selectmen decided to hold off any recommendation.

Students on committee

Student representatives joined the school committee for the first time this year. Representatives are seniors Dan De Michele, Rebecca Kirk, and Jessica DeLorenzo and juniors Mike Reynolds, and Dan Baird.

Student representatives are chosen by the student council to bring a student perspective to the committee and report back to the council. The committee told the students they look forward to establishing a close working relationship with them.

The student representatives have been asked to report to the committee on whether the school's drug and alcohol policy is communicated clearly and effectively to students, with particular emphasis on students representing Cohasset in athletics and extra-curricular activities.

In a related matter, the committee announced that the Sept. 21 meeting will feature a presentation on the new health handbook by Michael Gill, health coordinator for the school system.

Students meet Vikings

Alternative School students took their vintage rowing boat out to meet and escort three Viking longboats into their berth near the U.S.S. Constitution.

The longboats, replicas of vessels used by Leif Ericson and other pre-Columbus Vikings, sailed from Norway as part of Vinland Revisited, a celebration of Viking exploration of the North America.

The Cohasset vessel was one of five period boats to accompany the Viking longboats.

The Viking visit was also featured on the educational telecast system, MCET. Cohasset recently linked up with the MCET. Cohasset students were able to participate in a question and answer interview with the captain of the Vinland Revisited crew through satellite hookup.

"It's just the beginning of the exciting capabilities," Superintendent Stephen Hart said of MCET. The interactive nature of the system will allow school systems to offer "satellite classrooms" for low-enrollment courses sand other enrichment programs.

School lunch regulations

The school committee adopted federal regulations controlling participation in the free and reduced-price school lunch program. Cohasset receives federal reimbursement at the rate of $1.76 for each student receiving a free school lunch by adhering to federal regulations.

Currently, 25 students are receiving free lunches and 1 student receives reduced-price meals. The school increased confidentiality in the elementary grades this year by adopting a ticket system for lunch purchases.

Schools on hot seat

The school committee is gearing up for its annual fall meeting with the Chamber of Commerce. The committee set up a subcommittee of representatives from the school administration and the committee to plan for the meeting.

The new group was charged with the task of finding a way to demonstrate the educational value the town receives for dollars spent. The committee asked them to develop a program that will give chamber members a realistic picture of the successes and needs of the school system.

While promising a free and frank exchange with chamber members, Chairman Barbara Bliss confessed, "I'm a little bit tired of school committee bashing."

The meeting between the two groups begins at 8 p.m. Oct. 15 at the South Shore Art Center. A reception period will begin at 7:30 p.m.

around town

❑ Attention all of you Barbara Conte fans...Oct. 9, at 4 p.m., at Kimball's By-The-Sea there is going to be a reception held in her honor. I guess I don't need to tell everyone all that Barbara has done for the children and families of the town. For 37 years she has been a town legend. How many kids has she helped over the years? How many wonderful cartoons has she drawn depicting every imaginable event? How many people has she shown all of her Dad's miniatures to? Who could ever be a finer person or a grander daughter? Well, everyone who has known Barbara has been touched by her; those are just a few examples. Tell her how grateful you are in person. Tickets are available at the Deer Hill School, and they are $15 per person. Call today.

❑ There's a lot of news to report on the Shumakers this week, an up-date if you will. David, a junior at Harvard, has been awarded a Harvard College Scholarship for the academic year 1991-1992 in recognition of academic achievement of high distinction. David is a 1988 graduate of Cohasset High School. Lisa, who graduated from C.H.S. in 1987, graduated cum laude from Harvard in June of 1991. Lisa is currently in San Jose, California and teaching English at the junior high level. That's a family who has great reason to be proud, and we are proud of you too, David and Lisa.

❑ Congratulations go to the Kulturides family this week. On Sept. 15, Heidi and Chris Kulturides had a baby girl, Ariana Kulturides, and we hear that she is one beautiful, happy, good baby. Of course Peter and Judy are beside themselves they are so thrilled. Just ask them for the latest pictures...As a side note, Heidi had to make a trip back to the hospital for an infection. We sure hope that you are home and feeling fine as you read this, Heidi, snuggling that brand new baby girl.

❑ Had a nice note from the steering committee of the Harborfest. They are hard at work planning next year's Second Annual Harborfest in connection with the South Shore Art Center Art Festival. They are hoping for participation from many groups so that they can expand their activities. They would like to hear your suggestions and hope that by listening to them they can put on an enhanced program under the Harborfest Umbrella which will add to the enjoyment of all the participants and the townspeople who turn out for the events. Contact them with your ideas, or just let them know you back them in their efforts.

❑ We must take the time to thank Cornelia O'Malley for all of her years of service to our town. Mrs. O'Malley was a member of the bylaws committee, and has been since the committee was conceived.

❑ Congratulations and best wishes go to the brand new married couple, Mr. and Mrs. David Rourke. David and Michelle (Hernan) were married this past Saturday, Sept. 21, and we understand it was a super wedding, with a great time being had by all. Here's to a long and happy life.

❑ How about the new PSO Calendar? This is a terrific public service the PSO provides our community. Let's make sure the service continues by sending your tax deductible donation to PSO, Box 30, Cohasset, MA.

❑ We certainly hope that Olive Weisenfluh is feeling better and resting at home after her recent stay at South Shore Hospital. Get well soon and enjoy this beautiful weather we are having.

❑ Don't forget the used book sale at the Paul Pratt Library this weekend (Sept. 27 and 28) from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. There are books for all ages, on all topics, in hard or paperback. The sale from the books will be used to help enhance library services, so everyone benefits from this.

❑ We are happy to report that David LaVange is at home and well on the road to recovery after a stay at the South Shore Hospital. Get well soon.

❑ That's all the news from here for this week. Please let me know what's new at your house. Sallyann Chatterton

School officials plan party for Barbara Conte

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Ken Ekberg, principal of the Deer Hill School, wants to do something special to honor the woman who was always there to give a kind word to a child — or save a stray cat — or locate information.

Barbara Conte, school secretary for 37 years, has retired. She doesn't want the spotlight. She decided to take her retirement to stay home to care for her mother.

She doesn't plan to travel.

"Buying her a gift will be difficult," Ekberg said. "There's a committee of teachers, including myself, in charge of the gifts. I don't know what they'll do. In the past, we've given retiring employees plane tickets or a something of that kind. That wouldn't be appropriate for Barbara. She likes to be at home."

A reception is planned for 4 to 6 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 9, at Kimballs By the Sea in honor of the retirement. Party-goers will discover then what the gift committee decides.

Tickets for the reception are $15 each and are available at the Deer Hill School office.

It's expected the selectmen will issue a proclamation noting the long years of service Conte has given to the town.

The board has already discussed the matter. The consensus is: Everyone appreciates Conte.

She is known as a woman of patience. Her hobby has been creating miniature furnishings. Indeed, Ekberg said a wall in his home is a tribute to her work.

"She's been giving me miniature chairs for Christmas for years," he said.

"She uses match sticks to do the work. It's amazing."

He said he expects the Deer Hill alumni will want to turn out for the party.

"She's touched just about every family in town over the years," he said.

It is not known whether the Deer Hill cat will attend the reception. But the cat story is one that symbolizes the woman's kindness.

As Ekberg tells it, about four or five years ago a cat appeared at the school. The creature was dishevelled, obviously homeless. Anyway the cat wandered in the school door.

Conte fed the stray cat and she stayed.

It happened the cat was pregnant and soon delivered a litter of eight or nine kittens. So the school office worked on giving kittens to the children. Soon the cat became pregnant again and Ekberg ruled the cat would have to go or undergo an operation.

"I don't know how she arranged it but the cat was fixed. I don't want to know how she arranged it," Ekberg said.

"Barbara always knew how to make things happen. Because of the way she is people respect her and work with her.

"We all miss her."

Other school business

In other business, the school committee this week:

• Appointed Ronald Ford as junior high soccer coach. This will be his first year as a soccer coach.

• Appointed Valerie Ann Devine to the position of aide for the newly-reinstated IMS computer math laboratory at Deer Hill School.

• Approved removal of stones from the old stone wall on school property for use in the veterans' memorial being constructed on Government Island.

Services for Seniors

Services for Seniors is a service which helps make homemakers, home health aids, and nurses more accessible to elders in need of assistance with personal car, meal preparation, light housekeeping, shopping, companionship, or respite care.

Names of these workers are provided free of charge to elders, who then negotiate directly with the workers.

Those wishing to know more about the program are encouraged to call Mary Beth Worrick, the program director, at 383-0771 or 383-0821, Tuesday or Thursday from 9 a.m. until noon.

Services for Seniors is a program of the Social Service League of Cohasset and is partially funded by South Shore Elder Services.

editorial

Let the state fix CHL

About a year-and-a-half ago, the people behind the private dump at Cohasset Heights began working on the permit process for what some say will solve the odor problem.

There's an application pending somewhere in the maize of the state Department of Environmental Protection, DEP, that seeks to do something called flaring.

It means what it sounds like it means. Flaring means setting fires in the dump.

Now, this has nothing to do with burning trash, the way dumps long ago handled rubbish.

The fires would be fairly small. Gas is already escaping from the pile of refuse. If gas weren't escaping there would be no smell.

Apparently, what the experts suggest — and it is done in some other locations — is to light the gas and allow the fire to burn away the odor problem.

Sounds like a good idea to us.

We think that the ball should be clearly placed in the state's court to get this process rolling.

John McNabb, who is working with the group that opposes expansion of the Cohasset Heights dump, said he looked into the status of the flaring permit and found that the DEP was waiting for more engineering information from Cohasset Heights.

McNabb had better luck than we did. Because our calls to DEP weren't returned.

If DEP is indeed unable to respond to simple questions — simple permitting requests — we think the agency should lose its right to interfere in local affairs.

We think it's time the state is taken to task on this issue.

DEP is currently considering the request of Cohasset Heights for a permit to expand in size of the area filled as well to expand the types of waste accepted at the facility.

We think it's inappropriate to allow an agency that has failed to deal with a minor permit for a process designed to limit odor problems to consider a major application.

We think DEP ought to be enjoined from running around the state talking about closing all the municipal landfills until it can begin to come up with solutions.

This week during the selectmen's meeting, Paul Barry talked at some length about the fact that recycling is not enough. He pointed out that Cohasset generates trash that is trucked off the SEMass where is causes problems for some other neighborhood.

He talked about the "Not-In-My-Back-Yard" attitude we all have about trash.

It's time to get working on the solution.

We think the DEP ought to begin talking with the local health officials to come up with some solutions. If flaring isn't the right way to go, let's hear from the people at DEP about other ideas.

And if the DEP has no idea how to curb the odor problems of a landfill, then it has no right even thinking about expansion.

Save Monday, Oct. 7, at 7:30 p.m. for Special Town Meeting.
The business takes place at the high school.

A fool for all seasons

By Richard Small

commentary

The recent near-record heat and stifling humidity belied the astronomical change. Monday, Sept. 23 at 8:48 a.m. (EDT), the sun moved into Libra and thus began the Autumnal Equinox.

Who among us has not rationalized amidst the gales of February, that we live in Massachusetts in part because of the seasonal changes?

As we affect the layered look and shape of woolen turnips, whilst we gaze longingly at four-color ads of Jamaica and points sunward, we tell ourselves that we live in the northeast to enjoy the changing seasons.

We are not dull, unchanging one or two-season-types. Nay, we rejoice in the amazing forms liquid from the sky can take in the course of a South Shore-four-season- year.

Friends from Florida and other near-tropical fantasylands look askance, smile, shake their heads in a knowing way and smirk at our rationalizations...Sure, right, the change of seasons. Tell us again how nice dead batteries and frozen car door locks are...

Then they remind you of spring, also known lovingly as mud season. So what, if March and April string together storms of five and six-days duration. So what, if the house begins to resemble some soft fungal form rising above the flooded lawn. At least we are not enduring Goethe's accursed "succession of sunny days."

There's always summer. Ah yes the halcyon days of the year. Unfortunately in these parts it can be a hit or miss affair. We remember unfondly recent summers of 8 and 10 weekend rainouts in a row.

Face it, the seasonal year in New England is unpredictable, and inconstant. Only one season fulfills its promise and makes all the others seem less fickle.

It is the season that was ushered in on last Monday morn that makes me glad for that bit of familial insanity that ordained my life on the coast of Massachusetts.

Is there any finer weather in all the world as late September, early October in New England? The sky so blue that the thought of not seeing it again can make you ache.

The air so clear that sound seems to travel forever on the night. The backyard grape arbors transform the sunshine to the redolence of life ripened and sweet for the harvest.

Canada geese vectored against the sunrise or sunset. Their encouraging cries to each other are the music of autumn.

And then there is the maple out the bedroom window. Slow to turn, it flames red for a week to its shedding. The fleetness of things is also the season.

Autumn does not last and that is the essence of its beauty. Perhaps that is the essence of any sensual beauty...its temporality.

The power of this season is such that it heartens us to accept the unpredictability of the others.

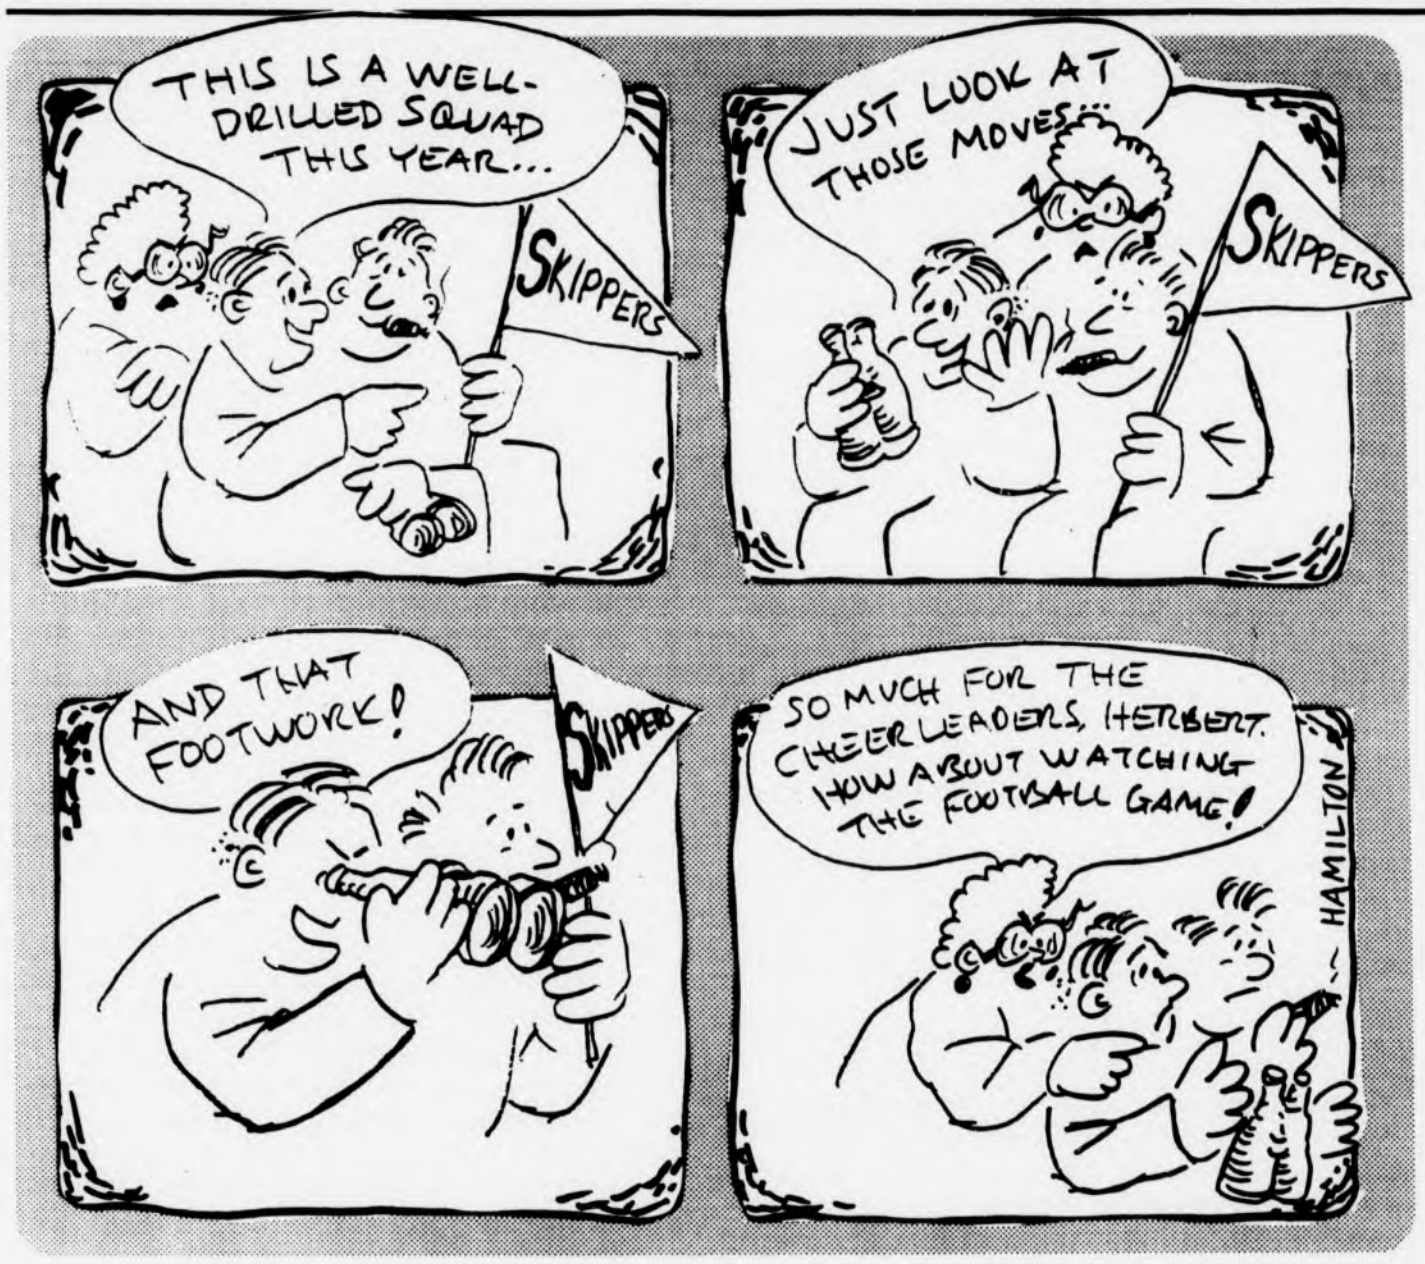
Then again there is a certain anarchic beauty to a February three-day blow...

chamber chatter

By Paula Knowles
Cohasset Chamber of Commerce

Two weeks ago, the Chamber of Commerce held its September general meeting at the South Shore Art Center. The evening's topic was Cohasset Village: how we could not only keep it alive, but help to make it grow and prosper. This is a concern as old as the Chamber itself, and we had no reason to hope that anything more would come out of this meeting than had come out of the countless other meetings held on this subject in the past.

But we decided to try, anyway. And lo and behold, this meeting WAS different. Joining the members and village merchants and property owners were members of many town boards — Planning, Health, ZBA, Selectmen, Design Review — as well as the Village Renaissance group; and they were there to give a united message to us and to the Town: we are here to HELP you. Let us know what you need us to do, and we will try to give you as much help as we are able to.



This message was so gratefully received that the rest of the audience responded in a very unusual way. Instead of rehashing old complaints about the town and its boards, as is the norm at meetings like this, people actually got up and offered ideas —positive ideas, for a change. And most importantly, town officials and business people alike agreed that a next step must be taken, a plan formulated, a path chosen. The Chamber has committed itself to this direction.

In fact, Bob Martin, Chamber president, is already hard at work with some village businesses to take a few small steps. But we could use your help, too. What do you think the village needs? What would draw you or your neighbors downtown to shop? What have we got, and what do we need? What events or promotions have you seen work in other places? What have you seen fail, and why? Let us know what you think. After all, every taxpayer, voter, shopper, guest in our town is at one time or another affected by the prosperity, or lack of it, of the Village. And don't limit yourself to the Village. The Harbor, 3A, West Corner — all are areas that influence our business community and its growth.

If you want to help, please drop us a line or two, signed or unsigned. Send it to our P.O. Box 330, Cohasset 02025, or leave it at any area business. It will get to us. Or call the Chamber at 383-1010 and leave your message. Again, no names are necessary if you are shy about it. Please give us a hand ... it will help us all in the end.

A SECOND THOUGHT: If you have a thought or idea for us, but just can't seem to get it down on paper, deliver your message in person when you join us in October for our annual School Forum. Watch the Mariner for day and time.

Let the editor know what you think! Write to the Cohasset Mariner

Landfill termed a liability

To the Editor:

A landfill is nothing but a liability. Since 1976, Cohasset has endured a private landfill located off Crocker Lane, which is now owned and operated by Cohasset Heights Ltd. (CHL).

The CHL landfill is located within one mile uphill of Lily Pond, our public drinking water supply. Engineering studies show that approximately 10 percent of water leaving CHL flows towards Lily Pond.

The result of this 15 years of landfill operations are pervasive and persistent noxious odors, damage of adjoining wetlands, an increasingly potential threat to Lily Pond, and an increasing financial liability to the Town from the costs of collecting and removing contaminated leachate for the next 30 years. CHL threatens both our public health and financial health.

Now, CHL wants to saddle Cohasset with an additional 27.5 acre landfill, the "Area V" expansion.

This expansion will double the size of the existing landfill, triple the daily capacity to 900 tons a day, allow general refuse, garbage, and trash to be dumped there, and will increase the environmental and public health threats to the Town for many years to come.

Enough is enough. I urge all Cohasset residents to attend the Oct. 7 Special town Meeting and to say "NO" to this expansion by voting in favor of the SAFE Resolution opposing "Area V." Your support is also needed on the three zoning articles (Articles #17, 18, & 19) submitted by SAFE through citizen petition to limit or stop the expansion.

Sincerely,
James Kinch
77 Forest Ave.

Do business in the town

To the Editor:

Dan Cotton was very thoughtful in sending me a copy of his letter to you dated Sept. 13 in reference to the recent Chamber meeting on Cohasset Village.

I am delighted to see Dan's emphasis on the theme that "more people ought to patronize the Village merchants". We would expand that to "patronize Cohasset businesses and tradespeople where possible."

All we would ask is that people make a concerted effort to do business in town, subject, of course, to all the considerations involved in making a buying decision; convenience, reliability, price, service and the intangibles.

The meeting opened various avenues for the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce to explore and we have every intention of doing so.

Our thanks to all the Town Boards which participated and to all those who attended.

CHL expansion plan hit

SAFE recently issued another statement on the Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) expansion.

"It's our choice," said Alix White, SAFE President. "At the Oct. 7 special town meeting, each of us can make a choice that will help determine the future of Cohasset. As in the sludge question — where we succeeded — your voice will be heard."

SAFE is presenting, at the Oct. 7 Town Meeting, a Resolution opposing the 27.5 acre expansion of CHL, and three zoning articles (Articles 17, 18, and 19) which would either limit or stop the expansion.

"Passage of the Resolution will send a clear, strong message to state and local officials that Cohasset does not want a landfill expansion," said James Kinch, a SAFE member who will present the resolution. "A landfill is nothing but a liability — a liability which the town should not accept."

Article 17 would make a "landfill" be defined as a "structure," and thereby impose a 45-foot height restriction on the expansion.

"This height restriction is needed to prevent an unsightly mountain of trash from despoiling Cohasset forever," said SAFE member Kevin O'Donnell. "CHL is presently planning to build a 210-foot high landfill that will be visible from Route 3A."

Article 18 would rezone the Light Industry zone that Area V would be in to highway business, thus preventing the expansion.

"This rezoning is the most effective way the townspeople have to prevent the Area V expansion," said John McNabb Jr., SAFE Vice-President. "We have a choice between rezoning this area and thus preventing the expansion, or allowing the expansion and forever damaging the economic value of this area to the town."

Article 19, which may be offered as an alternative to Article 18, would rezone only a 400-foot strip of the light industry zone to highway business.

"The 400-foot buffer zone will help prevent landfills and other industrial uses from damaging the economic value of this property to the town," said McNabb.

The Special Town Meeting will be held Monday, Oct. 7, at 7:30 p.m. at the Cohasset High School. A quorum of 100 is required to hold the meeting.

Scituate club wins women's tourney

To the Editor:

Congratulations to the Scituate Women's Golf Team for winning the 1991 summer league. There, I've said it. Something that should have been said by the other teams. Shame on you!

Instead of congratulations Scituate Country Club was attacked by the other members of the league.

The Scituate team, comprised of all average golfers (22+ handicappers) worked hard and put it all together to beat some of the best golfers on the South Shore. The underdog won it. It should have been their day in the sun.

Instead, at the closing field day at Cohasset last Thursday, complaints were lodged against the playing conditions at Scituate. A vote was taken and the end result was refusal by the other teams to play at Scituate for the coming 1992 season.

Yes, Scituate has a lot of ground under repair due to construction and recent rulings by the E.P.A. The weather has also been a factor this year. The relentless sun and lack of rain has taken its' toll on a course with no irrigation system. Scituate has become a true links course and an infinitely humbling course. The members have taken these problems in stride and become better golfers for it. The members like to say that if you can play well at Scituate you can play great anywhere else. The members at the old Wollaston Course used to say that too.

Scituate is not a plush manicured course. That's what makes it so special. What a challenge this course is for the average golfer. The pros would never play here, it would make them look bad.

That's the crux of the matter here. Scituate makes good players look bad. OH the ego—thine own worst enemy. Sure the conditions have a part in the higher scores of the better players, but one has to wonder whether they are in fact better players or just players with artificial handicaps. Do these women turn in every card for every round played as the U.S.G.A. rules insist? Or do they desire to keep their handicaps lower to satisfy their ego's?

Would these complaints have been lodged at Scituate if the team had not won the championship—we'll never know.

Personally, and I do take this personally, I have never seen a worse display of poor sportsmanship as I saw at Cohasset. The South Shore Women's Association, which includes the teams from Wollaston, Cohasset, Hatherly, Plymouth, Marshfield, Halifax and Duxbury took their ball and went home. A golfer once told me I'd never be a good player because I didn't take my game seriously enough. The key word here is game—golf is a game, life is serious.

administrative organization, curriculum and community support.

The committee promised to take an in-depth look at grouping in the coming year.

Chairman Barbara Bliss and committee member Ralph Kidder raised the possibility that Cohasset may divide students into too many groups. It's a criticism that has been raised by several review teams. Bliss also worried that the system overemphasized the highest achievers and failed to challenge the "average" students as a result of ability grouping.

The committee said the review of the grouping policy would take considerable time.

Changes in curriculum, standardized testing and staff evaluation are also in the offing.

The evaluation review committee developed a new evaluation instrument for implementation this year. The instrument will be presented to the school committee in October for review, refinement and adoption.

The administration and teachers developed individual, department, grade and school-based goals and objectives for the coming year. According to Superintendent Stephen Hart, the system participates in a school-based improvement training program underwritten by a grant from the Dodge Foundation. Cohasset is entering its second year in the training program.

The new evaluation process will look at the effectiveness of the in-service program and professional development programs as well as looking at instruction and curriculum.

One change to be instituted this year is a more rigorous system of standardized testing.

Hart said current testing programs were set a too low a performance level.

"It doesn't help you to know all the right answers you got," Hart explained. "We will use one more appropriate to our students. If we are going to make the investment of money and time, we need to [make the results] as useful as possible."

One drawback of the new testing program will be the risk that test results won't cluster at the 97th percentile and higher, Hart warned. He hoped residents would understand that pupils were being tested against peers from wealthy communities and private schools rather that the commonwealth as a whole.

The advantage, Hart said, is the new testing system will be more diagnostic. Educators will get a clearer picture of areas of weakness on both an individual and curriculum basis.

The school committee plans to take up the professional development goals at a future meeting for in-depth analysis and discussion.

Administrative changes included a new principal/curriculum director position at the elementary level last year. During her first year, Linda Whitney studied existing curriculum and explored ways to utilize the existing talents in the system to their full potential.

Another change has been the institution of a mentor system for new staff members at Osgood and the high school.

The system also hired a a part-time assistant and a full-time bookkeeper for the business office.

"I think the evolution of the business department has worked out well," Hart said.

The administration and school system began to look into the area of alternative financing and alternative resources to support education in Cohasset. They vowed to increase their efforts in this area in the coming year as well.

"It's hard not to be concerned with financial aspects," Hard told the committee. "Financial projections are really hard to do" in the current economic climate. Hart and the committee expressed the hope that alternative resources could fund some of the emerging needs.

Last year the system garnered $255,000 in federal, state and private grants.

Another study to be undertaken involves the positions of department chairmen at the high school level. The school committee charged Principal Meg Gallagher with responsibility for taking a hard look at the chairman system.

"I think it's really time we took a hard look at that," committee member Christopher Ford said.

Fellow committee member Russ Reidy agreed.

"Do we need as many chairmen as we have?" he asked. Reidy also asked Gallagher to explore the reasons for a lack of turnover in the chairmanships. He suggested rotating the chairmanship responsibility might be one way to get new blood and fresh ideas.

"Take personalities out of it," Reidy said. "Are we doing the best we can? We need to look for better ways of doing things."

"Who knows," added Bliss, "We may wind up in the same place we are tonight."

Cohasset undergoes review by the re-accreditation board this year. In preparing for review, the system took a thorough look at the curriculum at the high school level with special emphasis on the English curriculum.

At the elementary level, the system reviewed the mathematics curriculum and adopted a new mathematics program that is being implemented this year.

According to Deer Hill Principal Kenneth Ekberg, the new mathematics program emphasizes process over computation and drill work. Students are introduced to calculators and use manipulatives to make math concepts and operations more concrete.

"The kids are really excited," Ekberg said. "And the teachers are really committed to the new program."

Whitney reported that the change in kindergarten entrance age and the institution of child study teams should continue the reduction in grade retentions.

In the last school year, overcrowding at Joseph Osgood School and the need for preventive maintenance received emphasis.

A committee of parents, teachers and administrators studied the overcrowding problem and proposed various options for resolving the problem. If enrollment projections for the next five years hold firm, no grade realignments will be necessary, according to Hart. Fiscal realities preclude any major renovation or expansion projects, such as adding a cafeteria and improving the gymnasium.

Osgood has embarked on a library expansion project. The library will expand into existing storage space in the basement area. Hart said the new walls have already been erected and completion is anticipated within a few months. The existing space will be used while renovations are underway.

Transportation will become a major problem for the administration at the elementary level. Current enrollment at Osgood School is 394 students. The system only has four buses.

"They don't all fit in four buses," Hart said. "Fortunately there are students who walk and some parents drive their children."

As enrollment edges upward, the school will have to confront the capital and operational costs of adding another bus and weigh those against forcing additional students to walk to school.

"Requiring more students to walk involves safety issues," Hart warned the committee. He said it could require crossing guards and other measures.

The school committee promised to solicit parental input when the system reaches the point where changes in the transportation system must be made.

Officials also completed a survey of maintenance needs at Osgood and Deer Hill Schools and began a survey at the junior/senior high school building. They plan to complete the survey at the high school and begin implementation of the recommendations in the current school year.

"This is to avoid a police-fire station situation through regular maintenance," Kidder said. The committee plans to cover maintenance projects within the regular budget rather than through capital improvement funds.

According to Hart, administrators and the school committee met with a number of community groups and organizations to talk about education in Cohasset. They plan to continue the effort in the current school year.

Coastsweep succeeds at new awareness

Sharon Becker stood on Sandy Beach Saturday morning handing out registration forms and accepting beach trash as Coastsweep entered its 10th year.

About 200 pounds of trash was pulled off the beach by the several dozen volunteers involved in the day's activities.

Much of the that trash included plastic items that are lethal to wildlife.

Another 50 pounds of wood was gathered from the dunes across the street from Sandy Beach by volunteers.

Whole families were involved in the work.

"People are more litter conscious," Becker said after the day. "We collected less trash than we did two years ago."

The reason for the decline is there was less trash to collect.

Saturday, Sept. 28, Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy will host an open house featuring a free introductory lesson in Tai Chi Chuan.

Tai Chi, often referred to as a meditation in motion, is characterized by its highly stylized, slow motion practice, which allows one to meet the fitness needs of both the mind and the body. Its slow movement and concentration make it an appealing form of exercise for people seeking an alternative to rigorous exercise programs. Wah Lum Academy is located on Rt. 3A in Cohasset. Please call 383-6822 for further information.

Blue ribbon members show

The South Shore Art Center's Blue Ribbon Members Exhibition will open Thursday, Oct. 10 with an opening reception from 6 to 8 p.m. The exhibition, featuring an entry from each SSAC member including young artists under age 18, will be on display through Nov. 9.

The show will be complemented by a display of marine paintings by Louis Dodd, courtesy of Coughlin and Coughlin of Kingston. The Dodd exhibit will run through October 26.

Joyce Zavorskas will be the faculty feature for the full run of the Blue Ribbon exhibit. The exhibit is open to the public Tuesday to Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset. For more information, please call 383-9548.

Exhibition applications due

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset, will accept applications for Gallery Artist Membership on October 11 between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Anyone wishing to be considered for a solo or group exhibition in the Art Center's Bancroft Gallery should also submit an application by October 11.

Photographers should deliver 20 original works (matted), a resume, and up to 20 slides (optional). All other artists should deliver 5 original works, a resume, and up to 20 slides (optional).

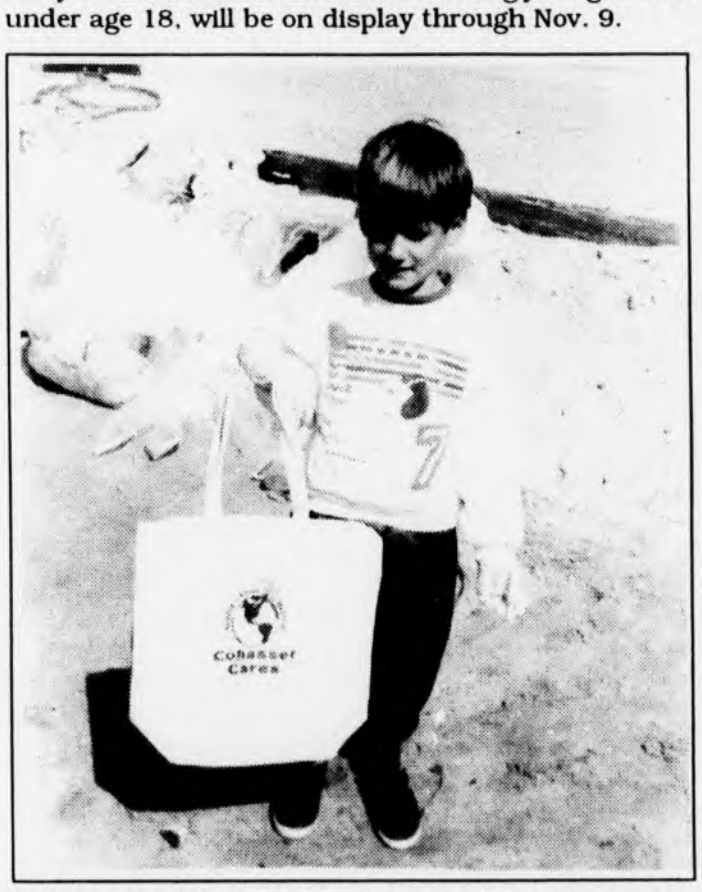
Artwork will be judged on Saturday, Oct. 12 and may be picked up on Wednesday, Oct. 16. All applicants will be notified of the jury's decision by mail; please do not call the office.

766 bottle drive

The Hingham 766 Parent Advisory Council will hold a bottle drive at the Hingham landfill on Saturday, Sept. 28 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. A rain date is set for Sunday, Sept. 29. Proceeds from the collection of your returnable bottles will benefit the programs of the Council which include lectures on educational topics, an annual scholarship, newsletter and parent support group.

For further information on the 766 Parent Advisory Council call JoAnn Watkins, 749-0840 or Linda Frucci, 749-9038.

Pierson to Person schedule



On Thursday, Sept. 26, Host Wigmore Pierson's guests on Pierson to Person will be Cohasset Community Center President Glenn Pratt and Council on Aging President Gerard Keating and Executive Director Kathy Bryanton discussing their organization's new partnership.

The second segment will focus on Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, who will discuss current political events on Beacon Hill.

The Pierson to Person television show is broadcast live each Thursday, 8 to 9 p.m. from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, and Scituate; on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset.

The public is invited to be part of the studio audience each Thursday evening and those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m.

For further information about upcoming guests and additional show information contact the Pierson Show's Executive Producer, Robert Belliveau at 545-0643.

Gregory Smith, 5, cares about trash on the beach. He and his family were among the several dozen volunteers Saturday working on the beach clean-up.

Some of the bags collected from the small stretch along Sandy Beach. Collection of trash from Rocky Beach was handled by the residents there.

Field hockey team gets first win

By Michael Farley
Special to the Mariner

Patience is a virtue. In sports, so is winning. For the Cohasset field hockey team, they've had a taste of both. After playing the first three games of the schedule to the tune of 0-1-2, they put themselves into the win column last Friday afternoon by shutting out the Vikings, 3-0.

The strategy heading into the game, according to coach Deb Bostwick, was to work the Viking defense side to side in hopes of tiring them out. Katie Ridge opened the scoring as she streaked down the right wing and then found an opening in the right side of the net. The sophomore right wing then assisted on the second score by junior Danielle Shaughnessy. With the score 2-0, Coach Bostwick watched as Brigitte Corkery, who is usually a center halfback, scored from the inner position, assisted by link Kate Murray. The victory was a shining moment for the entire team, specifically for sophomore goalie Becky Golden, a recruit from the soccer team. In four games this year, she has only let up four goals while replacing Mary Hansen, who is out indefinitely with a dislocated shoulder. As Bostwick puts it, "She is really picking up the slack in net for us this year."

Going into the game, the Skippers had found themselves running on a treadmill with plenty of effort and domination without a win to show for it. However, staying motivated doesn't seem to be a concern on this year's team.

"The girls are doing a great job. Against Hanover (a 1-1 tie) we were dominating, smooth, and enthused. In the second half, we were a little too cautious," added Bostwick. "In the opener, I think we had first game jitters. We let up two quick ones in the first 10 minutes." Cohasset would come back to score one of their own before the half which ended in favor of the Clippers, 2-1. The second half was a draw which resulted in the same final score.

September 17 took the Skippers to Scituate where, after dominating 90 percent of the game, according to Bostwick, they could only manage a tie. Again it was Becky Golden who came up big with 3 great saves. The lone goal against Cohasset came only after Becky Golden was on the ground with Scituate players in front of the net jockeying for control. Scituate managed to push it through for the tally.

So, with four games in the books, the Skippers and coach Bostwick continue the march to the top of the league standings. Despite having to wait four games for their first win, the Skippers are very excited about the season. Their biggest fan? Well, the coach, of course.

Bostwick parades the sidelines with words of encouragement to her team.

"I pep them and they pep me. They work hard at practice and I tell them that the goals will come."

Speaking of goals, one of the team's goals is to finish in the top three in the league. Bostwick has a solid reserve of talent to look towards in order to reach that goal.

For leadership, the team has three captains, all seniors and all fullbacks. They are Kathleen Conroy, Laurie Bronstein and Stacey Pierce. Junior Danielle Shaughnessy has a pair of goals this year, while sophomore Katie Ridge has three assists thus far. For stability and dependability, Bostwick needs to look no further than Brigitte Corkery, who plays the whole game. Combined with this mix of experience and durability is a young core of players from the junior varsity last year. Included in this group are Kate Norris and Nicole Heffner. Coach Bostwick will also expect good things from left wing Cilla Goff, who does "so many little things and is a great thinker."

Girls get back to the .500 mark with win against Hanover

Youth reigns supreme in Cohasset this fall if you're a member of the girls' varsity soccer team. Coach Ken Startzel fields a group loaded with underclassmen and finds himself even after four games thus far in 1991.

After giving Carver a lesson in demolition in the season opener, a bit of inexperience may have raised its feathers in the next two games against Abington and East Bridgewater. At Abington, the girls fell 4-2 as the defense could not hold off the Wave. The Vikings of East Bridgewater were also able to exploit the defense of the young Skippers as Cohasset was shutout for the first time this year.

Sensing that a change might spark the club, Coach Startzel shifted Heidi Lincoln into the stopper position from fullback, as well as starting Sara Atherton, a freshman, for her first playing time. The adjustments proved successful as Cohasset slid back onto the winning track with a 2-1 victory at the expense of the Hanover Indians. Contributing on the offensive attack were two-time league all-star Jen Reidy and Kathleen O'Brien. Reidy scored the game winner after O'Brien, who assisted on the second goal, scored Cohasset's first.

Hopefully, the Hanover game will be the turning point on the road to the tournament.

"So far this season, I'm pleased with our performance. We're a young team and the kids have a good attitude," commented Startzel. He went on to add that, "Our goal is to get back to the playoffs and we'll take it one step at a time."

Cohasset will look to its few "older" players to compliment the young regime, namely Jen Reidy and Allison Ludlow. Reidy was the team's leading scorer last year as a junior, while Ludlow returns to full strength for her junior campaign after playing sparingly last year following a knee injury. Allison would like to return to the all-league status she attained as a freshman.

'With the focus on youth, these young guns will have to be shootin' from the hip.

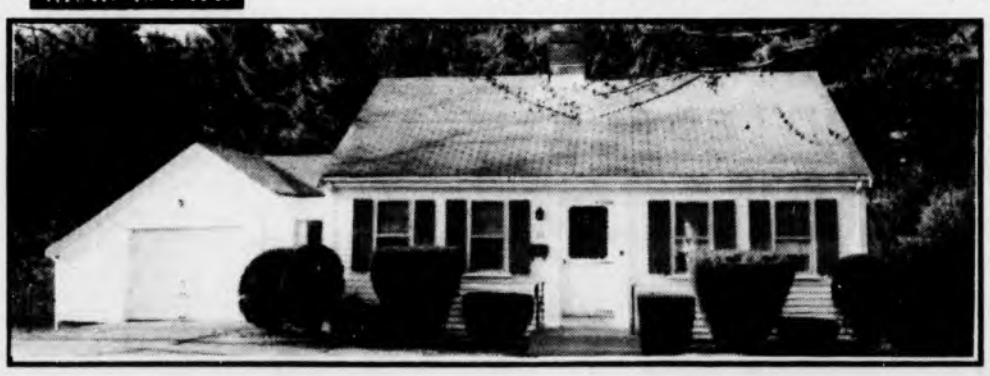
"Why Do We Advertise in the MARINER Newspapers?"

SIFU John C. Loupos, Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy of Cohasset with one of his children's classes.



"Three years ago I decided to experiment with Mariner Inserts as a means of advertising my Wah Lum Kung Fu & Tai Chi Academy. Because of the specialized nature of my business I opted for the inserts due to their larger format, which allowed me to not only advertise but to educate the reading public as regards the uniqueness of the services which I offer. Unquestionably these inserts have been the most cost effective advertising vehicle for me as they have produced a far greater response than other advertising methods. Mary Dennehy, my Mariner Ad Rep, has repeatedly gone that extra mile for me in providing the professional service so necessary in today's business environment."

Football team drops close one

The Skipper football program is beginning to take shape once again as Cohasset, on the road for the second consecutive week, went down to Franklin to play Tri-County in a game which featured three lead changes before Tri-County ended up on top, 22-20. The deciding factors were missed 2-point conversions on two of Cohasset's three touchdowns.

Cohasset jumped out to the first lead in the second quarter when senior right guard Eric Waal threw a key block to free junior Ray Jones for a 38-yard scamper and a 6-0 lead. Cohasset attempted the two-point conversion but was denied. After Tri-County retaliated with a pair of scores to take the lead 16-6, the Skippers came right back and took advantage of a Matt Keefe to Ray Jones hook up for the second week in a row. This

Boys squad kicks in with undefeated start

By Michael Farley
Special to the Mariner

There are few things in the world of sports that can be labeled as sure things. The Bruins will clash with the Canadians in the playoffs. Sure thing. Larry Bird will be inducted into the Hall of Fame. Sure thing. The Cohasset boys' soccer team will make a run at the tournament. Sure thing.

With head coach Richard Chamberlain orchestrating the varsity team for the first year, the Skippers jumped out to a 3-0-1 start during the first week of play. Despite this being his first season at the controls, Coach Chamberlain and Company haven't skipped a beat in their drive for a tournament birth in 1991. The only unsure thing on this team: Who will be doing most of the scoring this year?

In its first four games, Cohasset has seen valuable goal scoring production from eight different players. Such a statistic is a privilege for any coach.

"This year we have no stars, but we're strong all over the field," was how Chamberlain phrased it as he reflected on the team's early season success.

"There is no one player to key on and everyone will have to depend on each other," he further commented.

Too bad if you're a member of the opposing team, which happened to be Carver in the season opener. The Skippers kicked things off on the right foot in their opening day 4-1 victory led by Senior striker Dan DeMichele who scored two goals. Defender Chris Kondrat also chipped in with a goal on a throw in. Chris has scored a total of three goals on throw ins this year.

Against Abington, the Skippers pushed back the Green Wave and delighted the home folks with four goals in the first 25 minutes. In a slight twist, coach Chamberlain kept to his word and let sophomore goalie Chris Goodman (1.00 Goals Against Average) execute two penalty kicks.

"I told him if we were ahead by three goals, I'd let him try it." It appeared as though Goodman wants to seal a long term contract as he took advantage of the deal and put away two kicks for two goals. Senior co-captain Ryan Cibelli, a center midfielder, also tallied a score to help solidify the 5-1 win.

With two victories under their belts, the Skippers kept the ball rolling with another 5-1 trouncing of East Bridgewater. At home for the second consecutive game, Cohasset continued to feed on home cooking as sophomore striker/forward Charlie Endris cashed in with two scores. The Skippers then took their show on the road to Hanover and a pouring rain. Mother nature seemed to slow the boys down a little as the game ended in a 1-1 wash. Confidence still looms.

"We're playing well as a team, and we hope to stay healthy," said Chamberlain.

Making sure not to overlook Hull, the Skippers play at Norwell in what Coach Chamberlain considers a "big game" Thursday, Sept. 26.

Girls soccer action

Cohasset vs. Abington

The Cohasset Girls' Soccer team had a tough game Monday, Sept. 16. They played against Abington, a team favored by many to be the best in the league. Abington struck first, but Cohasset evened the game with a goal by junior co-captain Allison Ludlow. The Skippers were tired because of the heat and it showed, for Abington scored three more goals. The second goal for the Skippers was scored by Katie Carroll. Jen Reidy assisted on this final goal of the game. Heidi Lincoln, a strong defensive player, had her work cut out for her. She had the job of covering, most likely, the best player in the league. Heidi did a great job and should be congratulated. When the game was over Abington came out ahead, but the Skippers never stopped fighting. This was the last fame for Senior Michelle Woodland.

Cohasset v. East Bridgewater

The Lady Skippers fell to a surprisingly strong East Bridgewater team on Wednesday, Sept. 18. The Skippers started out slow and the E.B. Vikings took advantage of this. The Vikings scored two goals in the first half and to the Skippers' surprise they scored two more in the second half.

The Skippers never stopped fighting, but the stronger, more physical Vikings overpowered them. By the end of the game the Skippers had outshot the Vikings, but just couldn't put the ball in the net. Goalkeeper Heather Bass played well, as did Katie Carroll and Steph Eno.

Cohasset vs. Hanover

The Cohasset Girls' Soccer team defeated Hanover 2-1 in an exciting game last Friday. The Skippers really needed this win, especially after losing two in a row. The team really played together and it paid off. Coach Kennan Startzell tried some people in new positions and it seemed to work. Girls such as, Sarah Atherton (who was brought up from J.V.) and Jen Anstead both played new positions and did extremely well. Other girls that shined were, Heidi Lincoln, Jen Reidy, Kathleen O'Brien and Katie Carroll.

The Skippers struck first with a goal by Kathleen O'Brien (Junior), and was assisted by freshman Erin Murphy. In the second half Hanover evened the game and had the Skippers a little nervous. But a goal by Senior co-captain Jen Reidy put the Skippers out ahead for good. Heather Bass had eight saves and was a big factor in this winning effort. The Lady Skippers play for the first time on Homecoming. The game will be on Oct. 12 at 2:30 p.m.

Baseball season comes to an end

WMJX calls itself the Magic Station and they dished up magic aplenty this month when they hosted a picnic for the winners of their WMJX/Kahn's hot dog label contest. The picnic was held on Roberto Clemente Field, just off of Yawkey Way and within sight of Fenway Park. In this land of legends, Cohasset's ten year old Little League Summer Team, the contest winners, met one of baseball's greatest, Carl Yastrzemski, for their own private batting lesson with the master.

Yastrzemski, the first former Little Leaguer elected to Baseball's Hall of Fame and the first player to have a lifetime total of over 3,000 hits and 400 home runs, signed books, balls, gloves, and baseball cards that the players had brought before lining them up for the batting lesson. In his autobiography, Yastrzemski writes that he was not quite ten years old himself when he began to think of hitting like Musial or Williams. Cohasset's own ten year olds were doubtless thinking about hitting like Yastrzemski as he passed on tips for developing the skills of his trade. His enthusiasm and energy became apparent as he picked up a bat and swung easily. His message was simple: relax, know the strike zone, trust your instincts...

After the batting lesson and picnic (with Kahn's hot dogs, of course!), the boys capped off their very special season with a game of softball. Bobby Morgan broke a tie score in the final at bat of the game with an inside the park home run. The entire team will close the season with a trip to Fenway Park for the Red Sox' final regular season game on Oct. 6.

Cohasset Little League gives a special thanks to Cohasset Savings Bank for sponsoring the team, to WMJX, to Kahn's and most especially to Carl Yastrzemski for giving 30 ten year olds a memory for a lifetime.

Cohasset cheerleaders romp the field

The varsity cheerleading squad stood behind the varsity football team 100% on Saturday, Sept. 14. Although the Football team lost, the girls kept their enthusiasm and spirit throughout the entire game: Cohasset Coach Sargent feels that if the football team could learn from their mistakes then they could come back out and beat the next team. "Winning isn't everything!"

The cheerleaders put on a good show for their Cohasset fans. Cheers, chants, crowd involvement, partner stunts, and a new dance to the Ninja Rap were performed on the away field.

The young woman are putting in a lot of practice time this season to prove that Cheerleaders are athletes too.

A new addition to the squad is mascot Laura Kondrat.

See you on the Football Field...

Cohasset Sailing Club honors its own

By JoAnne Chittick
Special to the Mariner

Saturday, Sept. 7, was "Chowder Day" at the Cohasset Yacht Club. Participating in the day's races and awards ceremony were many of the fifty-four sailors from the club's Junior Sailing Program, who enjoyed a summer of learning the skills of seamanship, sportsmanship, self-sufficiency, and safety — as well as a number of outstanding racing successes. With a light wind under sunny skies, Charlie Dean, in his Rookie Hat Trick, sailed to win the Rookie Bell. Sam Goedecke (with crew Eric Hanian) skippered Wind Walker to victory in the Sprite Chowder Day race. Matt Larson and Johanna Horn (with crew Ali Killilea) won the day's Laser and 420 trophies.

Sailors in the junior program this summer were taught by Shannon O'Leary, head instructor, and senior instructors Jen Drohan, Tara Callahan, and John Murphy. Ben Chittick, Tyler Studds, and Mike Welch were junior instructors, and Dave Nothnagle and Rich Knapp assisted the staff as interns. Jon Ostrom instructed the 420 racing team and ran the evening Laser racing series, whose participants included adults and members of Cohasset Sailing Club, as well as sailors from the CYC racing team.

Commodore Robert Jordan awarded the following cups and trophies to junior sailors for their racing achievements during the summer:

Commodore's Cup: Sprite - Sam Goedecke, Rookie - Wiley Wakeman.

Vice Commodore's Cup: Sprite - Ben Manning, Rookie - Neely Wakeman.

Race Committee Cup: Sprite - Ryan Staszko; Rookie - Charlie Dean; 420 - Mike Welch.

Exchange Cup: Rookie - Wiley Wakeman.

Instructor's Cup: Colin Pyfrom.

Special awards also were presented:

Neatest Boat: Sprite - Sam Goedecke; Rookie - Eric Hanian.

Most Races Sailed: Sprite - Ryan Staszko; Rookie - Wiley Wakeman.

Most Sailing Outside of Class: Colin Pyfrom, Sam Goedecke.

Best Crew: Erica Dean, Charlie Dean.

Most Improved Sailors: Chloe Chittick, Abigail Kornet.

Most Enthusiastic Sailors: Matt Verrochi, Carl Dean.

The Moustache Cup, for excellence in seamanship, went to Matt Larson. The Alfred Elliot Memorial Trophy, awarded to a junior sailor for spirit and endeavor, was won by Ben Manning.

Commodore Jordan then awarded trophies for the July and August racing series:

July

Rookies I: 1st - Melissa Pyfrom
2nd - Elliot Noon
Rookies II: 1st - Wiley Wakeman
2nd - Charlie Dean
3rd - Neely Wakeman

Winners of the summer evening Laser races were: 1st - Joe Menis, 2nd - John Murphy, 3rd - Ben Chittick.

mariner sports

Special awards for this group of racers included "Most Enthusiastic" - Johanna Horn, "Most Perseverance" - Ben Chittick, and "Sportsmanship" - Dave Nothnagle.

Each of the young sailors in the program received a flag for accomplishing a particular level of sailing expertise.

White Flag: Tommy Anderson, Billy Good, Lydia Guild, Brian Hurley, Brie McKenney, Carter Noon, Elliot Noon, Melissa Pyfrom, Stefan Vanderweil.

Admiral's Flag: Chloe Chittick, Liz Good, Sam Goedecke, Matt Larson, Ben Manning, Ryan Staszko.

Fran Charles (former Vice President of the Yacht Racing Union of Massachusetts Bay) congratulated particular racers for their participation and outstanding achievements in various Mass. Bay Championship events:

Joe Menis - Jr. Singlehanded: 1st place; Mike Welch, Hillary Chute - Jr. Doublehanded: 2nd place, Tyler Studds, Ben Chittick, Dave Nothnagle - Jr. Triplehanded: 1st place

Faye Menis: Jr. Women's Singlehanded

Mat Larson, Ben Manning - Jr. Symposium: 1st place Sam Goedecke, Chloe Chittick - Midget regatta: 6th place.

Cups of steaming chowder ended the festivities and marked the end of a terrific summer for the Cohasset Yacht Club's junior sailors.

Give me a 'C'!

Cheering for the Skippers are Rebecca Hackenburg, cheerleading co-captain, and Lisa Kondrat, co-captain. The cheerleaders were spectacular as they performed their stunts on the sidelines of the game against East Bridgewater.

Laura Kondrat, the cheerleading mascot, waits to lead a cheer.

Cheerleading Clinic

On Monday, Oct. 21, from 3-5 p.m. the Cohasset Cheerleaders will be conducting a cheering clinic for girls ages 7-13 years old.

The clinic consists of cheers, chants, partner stunts, pyramids, gymnastics, conditioning skills, and dance routines. Cost for the clinic is $10. If interested contact Cheerleading coach Ruthann Sargent at 545-3058 or Rebecca Hackenburg. Each participant will receive a cheering pencil for attending. All proceeds go to the Cheerleaders Fund.

The Clinic will meet at the Cohasset High School.

Cohasset football team drops close one time, after the 40-yard touchdown, Jones capitalized on the conversion for the two points and cut the deficit to 16-14 heading into the intermission.

Cohasset then came out on the attack in the third quarter and regained the lead, 20-16 on a one yard run up the middle from Kevin Mulcahy. The conversion failed and left the Skipper defense with a four point margin to protect in the final quarter. Despite the fine performance all afternoon, they were unable to hold on as Tri-County managed the next score of the game which proved to be the game winner.

With a young, inexperienced team and an 0-2 start, first year coach Ted McDermott is confident and pleased with his team's effort.

"The guys gave a 100 percent all the way and I didn't think for a moment that they were thinking loss," he noted.

In addition to being young, they're also shy on personnel.

"Not only are we inexperienced but we have a lot of underclassmen playing both ways," the coach added.

Despite these apparent weaknesses, coach McDermott has enjoyed the pleasure of watching some of his upperclassmen step forward.

"So far, Ray Jones has been outstanding in the first two games. We've also received great leadership from senior tri-captain Eric Waal(offensive guard/noseguard) who does a great job leading by example. He's been throwing his body on sweeps as the pull guard and he may not be big in size but he plays with a big heart."

Waal is listed at 5'10" and 155lbs.

Cohasset goes up against Old Colony this weekend. If anyone happens to know where Old Colony plays, feel free to enlighten the fans. I don't think you'll be giving away any major U.S military secrets.

Science Center events listed

Enjoy the changing of the seasons with a naturalist from the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell.

NATUREWALK

Join mushroom expert Dr. Clinton MacCoy on Wednesday, Oct. 9, 9:30 a.m. to noon, for a walk on the Science Center's grounds in search of mushrooms. Science Center members/free. Non-members/$5. Find out what's edible and what's not, their special characteristics, where to locate them, and more.

STARGAZING

Spend an autumn evening under the stars with Rolf Egon of the South Shore Astronomical Society, Friday, Oct. 11, 8 - 10 p.m. Science Center members/$5. Non-members/$8. Enjoy a slide presentation and discussion of the star constellations; then go outside to the observatory for viewing. The Andromeda galaxy, double stars, and other constellations should be visible.

MARINE ART PHOTOGRAPHY

Frank Klay of North Marshfield presents photographs of marine art, including New England coastlines, seaport towns, and tall ships. In Vine Hall through Oct. 26.

All programs require prepaid registration. The Center also features a museum store, six nature trails, picnic facilities, and a nature lending library.

Renaissance looks over Depot Court

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

There's a plan afoot to dress up the intersection of Ripley Road and Depot Court without spending large amount of town money.

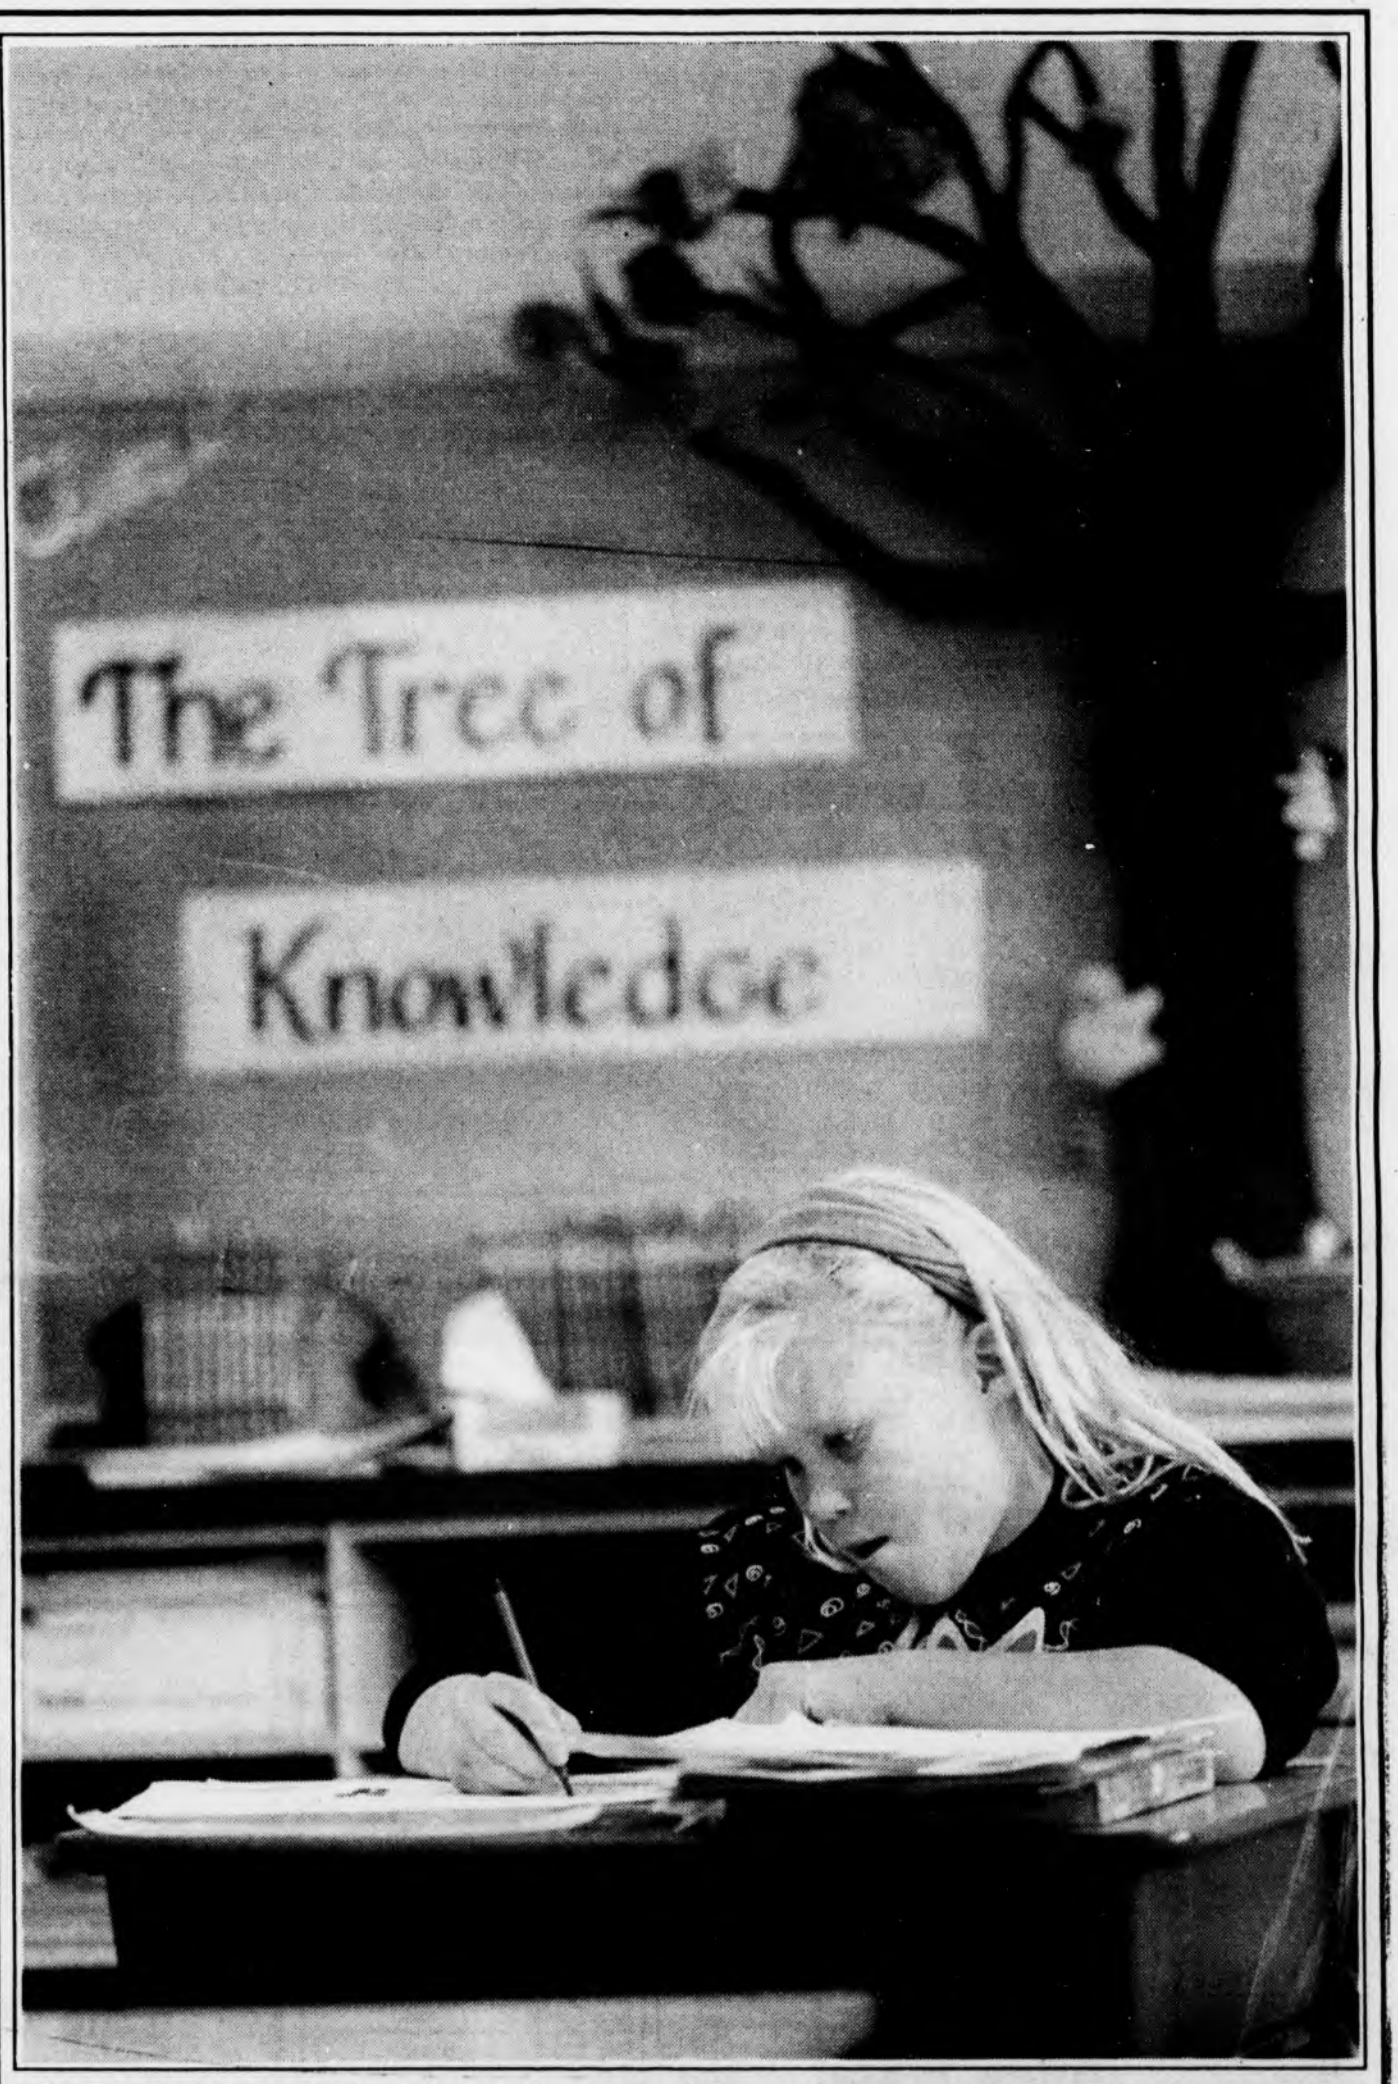
The intersection, near South Shore Art Center, is the next project that has won the attention of the Village Renaissance Group. The group includes Beth Christoffel, Anne Whelan and Jacqueline Dormitzer.

A tentative time line has discussion and planning taking place throughout the winter months. Construction might actually begin in the spring.

This week Christoffel, one of the prime movers in the Town Pump project, wrote a letter to Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts asking help from his board to get the project off the ground.

Selectmen didn't meet this week but are planning to get together at 6 p.m. next Monday, Oct. 7, before the start of the special town meeting.

Christoffel said the new project would involve upgrading the entrance to the town parking lot, beautifying the walkway between Cards and Shards and the Texaco station and creation of a safety island at the intersection.



"The safety aspect of the intersection takes on additional importance as the Community Center expands its class offerings and is now holding a number of them across the street from the center at 9 Depot Court," Christoffel said in her letter.

"Apparently this is not a new concept. In talking to Al Downs of the County of Norfolk Engineering Department, it seems that they undertook to survey this area at the direction of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen in the late 1970s. Then in the 1980s, they provided Cohasset Selectmen with copies of seven different conceptual drawings. After the Town Hall renovations, these drawings could no longer be found in Cohasset. The County Engineers, however, have retained the originals."

She went on to ask selectmen to begin the paper work needed to get copies of the drawings from the county engineers. She offered to pick up the copies when they are ready.

James Sandell, an architect, has already volunteered to help with the project. Sandell was the architect who finished the plans for the Town Pump.

Faulty machine sends dozens to hospitals

By Mike Hardman
Mariner staff

Parents watching the youth hockey game between the South Shore Eagles and the Seahawks first thought their kids were just having an off-day.

However, at 10:30 a.m., Sunday morning, they discovered there was a reason for the poor performances.

Carbon monoxide poisoning from a faulty Zamboni ice machine at the Rockland Rink sent 54 people to the hospital Sunday for treatment. Those taken to the hospital complained of lightheadedness, nausea and dizziness.

The Seahawks are made of up players from Norwell, Scituate, Cohasset, Marshfield and Hull and were playing the Eagles in a 10-11-year-old league game when the leak was discovered.

Two, rink employee Joe Reis and 11-year-old Ryan Walker of Abington were held overnight. Reis was found to be suffering from pneumonia. He had been working in the building since early in the morning.

A year-old baby was also taken from the rink to the hospital and later released. No serious injuries were reported.

Carbon monoxide blocks blood from reaching the body's organs, and it is an odorless, colorless gas.

Social Service League delivers medicine

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Almost 80 years ago, the Social Service League of Cohasset organized to deal with the lack of nursing care in the town.

A district nurse was soon hired and a committee made up of representatives from all the town's churches organized the delivery of services.

The services of the SSL have grown over the years. There is still a public nurse — but her duties and the way she travels has definitely changed over the years. And the services offered by the agency have multiplied.

It was in March12 of1912 when some local women gathered to talk about a possible project. The first women were very interested in providing for the needs of the children of the town. It was thought there might be a need for school lunches.

Two weeks later the group held its first election, bringing out a large group of women from the three churches then in town.

The old records are kept in mint condition by the women who run the Social Service League today. Volunteers are still the backbone.

Mary Hartwell, president of the League, said the old records reveal quite a bit about the history of the town.

Indeed, the simple ledgers kept by the Social Service League reveal that there was quite a bit of need back in 1912 — but then as today, not everyone was happy with the way the needs were filled.

The name of the organization didn't emerge immediately.

A simple black and maroon ledger — which cost 40 cents long ago — contains the scrolled handwriting of the first elected clerk of the group, Mrs. Howard Barton.

Hedlund on Homestead Act

Sen. Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth), is releasing information about a simple way of protecting the equity in primary residence.

Anyone may be able to exempt a portion of their equity, between $100,000 and $400,000, against the future claims of creditors. All anyone needs to do is to file a Declaration of Homestead with their county Register of Deeds.

The Elderly and Disabled Person's Homestead allows you to protect up to $200,000 of value in your home. You may qualify if you are age 62 or older or if you are a homeowner with a qualifying permanent disability. Any other homeowner may qualify for up to $100,000 worth of protection.

Anyone interested in a Declaration of Homestead, should contact Senator Hedlund's office at 722-1646 for further information.

Unlicensed dogs roam

Dog owners who have failed to renew their pets' licenses for 1991 face fines.

The latest list in the selectmen's records shows that as of Sept. 26, the following residents had not renewed: Steven Daly of 322 Jerusalem Road; Frederick Emde of 82 Summer St.; James Gates of 38 Elm Court; Louis Gulizia of 16 Stockbridge St.; Eric Joseph of 6 Stevens Lane; Lisa Anne Laugelle of 71 Doane St.; Christy Mihos of 130 Beach St.; Kevin Neil of 662 Chief Justice Cushing Highway; Donna Nightingale of 16 Stockbridge St.; Penelope Place of 63 Summer St.; Arthur Pompeo of 11 Ripley Road; John Powers of 14 Fairoaks Lane; Paul Rawlins of 21 Elm Court; George Rever of 10 Beach St.; Ross Rosano of 347 North Main St.; George Roukounais of 99 Doane St.; Barron Salvador of 30 Bayberry Lane; Israel Sanchez of 102 Beechwood St.; Edward Shield of 20 Flintlock Ridge Road; Charles Stover of 18 Pleasant St.; Foxhall Sturman of 143 North Main St.; Frederick Thompson of 11 Jerusalem Road; Byron Tosi of 21 Sheldon Road; Clark Young of 24 Short St., and Michael Zappolo of 34 Rocky Lane.

Ed Sorrentino at SSC

The South Shore Conservatory has announced the appointment of Ed Sorrentino to the position of assistant director. Sorrentino has been a member of the Conservatory faculty for 12 years, during that time serving as Director of the Percussion Department, Chairman of the Instrumental and Vocal Department, Chairman of the Theory Department, percussion coach of the Summer Wind Ensemble and assistant director of Musical Theatre Workshop.

Ed Sorrentino

Sorrentino is a graduate of the Berklee College of Music in Boston where he studied with Alan Dawson, Dean Anderson and Gary Chaffee.

He performs throughout the Boston area with jazz hornist Herb Pomeroy and the Mark Kross Trio. He has made three recordings, the most recent "Cacciatore" with the Mark Kross Trio.

Sorrentino has provided studio instruction, ensemble coaching and percussion and band clinics in the high schools at Duxbury, Hingham, Marshfield, Scituate and Dedham.

Born in Cohasset, Sorrentino now lives there with his wife and three children.

The road to Cohasset Heights is controversial. Town meeting will take up zoning questions affecting the private dump and surrounding commercial property when it convenes at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 7, at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School.

purposes was held in the lower town hall on the above date. Miss Alice Arthur was chosen temporary chairman. After a few words explaining the reason for the meeting she called for a nominating committee."

Miss Arthur did not continue to lead the Social Service League. Two weeks later, Mrs. Oliver H. Howe was elected president. Each of the three churches in town was asked to send five persons to form an executive committee. Dues were set at 25 cents for membership.

While the women began to talk about the organization around the question of milk and lunches for school children, the group let that matter slide and began to discuss a district nurse. At the time Hingham and Dedham employed district nurses. Women from those communities were invited to Cohasset to talk about the possibility.

The nurse was to "teach mothers the care of their babies and of milk." She was also charged with organizing neighborhood helpers and teaching preventative medicine.

To hire a nurse, the group solicited contributions from the community. They also held a rummage sale and an evening entertainment. The rummage sale alone netted $170. "The Confederate Spy" brought in $103. The salary of the nurse was to be $75 a month.

June 3 the women of the new League met with Miss Madeline Howson, a graduate of North Adams Hospital and a candidate for the job. Miss Howson was hired and one of the women loaned her a bicycle to make her visits.

The league did agree to pay to hire a horse and carriage "if needed."

The nurse was to charge her patients five cents to 50 cents, depending on circumstances.

Meanwhile the League set up various committees. One group worked to sew layettes which were to be sold at cost to young families. Another group collected medical supplies.

That summer, the group voted to collect and distribute toys.

Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, which at the time had 1,050 policy holders in town, agreed to pay the Social Service League 50 cents each time the nurse saw one of its people.

Within a month of being hired, Miss Howson had completed 80 visits to 16 patients. Of the total 59 were listed as nursing visits in the old records. One of her patients died. Five were declared well. And at the end of the month, eight were still under her care.

Details of some cases of aid were recorded along with the organizational details.

Several families were helped by the organization beyond the simple nursing care.

There was one resident who went to the League for help who seemed dissatified. It seems the resident wanted a place to live in some other resident's home. After some discussion, the ladies of the League suggested the poor house. The idea was rejected by the resident.

In October, Miss Howson left the employ of the Social Service League. There was some debate in the records before she tendered her resignation about the number of calls falling off and about the use of the horse and buggy.

A Mrs. MacRoberts was hired to replace her with new duties added to the nursing visits as the Social Service League undertook to provide a sewing class for girls in Beechwood. The league was also asked to provide a basket class for boys.

Time passed and the League continued to shift and expand its focus. By 1919, the group found time to observe a demonstration of the fireless cooker and the iceless refrigerator which was put on by a demonstrator from Norfolk County.

In 1922, the League organized a concerted drive against tuberculosis.

In 1935, the Thrift Shop opened. Today Andy Merrill runs the Social Service League's Consignment Shop. These days the shop at Cushing Plaza provides the primary source of revenue for the League. The shop is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. with goods accepted for consignment from 10 to 11:30 a.m. on weekdays.

In the 1930s the organization worked to help people find jobs. Eventually the tide turned and the group was able to help prospective employers find workers.

In 1943, the first school lunches were served in Cohasset.

The professional staff of the Social Service League is up to three workers today. The staff includes: Judith Fitzsimmons, RN; Corrine Cahill, RN, BS in public health, and Patricia Carleton, the social worker on staff.

The nursing services today are provided by the League under a contract from the town board of health. The nursing services include: lead screening, blood pressure monitoring, home visits for consultation on diet, medication and other issues, flu immunization clinics, cancer screening clinics and the loan of equipment such as wheelchairs.

Keep Well Clinic are held for the general public three times a month. Services include blood pressure testing, urine tests, weight, blood sugar tests and nutrition services.

Walk-in nursing care is available Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. and 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. at the League office, 16 Highland St. TB testing plus other screening tests are available.

An annual health fair is conducted.

Meals on Wheels is delivered by the League under contract with South Shore Elder Services.

New Friends is an outreach program that matches volunteers with people who may be somewhat isolated.

Counseling and support groups are also offered for a number of concerns.

The motto of the League may be old-fashioned but it certainly isn't out of style.

"The Social Service League of Cohasset, serving Cohasset since 1912/Our volunteer spirit is alive and well."

CCC teaches computers to the very young

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

As everyone knows it's easier on the young to learn about foreign languages and high technology.

But did you ever imagine there would be a class for three-year-olds on the computer?

Cohasset Community Center entered the new wave of technology Sept. 17 when a program called "Futurekids" took off.

Steve Porter of Norwell has been hired by the Community Center to bring high tech to the regular course offerings.

According to the catalog, children at 3 to 5 years are able to take the classes which "include basic reading and math skills, memory enhancement, computer art, computer generated printing, computer assisted writing, logical thinking skills and computer generated animation.

Adult health and fitness courses

The Cohasset Community Center offers many Adult Health and Fitness Courses this fall. Our aerobics course is held on Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 7 to 8 p.m. at a cost of $32 monthly. Saturday courses are held from 8:45 to 10 a.m. and are $20 monthly. Both the evening sessions and Saturday A.M. session invite drop-ins. Low Impact Aerobics is held on Monday, Wednesday, Friday, 9 to 10 a.m. at a cost of $48 monthly. Drop-ins are $5.

Babysitting is available at $2 an hour. Classes run continuously throughout the year.

CPR COURSE

CPR with Dr. Michael Equi and Linda Farrag, R.N. is being held on Thursday, Nov. 7, from 7 to 11 p.m. and Thursday, Jan. 30, from 7 to 11 p.m. The course cost is $20. Additional courses will be given in the spring. This course covers emergency resuscitative techniques for cardiac and/or respiratory arrest and procedures for alleviating airway obstructions. An American Heart Association Certificate is awarded upon completion.

Pediatric CPR also with Dr. Equi and Linda Farrag, R.N. is being held on Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 3 and 9, from 7 to 11 p.m. at a cost of $35. Additional courses will be held in February and April. This course covers the hazzards to which children may be exposed, how to make the environment safe, and basic rescue techniques such as CPR and alleviating airway obstructions for infants and children. This course teaches procedures for both infants and children.

SELF-DEFENSE, COMPUTERS, DIVORCE, ETC.

A course in Self-Defense Through Karate with David McGlynn is being held on Saturdays from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. for 10 weeks at a cost of $40. With daily reports of violence against women occurring in once secure neighborhoods and the increase of date rape, self defense training for women becomes important. This course will stress the development of simple but effective methods of countering a physical attack. Special emphasis will be placed on helping women overcome cultural conditioning which subconsciously causes them to behave in a submissive, "ladylike" manner.

Computer Course for the Novice is held on Thursdays from 7 to 9 p.m. for 10 weeks at a cost of $125. The course starts on Oct. 3.

Divorce, Money and You with Dr. Michael McNamara and Neal Brown is a seminar for those who are recently divorced, currently going through a divorce or who are completing a divorce.

Starting another life is a real problem to be faced. For women, living on one income may be difficult. For men, meeting new financial responsibilities is a serious consideration. This course is being held on Monday, Oct. 21 from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at a cost of $15.

Dr. McNamara will also lead a seminar in Planning for College Education and Retirement on Monday, Oct. 7, from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at a cost of $15. If you are like most people, you are spending everything that you earn, and you can only wonder how to begin saving for college educations and retirement. This seminar covers projecting college expenses, starting a college investment program, appropriate investments for college costs, projecting retirement income, projecting retirement expenses, beginning a retirement investment program, appropriate retirement investments, dealing with the effects of inflation and lowering your tax bill.

For Women Only: Taking Financial Control is a four-week course starting Oct. 3, from 7 to 8:30 pm. at a cost of $30. This course offers women a thorough overview of money management and financial planning. Topics include professional portfolio management, investment philosophies, tax strategies and estate planning principles.

Contact Bridge with David Leopold has a Beginner class on Mondays, from 8 to 10 p.m., 8 weeks at a cost of $90. The Intermediate course is held on Wednesdays, from 8 to 10 p.m.

Gina's Gourmet Cooking, a new course held on Thursdays, from 7 to 9 p.m. for ten weeks at $100 is already underway.

For registration or information on these courses, please call the Center at 383-0088.

Instructor David McGlynn shows a few self-defense moves. He is teaching at the Cohasset Community Center.

Hingham author at Buttonwood Books

Hingham author and illustrator, Marc Brown, who has delighted children of all ages with Arthur, a wonderful character, will be signing his latest book at Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset on Saturday, Oct. 5, from 3 to 5 p.m.

Brown's newest book, The Family Read-Aloud Holiday Treasury, collection by Alice Low, covers all the holidays of the year including Halloween and Thanksgiving. This is a book that all family members will enjoy for years. Brown's many other books include, Arthur Meets the President, Arthur's Baby, Toddler Time, and Finger Rhymes. All of these will be available along with a host of other favorites by Marc Brown. For those unable to attend, signed books may be ordered ahead of time by calling Buttonwood Books and Toys at 383-2665.

As a child Brown grew up listening to his grandmother Thora's stories. As an adult he began to tell his own children stories, which led to an aardvark who hated his nose. The aardvark was named Arthur and that story became Arthur's Nose, the first book in the Arthur Adventure Series. Most characters in Brown's books are modeled after people in his own life.

Brown lives in Hingham with his wife, Lauren Krasny Brown, who has frequently collaborated with him as author.

For further information please call Buttonwood Books and Toys at 383-2665.

Drama Club recruits

The Cohasset Drama Club is gearing itself up for another exciting year of dramatic presentations and invites residents to become either a patron or active member. Patrons will be listed in this season's program book and receive two tickets to each major performance. Active members, not only will receive tickets, but become voting members of the club, helping to guide its growth, with the opportunity to participate. A monthly newsletter will also be sent to members, plus invitations to events and parties, such as our play-going party in October to see the musical "Pal Joey" and another off-Broadway production in April.

Productions by the C.D.C set for this season are "The Homecoming" by Earl Hamner Jr. showing in December with auditions set for early October, and "The Women" by Clare Booth Luce — auditions in January for productions in March.

To join, phone 383-2366 or 383-6583.

Betty Jane Andrus creates more than relaxation

By Lisa B. Eigner
Mariner staff

The ability to create is a asset. The ability to create well is a distinct commodity. Cohasset sculptor Betty Jane Andrus is endowed with both.

A sculptor for nearly 10 years, Andrus got her start merely as a relaxation technique.

"Sculpting was a release for me," said Andrus, "I got a charge out of it."

Now, however, she has broadened her avocation to include exhibiting her work.

Andrus' sculptures are currently on display in a unique exhibit featuring greater Boston women sculptures.

The Landau Gallery in the E. Paul Robsham Jr. Memorial Center for the Arts on the Belmont Hill School campus, is housing the exhibit from Tuesday, Oct. 1 to Tuesday, Oct. 29.

Andrus' contributions to the exhibition cover a wide spectrum, from streamlined formalism to conceptual work, according to noted Boston sculptor, Joseph Wheelwright.

In conjunction with Andrus' work, the show features sculptures by Marguerite Harding of Brookline and Faith White of Chestnut Hill.

Andrus' work reflects an eclectic background in the arts that she received from Rockford College in Illinois and Johns Hopkins School of Art, as applied to medicine.

Her artistic talent, specifically drawing, was originally put to use while working as a medical artist at Johns Hopkins.

"I worked in that capacity for three years while I was a student," recalled Andrus, "then professionally for an additional year."

In 1982, however, her artistic talent was redirected to incorporate wood as a medium: wood that she often varnishes in unique colors as an additional means of expression.

"Betty Jane is a daring colorist, not hesitating to emblazon a carving of a goat's head in layered purple glazes," said Wheelwright.

"If anyone has acted as an influential factor on my sculpting it's been Joe Wheelwright," Andrus confessed.

Having studied under Wheelwright's wing for several years, Andrus considers his influence and instruction invaluable.

With 10 years already to her credit, Andrus' passion for sculpting has continued to gain momentum, and her work continues to receive acclaim.

The Landau Gallery, located at 350 Prospect St. in Belmont, is open Monday through Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Private visits may be arranged.

To attract Voke students

Easton: bold steps are needed

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Vo-Tech Supt. Dr. Clifford Easton warned that the high school must attract more students to remain viable.

"We have to take bold steps, folks," he said. "We need to reach out into the community not just for adults but for young people as well.

"(Please consider) what we're here for; who do we serve; and how best do we serve them? Frankly, if we don't populate this school, we won't be here very long."

Easton presented the regional school committee with a draft of a plan that would make the school a "service center" to its member communities by seeking a wider range of students.

'OPEN THE DOOR'

"Let's at least open the door to consider it, let's look at our priorities," Easton asked.

Under the plan, Vo-Tech would:

• In addition to admitting full-time ninth graders, the school would also admit upper-grade students and adults on a full-time basis.

"Our district has a large population of taxpaying residents who were never given a fair opportunity to gain the advantages of high school level vocational-technical learning," Easton said. "Service to these residents and to any adult needing career training assistance (such as a housewife who needs to return to paid employment after death of a spouse) is a second mission of the school."

• Offering part-time service to residents of all ages by including part-time service or exchange with nearby districts.

"While part-time programs cannot integrate academic and technical learning as effectively as full-time programs, they can offer enrichment benefits to some students and economic benefits to adjacent districts or communities," Easton said.

Examples would be: a Hanover High School student

Faulty ice machine sends dozens to hospitals

Levels of 20 to 30 percent greater can cause loss of consciousness or death.

"We were saying we hadn't seen the kids play this badly," said Joe Bouldry of the South Shore Eagles, which is made up of players from Abington and Rockland. "They were lightheaded and they weren't feeling well."

The Rockland Rink was re-opened Monday after the Zamboni was repaired.

Only quick action by rink personnel to evacuate the rink prevented what could have been a serious problem. While they weren't sure what was happening, they were able to get the people outside the rink with in moments of the players starting to collapse.

"All the kids started dropping like flies," said Edward Rose, a Rockland resident, who was inside the building. "Right away, we cleared the building and we were just waiting for the fire department to come."

The fumes spread to the locker room where Hingham was preparing to play Weymouth in a Bantam game.

"The little kids were just standing around and they started to get sick," said Bill Anastos, a Quincy resident, who coaches the Hingham team. "We were in the locker room and I started to feel it a little bit.

"It happened to me when I was about 13 or 14 at the Randolph Rink."

The level of exposure to the carbon monoxide was kept down by the early evacuation.

Brockton Hospital's Dr. Leonard Spector said the quick actions prevented a serious situation from occurring.

With the assistance of six towns, the Rockland Fire Department transferred 22 people to the hospitals. The others went to the hospital on their own for treatment.

At first, Rockland Fire officials thought there was an ammonia or freon leak inside the rink, but later tests at the hospitals showed the carbon monoxide poisoning which was linked to the Zamboni.

"They took blood samples at the hospital and it was revealed it was carbon monoxide poisoning," said Rockland Fire Chief Ralph Tanzi. "The Zamboni machine has a defect. We wanted people to get checked out of who had been there. Nothing else could have produced the carbon monoxide."

In June of 1988, a propane gas explosion blew a hole in the side of the rink. Rink manager Rob McBride was seriously injured, and fire officials said the explosion was caused when someone broke the padlock on the liquid propane tank and twisted the valve before the explosion.

Easton: bold steps are needed

enrolled in a graphic arts program in South Shore on a half-day basis or a Scituate teacher coming to South Shore to teach one or two periods of French, he said.

• Flex program for high school dropouts.

"This flexible-time program allows persons who did not earn a high school diploma to do so through later afternoon and evening classes," Easton said,

• Middle school career guidance and technical literacy programs.

TECH DAY

"These are critical part-time programs that (1) help middle school students begin developing awareness of career options through an afternoon exploration program and tours; (2) promote technical literacy and interest in science through an on-site Tech Day program that gives middle school students unique experiences with computers, robots, lasers, and scientific evaluation. Area industries are very interested in and supportive of the latter program as they attempt to interest youngsters in the fastest growing part of the job market-careers for skilled technicians in many fields from biotechnology to electro-mechanics," Easton said.

Regional school committee member, Lloyd Patriquin of Whitman, called the plan "a step in the right direction."

Val Baker, representing Scituate, said Scituate selectmen might be supportive. They have been "most enthusiastic" about the new Procter & Gamble program at the school because "it went beyond the traditional climate of a vocational school," she said.(VoTech currently provides training for Procter & Gamble employees in exchange for equipment and curriculum materials and teachers' salaries).

The regional school committee decided to take the plan under advisement and plan to discuss it at their Oct. 16 meeting.

• Kathy Stanford Sullivan and her husband Frank are happy to announce the birth of their first child, Ivlegan Alise, born on Sept. 21 at the South Shore Hospital. Grandparents are Joe and Florence Stanford of Jerusalem Road and Dan and Ivlary Sullivan of Braintree. Our heartfelt congratulations go out to all of you, love that baby to bits.

• Had the nicest note from Rachelle Chiasson McIntyre last week. Rachelle (Class of CHS, 1962) is living in Springfield, Georgia, and recently celebrated her 26th wedding anniversary. They have four children and one grandson, and her husband, Rod, has retired from the Coast Guard after 31 years of service. Rachelle says that she is a "retired homemaker who is enjoying the peace and quiet," and that they will be permanent residents of Georgia now. Sounds like a wonderful life, which we may hear more about if the class of 1962 has a reunion.

• Happy belated birthday greetings go to Karen Pompeo this week. We hope that one of the finest young ladies in Cohasset has her every dream come true this year.

• Judging by the crowd at the Cohasset Common last Saturday, the Flea Market given by the Cohasset Community Center was a success indeed. Once again Glenn Pratt gets a round of applause for all of his hard work. He even went so far as to deliver heavy and bulky articles that were sold. Glenn is really a hard-working, nice man; one man that everyone wants on their team.

• A funny note in regards to the Flea Market, hope you saw it. Sarah Abbruzze Murphy's black lab, Duke, has been in seventh heaven since the event. Sarah bought him a nice big old over-stuffed chair for his very own. The dog was seated in the chair watching all of the action, as happy as could be. Duke will never forget the Cohasset Community Center.

• Received a note from Joni Meade last week, concerning the surplus material in the Deer Hill School cellar. Several items currently stored in the cellar have been declared surplus by the school committee and selectmen. Consequently, they will offer these items for sale to any interested parties during the week of Oct. 7 to 11, from 9 a.m. to noon. Interested parties should report to the Deer Hill School office for inspection or purchase.

• Happy birthday greetings go to Sue Fone this week. Her birthday is Oct. 8. Sue does everything for everyone; here's hoping this year everyone goes out of their way to do nice things for her. Have a wonderful day, a great year, and everything you dream for, we love you.

• There's a brand new baby carriage on Surrey Drive now, thanks to Tricia and Peter Harwood. They became the happy parents of a boy, born Sept. 1 at South Shore Hospital.

• Joining the same kindergarten class will be Lisa and Kevin Dillon's baby girl, who was also born at South Shore Hospital Sept. 17. Best of luck to all of you.

Keep a safe medicine cabinet

By Kathy Bryanton
Director

Whether for a headache or a heart condition, Americans have come to rely increasingly on drugs that help us feel better. This is especially true of older persons. Indeed, 40 percent of all prescription drugs are used by people over the age of 60. It's important to take both your prescription drugs and your over-the-counter medications safely. Vitamins, laxatives, cold remedies and antacids can all be dangerous if used too often or in combination with certain other drugs.

Conduct a drug survey at home — clean out your medicine cabinet. Throw away anything past its expiration date or that you no longer take. Gather all the medications you currently use — including non-prescription items such as cough syrup, aspirin, antacids and laxatives — and read the labels carefully. Make a list of all medications you take, including each drug's name, strength and direction for use, and keep the list up-to-date. Carry it with you as a reference. Talk with your doctor. For each prescription drug, ask: what does it do? What side effects can you expect and how should you handle them? Are there alternatives to this drug that have fewer side effects? Make sure each doctor you see is aware of all your medications to avoid duplication or dangerous combinations. Talk with your pharmacist. Whenever you buy over-the-counter drugs, ask the pharmacist how the new drug might interact with your medicines. Make sure you read and understand directions printed on the drug container and that the name of the medication is printed clearly.

"Discovery Day" — Tuesday, Oct. 8 will be a "Discovery Day", a year ahead of Christopher Columbus discovery of America (1492-1992). come and join the fun, meet the COA board members, class instructors, try your hand at a new program, join the Friends of the COA — it's our fund raising group. Then plan on having lunch at 23 No. Main Street where the Gourmet Club will be serving Italian Festa. Menu includes: antipasto, lasagna, fresh Italian bread and spumoni. Make your reservations early at 383-9112. Donation: $2.50. Before the lunch at 10 a.m. you can enjoy our mini fair, eye screening, blood pressure and cholesterol testing. There will be a small fee for the cholesterol testing. Call 383-9112 for appointments. We look forward to seeing you on "Discovery Day."

Walkers and sponsors needed — Five mile walk around the plaza, walk-a-thon on Monday, Nov. 11, Braintree Plaza, South Shore Elder Services wants to remind you that not everyone has plans for the holidays. Hundreds of older persons are alone, without a meal for the holidays. They need your help in raising funds to provide meals to those who are alone on the holidays. Every $3.50 you raise will buy a meal. 100 percent goes to meals. Call 848-3910 ext. 319.

Exercise is crucial. — "All parts of the body which have a function, is used in moderation and exercised in labors in which each is accustomed, become thereby healthy, well-developed and age more slowly; but if unused and left idle they become liable to disease, defective in growth and age quickly." Hippocrates, Greek Physician, 5th Century B.C. These words are still true today. All of us need to exercise and have a routine that we follow on a regular basis. Whether it be swimming, walking, dancing, or aerobically form of exercise is better than a sedentary life-style. Research shows regular exercise at all ages improves muscle strength, cardiovascular fitness, physical endurance and flexibility. Thus, we here at the COA invite you to participate in our exercise program, walking club, swim program, line dancing, bowling, Tai-Chi, or feel free to suggest other activities that you might be interested in and would like to see offered by the COA.

While the group hopes to win the cooperation of town officials, they expect the real money for the project will come from the community.

Granite curbing will be one of the components of the project. But most of the other details are still up in the air.

"Maybe someone has a horse trough in their backyard that they want to donate as a centerpiece for the intersection," Christoffel said. "There might be something we could use out there."

She pointed out that a bench will soon be set in position at the "pocket park" next to Tedeschi's on the lot owned by Cohasset Savings Bank.

She said a recent meeting of the Cohasset Chamber helped serve as an impetus to get the new project rolling.

"The town was very cooperative when we did the Pump project," Christoffel said. "We hope that cooperation continues."

Time to SHARE

The SHARE program (Self Help And Resource Exchange) distributed its food Saturday, Sept. 28, at town hall with the encouragement and support of the Council on Aging and Social Service League of Cohasset.

These two agencies have been working hard over the past few months to begin the food distribution program.

The beginning of the program was auspicious.

There were 112 food packages distributed Saturday.

Judy Dwyer of the Social Service League said she expects the next distribution to grow.

The deal was simple. In exchange for $13 in cash or food stamps and two hours of community service, people were able to obtain a food package with about $35 in fruits, vegetables, meats and staples. (Checks are not accepted.)

The package this month included: five pounds chicken drumsticks; one pound pork sausage; one pound turkey pan roast; one pound chicken patties; one pound chicken franks; one cabbage; one pound carrots; one pound collard greens; two cucumbers; one lettuce; four pounds potatoes; two pounds onions; three pounds apples; three grapefruit; six nectarines; one pound Great Northern beans; a package pizza and a SHARE newspaper.

The next signup will be Wednesday, Oct. 9, from 10 a.m. to noon and Thursday, Oct. 10, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the senior center, 3 North Main Street.

The food will be distributed Saturday, Oct. 26, at town hall. Call Judy Dwyer at 383-1654 or Kathy Bryanton at 383-9112 for more information.

We want to acknowledge the town's two most active service agencies for having the foresight to get involved in running a town-wide distribution. In many other communities, the distribution is handled by local churches.

Clearly this program is meant to help families and individuals who may have trouble paying their food bills. But the prorgam isn't government funded or paid for through charity. The economy comes from cutting out the middleman, reducing transportation costs and buying in bulk.

The program is meant to nourish a sense of community. The service aspect is one of the key factors for SHARE.

The program is relatively new to this state. The first distribution happened in April. But the program itself began eight years ago in SanDiego. The impetus for the project came from some advice of India's Mother Theresa.

The idea behind the program is that it is important to build a sense of a caring community — that's why the two hour work requirement is part of the program. But participants are encouraged to be creative in filling that requirement. Time spent as a scout leader counts. Time teaching religious education counts. Time raking leaves for an elderly neighbor is fine.

Most people who get involved already do their share for the community. This project brings volunteering into the limelight.

All the SHARE workers and participants deserve some acknowledgement. We only wish there were space to list them all.

Flying Scott Auxiliary President Sue Jackson asks auxiliary members to contact her regarding social plans for 1991-1992 and the auxiliary's annual float (huh?) in the Memorial Day Parade. She needs suggestions and ideas. An official auxiliary meeting has been scheduled at Sue's house Oct. 10 .

In an unrelated matter, Sue reports that Jane Bishop, wearing an old Esther Williams swim suit with a metal zipper in the back, won the Sandy Beach Swimsuit contest Sept. 1. There were two contestants. Sue lost.

Four friends (whose names can't ever be mentioned) went to New Hampshire together. One of my friends had an accident and was rushed to the local hospital. His wife grabbed the handles of the hospital-supplied wheelchair and ran him smack into the closed glass doors, catapulting him onto the pavement. I can't say who these particular friends are, but if I were their doctor I'd put them in cages.

In Pennsylvania, they say "Answer me this, out in the light, throw the cow over the fence some hay, and there goes a plane up." So, my sister called...this is the sister who if you are visiting her in the summer may schedule a "Penn's Creek booze cruise" from Kratzerville to Selinsgrove. A bunch of you, similarly attired, start floating. Some floaters tie their inner tubes together so no one slips away. Once, my cousin Penny invited her boss and his wife for brunch, after which they all floated down the Susquehanna River. Everyone had a wonderful time.

But that is not the story. The story is about my sister and a man she is dating (the man who cracked up her new sports car last week), and then left a message on her tape, cancelling their date because of his "diarrhea."

In Pennsylvania people are very specific about their problems. They don't politely say, with potatoes in their mouths: "Dah-ling, I'm terribly ill and cahn't make our date." They're specific. "There's pus running out of my ear; I tore my finger off at work, it's dangling from my hand with one vein; I was awake through the entire operation, I saw them sawing off my leg." Pennsylvanians are graphic.

So. My sister, who is a nurse, called this man back, got his tape recording and hung up, angry as all get out. She thought about him, and his diarrhea, called his machine back again, and said:

"So Howard, just where are you having your diarrhea?"

The next evening, she returned home and found Howard waiting on her steps.

"Did you get my message?" she asked.

Howard said "I'm here, aren't I?"

Just in case you need to call the Governor's office, which I do often - the number is: 727-3600. His aides on that end are wonderful, and you can tell them anything. What I told them on Sept. 17 is as follows: a Senior Ethics Investigator from the State Ethics Commission, told me on Sept. 13 that no one at the Ethics commission ever investigates any citizens' complaints. "A fellow selectman and/or board member has to complain," he said.

So, I seize: "Complaining to you guys about my favorite people is like "P _ _ _ _ _ in the ocean, right?" He laughed.

Do we wish the Ethics Commission to come to Tinytown to deliver a litany of advice on fairness? One would think not. One would think they would get their own house in order. But, should any of you wish a formal seminar to be accomplished, call Katherine Bromberg at the Unethical Commission: 727-0060.

Tuesday, Sept. 17, Bromberg of the Unethical Commission cautioned me I had better "Watch what you say!" when I told her about a very informative conversation with one of her Senior Unethical Commission Inspectors. On the contrary, I told her, I was delighted to have learned that the Unethical Commission isn't doing its job (something I have suspected for some time, now) and that I planned to broadcast that fact to every important person I know.

I would imagine the new inspector general could easily investigate the Unethical Commission's refusal to act on citizen complaints.

Investigators in the field tell me someone is storing bait in the refrigerator in the workmen's shed at Woodside cemetery.

A group of Tinytownies are threatening to put an article on the annual town meeting warrant which would make Tinytown counsel elected. One of them said: "If he's going to make all the decisions, he might as well report to us!" They're presently debating whether an elected town counsel should be required to have a law degree. The feeling is if judges don't need law degrees, they don't feel Tinytown counsel should have to have one. "Besides," a Tinytownie said, "that would allow more people to run."

While it may sound incredible, I know someone who had her warts "scared away."

Last summer, my son Peter got rid of several of his warts by breaking open a capsule of cod liver oil on his warts, and bandaging everything up tightly.

It's well-known that warts don't like soap. One person's warts all fell off, mysteriously, when he got a dishwashing job.

But, Whitney Cook has the most interesting wart story of all. When she was 4 years old (she is now eleven) she had a serious (head to toe) case of warts. Her mother took her to doctors everywhere, but no one could find a way to get rid of them.

And then, one doctor she saw said he was going to schedule serious laser treatment, which would burn the warts away...slay them, finish them off for good, delete them for all eternity!

Surgery was scheduled for two weeks later, and then something funny started to happen. The warts started to leave. Every day there seemed to be fewer and fewer warts, Whitney's mother said.

By the time the day of the surgery arrived, there were no warts left on which to operate.

When Whitney's warts heard what laser treatment would do to them and how awful it would be to die that way, they decided to make tracks.

It's true. You can ask Whitney herself.

Water supply's safety is the bottom line

letters

To the Editor:

Although I share your feelings of impatience with regard to the Cohasset Heights Landfill, I think you have misdirected it at the State Department of Environmental Protection. The flare system which you highlighted is only one of many serious issues, including visual impact, odor control, impact on wetlands, traffic, and aesthetic impact, which need to be addressed in considering CHL's permit for expansion. Although she has not yet returned your call, Susan Tierney, the Secretary of DEP did respond to this and many other concerns she had about CHL's application. In her April 4 letter to CHL, she quite clearly said that the application did not provide sufficient information, and outlined what further information was required. DEP, and the rest of us, are now waiting for CHL to provide that information.

Bureaucracy aside, however, the bottom-line question here is what level of risk are we willing to take with our drinking water? For me, the answer is NONE. I don't believe there is an acceptable level of risk when we're talking about our only source of public drinking water. After all, what are the alternatives if it becomes contaminated? Drink bottled water? Hook up with the MWRA? Let's be serious! There is no reasonable alternative, and therefore, there is no acceptable level of risk.

Accusing those who are opposed to the expansion of the landfill of being NIMBY's is a red herring. I wouldn't find it acceptable to be threatening someone else's water supply, either. And although I sympathize with the plight of small businessmen, I think that a community's right to protect their water supply outweighs any individual's right to do business.

Finally, the argument that this is a societal problem and that we all have to do our part is also misleading. The Commonwealth's Master Plan, "Toward a System of Integrated Solid Waste Management," published in June, 1990, states unequivocally, "The Department does not foresee the need for new landfill capacity for the direct disposal of unprocessed solid waste." Instead, DEP has established a hierarchy for solid waste management of: reduce the amount produced, recycle and compost as much as possible, combust what cannot be recycled, and last, landfill only those wastes that cannot be recycled, composted or burned.

It's time for the owners of CHL to stop claiming they are the objects of a personal attack, to stop threatening the town with lawsuits, and to stop accusing people of being NIMBY's. It's time to accept that this is an inappropriate site for a landfill and that the people of Cohasset have a right to protect their drinking water.

Sincerely,
Deborah G.Eaton
Norfolk Road

Landfill operation attacked by S.A.F.E.

To the Editor:

On June 26 the citizens of Cohasset voted decisively to defeat a plan to bring sewage sludge from Boston Harbor into a landfill in our town.

Now we are confronted with a proposal to expand Cohasset Heights Landfill by more than doubling its size, increasing its capacity from 300 tons per day of construction and demolition debris to 500 tons per day of garbage and other solid waste, and adding a materials recycling facility to handle 300 tons per day of glass, metal, and other recyclables. The latter would be sorted in a building located close to Route 3A and then reloaded onto trucks to be taken to recycling centers. Moreover, the CHL proposal includes a plan for accepting 100 tons per day of solid waste to be processed, i.e., concrete and asphalt to be pounded into small pellets for use in various types of construction. The total would be 900 tons per day of diverse types of waste to be brought into our town.

There must be limits to what any single owner can do with his property when his plans impair the quality of life for an entire community. The people of Cohasset should decide whether they want an enormous landfill accepting garbage from other communities, a noisy materials recycling facility, and an even noisier and dirtier concrete and asphalt reduction plant at the main entrance to our town. We must decide whether we wish to risk a further threat to our water supply, continued offensive odors from a larger landfill, ongoing damage to our wetlands, and the noise and confusion of the recycling and processing plants.

We cannot trust that a remote state agency will prevent these disasters from happening to us. We must protect ourselves in our cherished form of pure democracy — the local Town Meeting. We can prevent the expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill by supporting Articles 17, 18, and 19 on Monday, October 7, at the Special Town Meeting. We urge an affirmative vote on these articles.

Creative accounting? Or just another sting?

Visitors to New York City are often warned about the street hustlers. In particular, 3-Card Monte dealers should be shunned. This is a simple little game in which the sucker tries to find the red queen among two black queens...somehow she never turns up.

Governor William Weld must have taken a crash course on Broadway and 42nd Street. His Teachers' Summer Pay Deferral Plan has all the earmarks of a short-con, grifter's rip-off.

The original concept as submitted and approved by those "stingsters," also known as state legislators, was a rolling debt that would enable the towns to use one-twelfth of the teachers' salary budget for other town needs.

As proposed, the rollover would be perpetual. The day of reckoning would be postponed. Free money? No tax increase? After some debate at meetings around the state, most towns went for it like ants on a jelly bean mound.

Now comes the state declaring that the day of reckoning is not in the misty loomings of a far off horizon. In fact the money must be repaid as of 1993.

This action certainly makes the deferral less attractive. It means only a year's grace before the hard decisions must be faced...raise taxes or cut services.

Thankfully, this Massachusetts version of 3- Card Monte has been busted up before truly staggering debts were incurred, and the habit of cheating today to pay tomorrow became an addiction.

Legerdemain is for the circus or maybe the streets of Manhattan. It does not belong in the State House nor in town meetings.

It seems that those who were hesitant about this pie-in-the-sky plan were right. The logic of the plan was impaired from the start. It was based on the clear evolutionary fallacy that the future would be better than the past.

There is enough blame to go around at all levels. But blame is hardly the solution to a serious problem, in fact it most often gets in the way of problem solving. The state and the towns are facing real deficits, real answers with real money are needed not the illusions of creative accounting.

As the consumer agencies repeatedly warn us—if it seems too good to be true, it probably is.

Let's cut this out and send it to our Governor, our legislators and selectmen.

The worst fools are the ones who fool themselves.

— Richard Small

SAFE continues to attack CHL

SAFE recently reminded Cohasset residents that the decision on whether the Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) will expand is all up to them.

"It's our choice," said Alix White, SAFE President. "At the Oct. 7 Special Town Meeting, each of us can make a choice that will help determine the future of Cohasset."

SAFE is presenting, at Town Meeting, a resolution opposing the 27.5 acre expansion of CHL, and three zoning articles (Articles 17, 18 and 19) which would either limit or stop the expansion.

"Passage of the Resolution will send a clear, strong message to state and local officials that Cohasset does not want a landfill expansion," said James Kinch, a SAFE member who will present the resolution. "A landfill is nothing but a liability – a liability which the town should not accept."

Article 17 would make a "landfill" be defined as a "structure," and thereby impose a 45-foot height restriction on the expansion.

"This height restriction is needed to prevent an unsightly mountain of trash from despoiling Cohasset forever," said SAFE member Kevin O'Donnell. "CHL is presently planning to build a 210-foot high landfill that will be visible from Route 3A."

Article 18 would rezone the Light Industry zone that Area V would be in to Highway Business, thus preventing the expansion.

"This rezoning is the most effective way the townspeople have to prevent the Area V expansion," said John McNabb, Jr., SAFE Vice-President. "We have a choice between rezoning this area and thus preventing the expansion, or allowing the expansion and forever damaging the economic value of this area to the town."

Article 19, which may be offered as an alternative to Article 18, would rezone only a 400-foot strip of the Light Industry zone to Highway Business.

The Special Town Meeting will be held Monday, Oct. 7 at 7:30 p.m. at the Cohasset High School. A quorum of 100 is required.

Also, SAFE recently criticized Cohasset Heights Landfill for letting a truck hauling contaminated leachate out of the landfill to spill the leachate onto the roads in Cohasset and Hull.

"Around 2 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 26," said McNabb, "Sam Hassan observed a leachate truck from CHL driving near West Corner."

"Sam saw that the spigot on the back of the truck was open, and was dumping large quantities of leachate onto the road as it was driving through Cohasset and into Hull," said McNabb.

"He reported it to the MDC and Hull police, who eventually pulled the truck over and made the driver turn off the spigot. However," said McNabb, "the truck had poured the leachate onto a mile or more of our roads."

"This leachate posed a potential threat to public health," said Alix White, SAFE president. "The residents of Cohasset and Hull need better assurances from CHL and their board of health that this incident will not be repeated."

"I call upon the board of health to investigate this incident and to take action against this violation of public health regulations," said McNabb.

"If the owners of CHL cannot take proper measures now to protect public health," said McNabb, "then how can they prove to us that they should be allowed to more than double their landfill, and their leachate production, with the proposed 27.5 acre "Area V" expansion?"

chamber chatter

By Paula Knowles
For the Chamber

On the evening of Oct. 7, the majority of citizens and taxpayers of Cohasset will passively relinquish their right to have a voice in the way their town collects and spends their tax dollars. And most of them won't even know what they have given up.

When they hear that a business has been denied permits to expand or build, they will curse the board members for denying the town much-needed new revenue and tax money. When they hear about the legal costs expended by the town fighting lawsuits brought by land owners whose properties on 3A have been devalued because of zoning by-law changes, they will yell "foul" and make angry calls to their selectmen crying "fiscal irresponsibility" and "elitist attitudes." And when our next Prop. 2-1/2 overrride election takes place – and it will – they will cite these issues as reasons to vote down any override until "THEY" start doing what the people want. What they will conveniently forget is that they themselves are the people, and they have never let "them" know what they wanted. Whether or not their muttered accusations are correct, they will have no right to voice them. Why? Because they had a chance to have their say and cast their vote at Town Meeting, and they chose not to. How many of YOU will fall into this category this year?

How many of you will choose "Evening Shade" and "Murphy Brown" over Bill Weeks and the Advisory Board? And even worse, how many of you will settle back with your coffee or decaf and watch Town Meeting on Channel 3, but will not take a few extra minutes to put on your shoes and drive up to the High School to take part? How many of you will continue to refuse to take an active part in your own lives as Cohasset voters and taxpayers?

Oct. 7, Town Meeting will take up three very important zoning articles. One attempts to use zoning to limit and ultimately get rid of a specific business that the authors do not agree with. Two others attempt to abolish the "Light Industry" zone from Rte 3A. The Chamber of Commerce strongly believes that all three articles are blatantly anti-business, and not in the best interests of the Town and its taxpayers. We ask, no....we URGE... all of you to put your apathy aside for the evening. Put your coffee or decaf in a travel mug, put your shoes back on and put a tape in the VCR. Drive up to the High School and join your friends and neighbors in shaping your own municipal future. The folks from "Evening Shade" would applaud you, and "Murphy Brown" wouldn't miss it for the world. It is, after all, the only way you can win the right to complain later on!

A SECOND THOUGHT: Other articles on the warrant include the police contract for the next three years, miscellaneous legal bills (always interesting to hear and see the figures for – a real eye-opener for some), the appointment of a paid assistant assessor, and various money transfer articles. All of these issues need your vote.

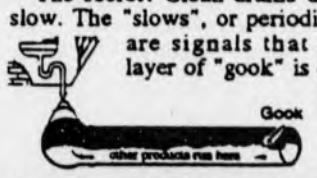
To the Editor:

It was a beautiful fall day last Saturday on the Cohasset Common where a number of our organizations were jointly engaged in a big flea market to raise funds for all manner of public causes and for the needs of people. It was also the day for the first distribution of food under the SHARE program which has been so successful across the nation. This beautiful Saturday showed once again that Cohasset is a uniquely blessed community for all its volunteer participation in joint and separate ventures. We have been told that our volunteer activities are the best in the Commonwealth and when we saw some of these good people and fine organizations on the Common who could doubt it.

For many years the Social Service League has raised funds and recruited volunteers to operate many programs that help people. In addition, over the past six years, the Council on Aging has been a town agency that relies on some town funds plus grants and donations to operate twenty programs that benefit many of the 1,500 seniors in Cohasset and their families.



These and other agencies have been blending their efforts, their funds and their volunteers in several joint ventures with only a common goal-helping people who need such help. The new SHARE program, the health fairs, services for seniors, health clinics, meal services are all examples of such joint activities and joint benefits. There is work enough and credit enough to go around for all those in SSL and COA and many others

Slow Drains?

You'll never have a slow running, or clogged drain again!

The secret? Clean drains don't run slow. The "slows", or periodic clogs, are signals that a thick layer of "gook" is choking your pipes. This gook coats the entire length of your pipe- from sink to sewer, or septic.

Conventional drain openers cannot remove this build up. Even a small tunnel through the waste lets them flow through the pipe, leaving the gook behind!

Now, with just a few minutes each month, you can easily clean out your pipes like new... and KEEP them clean with Plumb Clean®. It clings, and penetrates deep into the gook. No other product has the Plumb Clean® formula. That is what allows it to liquefy even years of build up. Plumb Clean® will clean the entire length of your pipes. It will make your drains run like new, when used as directed. This penetrating action is so revolutionary, Plumb Clean® is money-back guaranteed! Don't be confused. Plumb Clean® is the brand with the guarantee right on the label.

Save Money. A 1 lb. jar of Plumb Clean® holds up to 41 drain treatments. It costs only about 35¢ per treatment.

Independent laboratory studies show Plumb Clean® more effectively breaks down organic waste than all other products tested. So, if your drains have the "slows", get safe, guaranteed Plumb Clean® today!

4th anniversary show guests

Thursday, Oct. 3, host Wigmore Pierson's guests on Pierson to Person will be the chairmen of the board of selectmen from Cohasset, Edwin Tebbetts; Hanover, Robert White; Hingham, Edward Lewiecki; Hull, Martin Glennon; Norwell, Donald Leclair Jr.; and Scituate, Richard Blake.

This will be a special two hour edition of the show which will air live from 8 to 10 p.m. Viewers will be invited to call in their questions to the Chairmen.

The Pierson to Person television show is broadcast live each Thursday from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hanover, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Norwell.

Those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m.

For further information about upcoming guests and additional show information contact the Pierson Show's Executive Producer, Robert Belliveau at 545-0643.

Pierson celebrates 4 years

On October 3, Pierson to Person will celebrate its Fourth Anniversary of service to the South Shore as a live interview show on Continental Cablevision channels 3 and 53.

To celebrate its anniversary, Pierson to Person will expand to a two hour special edition with the chairmen of the boards of selectmen from the towns of Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate.

The first guest inaugurating the show, then called "Cohasset Talks: Pierson to Person," was Cohasset Town Meeting Moderator William D. Weeks.

The program has strived to produce a one hour program that is educational, informational, and entertaining for the viewers with a style that is intended to generate light rather than ignite fires of confrontational or inflammatory heat.

During its four years, the show and crew have been the recipients of numerous Golden Tape Awards, as well as a nomination by the Massachusetts Cable Commission in the Municipal Issues category.

Elaborating on, and presenting a variety of viewpoints on public issues locally, state-wide, nationally, and even international affairs and nuclear weapons reduction, have been represented by guests appearing on the show.

Although the program has remained true to its roots — local community television dealing with local community issues, — the guest list during four years on the air has included: Marine Corps Brigadier General Richard Neal of Desert Storm fame; Massachusetts Senate President William Bulger; Congressman Gerry Studds; New York Times Correspondent, Fox Butterfield; Red Sox Pitcher, Dennis Lamp; U.S. Nuclear Arms Reduction Negotiator, Barry Daniels, Down Syndrome Expert, Dr. Allen Crocker; The Radio Voice of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, William Pierce; Massachusetts State Auditor Joseph DeNucci; and Massachusetts Governor William Weld.

Over 265 individuals have appeared on the program to share their time and knowledge with our viewers.

The Fall 1991 guest schedule includes such topics as newspaper journalism, dance, panic attacks, political discussions, restaurant industry, witchcraft as a religion, incest, a special two hour edition dealing with AIDS, special on "World Globalization" with international relations experts, and walking as the preferred exercise for good health.

• We are happy to report that Olive Weisenfluh is back home from the hospital, and feeling better every day.

• An event is coming to Cohasset that shouldn't be missed. The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is holding its only fund raising event of the year. It will be an auction that will be televised with call-in bidding provided for the viewers. Nov. 16 is the big day. We will be providing more news as we get it. Meanwhile, remember the date.

• As you attend the town meeting next week (Monday, Oct. 7 at 7:30 p.m.) take a look around you. Did you know that the high school was dedicated in 1951? That's forty years ago. Wonder if anyone would have ever thought we would have such money concerns or that parts of it would look so old then.

• Reserve tonight for the special edition of the Pierson to Person show; it is the fourth anniversary show. Featured will be chairmen of the boards of selectmen from Hanover, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate. It will be aired from 8-10 p.m., and should be interesting.

• That's the news from here. Please let us know what's happening in your life!

Cohasset should be proud of all its care-giving organizations and should fully appreciate the many volunteers who work in different ways and jointly in various organizations. It is heartening to see such a rainbow of common effort work so beneficially!

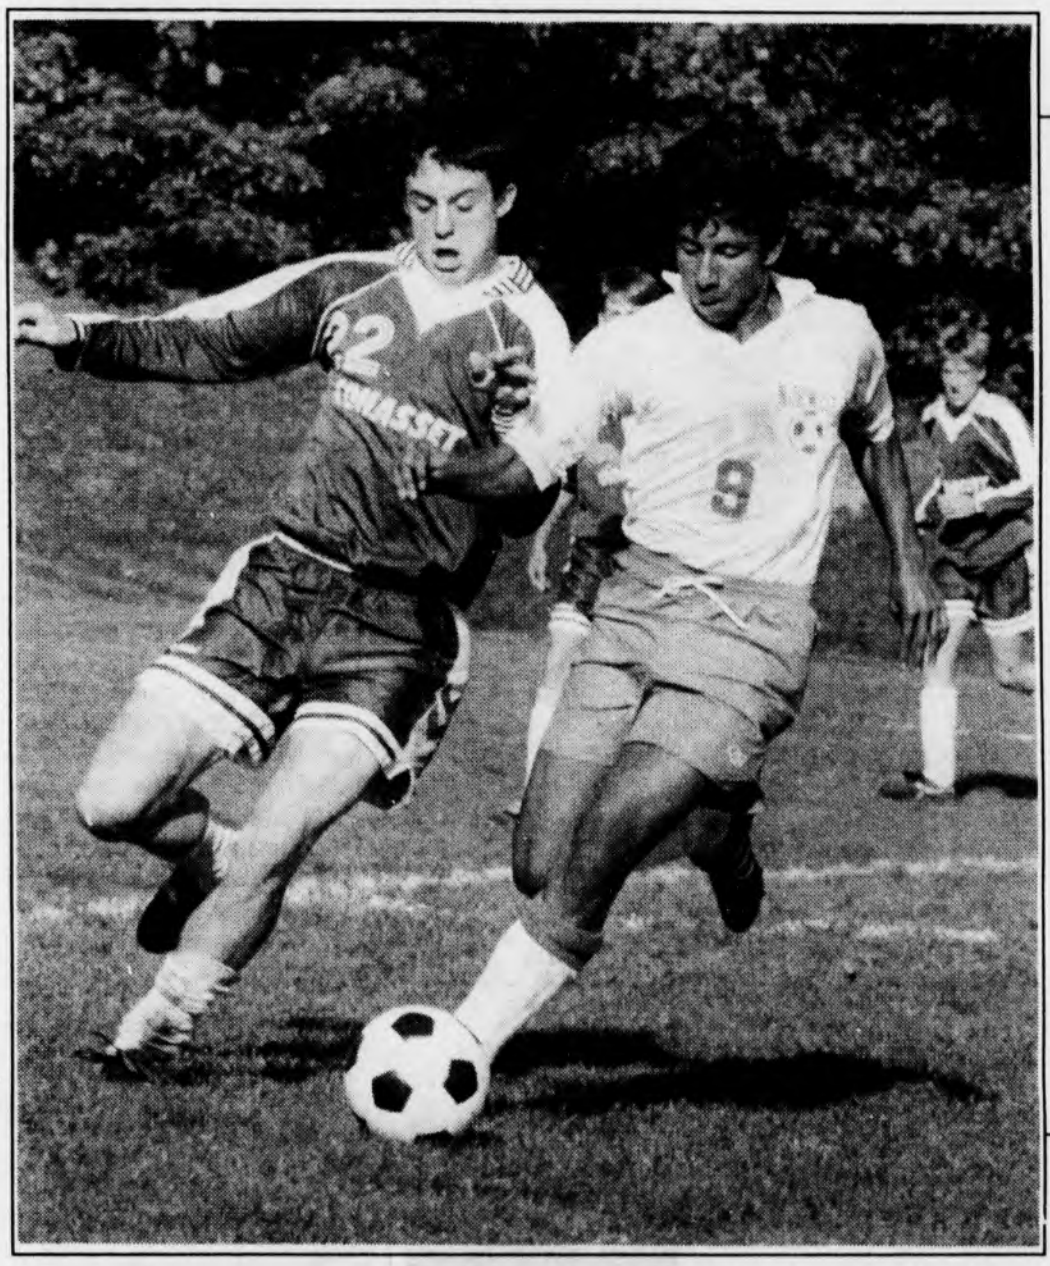
No win, no lose situation for CHS field hockey

By Michael Farley
Mariner correspondent

Ties are good. In baseball, the tie goes to the runner. You're safe. In boxing, a fight which ends in a draw allows the champion to retain his title. Then, there's always an imported silk tie. Ties are not good if you are the Cohasset high school field hockey team trying to earn a berth in the post-season play-off picture.



Granted, ties aren't bad. In fact, a team gets one point for a tie in a game. However, if the team goal is to reach the 17 point plateau, and a win is worth two points, then you can see where frustration may occur.

After a 1-1-2 start to the 1991 season, coach Bostwick and her troops chalked up two more ties and two more points towards the tournament. She wishes there were some more wins on the board.

"We haven't had any luck from the man upstairs," coach Deb Bostwick commented. "The girls are all working together, and every game we get a little better. It has to turn somewhere," she added.

Last Monday, the Skippers played host to Carver and had to fight off two one-goal deficits before settling for the draw. The rain, pelting all afternoon, was also a factor as the referees have the authority to discontinue play and declare the contest complete if they so choose. With Carver up 1-0 early, Cilla Goff scored with 3:00 to go in the first half, assisted by inner Sarah Douglas. The ball was centered, Douglas gained possession and fed it to Goff who caught the Carver goalie out of position. After Carver jumped back on top, junior Danielle Shaughnessy, who "played her heart out" according to Bostwick, made a diving attempt at the ball and tapped it in to even things up for the 2-2 final. Hull came to town a few days later, and despite out-shooting the Pirates, the girls would again have to walk off the field with a 1-1 push. Danielle Shaughnessy added to her point totals with the game's initial score with Douglas assisting. In an attempt to boost the offense, Bostwick moved Karyn Murray up into the offensive attack when they maneuvered the ball deep into the opponent's zone. Cohasset managed to hold onto the 1-0 margin until there were 10 and a half minutes to play. Carver took advantage of an opening and was able to sneak out of town with a point of its own.

Cohasset has accumulated 6 points thus far, with 8 games to play in the regular season. Do the arithmetic.

Girls' soccer wins three in a row

It was a great week for the girls' varsity soccer team. They won three games this week. The first game was against Stoughton. It was a non-league game. The score was 5-0. The goal scorers for this game were Allison Ludlow, Jen Reidy, Erin Murphy, Kate Carroll, and Jessica MacDonald. Goalkeeper Heather Bass recorded her first shut-out for the season. She played outstanding along with defense player Corrina McMackin. This same team will be the top opponent for the Homecoming game Oct. 12 at 2:30 p.m.

Second game of the week was against Rockland. This is the first time in eight years that the girls defeated Rockland. The score was 1 to 0. The winning goal came in the second half when Allison Ludlow volleyed the ball from the 18 yard box. The team was led by Heidi Lincoln who played an excellent game at stopper.

Saturday was the final game of the week. The girls traveled to Nauset where they won 6 to 1. Everyone played an excellent game including Megan Rhodes and Sarah Atherton. The goal scorers for this game were Kathleen O'Brien, Jen Reidy, Allison Ludlow (twice), Erin Murphy, and Jessica MacDonald.

The girls have a game at Milliken Field this Friday Oct. 4 against Norwell. The girls will also play on Oct. 10 against Abington at 3:30 p.m. at home. Come support the team.

Girls more than 'Reidy' for the competition on the soccer field

By Michael Farley
Mariner correspondent

The battles seen in the South Shore League this year can be likened to some of those found in Homer's Iliad. Two weeks into the season, a handful of teams are flexing their might at the top of the mountain, with one of those teams being the Cohasset girls varsity. After a minor avalanche set them back a couple of steps, the Skippers have surged upward in the standings and can now find themselves close to the top against the likes of Abington and Rockland. With a record of 6-2 following their victory against Norton this past Monday, the girls are looking at a chance to be numero uno.

Perhaps the sweetest of the recent victories was the 1-0 shutout against the Rockland Bulldogs at Rockland. According to coach Ken Startzel, it was Cohasset's first win in eight years against the Bulldogs. The one lone goal was scored by midfielder Allison Ludlow from Katie Carrol. Carrol worked her way down the side and then played it back to Ludlow for the score, which took place 11 minutes into the second half.

"Rockland might have one of the best front lines in the league," said Startzel, "and we didn't let them get good position with the ball. We stayed on their backs."

Against Nauset, Startzel's early season defensive adjustments continued to bear fruit as they soundly defeated Nauset 6-1. Kathy O'Brien broke the ice at 4:41 into the game, assisted by Jen Reidy. Reidy would then score one of her own just 18 seconds later. Reidy continues to put up the offensive numbers with six goals and seven assists so far this year. After Nauset got on the scoreboard, Ludlow (two goals in the game) tallied before the half ended to give the Skippers insurance. "Nauset was a good athletic team. We knew they played well in their league (Cape and Islands), and we've never played them before. You just never know," were the words of Startzel when asked about this non-league opponent. Cohasset added three more goals to the convincing win.

Against Norton Monday, Startzel admitted that the game "shouldn't have been that close. We were a little flat," referring to his team's 2-1 victory. The Skippers pounced early, netting two in the first half. The first was scored by Reidy with help from Erin Murphy, and the two combined later for the clincher with Murphy getting the goal.

The early season success doesn't have the coach relaxing in the easy chair yet. In the second half at Norton, they continued to wield the dagger by putting up 15 more shots.

"We have been very productive, but we haven't really tapped it."

Hoo-Ray (Jones that is) for Cohasset! Skipper football earns a 'W'

By Michael Farley
Mariner correspondent

It was a defense that would have made F. Lee Bailey proud. Like the title of his book suggests, the defense didn't rest in Cohasset's 6-0 shutout of Old Colony this past Saturday. Combining an array of defensive line shifts and stunts, the Skippers were able to turn back Old Colony and capitalize on a Ray Jones touchdown run for their first victory of the season.

"The defense came up really big for us," was how coach Ted McDermott proudly put it.

"We had a pretty good idea of what they were doing offensively," he went on to say.

Perhaps even a better idea than Old Colony had itself.

The only scoring Cohasset would need occurred in the first quarter set up by a Matt Keefe to Ray Jones pass connection which put the ball on Old Colony's two-yard line. Jones then took the handoff and cashed in by land on a two-yard touchdown trot in giving the Skippers an early 6-0 lead. It is only fitting that Cohasset's winning touchdown be scored by one of its primary offensive weapons. "Ray is our big play man," boasted coach McDermott. "He has great athleticism and is also deceiving," the coach added. "He can get the tough yardage, and if we keep giving him the ball, he'll break one for us. He continues to gain respect."

His physical attributes aren't his only weapon.

"He's a running back with a linebacker's mentality," was how McDermott phrased it. Subsequent to what would eventually be the game's only score, the focus switched to the team's respective defensive units. Adjusting from a 5-3 front to a 4-3, Cohasset was able to apply suitable pressure throughout the game and protect its slim lead.

However, Old Colony did manage to manufacture a drive that reached Cohasset's 10-yard line. A sack and a penalty followed, though, and the Skippers held off the charge. Coach McDermott altered the scheme in the latter moments of the game relying on a prevent style alignment in an effort to

Cheerleaders stand behind varsity football

After a long traveled jaunt to Rochester Old Colony High School, players were overjoyed by a win. The football games thus far have been 45 minutes to an hour and fifteen minutes traveling time. It has been a little tough for the cheerleading squad because they have to make arrangements with parents for rides. There is no bus provided for the squad because it only consists of 8 cheerleaders, one mascot and one coach. But, on Saturday Sept 28th, no one minded the ride after the long awaited victory.

The young ladies on the squad cheered enthusiastically the entire game, even sophomore Becky Callentine who was suffering with a cold, sore throat and fever. Those fans who attended would have also noticed special performances by captains Rebecca Hackenburg, Lisa Kondrat, and Heather Brennock on their partner stunts. A great deal of practice has gone into these stunts. Also, a special performance pyramid called the elevator was performed for the first time with Kate Barret, and Jill DuMoulin going up on the lift. During this pyramid, spotters Lisa Kondrat and Aimee Mitchell must be aware for the fear of a fall. Mascot Laura Kondrat proves that you can be young and still learn the High School Cheers and chants. (Laura is only six years old.)

You may have also noticed special gymnastic abilities by Aimee Mitchell on the field as well as partner stunts done by fellow teammates Kim Ward and Becky Callentine.

The girls had enough time to shower quickly and head over to Rebecca Hackenburg's house for a Sundae Party. Mrs Hackenburg offered her home to all of the football players, cheerleaders, and coaches for sundaes. We all thank you Mr and Mrs. Hackenburg. The football players made sundaes of ice cream, hot fudge, whipped cream, jimmies, M&M's, and cherries. The girls and guys then mingled amongst one another and talked about the game. Head coach McDermott was too busy to talk about the game, he was involved in a ping pong match. Coach Silvia,however, had plenty of time to speak of the game played earlier.

Coach Sargent said that the girls are now getting ready for the Pep Rally to be performed in October right before the Homecoming Game.

Fitness training programs offered at CCC

The recreation commission is expanding fitness programs in an attempt to meet demands.

Information regarding Step Training programs will be forthcoming shortly. Both step training and aero-circuit training are new concepts in physical fitness training and will be taught by qualified and certified instructors. Through step and circuit training, participants will gain a number of the benefits associated with physical training. Both of these programs are unique in that they are appealing to both men and women, can be performed at individual rates of capability and can be designed to meet the needs of wide age and ability ranges. The latitude to focus on specific problematic concerns, each of us can often have, is also present through these programs.

As essential as the concepts of fitness training programs, are the qualifications and capabilities of the instructors and the recreation commission is extremely pleased to announce that both Margret Watson and Normandie Nigh will be instructing fitness programs for the department. Nigh and Watson are highly trained, qualified, and experienced professionals in the field of physical training and exercise and we consider it our honor to have their association.

Register for Aero-Circuit Training any Tuesday or Thursday evening, with Watson, at 6:15 p.m., at Cohasset Town Hall auditorium. Information will be forthcoming soon on Nigh's step training.

Telephone registrations will be accepted for a four week Landscape Design Course to be taught by Greg Bilowz, Landscape and Environmental Design architect.

The four week program is scheduled to begin on Wednesday, Nov. 13, at 7:30 p.m., at Cohasset High School, meeting weekly to Wednesday, Dec. 11. The fee for this unique opportunity is $32 per person and class must be limited in size. To register please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

The course outline follows: Basic Horticulture Practices including propagation techniques, pruning, soil preparation, fertilization, mulching, edging and how to survey your land; Seaside Landscaping methods of overcoming the elements and creating wind breaks for delicates.

Voter registration

The League of Women Voters set up a voter registration table at the Deer Hill School's Open House Sept. 26. League member Margie Charles and town registrar Linda Shultz registered a number of parents, who expressed thanks for the convenience of this essential citizen service.

The League's voter registration service will be offered at Cohasset High School's Open House Thursday, Oct. 3, and at Joseph Osgood School's Open House Thursday, Oct. 10. If you are new to town, or, if for any reason, you have not yet registered to vote, please take a minute at Open House. Voter registration is also available in the town clerk's office at town hall.

The League of Women Voters promotes citizen participation in local, state, and national government. Please attend the Special Town Meeting Monday, October 7 at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset High School.

protect against the big play.

"We were willing to give them the quick out and short gainers," he noted. Although they didn't give up any big plays, Cohasset certainly benefitted from some of its own. The Skippers were able to create some costly turnovers which contributed to the win. Senior Kevin Mulcahy, of "Mulcahy Magic" fame, chipped in with a fumble recovery and Matt Keefe came up with a big interception with just over 2:00 minutes to play. Overall, a fine effort by all those involved.

A special note goes out to the cheerleaders, coached by Ruthann Sargent, who have led the spiritual parade throughout the year.

Gymnastics openings

There are still some gymnastic openings for 3, 4, 5-year-old boys and girls under the direction of Ruthann Sargent.

The Community Center is also offering classes on Mondays beginning in October for Beginner and Intermediate Girls ages 6 to 9 years olds.

Gymnastic classes run for 3 to 12 week sessions and cost $20 per month. For more information for class times and days please call the Center at 383-0088 and speak to Judy Volungis.

Special museum tour

Saturday, Oct. 12 at 2:30 p.m. the Cohasset Historical Society and Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a tour of the Historical Society's two museum buildings at Cohasset Center, the Capt. John Wilson House and the Maritime Museum. The tour will meet at the Maritime Museum on Elm Street. Donations for this special tour will be accepted at the door.

The Capt. John Wilson House, built in 1810, was the home of a Cohasset seafarer and then remained in the Wilson family until 1912 when it was purchased by Cohasset businessman William Hamilton McGaw. In 1936 McGaw gave the house to the Historical Society in memory of his wife Priscilla Lothrop Collier, and it became Cohasset's first historical museum. Today the Wilson House contains a collection of household artifacts from early Cohasset homes including children's toys, furniture, kitchenware, and antique costumes. Artworks of local historical significance grace the walls of the house.

The Maritime Museum, dating from the latter 18th century, originally was the ship chandlery for the Bates family schooner fishing fleet. One of the few buildings remaining from Cohasset's seafaring and fishing industry, it was given to the Historical Society in 1955 by Mr. and Mrs. William Cox and moved to its present site from the Cove. The Maritime Museum contains numerous collections relating to the "Age of Sail" of a New England fishing village, as well as a general collection of historical artifacts from old Cohasset. Ship models, carvings, relics from shipwrecks, 19th century fishing gear, lifesaving memorabilia, old tools, stone artifacts of the Quonahasset Indians and numerous other items of historical interest can be seen at the Society's Maritime Museum. Call the Recreation Office to register for this tour at 383-6791.

The CHS cheerleading squad perform on the field.

SHARE sign up

October registration for Cohasset SHARE will be held at the Cohasset Community Center on Wednesday, Oct. 9 from 10 a.m. to noon and on Thursday, Oct. 10 from 7 to 9 p.m.

Food distribution will be on Saturday, Oct. 26 at the town hall from 9 to 11 a.m.

SHARE is a food program for anyone who performs at least two hours of volunteer service to others per month. SHARE is not a food program for the needy. It is intended for all income levels. If you have any questions call 383-1654 or 383-9112. (Cohasset Senior Center) or 383-0771 (Social Service League).

Don't miss auditions

Cohasset Dramatic Club will hold auditions for "The Homecoming" Oct. 6 at 3 p.m. and Oct. 7 at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall in Cohasset.

There are over 24 roles available for the Dec. 12 to 15 performances for ages 8 to 80. Some of the roles include the mother Olivia, the husband Clay, Clay-Boy (John Boy in the Waltons) and the siblings aged 8 to 15; grandparents, neighbors, townspeople and congregants of the local church.

Some "extra" roles are city people and members of the church choir who will sing carols. There are many roles available that have minimal rehearsal time commitment (like the chorus) ... and a harmonica player!!

Rehearsals are tentatively set for Sunday afternoons, Tuesday and Thursday evenings. All cast members must attend an Oct. 17 read through.

Scripts are at Paul Pratt Library for check-out.

Call Director Gayl Varallo at 383-2366 for questions or if you are unable to try out.

Chamber seeks grads

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is gearing up to send out their annual "Little Piece of Home" care packages to all 1991 high school graduates. Unfortunately, they have no way of finding out the names of those Cohasset residents who graduated from schools other than Cohasset High School. If you have a son or daughter who is a 1991 private school graduate and you would like him or her to receive one of our packages, please send their name, home phone, and present mailing address (college, military, etc.) to Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 330, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Please send the information to the Chamber as soon as possible.

The packages will go out no later than Oct. 15.

Summer playground parents

The Cohasset Recreation Department requests that parents who still have not turned in their summer playground survey, drop it off at the Recreation office or mail it in to Cohasset Recreation Department, 41 Highland Avenue.

If you misplaced your survey or if you did not get one, please pick up a copy at the Recreation office.

Fall arts courses

This fall, the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset offers art classes, workshops, lectures and gallery talks.

The Blue Ribbon Members Exhibition opens Thursday evening with a reception from 6 to 8 p.m. The exhibit, on display through Nov. 9, will be complemented by an exhibition of Louis Dodd marine paintings, courtesy of Coughlin and Coughlin of Kingston. Tom Coughlin will deliver a gallery talk at the opening reception. The Louis Dodd exhibit runs through Oct. 26.

Immediately following the Oct. 10 reception at 8 p.m., SSAC will hold its annual meeting.

Oct. 11 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. SSAC will accept applications from those interested in becoming a gallery artist or wishing to be considered for a solo or group exhibition.

Although the fall term has already started, there are several short-term classes and workshops coming up in October and November. Louise Kalish examines the structure of color and all its design possibilities in "Color and Design." This two-session adult course is open to all levels of ability and meets Tuesday mornings, Oct. 8 and 15 from 9 to 11:30 a.m.

Also meeting Tuesday mornings from 9 a.m. to noon, is "Painting for Me." In this four-week class running from Oct. 22 through Nov. 12, Claffy Williams helps students develop and enhance painting skills in watercolor or acrylic, realistic or abstract. The class will be held outdoors when weather permits.

A new medium will be explored and utilized in creating jewelry in Judy Rossman's Saturday afternoon class, "Creating with Fimo." The course, which is also open to teens, meets Saturdays, Nov. 2 to 16, from noon to 3 p.m. A one-day workshop on "Making Glazes and Slips," taught by George Dalton, will be held on Saturday, Nov. 23 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Many Young Artist Holiday Workshops are also scheduled including "Holiday Treasures," "Cards and Calendars," "Clay Nativity Scenes," "Holiday Cookies," and "Holiday Crafts from Norway, Mexico and Poland." Call 383-9548 for the Young Artist flyer.

"The Art of Contemporary Architectural Stained Glass" will be the topic of the Oct. 24 lecture delivered by Board Of Directors President Chris Rifkin. On Nov. 21, Jeanne Replogle will discuss "Folk Art Today." Both lectures start at 7:30 p.m. and require advance registration. Tickets ($6 for members, $8 for non-members) may be purchased by calling 383-9548.

Get a head start on your Christmas shopping with some unique gifts and artwork at the SSAC Annual Art Sale as 75 artists and artisans will present original crafts and fine art in this two-day event, Friday, Nov. 1 from 1 to 8 p.m. and Saturday, Nov. 2 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Art Center is lowering its commissions and artists lowering their prices.

The November Folk Art Exhibition will open with a Friday evening reception on Nov. 15 from 6:30 to 9 p.m. The show, featuring a dozen folk artists from Cambridge to Cape Cod, will run through Dec. 21. The exhibit's curator, Cohasset artist Jeanne Replogle, will also be featured in the November/December issue of Colonial Homes entitled "Christmas in Cohasset."

For more information on how you can become involved in the arts this fall, call the Art Center at 383-9548.

A course for parents

The Scituate elementary schools are offering to parents in Cohasset, Norwell and Hingham, as well as Scituate, an innovative video-based program designed to enhance child-parent relationships.

Called Active Parenting, this two-hour program consists of a video and group discussion about all aspects of child and teen-rearing problems.

The six-week series has been used throughout the United States, Canada and Europe.

This is an opportunity for parents to recognize and resolve their own questions about responsibility, cooperation, love, unity, health and happiness surrounding their child or children in relaxed peer situation.

Louis Von Kahle, principal at Wampatuck School, and Florita Field, guidance counselor, will lead the active parenting group.

The course will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Wampatuck School media center Oct. 16, 23 and 30 and Nov. 6, 13 and 20.

Cost for the program is $15 per parent and includes the course books.

To register or to find out more about the program, call Florita Field at 545-8790.

While the list of subjects seems overwhelming, there's a line in the course description that backs away from promising all this at once.

Classes are limited to four students at a time for the 10-week sessions at a cost of $100. But the catalog states that ongoing enrollment is necessary to cover all topics.

More advanced topics are covered in the classes for grades 1 to 6. The same small classes and10-week framework will be used, also at a $100 cost. Those kids will learn about desktop publishing, word processing, data base management (I'm not sure what that means but I may wait and ask a 6-year-old), environment simulation, computer assisted design, programming, computer assisted math and reading.

Futurekids is a trademarked computer teaching center with franchises in about 500 cities across the country. There are also locations in Japan, Canada, England and Indonesia.

Back to school night

Osgood School will hold its Back to School Night, which was formerly called an open house, at 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 10.

Early release

Thursday, Oct. 3, is early release day. The afternoon session of kindergarten is cancelled.

public notice

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 96365
NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To all persons interested in the estate of Mary Kendall Bolles late of Cohasset, in said County, deceased.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the forty-first through forty-fifth account(s) of Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company and John S. Howe as Trustees (the fiduciary) under Article tenth of the will of said deceased for the benefit of Barbara Bolles Hovey and others have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said account(s), you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the twenty-third day of October, 1991, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said account(s). If you desire to object to any item of said account(s), you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

WITNESS, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this sixteenth day of September, 1991.

Extra PSO calendars

There are extra PSO calendars for the school year 1991-92 available to any Cohasset resident who would like to have one—in the principal's offices of the Osgood, Deer Hill, and Cohasset Junior/Senior High School.

The Parent School Organization's calendar committee includes: Carol Riley, Gretchen Insley, Jim and Donna French, Ellen Endris, Nancy Ross, Barbara Rolandelli and their families for producing this popular item.

Tax deductible contributions may be sent to: Cohasset PSO, Box 30, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Monte Carlo Goes West

At the recent PSO (Parent School Organization) fall meeting, PSO president, Kathy Walsh announced the upcoming fundraiser, "Monte Carlo Goes West" night! The evening of charitable gambling will take place on Saturday, Nov. 2 from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the Cohasset Community Center. This will be the sixth annual "Monte Carlo" event the PSO has sponsored in an effort to raise funds for curriculum enrichment for the Joseph Osgood, the Deer Hill School and Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School. A "Rhinestone Cowboy" western theme will make this year's sale a little more casual. Of course, western dress will be optional. Featured will be: Blackjack, Craps, Poker, a live auction, a silent auction, door prizes, cash bar, Tex-Mex hors d'oeuvres. Tickets are $20, including a $5 start-up stake, and can be purchased from any PSO board member or by calling: Jim and Donna French, 383-9901, or Carol Riley, 383-6215.

MONTE CARLO LOOKS FOR AUCTION ITEMS

The auction committee for the PSO "Monte Carlo Goes West" night is looking for donations of products or services to put on the auction block on Saturday, Nov. 2, at the Community Center to raise money for the schools. Do you have a ski condo you would give up for a weekend? How about babysitting time? A patchwork quilt? Tennis lessons? A ride on your sailboat? Would your company provide a product as a tax deductible contribution for the auction? Please call Ruth Wilcox, 383-1827 or Marcia Kreycik, 383-2478.

Residential property taxes remain even; tax rate rises

Residential property values have dipped and so have the new set of valuations, according to James Lagrotteria, assessor.

New valuations will show a decrease of about nine percent in the assessment figure, Lagrotteria told voters at the Special Town Meeting Monday night.

The tax rate, however, is expected to jump from $9.90, per $1,000 valuation to $11.48.

If the valuation figures had not been changed, the new rate would have been $10.50.

The official figure should be released later this week. While the assessors met Tuesday to go over the final numbers, it is up to the state Department of Revenue to officially certify the figure. That approval is the final step in setting the rate.

Once that is official, the tax bills may be sent out. That may happen as early as next week. Taxpayers have 30 days from the date of the postmark to pay the bill.

The state has already approved the new valuation figures, Lagrotteria told voters.

At the meeting, voters approved several housekeeping moves aimed at balancing the town budget. After dipping into free cash to make up for the loss of state aid, there was still $320,000 left. Contracts with all major town employee unions — police, fire, teachers, library and clerical workers — remain unresolved.

The tax levy is slightly more than $9.8 million.

Earlier Monday evening, selectmen held the annual tax classification hearing and decided to continue using one tax rate for all property.

Several factors added up to change the rate this year. The overall valuation of the town decreased along with a declining real estate market and the voters accepted an override in April.

A median house in Cohasset was assessed at $300,000 last year. With the decrease in assessments, that house will be assessed at roughly $270,000. The Landfill wins one, loses one

CHL becomes a structure

One of the zoning articles aimed at halting the growth at the town's private landfill — Cohasset Heights Limited, CHL — sailed through the Special Town Meeting Monday night.

But as the night went on many of the anti-expansionists left the meeting and the next vote — to create a highway business zone in place of the current light industrial zone — failed to gain the required two-thirds vote.

All zoning changes require a two-thirds vote for success.

The citizen petition articles were the last three in the 19-article warrant.

The first of the three involved a change of definition. That article will be sent to the state attorney general's office for a ruling on its legality.

Already Paul Barry, one of the owners of CHL, has threatened litigation over the change. His attorney, Kim Johannessen of Boston, told the voters she believes the state solid waste act precludes any new regulation of landfills.

The change in definition means the landfill would be considered a structure and subject to limitations on height and lot coverage.

Johnannessen said a landfill is not a structure.

Al Moore, chairman of the planning board, said his board backed the article despite the fact that it normally opposes the concept of handling zoning at a special town meeting. He said the planners believe a landfill is a structure and the new wording merely clarifies the situation.

One of the surprises of the night was that the selectmen supported the new definition. The board voted just before the start of the meeting to change its official position.

Robert Martin, president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, said he thinks of a structure as something offering shelter. He said it was hard to believe the issue wouldn't end up in the courts.

Jim Kinch of Forest Avenue, a SAFE member, said the overriding concern is the protection of the water supply.

Ralph Kidder, school committee member, said the issue of the water supply was central. He said the opposition

Steve Martin entertains spectators and press

Cast and crew of the upcoming film "Housesitter" returned to Cohasset Common Monday and Tuesday, to shoot the finale of the romantic comedy starring Goldie Hawn and Steve Martin.

Braving chilly afternoon conditions, Hawn, Martin and their 100-member crew capitalized on a cloudless morning to shoot their final Cohasset-based scene.

Starry-eyed spectators outlined the common throughout the afternoon to catch a glimpse of any Hollywood talent on-hand.

Although a chilled-to-the-bone Hawn kept herself under wraps while not on set, a humble Martin thrilled onlookers by riding his bicycle through Cohasset Center.

Back in mid August, the entourage set up shop in Cohasset to film a 30-second segment of the movie.

For those few seconds of screen time, however, producers of the film transformed Cohasset Center into the fictitious New England town, "Dobbs Mill."

It is in "Dobbs Mill" where the storyline between Davis (Steve Martin) and Gwen (Goldie Hawn) evolves.

Police contract tossed out

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Following the recommendation of the advisory board, the voters at the Special Town Meeting Monday night threw out the new police contract.

The vote was 156 to 120 by secret ballot.

At issue was the fact that the contract includes a minimum manning provision — something that had been in effect for years — and that future raises would require either an override or increased state aid.

The advisors recommended that any raises be contingent upon passage of an override.

The police contract gave no raise for this fiscal year but offered four percent raises in the second and third year of the agreement.

"We're back to square one," said Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon the day after. He said he expected the selectmen would meet with the personnel board to discuss the contract.

"But the selectmen are very upset," he said.

The selectmen had signed the contract, contingent upon the town meeting vote.

Police union president Paul Laugelle told town meeting that they were only voting on the money issues since the contract was binding once the union and

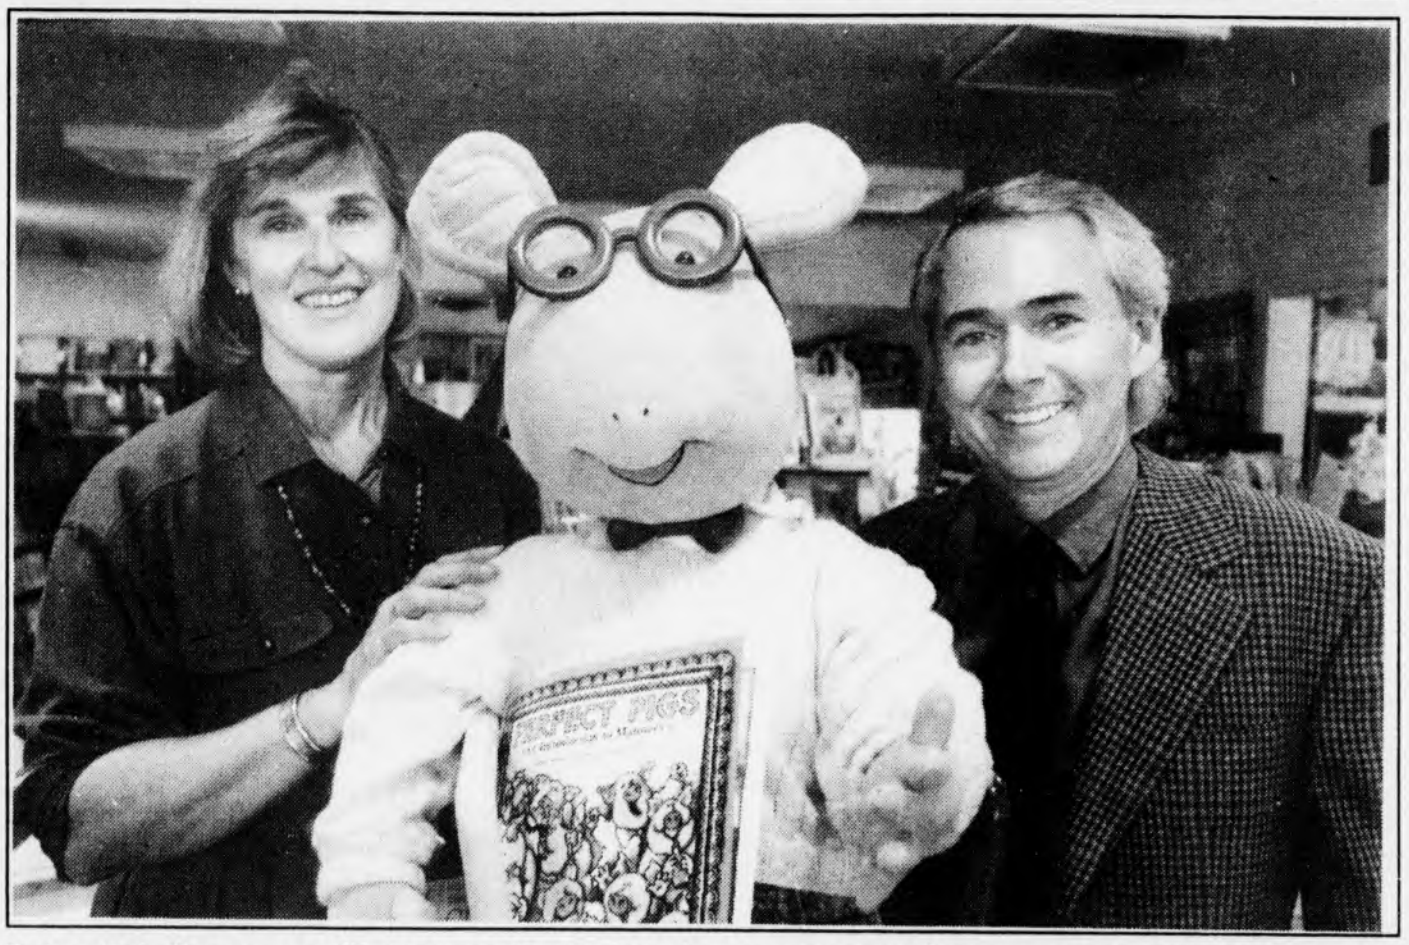
Flu clinics planned

The Social Service League of Cohasset and the board of health will conduct the annual flu clinics on Saturday, Oct. 19 and Saturday, Oct. 26 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Flu season with its fever, cough, sore throat, weakness, and aching limbs, has officially arrived and the American Lung Association is urging high-risk individuals to get their influenza shots early this Fall. Immunization by mid-November will allow antibodies time to build before peak flu season hits later in the winter.



High risk groups include adults and children with chronic heart and lung disorders (as well as, children with asthma), residents of nursing homes or other chronic-care facilities and healthy people 65 and older.

The clinics are free to all Cohasset residents. For more information call the Social Service League at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Resident re-elected president

Joseph Godzik, V.M.D., was re-elected president of the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association at its annual meeting. Dr. Godzik, a veterinarian, is also a director of the board of health in Cohasset.

The Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association, which is headquartered in Walpole, serves 32 cities and towns in the area. The goal of the association is to prevent and control lung disease. Programs and activities are funded by contributions to Christmas Seals, wills and bequests, grants, memorial donations, and special events such as bike treks and aerobic demonstration.

109 roll up sleeves

The Cohasset Community Red Cross blood drive drew 109 donors on Sept. 26. That put the drive over the goal of 100 pints and continued Cohasset's record of strong support for this program.

Shirley and Jack Cibelli, co-chairmen, praised the donors who shared the gift of life, and the many volunteers who contributed their time and energy.

Special thanks go out to the following individuals who made the phone calls and recruited the donors: Mary Brennock, Terese Duggan, Retta Dwyer, Peg Faletra, Karen Gammon, Sue Grant, Don Harrold, Cynthia Hurley, Charles Hurley, Charles Mundhenk, Ann O'Connor, Kevin O'Connor, Carol Riley, Wayne Robbins, Gayle Seavey and Vi Tuthill.

Columbus Day deadlines

The Columbus Day holiday Monday, Oct. 14, is a regular working day for the Cohasset Mariner.

Regular deadlines will be in place. Ads should be placed by noon Monday. News copy should be turned in by Monday noon. Our dropspots in town are Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy and Cohasset News.

Schools and municipal offices will be closed Monday, businesses may open at noon. Mail will not be delivered.

Residential property taxes remain even; tax rate rises property owner of the median priced home will find a tax bill that is about the same as last year, despite the increased rate.

Commercial property did not change in assessment nor did the assessment of vacant land decrease.

Last year there were only three commercial property transactions in town and all involved sales at above the assessed value.

The change in assessed value is different for different properties. The thread that runs through the mass change is that improved — or built upon — land decreased in value by about 20 percent, according to the assessors office.

Anyone who wants to file an exemption under the categories of widows, the elderly, certain veterans and hardship cases has 90 days from the date of the bill to file. Anyone seeking an abatement has 30 days to file.

Police contract tossed out selectmen signed it. The agreement was signed last month.

Michael Putziger, member of the advisory board, said that if all town employes were to gain the same four percent raises, it would cost $280,000 a year.

The town can raise the tax levy by $250,000 a year without an override.

Putziger said the police raise — which amounts to 2.6 percent a year over the life of the contract — is reasonable. He said his committee wanted the figure subject, at least in part, to an override vote.

"We're back to square one."
Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon

Barbara Moore, co-chairman of the personnel board, said the issue of minimum manning wasn't discussed in negotiations because the selectmen hadn't requested the deletion of the clause.

It calls for a minimum of three officers on a given shift.

Moore said the town wouldn't want the police staffing to drop below three on a shift. The actual level of staffing is four per shift, but sickness and other issues can reduce the number.

Raymond Kasperowicz, former chairman of the advisory board, suggested the town should look for one year contracts during the current recession. He is part of a vigilante citizens committee that has studied public safety issues. Kasperowicz said the Government Structure Committee is picking up on the study.

Arne Gjesteby, former advisory board chairman, praised the selectmen and personnel board for the work on the contract but said he wanted to know where cuts would be made if an override fails next year.

"There's no law saying we have to have a library. There's no law saying we have to have a certain number of school teachers," Gjesteby said. He also pointed out that both the selectmen and personnel board are required by labor law to argue in favor of the contract.

Moore pointed out the raise is low. She said other towns where a zero percent raise has been accepted have offered higher raises in the following years.

She said the fire contract, where minimum manning is an issue, has gone to fact finding. She added that if the town wants to change police or fire department working conditions, those issues will have to be negotiated.

Patrolmen earn $28,121 to $30,313, a rate that would be frozen for this year under the terms of the rejected contract.

Robert Martin, president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, said that if everyone agrees the raise is fair and justified, then it ought to pass.

Ralph Kidder, school committee member, asked what the town was willing to give up to get the minimum manning clause deleted.

The debate lasted nearly an hour.

Eventually Peter Laugelle, tree and park superintendent, moved the question, cutting off debate.

SAFE softens zoning plan after hearing

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Activists hoping to curb expansion of Cohasset Heights landfill may have miscalculated when they revised one of the three zoning bylaw changes they put on the warrant for the Oct. 7 special town meeting.

At the Oct. 2 public hearing, attended by about 30 individuals, members of S.A.F.E. announced their decision to reduce the amount of land their bylaw would rezone from light industrial use to highway business. In the process they may have fallen afoul of state laws against spot zoning. S.A.F.E. member John McNabb said it was too soon to tell if the move was a mistake.

Rezoning the area to highway business would rule out various manufacturing and light metal fabrication as well as the proposed 27-acre expansion of the landfill. Existing light industry concerns in the area would be allowed to continue as nonconforming uses but no expansions or changes would be allowed without special permit.

"If you sell potatoes you can always sell potatoes," Henderson explained. "You cannot start selling shoes or hats."

McNabb said S.A.F.E. decided to reduce the amount of land subject to rezoning out of concern for the rights of other property owners in the area.

"We didn't want to unfairly hurt people not causing the problem," McNabb said after the hearing.

Members of the planning board apparently consider the article ill-advised. They voted not to recommend passage in a 3-0 vote. Board member Bill Good abstained "for personal reasons."

A second article submitted by citizen petition would add "landfill" to a long list of examples of structures. In introducing the article at the public hearing, proponent Kevin O'Donnell said landfills should be considered structures because they are "no longer just holes in the ground," but complicated structures with a network of piping, liners and covering material.

According to O'Donnell, adding "landfill" to the list of structures in the bylaw would subject any expansion at the landfill to a 45-foot height restriction and setback and lot coverage provisions. Passage would also automatically trigger site review by the planning board.

S.A.F.E. announced its intention to withdraw a third article on the floor of town meeting.

As originally proposed, the controversial article would have rezoned the entire light-industry zone along Route 3A to highway business. The revised article calls for rezoning only the area occupied by the Cohasset Heights Landfill, other land owned by Paul and John Barry and small parcels belonging to two other property holders.

Kim Johannessen, attorney for Paul Barry, put voters on notice that passage of the articles virtually guarantees a challenge of the legality of the rezoning.

"This would virtually guarantee a spot-zoning challenge," she said. "This is not just singling out an individual, but doing so with laser-beam accuracy." Johannessen also claimed zoning changes triggered by the two articles would violate the state's Solid Waste Act of 1987. Passage of the article would result in a test case being brought against the town, she said.

Spot zoning was defined by Henderson as an arbitrary and unreasonable singling out of a parcel of land. The town counsel said another possible legal challenge could involve a claim that the town has deprived an owner of the value of his land and owes compensation.

Johannessen wasn't alone in her objections to the proposed rezoning. Members of the business community turned out to object to the proposals.

John Seavey, owner of Seavey Antenna Engineering, told the planning board he was not sure rezoning was the appropriate way to deal with the expansion plans of CHL. He called rezoning the area to eliminate light industry a bad idea.

According to Seavey, the light industry zone provides 700 jobs, the majority held by Cohasset residents, and contributes to the tax base of the community. He called the area the last hope for industrial expansion in town.

"We do not all commute to our work," Seavey noted. "We should seek alternative ways to control landfill expansion."

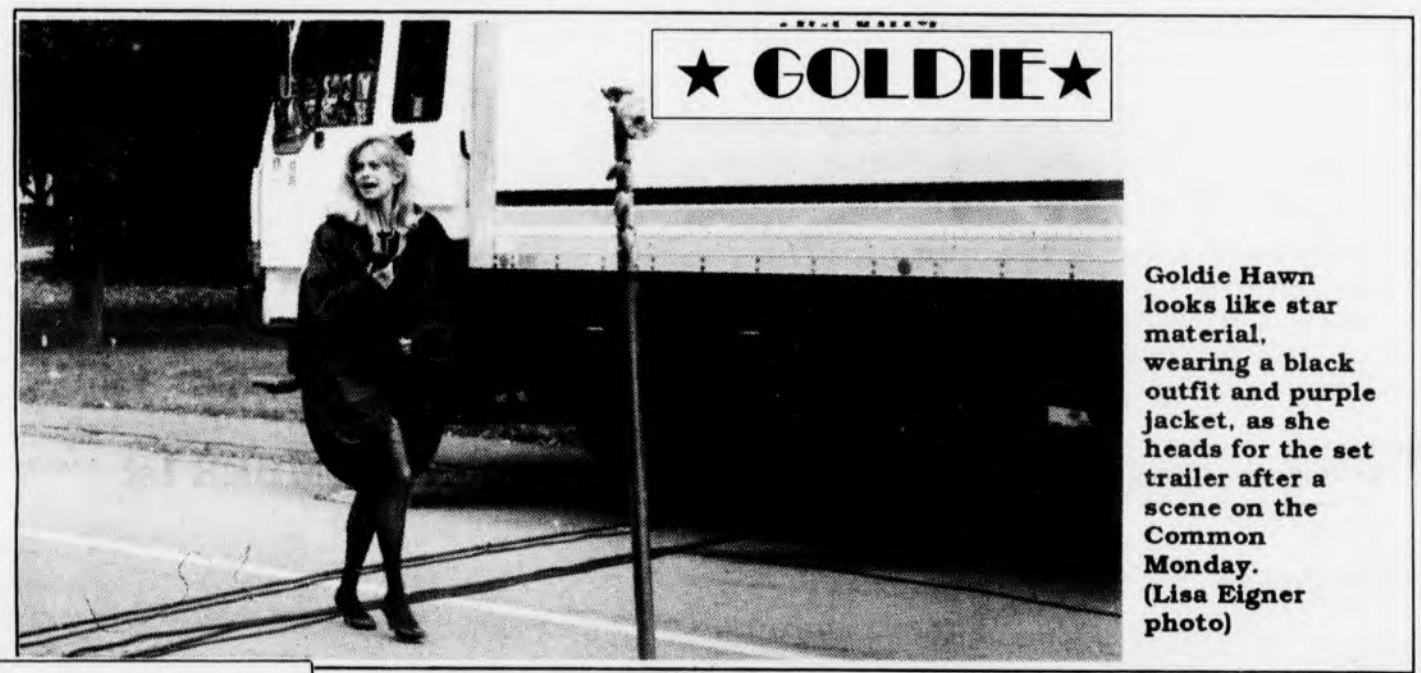
Planning board member Robert Sturdy also objected to the article.

"This will cut a wedge out of the light industrial zone and insert a highway business zone," Sturdy said. "There is precious little industrial zoned land, in my opinion too little. I do not see the rationale for splitting a small industrial zone in half."

In announcing his intention to vote against the article, Chairman Al Moore said, "We have the opportunity to do the wrong thing for all the right reasons.

"Its very easy to jump on the bandwagon, but to risk trampling on someone's property rights is a far greater sin in the long run." S.A.F.E. members were undeterred by the objections.

"We're not ready to give up the ship yet," McNabb said after the hearing. He said he planned to discuss the amended article with town counsel Richard Henderson before Monday's special town meeting.



S.A.F.E.'s other article fared better with the planning board. Members voted 3-0, with Good abstaining, to recommend passage of the article. Members felt the change merely clarified the existing provisions of the bylaw.

"I see [the article] as almost unnecessary," Moore said. "I would view a landfill as a structure currently."

Johannessen disparaged that contention.

"A landfill is not a structure, but a use," she argued. "A football field or a cemetery would fall into this definition."

Although voters acted on the articles during the special town meeting, final say rests with the state attorney general's office which will pass on the legality of the provisions.

Retired Athletic Director honored Oct. 19

Everett Dorr, sportsman for all seasons

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Everett Dorr met his wife on the night he received a national sports award back in the 1940s.

He was recipient of the Nils Nelson Award in 1948. At the time, he was a junior at Bosfon University. She was working an extra job, helping arrange the banquet in his honor.

It was love at first sight.

A week later the couple decided to marry. But they waited a year until he graduated to wed.

Everett and Fran have been close ever since.

She gave up a chance to work in the movies for United Artists for him. Over the years, Fran watched every game her husband coached — except one in Nantucket. She stayed home to have a baby that year.

Now he's getting ready to receive another honor.

The school system he worked for so many years plans to take the time to honor him during half-time ceremonies at the CHS game against Weymouth Catholic Saturday, Oct. 19, at Milliken Field.

School officials hope Mr. Dorr's former students and players will attend the game and be part of the festivities.

His former players include most of the men who graduated from Cohasset High in the past 40 years. Chris Ford, school committee member, played on the football team back in 1959. He remembers Mr. Dorr using all the players, not just the stars.

"There were only 17 males in my graduating class," Ford said. "I wasn't that good but I got a chance to play."

Another of the CHS former players, Walt Sweeney, went on to professional ball.

The current athletic director, Clark Chatterton, played under the coach. The list of former players is too lengthy to compile.

Mr. Dorr's record at CHS began back in 1949 when he came to the system as a physical education teacher. He earned $2,400 a year plus $400 for coaching. For the money, he served as coach of the three major boys sports — football, basketball and baseball.

He was the school system's athletic director for 25 years. During that time he instituted new sporting activities including soccer and golf.

There was a time when he hoped to make a career of professional sports. He was a three-sport star during his years at Scituate High and he played freshman football at B.U.

But that was 1942 and military service cut short his plans. A Marine veteran, he earned the Purple Heart for a leg wound sustained at Iwo Jima.

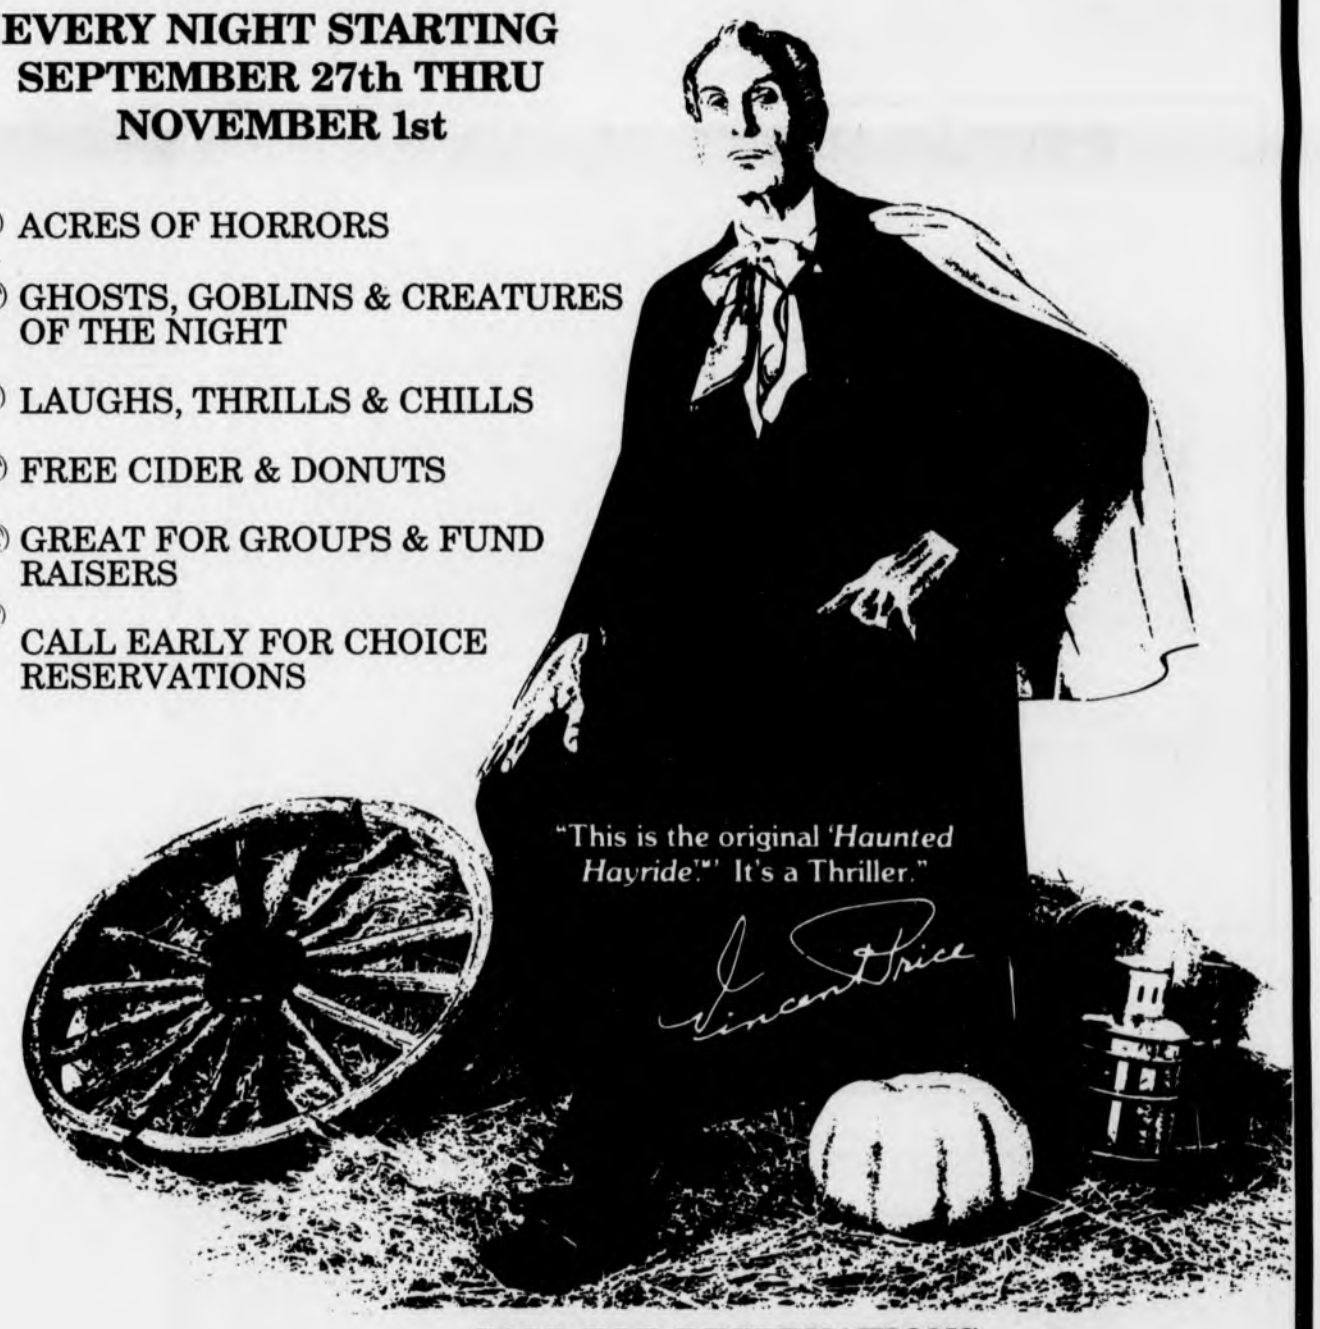
"Before the cancer hit me I was playing every day. But I haven't touched a stick in 12 weeks."

After the war, he returned to B.U. but his ability to run had been stolen. Still he played college sports, kicking the football well enough to rate the recognition of the Nelson Award.

These days Mr. Dorr still cares about sports — his sport is golf and his handicap is 7.

"Before the cancer hit me I was playing every day. But I haven't touched a stick in 12 weeks," the retired A.D. said.

Since his retirement in 1982, he and his wife have enjoyed time in Florida. They hope to get back to Florida later in the season. He still keeps track of the local sports scores. He fishes and golfs.



"I loved teaching," Mr. Dorr said. He taught in Cohasset for 33 years, beginning in 1949. The couple built a

New chairman brings a history of her own

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Special to the Mariner

Nan Roth's predecessors were KBG-sounding names: Gjesteby, Kasperowicz, Goedecke, Koed. Roth will be an easy name for residents to say and they won't need a course to learn how to spell it. Roth. Direct. To the point. So is the woman behind the name.

When former advisory chair Jane Goedecke tapped Nan Roth for the advisory committee Goedecke said, "It won't take up too much time," and assured Nan that in any case it wouldn't interfere with the birth of Sam in November, 1989. And she was right.

Goedecke may have given Nan the traditional advisory soft sell; Nan says while she has never regretted making the commitment to the advisory committee, she concedes she did have to make the time.

Nan's ancestor, John Quincy Adams, was President of the United States from 1825 through 1829. His vice president was John C. Calhoun. While Nan's not interested in talking in any depth about her family tree, she proffers that "The Glades" (The Adams' family Scituate retreat) was her summer home from the time she was born.

Her parents belonged to the Cohasset Yacht Club and she and her family, while they did not reside here, knew many Cohasset residents. The Roths presently have a little day sailer, and she and her husband are very interested in doing a lot more sailing.

The Roth family (five people, one dog) lives at 7 Highland Avenue...a one minute walk to town hall. Which is lucky, because both Nan and Dennis Roth are often at town hall.

Dennis is vice chairman of the government structure committee, and the very new principal of his own architectural company located at 50 South Street, Hingham (Roth & Seelen, Inc.) Interestingly, advisor Ann Whelan also has a husband (Jim) on the government structure committee.

The Roth children are: second grader Henry, age 7; and almost-5 John and almost-2 Sam. Almost-5 Shuku (the dog) is a sweetie of a black lab, who has gotten only one "ticket." Nan thinks she was not only walking around the Common, but "possibly stealing cookies from little children."

The 7 Highland Avenue home is an old home, which the Roth's are lovingly restoring. The kitchen and family room alcove is an architectural treat...perfectly combining old and new with a wide-open beamed ceiling, and a balcony above.

While Dennis did the work inside, Nan is proud of her quaint New England flower and vegetable garden outside, which this year produced "tomatoes, raspberries, six peas and seven beans."

Nan apologizes for the garden somewhat, explaining how she plans to expand her flowers in the front of her home in the future; but then Nan is growing so many these days...namely three little boys.

It is difficult to tell exactly how this woman, descended from a president, will organize the advisors this year. But we know she will be marshaled, quiet, well-respected by her committee and all who come before her committee.

"We will be examining all contracts this year and expiration dates, and we are collecting data on police and fire departments from like-sized communities," Nan says.

When I ask if Nan, a former teacher, will utilize time lines, Nan laughs: "Definitely - with six colors and an overhead projector!"

Asked if she might find herself running for political office in the future, she smiles sweetly, and points to two million legos on the family room floor.

Nan's personal resume is substantial. She is a former educational grant writer for the Massachusetts Department of Education, an assistant director of the Heller Graduate School Master's program at Brandeis University, and has served as a public school teacher and a private consultant.

Currently, she tutors students with reading problems.

Nan and Dennis can both walk to town hall, and so far they haven't found it necessary to hire a babysitter evenings.

Before she became chairman of the advisory committee and he became vice chairman of the government structure committee, one of them just stayed home when conflicts arose.

Nan said she was happy when Wayne Sawchuk was reappointed to the advisory committee. "While we have an excellent committee, Wayne is the only one who can look at a truck and other town equipment and know if it's necessary to replace it, or not.

When we spoke Sept. 30, Nan was preparing for her first town meeting as advisory chair. As you are reading this article, Nan has survived her first special town meeting and she and her committee probably did a darned good job.

The committee's next order of business is making liaison assignments to other town boards. It will be a quiet time for the advisory committee, which will meet only once a week until sometime in January. Unless all hell breaks loose.

to the article had attempted to rely on sympathy, intimidation and obfustication.

The planning board did not support the other two articles. The last of the series of articles was never discussed.

The vote on the zoning map change involving highway business was 130 in favor and 95 opposed.

CHL operates a 23-acre landfill off Route 3A. Barry is seeking state approval to increase the size of the operation by 27 acres and to change from a demolition landfill to a general refuse landfill.

Recycling and materials processing would be part of the expansion. Barry said that the state requires recycling and processing in connection with new permits.

If the attorney general approves the new definition, which merely adds the word landfill to a list, then Barry plans legal action.

On the question of the change in the zoning map, John McNabb of SAFE, Stop Any Further Expansion, said his group reduced the size of the area in question after discovering the limitations the change might entail for landowners.

The map would have affected 16 parcels. Of that 15 were owned by CHL, John or Paul Barry or one of their companies.

• We salute Tara P. Volungis this week, for her part in helping to preserve the environment on an island in Boston Harbor. Tara participated in this program through the Boston University Community Service Center's First Year Students Outreach Program, and spent a week doing so. Let's hope that she learned lots, so that she can help everything and everyone else in and around water.

• Saturday, Sept. 28, was Linda Coyle's birthday. To celebrate, nine couples joined Linda and husband Jerry for the weekend at the Woodstock Inn in Vermont. Included in the group was her sister Roberta, her husband Paul Mehegan, stepson Jim and wife Sue Woodyard. They came all the way from California. The Cohasset partiers were Joe and Barbara Manfriedi, Jim and Claudia Story, Sue and Jack Brister and Rich and Florrie Redick. Friends from Hingham were Pam and Brad Warner and Peggy and Michael Weymouth. Scituate was represented by John and Jean Murphy. After golf, tennis, foliage peeping and shopping on Saturday, cocktails and dinner were served at the Inn. The birthday party had it all, including home-made party hats, a baby photo contest, dancing and an original custom birthday song written by Jerry Coyle just for Linda. Everyone present thanks Linda and Jerry for celebrating with them. They say it was a birthday party that none will ever forget.

• The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is hosting a special event on Oct. 15. They are having as guests the principals of all three Cohasset schools, as well as a group of student representatives. The school committee members will also be in attendance to answer questions not fielded by their colleagues. Join them at 7:30 p.m. for refreshments and conversation and at 8 p.m. for the annual School Forum program, held at the South Shore Art Center. Questions from the floor will be both allowed and encouraged. Everyone is welcome.

• The Chamber of Commerce is sending their Care Packages off to college students now, and here's one story about how well they have been received. Allie Redfield was one of the first-year recipients of the Chamber of Commerce "Little Piece of Home" packages. Her mother told the Chamber that "Allie's friends just couldn't believe that her town cared so much about its students." Well, this year Allie's sister Sophie will be getting her package, and we know that both she and her friends will be just as thrilled. Again, hats off to the Chamber for the grand idea and for pleasing so many students away from home.

• Had a note from Terry Kahn this week. He had great news for all you lacrosse lovers. There was a clinic at the Deer Hill School recently, and 60 kids showed up for the two-hour session, most of them in grades 5 to 8. They were lucky enough to have one of the greatest players in lacrosse, Roddy Marino, who now works for the Brine equipment company – on hand to help them. Marino was a member of the All-World team last year, and captained the USA team that won the world's championship in Australia. The Cohasset kids (there were even a few from Hingham) loved him. As most know, it's hard enough for an established high school sport to thrive in these times. That lacrosse, which didn't exist here three years ago, is doing so well is a real testament to the enthusiasm and support Cohasset – the town and the school – has given.

• Speaking of sports, this weekend is loaded with them...it's homecoming weekend and the Boys' Soccer Team kicks things off at 9:30 a.m. with two games. Football takes the spotlight at noon, with the homecoming festivities starting in earnest then, capped off at halftime with the crowning of the queen and king. Finally, the most successful girls' soccer team in CHS history, takes the field at 2:30 p.m. The Gridiron Club will be there to do the cooking, so plan on eating lunch at the field with reasonable prices and good food. Support all of our teams, they have worked hard all fall and cannot wait to show their prowess to you...be there.

• The following Saturday, Oct. 19, there will be a special tribute to honor Evie Dorr, teacher and Athletic Director at CHS from 1949-1982. It will mean a lot to Evie to have all of his former students and players there, as well as their parents, so plan on it.

• That's the news for this week. Please let me know what is new with your family.

The Cohasset Council on Aging recently received a lovely "Thank You" note from Joyce Studley, Administrative Secretary, Cohasset Town Hall, thanking all the volunteers who recently prepared the Town Warrant for mailing. Job well done!

UPCOMING EVENTS

October 12, Saturday: Pipe Organ Pops at Babson College in Wellesley. Ron Rhode, the featured organist, has had countless appearances the world over. He was selected to perform for Pope John Paul when he visited the United States a few years ago. Ron will be performing at the Richard Knight Auditorium. The bus will leave the Senior Center at 7 p.m. and will return to Cohasset at approximately 11 p.m. There are just a few seats available.

October 15, Tuesday: Our regular Tuesday Luncheon. The menu of the day will be veal parmesan, spaghetti, salad, bread and chocolate cake for dessert. Christine Murphy, a member of the staff at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home, will speak. One of the topics she will discuss is the recent cuts and how it effects the Cohasset Knoll. In addition, she will tell us about the opportunities available for volunteers and how important volunteers are to the Knoll.

October 22, Tuesday: Our regular Tuesday Luncheon. Patricia Carleton, L.I.C.S.W., recently appointed to the Social Service League of Cohasset, will be our guest speaker. She will acquaint us with the various services available through the Social Service League. She is looking forward to sharing this information with us and is anxious to meet everyone. The menu for this day will be meat loaf, rice, vegetables and dessert.

October 29, Tuesday: Our Annual Halloween Party. Feel like dressing in costume? There will be prizes for those who choose to do so. Menu — open roast beef sandwich, salad, dessert.

October 31, Thursday: Trip to Captain Robert Bennet Forbes House, (please note the change in date — this trip was originally scheduled for Thursday, October 17). Be sure to bring a "brown bag" lunch. The Forbes, a Victorian House Museum overlooking the Neponset River and Dorchester Bay, was originally built in 1833. It commemorates Captain Forbes as Sea Captain, China Trade Merchant, Philanthropist and Patriot. We will have the opportunity to see the elegant dining table, set with porcelain from China; The Scottish paintings in the Library with velvet walls, the Chinese Parlor, Tin Tub, and a Chinese Wash Basin. In addition, we will view the basement kitchen with an 1885 coal stove; the Servant's Bell System; an old fashioned ice box; and a long handled waffle iron. We will then view the replica of the log cabin in which Abraham Lincoln

A newspaper primer

Question: What is a newspaper?

Okay, it is a trick question. There is more than one correct answer to it.

Yes, a newspaper is what you have in your hand right now. Obviously it is composed of paper, print, news articles, feature articles, ads, editorials, commentaries, photos, and listings like bulletin boards, around town, police log and legal postings.

It is also an organization that is comprised of reporters, editors, layout artists, photographers, advertising representatives, pre-press and press people and of course a publisher.

These are the apparent answers. Next come the less obvious. These concern purposes and content. The intent of any good newspaper is to inform its readers accurately and timely about the events of day-to-day life.

The focus may vary. Since the Mariner is a local weekly its focus is necessarily more provincial than a large daily. It's what our readers want and expect. It's what we intend to deliver.

Newspapers provide a public service but they are not a public service. What the heck does that mean?

Newspapers in this country participate in two great freedoms—the free press and free enterprise.

That's right...newspapers are a business. The size of a paper is determined by the amount of advertising it generates. The more ads, the more pages, the more information. Simple.

Many people do not understand this principle of a newspaper's life. They wonder why not everything sent to the editor, whether letters or announcements, makes it into each issue?

Primarily it is a question of space. The laws of physics (at least on this planet) are rigid. Only so much can fit into a finite space.

Editors try to conscientiously distribute the space among equally important entities. Please bear in mind that the list of priorities runs: paid advertising, news stories, features, editorials, all else.

Be assured, that here at the Mariner everything that passes the editor's desk is read. It is placed by the editor's best judgment within the constraints of space and the requirements of deadline (the essential nemesis of all publications).

The editors try to give everyone an opportunity to place their announcements, so week to week hard choices must be made.

Then too, our editors are human and the occasional mistake is made. We try to rectify these as soon as possible and appreciate your understanding.

We welcome your input and letters they are an important source for the public service this business is trying to provide.

—Richard Small
South Look editor

'Bob' beats Eastern on its home turf

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner Film Critic

In the Sept. 23 film, Cable Bob zoomed in on Selectperson Rocco Laugelle's chest - which claimed Eastern Edison's "victory" over Bob the hurricane.

Ever since "Bob," Tinytown Selectpersons (with the exception of Rocco) have been disputing Eastern's victory and Rocco's claim of victory (Laugelle is Eastern's foreman in the area).

For the past many meetings, selectpersons' eyes glaze as Laugelle attempts to tell them how electricity is created, which he thinks will somehow prove Edison did a good job.

As if shouting at Tinytown selectpersons will make them understand better...he speaks louder and louder...until he is quite the loudest thing in the room and the television audience wants to turn down the volume while he is talking.

In the Sept. 23 film, "Mr. Electricity" delivered two long soliloquies about how electricity is made. At that point Selectperson Diana Kornet, who had quite enough (and we couldn't agree more) and who had a very young babysitter at her house and it was already 10:30 p.m. and she still had an executive session to go through, said:

"But why are you telling me this?"

Why, indeed. And goodness gracious,why so loud?

Wigmore Pierson's Oct. 3 show with chairmen of selectmen from six towns was very informative.

Hingham Selectmen Chairman Edward Lewiecki and Hull Vice Chairman Larry Chirillo, whose towns have municipal light plants, said every homeowner, with very few exceptions was back on line the same day of the storm.

Alternatively, Tinytown, which utilizes specially-made electricity from Eastern Edison, was out for 54 hours plus. Now, the question is, how was the hurricane in Hull and Hingham different than the one in Tinytown? Maybe Hull and Hingham were hit by Hurricane Bill, a kinder hurricane.

One selectman on Pierson's show said his municipal workers were clearing debris and identifying downed wires immediately after the storm, while Eastern Edison workers didn't start looking at the situation until the morning after. Eastern Edison workers don't do overtime, and they don't work nights.

Looks like a don't-give-a-damn lazy utility to me.

Here's another Eastern Edison story.

Last Christmas, five days before the big event, the Kasperowicz's hot water heater blew. The Kasperowiczs lease their hot water heater from Eastern Edison. They depend on their hot water for hot water.

Well, Eastern Edison said it was going to take about 10 days from the time of their call for a new hot water heater to be installed. This was mainly because they called at a really bad time...24 hours before a weekend, then Monday was right before Christmas...and of course it was a short week because of New Year's Eve, and union people certainly are entitled to their vacations.

"Maybe," a customer service person said. "Maybe," they might squeeze a new heater in, they told Mrs. K., who expected five relatives for Christmas.

The first (emergency crew) guy said what the K's knew: "Yep, sure looks like the boiler is rusted out." He was part of a triage decision-making team, we learned. He was sent to ascertain there was a problem. Hell, the K's knew there was a problem...there was water all over the basement.

The second guy (who arrived 36 hours later) looked at the boiler and said the same thing, but he had to refer the matter to a third person, an investigator/orderer who was the only one who could place an order for a new heater.

The bottom line was 10 days - during the Christmas season, with guests on the way. Ten thousand guests and no hot water for showers. The K's called Dan Leahy, who was then managing Kimball's-by-the-Sea, and he said not to worry, that if all else failed, Kimball's would supply the K'S hot water needs. The guests could wrap towels around themselves and walk down Summer Street...a mere two minute walk.

But that wasn't necessary. After Mrs. K. screamed bloody murder, the Kasperowiczs had a new hot water heater the day before Christmas.

Plumber Larry Mitchell said:

"I could have installed a hot water heater within 24 hours." And the K's have resolved that the next time the hot water heater rusts out they will call Larry.

So much for the Eastern Edison utility.

Alas. Miss Hibiscus had to come inside.

"It's much too soon, you know there is never any frost until the end of October," she said.

"You're right," I told her. "But you are so beautiful that I live in fear that anything would ever harm you."

"Well, I survived white fly, didn't I?"

"Yes, but white fly isn't injurious. Frost does permanent damage."

The blossoms are fewer now. Many leaves yellow, all at once...the Hisbicus tree which once held 120 blossoms easily...now holds half that number.

If the absence of sunlight is doing this to her, what's it doing to Tinytown selectpersons?

"I am going to miss the sun," I tell her.

"Not half as much as you are going to miss me."

chamber chatter

By Paula Knowles

Did you ever wonder just exactly what is in those student packages? You know, the "Little Piece of Home" packages you hear about every year at this time? Well, now you can find out for yourself. One of the packages will be on display and available for your perusal at the South Shore Art Center this next Wednesday night, Oct. 15, during our annual School Forum. So while you are finding out what the younger children are getting from our schools (like how to use words like "perusal"), you can also find out what the older children are getting from the Chamber. Not bad for a free night out.

And speaking of free nights out ...the Annual Chamber of Commerce Auction, scheduled for Nov. 16, is returning to the Community Center this year and bringing back its famous FREE franks 'n beans dinner. Advance word on a few of the gifts coming in says we have great things to look forward to ...like more of Ernie Grassey's fabulous baseball card collection.;10,000 baseball cards and rumor has it that at least one of the lots will be comprised entirely of past Red Sox players. From the Music Circus come life-size posters of Kenny Rodgers and Harry Belafonte – the very ones used for display this year...and from Bill Higgins of Harbor Mechanical Contractors, a beautiful antique drop-leaf table. So mark it on your calendar now, Nov. 16, Chamber Auction. Why not reserve a table or two? Just call us at 383-1010, leave your name and the number of tables you want to reserve. We'll do the rest.

Also on Tap:

Keep Nov. 15 (the day before the Auction) in your mind. That will be the day you will all have a chance to tell us who you think should be our "Person of the Year" for 1991. We are changing the scope of the award, as well as the voting procedure, and we know that the changes will be well-received. Watch the Mariner for the formal announcement and actual rules and procedures. But start thinking now about who YOU think should be Cohasset's " Person of the Year." And plan to join us in February (it's not as far off as it sounds, folks) to honor our final choice.

And one last word about something that has nothing to do with business or the Chamber of Commerce. This Saturday is Cohasset High School Homecoming, and the athletic department has gone all out to schedule something for everyone. Boys' soccer, football, and girls' soccer teams will all be playing at home that day. The boys' soccer team has a new coach, the football team has a quarterback who can throw 40-yard-passes, and the girls' soccer team (7-1-2) is on its way to the State Tournament. This is the perfect day for every parent, neighbor and sports fan to give our kids some support. They play their hearts out day after day...how about cheering them on this Homecoming Day? If you can't find the starting times in today's Mariner, just pick up the phone and call the high school. They'll be glad to give you the schedule .

Cohasset Common was lovely last summer during the filming of 'Housesitter'. This week the crew was back.

Special museum tour

Saturday, Oct. 12 at 2:30 p.m. the Cohasset Historical Society and Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a tour of the Historical Society's two museum buildings at Cohasset Center, the Capt. John Wilson House and the Maritime Museum. The tour will meet at the Maritime Museum on Elm Street. Donations for this special tour will be accepted at the door.

The Capt. John Wilson House, built in 1810, was the home of a Cohasset seafarer and then remained in the Wilson family until 1912 when it was purchased by Cohasset businessman William Hamilton McGaw. In 1936 McGaw gave the house to the Historical Society in memory of his wife Priscilla Lothrop Collier, and it became Cohasset's first historical museum. Today the Wilson House contains a collection of household artifacts from early Cohasset homes including children's toys, furniture, kitchenware, and antique costumes. Artworks of local historical significance grace the walls of the house.

The Maritime Museum, dating from the latter 18th century, originally was the ship chandlery for the Bates family schooner fishing fleet. One of the few buildings remaining from Cohasset's seafaring and fishing industry, it was given to the Historical Society in 1955 by Mr. and Mrs. William Cox and moved to its present site from the Cove. The Maritime Museum contains numerous collections relating to the "Age of Sail" of a New England fishing village, as well as a general collection of historical artifacts from old Cohasset. Ship models, carvings, relics from shipwrecks, 19th century fishing gear, lifesaving memorabilia, old tools, stone artifacts of the Quonahasset Indians and numerous other items of historical interest can be seen at the Society's Maritime Museum. Call the Recreation Office to register for this tour at 383-6791.

Rep. Murray on the 'Homestead'

"You may he able to protect some of the equity of your Massachusetts home or mobile home used as your principal residence from future claims of creditors by filing a Declaration of Homestead. The Elderly and Disabled Person's Homestead allows you to protect up to $200,000 of value in your home if you are age 62 or older or if you are an adult with a qualifying permanent disability. If you are not eligible for the Elderly and Disabled Person's Homestead, you may be able to protect up to $100,000 in your home through the so-called regular Homestead. However, this discussion will focus on the Elderly and Disabled Person's Homestead," Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said.

To be eligible for the Elderly or Disabled Person's Homestead protection, you must:

• have an ownership interest in real property or a mobile home in Massachusetts,

• occupy or intend to occupy this property as your principal residence,

• be age 62 or older or qualify as a "disabled person," and

• file a Declaration of Homestead, as described below.

A "disabled person" is defined as an individual with a medically determinable permanent physical or mental impairment which meets the disability requirements of the S. S. I. Program.

If more than one eligible person has an ownership interest in the property, each may file a Declaration of Homestead, individually or jointly, to protect his or her share up to $200,000.

Homestead protection can be useful if you are sued as a result of an auto accident, business debts, a loan guarantee gone bad or other misfortune. A properly filed and recorded Elderly or Disabled Person's Homestead will protect up to $200,000 in value in your homestead property against attachment, seizure or execution of judgement by your creditors. The amount of protection was raised from $150,000 to $200,000 on Nov. 1, 1989. If you filed for an Elderly or Disabled Person's Homestead before that date, you do not have to file again for the higher amount. The law provides that you have the benefit for the higher amount. In April of 1991, an amendment of the law became effective lowering the age from 65 to 62 and adding mobile home protection.

"Where two or more eligible persons have filed a Declaration of Homestead in a single property, the amount of protection is multiplied. Thus, an eligible husband and wife, for example, could protect up to $400,000 of the value of their home from creditors," Rep. Murray said.

The following kinds of debts and obligations are not protected by the Homestead:

• federal, state and local taxes, assessments, claims and liens,

• 1st and 2nd mortgages,

• preexisting debts, encumbrances or contracts,

• court-ordered child and spousal support,

• ground rent obligations where the Homestead covers the building but not the underlying land.

If you are planning to refinance or borrow against your home or seek credit, you may wish to consult an attorney before filing for Homestead protection.

If you are under age 62, you may wish to consult an attorney about filing a regular Homestead instead of the Elder and Disabled Person's Homestead.

To obtain the Homestead protection, you must:

1. If filing on a home used as a principal residence –

• File a Declaration of Homestead at the Registry of Governor or shill man?

To the Editor:

Making good on campaign promises is difficult at best, but Governor William Weld is finding it near impossible to deliver on his commitment to "downsize" the state workforce. While the Governor bemoans the absence of an early retirement plan and threatens massive layoffs to reach his reduction goal of 7,500 positions, actually neither is needed.

Appearing before the Legislature's Public Service Committee last week, Secretary of Administration and Finance Peter Nessen admitted that the Administration must reduce the payroll by only 1,338 positions before June 30 to balance the current state budget. He also acknowledged that the Administration wants to accomplish a further reduction of 2,417 positions within the next nine months to meet the policy goal of 7,500. Meanwhile, numbers furnished to the Public Service Committee show that the Administration has demonstrated very little hiring discipline during the past nine months. In fact, since January, more new people have been hired than have been laid off!! These latest figures show that while everybody else in government was fixated on ratcheting down state spending to stop the fiscal freefall, the Weld Administration was engaged in a quiet effort to employ over 3,000 people. At that same legislative hearing, Mr. Nessen admitted that he wants to relinquish his approval authority for all hiring, effectively lifting a three-year freeze. What is most curious about the revelations is that normal turnover in the state workforce will see more than 13,000 people voluntarily leave public service this year. A selective, targeted replacement policy can achieve the Administration's goal for the total reduction without an early retirement program and without layoffs.

But clearly, the Weld Administration has no intention of honoring the promise to downsize the payroll. It would appear that they are quite intent upon continuing the patronage grab of these recent months and blaming their own shortcomings on someone else! Why lay off 1,700 workers only to hire 3,000 new ones? Why retire over 5,000 experienced career employees only to hire countless others? The simple truth is that normal attrition coupled with strong, disciplined management can reduce the state workforce calmly and painlessly. Selective replacement of vacant positions seems to be a more compassionate approach to trimming the state payroll. The Governor should exercise a little more self-control and stop the cruel threats of layoff to the public employees of the Commonwealth who have borne the brunt of his deficit reduction plan.

In the film, Martin plays a Boston architect who has designed and built a house for his girlfriend, Becky (Dana Delany).

Hawn plays a bubbly, yet charming, Boston waitress who lends a willing ear when Martin laments about his girlfriend's rejection of the house.

During their first meeting in a Hungarian restaurant, Martin tells Hawn of his intended but rejected gift.

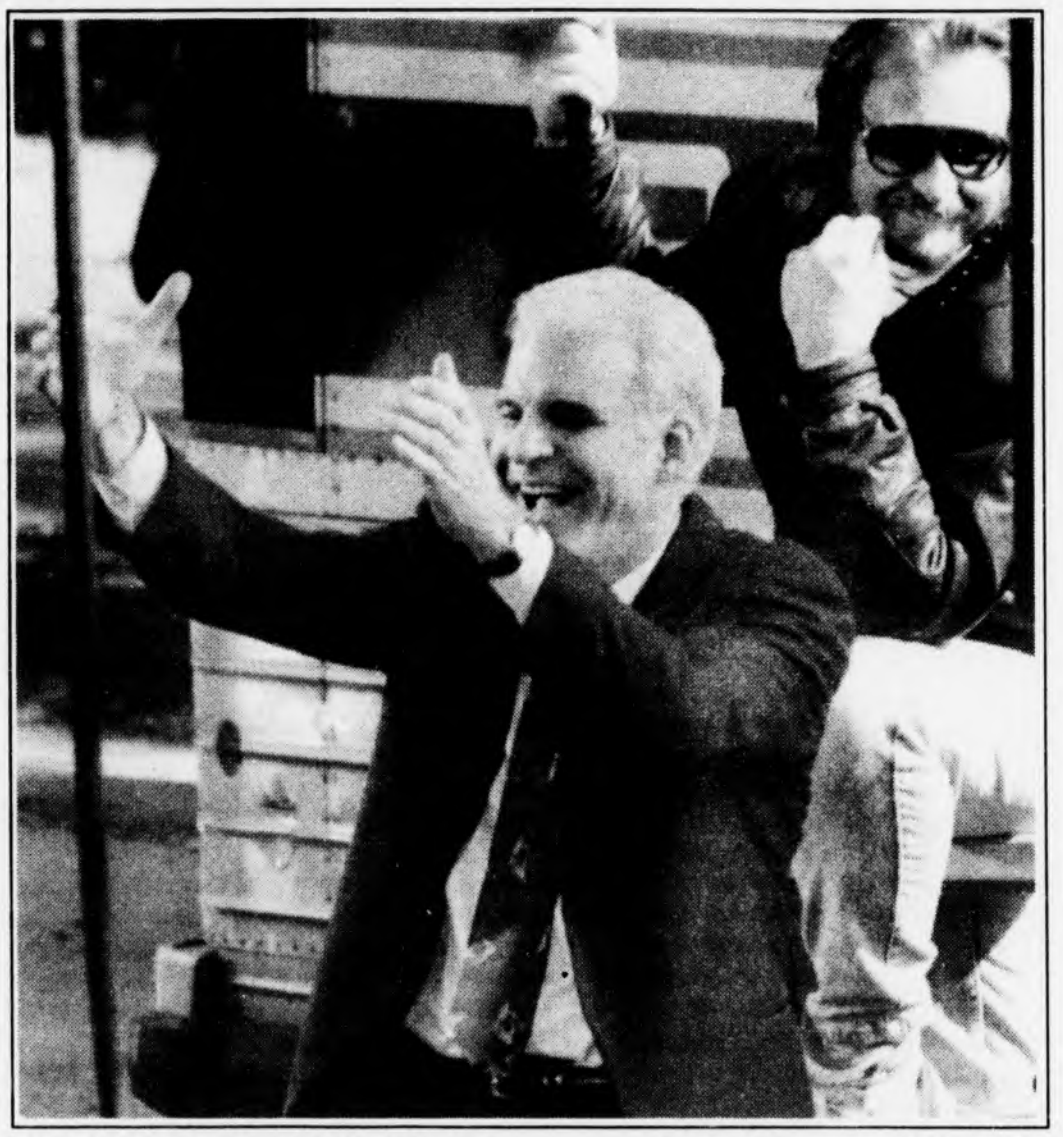
Intrigued by thoughts of the now empty house, Hawn moves in on the QT. Then the wackiness begins.

Developed by Brian Grazier and filmed in Massachusetts, the $20 million movie splices scenes shot in Boston, Concord and Cohasset together to create the on-screen illusion of "Dobbs Mill."

Unlike his last visit to Cohasset, this time Director Frank Oz didn't camouflage store fronts with signs and window decorations. Instead, he stayed within the confines of Cohasset Common, using a charter bus and red Mustang convertible as the set.

Aside from several retakes due to low flying planes and car backfires, the afternoon was a raging success.

"Since we've been here," said the film's Executive Producer Bernie Williams, "we've filmed all of our exteriors in sunlight, just before the winter stripped all of the trees bare."



"We're leaving Cohasset with a genuinely good feeling."

The only real inconvenience, according to Williams, was Concord's rapid foliage change.

"Since Concord is a coastal town farther north, its foliage is changing quicker than Cohasset's."

This posed a problem for producers, since they had to make shots filmed in Cohasset and Concord look like they are one in the same.

With three and a half weeks left of shooting in Concord, producers were concerned that they would lose the foliage all together.

Since the film takes place over a period of four weeks, the film's backdrop had to show an even progression from late summer to early fall.

So, during their two-day shooting stint, the actors weren't the only ones being made up. Surrounding area trees got their share of "make-up" to produce a more true-to-life-looking change of season.

Trees were sprayed with a non-toxic vegetable/protein paint to add yellow and orange pigment to the already fall-glazed trees, said location manager Mike Williams.

Crew members worked feverishly, high atop scaffolding, to help Cohasset trees catch up to Concord's rapid foliage rate.

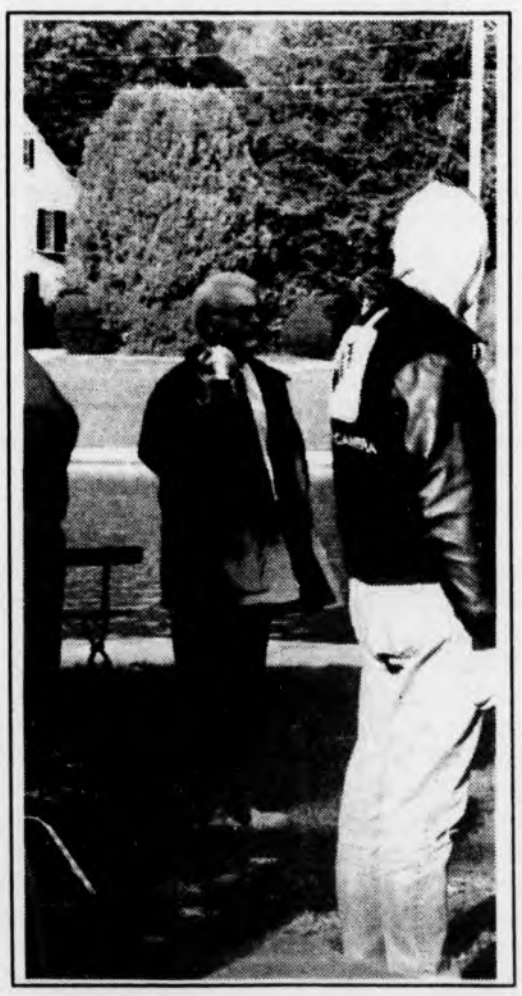
"Because I'm blessed with a wonderful group of people to work with," said Williams, "the success of this project will represent a good role model for Hollywood to follow."

Thanks to the cooperation of the Cohasset citizenry, boasted Williams, "we haven't wasted an ounce of time."

On hand as extras were many locals hired by the film's production company, Image Films of Universal Studios.

Matthew Salloway of Braintree, an eighth-grader at Thayer Academy, made a brief on-camera appearance as a passerby.

Salloway told the Mariner of Martin's serious side that is not often seen on film.



"He's a nice man," said Salloway, "but he's very serious when he's off-screen."

After their final few weeks of filming in Concord, cast and crew will pack it in and await the film's release, slated for summer '92.

Appeals court backs sewer commission

Manuel Salvador's multi-million dollar suit against the sewer commission may well be finished.

Sept. 30 a three-judge panel ruled in favor of the town, backing up a Norfolk County Superior Court ruling.

Five years ago Salvador was let go by the town after 16 years employment. At the time, the sewer commission chose to go with a private company to run the sewer plant.

Salvador filed suit against the town and members of the sewer commission.

"On December 22, 1986, the first day of the plaintiff's (Salvador's) scheduled two-week vacation, the operator of the plant then on duty" gave notice he was quitting.

"Subsequent events resulted in commissioners (Edward) Guild and (Gary) Vanderweil (commissioner Charles DeSantis was out-of-town) holding an emergency meeting that evening and voting to contract operation of the plant to an outside consultant, York Water Consultants until Jan. 6, 1987." That was the date Salvador was to return.

During that two weeks, the sewer commissioners voted to suspend Salvador with pay until Jan. 27, stating that a disciplinary hearing would be held.

Salvador suffered a heart attack on Jan. 19 and was hospitalized. The hearing was postponed indefinitely.

In April that year, the commissionera obtained town meeting approval to contract with York. In a letter dated May 18, the commission notified Salvador his employment was being terminated for "economic reasons."

Salvador's suit alleged a breach of an implied covenant.

The ruling upheld the lower court's decision that the town and the sewer commission could not be accused of interfering with Salvador's contract — since they were the contracting agency.

The court said only malice of the individual commissioners would be considered as grounds for a successful suit.

The decision said the town proved that the original contract with York "was initiated in reaction" to Salvador's unavailability and continued for reasons of efficiency and economy.

Salvador has until the end of the month to file an appeal, should he choose to take the case to the state Supreme Judicial Court. Issues of law are the only allowable grounds for an appeal.

Rec. Commission continues renovations

The Cohasset Recreation Commission, through interdepartmental cooperation, volunteer efforts and private funding sources, continues restorative work at the Beechwood Field playground.

Through the efforts of the highway department, see-saws and the merry-go-round at the Beechwood playground have been removed for repair and upgrading of equipment and apparatus.

Essential to proper function and operation of the merry-go-round, are two sets of steel bearings, which must be replaced. With new bearings, hardware and a coat of paint it is anticipated that the merry-go-round will again be fully operational and be put back into, what will be, its third decade of service to residents, in the near future.

The recreation commissioners continue discussions about the disposition of the see-saws. The status of the see-saws will be contingent upon the availability of obtaining safer see-saw "planks" than the heavy, wooden planks that have just been removed.

See-saws are responsible for numerous playground injuries each year and the commissioners want to insure the safest possible materials are employed, prior to making the see-saws operational again.

Phase 2 work at Beechwood playground will include purchase of new equipment, by the accrued interest in the Beechwood Improvement Association Fund. Equipment will be selected for age-appropriation for young children as revenue permits.

During August, the Osgood and Beechwood basketball areas received great attention from Harold W. Litchfield, highway superintendent and his men and equipment.

Donating his time, Arnie Reppucci, varsity basketball coach, put the final touches on the basketball courts, by painting stenciled keys and foul lines, to give players better references to position.

Revitalization is an on-going commitment.

Soon, attention will expand to include the Miliken Field tennis courts and playground and Elm's Meadow lighted, skating area. In all, the ultimate goal is to maintain and upgrade a number of heavily utilized recreational areas via interdepartmental coordination — cooperation, volunteer efforts and private funding sources.

New system at C.H.S.

At Cohasset Junior/Senior High students and faculty now use a new magazine reference system especially designed for their research needs. Called TOM™, the reference system provides an index on compact disc to over 120 magazines, most frequently used in conjunction with secondary school curricula, and the full text on microfiche of all the articles to over half of those same publications. TOM was designed and developed by Information Access Company of Foster City, California, publisher of the MAGAZINE INDEX™ and other well-known reference products.

Now students and faculty won't have to pore through volumes of paper indexes to find articles relevant to their research. In one file, all interfiled, are subjects and personal names, from 1980 to the present, relating to all the articles within those 120 plus magazines. All students or teachers need to do is look for the subject, person's name, author, book, film, or event they're interested in on the CD-ROM index. The TOM index uses Library of Congress subject headings (a set of standard research terms) supplemented by natural language words and phrases designed to mirror the searcher's natural thought process. Each reference provides a complete bibliographic citation which includes the article's title, name of magazine, issue date, starting page number, length of article, and author's name. If the article is a review of a literary work, entertainment event, or product, the citation will contain a review rating of "A-F" to denote the critic's opinion.

When searchers see a special code at the end of the bibliographic citation they know they can immediately get the complete article because it is part of the full text side of the TOM system. Every one of the 60 plus magazines is filmed cover-to-cover and provided as part of the library's subscription to TOM. Now research can be a one-step process — from the index citation directly to the complete article.

Each month during the school year, a new disc comes to the library which includes a new month's worth of data interfiled with all previous data. And each month the library also receives an update to their full text materials. TOM is the only reference product to deliver updates to the index and the full text simultaneously.

In addition to providing a comprehensive and easy-to-use periodical reference system, a TOM subscription also includes HOT TOPICS. Each month HOT TOPICS highlights the latest stories on people, places, and current events.

To see and use TOM come to the Cohasset Jr/Sr. High School Library or contact librarian, Susan McFadd, at 383-6100, ext. 33. One further postscript — If anyone in the Cohasset Community needs information, or is simply looking for a "good read" (particularly if the public library is not open), I would urge you to feel free to make use of the high school library during school hours to 3 p.m.

Meet the principals

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will host its annual School Forum on Wednesday evening, Oct. 15 at the South Shore Art Center at 119 Ripley Road. This year's program will be a bit different than other years in that the main guests will be not the School Committee, but the Principals and student representatives of all three schools. The Chamber invites all parents, students and interested taxpayers to attend this program and find out first hand how your tax dollars are being spent, and how we can lend a hand during these hard economic times. Refreshments will be served at 7:30 p.m., and the program will begin at 8 p.m. Everyone is welcome. For further information call the Chamber at 383-1010.

Gardeners of Cohasset

Members of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet on Tuesday, Oct. 15 at 1 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Lynn Eisenhauer with Mrs. Helen Goodwin assisting as co-hostess.

The program will be a presentation by Robert Wagner of Birds Unlimited, Hanover.

Sixty Plus meets

Cohasset Sixty Plus Club meets Thursday, Oct. 17 at the Unitarian Parish House.

Blood pressure will be taken at 11:30 a.m. with the Social Service League nurse. Sandwich lunch at noon. Bring a prize to be used at the Bingo game. Donation is $1.

Antique show and sale

Saturday, Nov. 2, the 15th Annual Antique Show and Sale will be held at Deer Hill School, 208 Sohier Street, Cohasset from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. sponsored by the Beechwood Congregational Church.

Dealers from the South Shore and Cape Cod will be there to display and sell antiques such as furniture, glass, books, linens, dolls, Victorian, antique prints, primitives, and much more.

Admission to the show is $2. Discount tickets are available from the dealers, Cheryl Kristiansen, Chairwoman (383-0070), or with the newspaper ad.

A public snack bar is available featuring hot dogs, sandwiches, soup, coffee, tea, cold drinks, and desserts.

Landscape design program

The recreation department is accepting telephone registrations for a four-week Landscape Design Course, taught by Greg Bilowz, Landscape and Environmental Design architect.

The program is scheduled to begin on Wednesday, Nov. 13, at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset High School. It will meet weekly until Wednesday, Dec. 11. The fee is $32 per person and class must be limited in size. To register please call the office at 383-6791.

The course contents includes:

Lombardi debates Grossman

On Thursday, Oct. 10, Wigmore Pierson's guests on Pierson to Person will be Democratic State Committee Chairman Steven Grossman and Republican State Committee Chairman Leon Lombardi who will discuss contemporary political issues in the State of Massachusetts.

The Pierson to Person television show is broadcast live each Thursday, 8 to 9 p.m., from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hanover, Hingham, Hull, and Norwell; on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset and Scituate.

Those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m.

For further information about upcoming guests and additional show information contact the Pierson Show's Executive Producer, Robert Belliveau at 545-0643.

Cable lessons

Continental Cablevision's local programming department here on the South Shore is offering a set of evening news production workshops at three area studios.

The workshop will cover the basics of broadcast reporting and videotape shooting techniques, as well as an overview of how a television newscast is put together.

Students who undertake this specialized training will contribute field reports and features for Newsbeat 53, the local newscast viewed every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evening at 7:30 p.m. in the towns of Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate.

Newsbeat 53 was recently one of only three nominees as Best Professionally Produced Cable Newscast in Massachusetts in a contest sponsored by the state Cable Commission. Newsbeat is the only one of the three which has a reporting staff and crew made up primarily of community volunteers.

"We're very proud of our newscast, not only because it is technically a good-looking show, but also because our reporters, photographers and newswriters can all present a story that's concise and informative," says producer Bill McColgan.

Volunteer staffers on Newsbeat 53 range from retired-businessmen-turned-local-reporters, to people looking for a technical challenge, to young aspiring media professionals.

The news production workshop will offer tips on scripting, on conducting interviews, and on compiling a half-hour newscast, all performed the way the pros do it.

Continental's News Production Workshops will be offered on the last three Tuesday nights in October: Tuesday, Oct. 15 at 7:30 p.m. in the Norwell studio; Tuesday, Oct. 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the Hull studio; and Tuesday, Oct. 29 at 7:30 p.m. in the Scituate studio.

For more information, or to reserve a spot, call Wendy Larrabee at 659-0502, extension 124, or Bill McColgan at 925-9474.

Author at Buttonwood

Elizabeth Mehren, who is a Hingham resident and East Coast correspondent for the Los Angeles Times, will be at Buttonwood Books and Toys on Wednesday, Oct. 16, at 7:30 p.m. to sign her new book, "Born Too Soon".

Mehren will read from and discuss her book, "Born Too Soon", (Doubleday), which is the moving account of the brief life of Mehren's premature baby daughter Emily.

Mehren's book has great value for those who have shared with her the loss of an awaited child, and for those who seek to understand the nature of this early bereavement. Parents who have suffered neonatal loss will find support in her story. This evening she will tell of the day-to-day stresses faced by the involved family, and what it is like to be in the neonatal intensive care unit.

For further information, call Buttonwood Books and Toys at 383-BOOK.

Party at Buttonwood

Dressing up is fun at any age. It will be especially fun for children when Mary Lewis, California designer and owner of Small Miracles, visits Buttonwood Books and Toys, Sunday, Oct. 13, at 1 p.m.

Lewis has a trunk full of costumes and accessories. She will help a couple of youngsters put together a complete ensemble, and then everyone will have the opportunity to be creative. Buttonwood Books and Toys will stage a costume parade, and prizes will be given out.

For an hour of fun and fantasy, please call Buttonwood Books and Toys at 383-BOOK to reserve your place. Space is limited.

Smooth sailing for lady skippers

By Michael Farley
Mariner correspondent

Ask the Cohasset girl's varsity soccer team how they're doing this year? Well, just fine thank you. After losing to Abington in the third game of the 1991 campaign, Cohasset has played seven consecutive contests without a blemish, including two games this past week against Rockland and Norwell. Last Wednesday, the Skippers silenced the Bulldogs at home by shutting out their South Shore League rival, 2-0. The first goal, and eventual game winner, came with about 10 minutes left to play as freshman Meghan Rhodes connected with senior Jen Reidy. Then just four minutes later, junior midfielder Kathleen O'Brien took advantage of a Reidy assist on an indirect kick. That made the score 2-0. Cohasset would manage to hold onto its lead and walk off with the victory. "I'm very pleased with our performance against Rockland," remarked coach Ken Startzel.

"Rockland doesn't have the skill they've had in the past, but we're adjusting to the competition while staying within our game," he added. Which means? "Well, we play a control passing game requiring a lot of movement away from the ball. It's been successful, which is a credit to the kids," he noted. Some of the success, however, might have weighed on the team in its upcoming match against the Clippers of Norwell. In the first half, freshman Erin Murphy found her favorite target in Jen Reidy. Erin stole the ball then looked up to find Reidy in front of the goal. With 10 minutes left in the half, Reidy made it count and put her team up 1-0. But, sometimes success breeds boredom, which may have been the case in the second half.

"I tried to warn them during the half," Startzel commented, speaking of his team's somewhat lackluster play in the second half. What he had warned them about was letting the Clippers back into the game. Fear soon became reality. Twenty minutes into the half, Norwell tied it up.

The coach reacted calmly, responding by saying that "the team had gone six games without a loss. They laid back a little, but I think it woke the kids up as they came on to play tough for the remainder of the game."

The girls get a shot at redemption today against Abington at home.

Slow Drains?

You'll never have a slow running, or clogged drain again!

The secret? Clean drains don't run slow. The "slows", or periodic clogs, are signals that a thick layer of "gook" is choking your pipes. This gook coats the entire length of your pipe-from sink to sewer, or septic.

Conventional drain openers cannot remove this build up. Even a small tunnel through the waste lets them flow through the pipe, leaving the gook behind!

Now, with just a few minutes each month, you can easily clean out your pipes like new... and KEEP them clean with Plumb Clean®. It clings, and penetrates deep into the gook. No other product has the Plumb Clean® formula. That is what allows it to liquefy even years of build up. Plumb Clean® will clean the entire length of your pipes. It will make your drains run like new, when used as directed. This penetrating action is so revolutionary, Plumb Clean® is money-back guaranteed! Don't be confused. Plumb Clean® is the brand with the guarantee right on the label.

Save Money. A 1 lb. jar of Plumb Clean® holds up to 41 drain treatments. It costs only about 35¢ per treatment.

Independent laboratory studies show Plumb Clean® more effectively breaks down organic waste than all other products tested. So, if your drains have the "slows", get safe, guaranteed Plumb Clean® today!

With tournament chances in doubt

Field hockey puts pride on the line

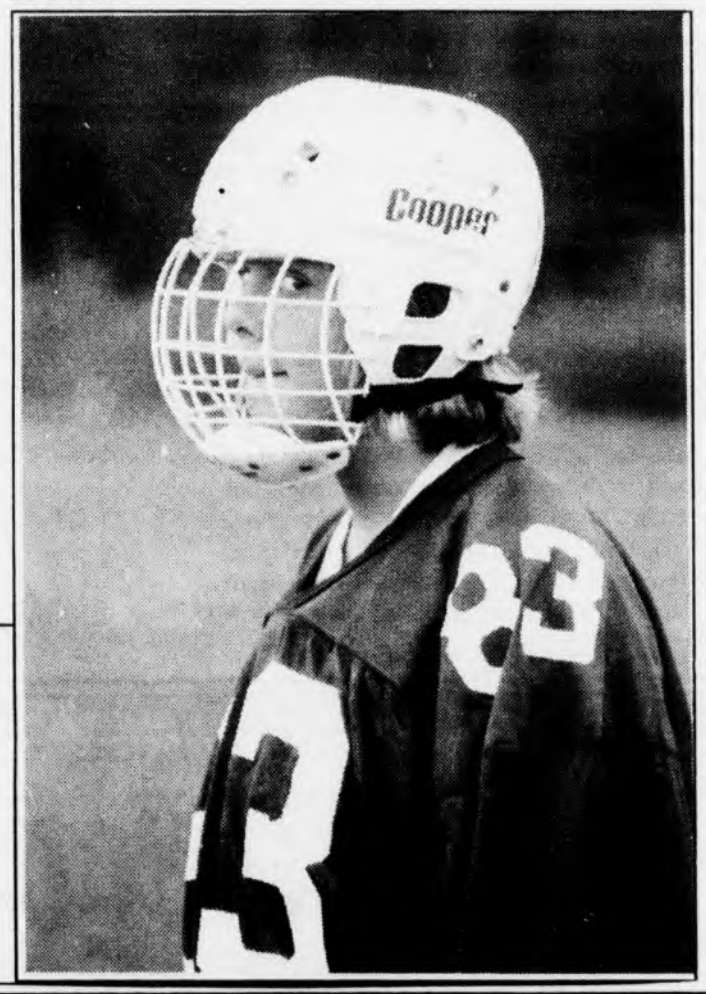
By Michael Farley
Mariner correspondent

Mathematics and bad luck may have woven their way into the fabric of the Skipper field hockey team with five games left on the schedule. Needing eleven points with only an opportunity to get a maximum of 10, it doesn't look promising for Bostwick's team.

Entering their game with Scituate this past Monday, the girls had to win their final six encounters on the slate, to still have a mathematical shot at the post-season. Barring a miracle, it does not appear as though Cohasset will enter the tournament after playing to a 1-1 tie against Scituate. The must-win predicament was created earlier with two defeats at the hands of Norwell and Hanover, in that order.

Against Norwell, the shots were even (6-6), but the score was not. The Clippers were able to score first and preserve the lead until the final gun. Two days later, the Skippers traveled to Hanover where they were shut out by the Indians, 3-0. Despite the lopsided score, the first half ended in a standstill.

However, the second half started off like a snowstorm in Colorado as Hanover scored three times in the opening 20 minutes. Aside from this shaky spurt, Bostwick was pleased with the team's overall performance. "I thought we played very well. In the first half, it was anybody's game, and we even dominated the final moments of the second half," was how she put it.



With the two losses, the girls put themselves in a position where they would have to be winners in the final six games.

If a game was only 35 minutes in length, they'd still have hope (against the Sailors). Katie Ridge, a sophomore winger, put Cohasset on top 1-0, assisted by Danielle Shaughnessey.

"Against Scituate, we were well prepared, and were in good sequence," explained Bostwick.

However, with five minutes on the clock, Scituate was able to even the score for the 1-1 final. All is not lost for this enthusiastic bunch. "Hey, we have pride to uphold. We have a great team, and sometimes it's not in the cards," reflected the coach.

"Let's remember, we have four seniors who would like to have the best seasons they've had. We would like to give 'em something to leave with." Nobody's going anywhere yet. There's plenty of field hockey to be played in 1991.

Bringing you the Skippers

By Ruthann Sargent
Special to the Mariner

The Varsity Cheering Squad has been easier to coach this year because of the maturity level. In past years, Cohasset has allowed 8 and 9th graders to try out and attend. This year, 8th grade through 12 were invited to try out, but the youngest that took advantage of cheering were sophomores.

The varsity squad now consists of Tri-Captains who are seniors, one junior, and four sophomores. None of the cheerleaders thus far have missed any games; only once or twice they have missed practice due to illness or orthodontist appointments. Also, weekly the cheerleaders try to get out socially for pizza or pasta so everyone can get to know each other a little bit better and share friendship.

The young ladies on the squad have been lucky this year with all of their parents' support. Transporting to and from games, having their own cheering section, and helping out with their every need.

The varsity squad practices this year more than past years. The squad practiced all summer, performed an exhibition at Derby in July, some went to camp in July, to be ready for their first game in September. With the Pep Rally coming up, the girls will be practicing every day, learning cheers, chants and partner stunts. The Homecoming game is next weekend.

In addition to the cheering aspect of the sport, a lot of time goes into baking for the football team, making banners for games, scheduling sundae parties, decorating boys locker room to pep them up, bringing helium balloons and water to the games.

Mascot is Laura Kondrat.

Join the high school cheerleaders Monday, Oct. 21, for an afternoon of cheers, chants, partner stunts, pyramids, gymnastics from 3 to 5 p.m. Cost for the clinic is $10. Each participant will receive a special cheering pencil. Girls ages 7 to 13 are invited.

Call Ruthann Sargent at 545-3058 mornings or evenings to register. The clinic is held at Cohasset High School.

No. 91-2880

TO Michael J. Ouellette and Donna F. Ouellette and to all persons entitled to the benefit of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended

GREETING:

Pioneer Financial, A Cooperative Bank

Claiming to be the holder of a mortgage covering real property situated in 251 Beechwood Street, Cohasset, Massachusetts County of Norfolk given by Michael J. Ouellette and Donna F. Ouellette to Pioneer Financial, A Cooperative Bank dated July 10, 1987 and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in book 7655 page 481 has filed with said court a bill in equity for authority to foreclose said mortgage in the manner following: by entry to foreclose and by exercise of power of sale set forth in said mortgage.

If you are entitled to the benefits of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended, and you object to such foreclosure, you or your attorney should file a written appearance and answer in said court at Dedham on or before November 20, 1991 or you may be forever barred from claiming that such foreclosure is invalid under said act.

Witness, Robert L. Steadman, Esquire, Chief Justice of our Superior Court, the 4th day of October in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ninety-one.

recreation report

After school activities

Children in Kindergarten to grade 3 may still register for the after school program at Osgood Field, which meets after school until 5 p.m.

Children will be allowed to attend on a per diem basis for $4 per afternoon. Parents who wish to send their children on an intermittent, per day basis, must complete the registration form, before children will be allowed to attend.

If interested in either late registration, or attendance on a per day basis, please call the recreation department office at 383-6791 for further details.

Fall soccer

Soccer leagues and soccer clinics will not meet on Saturday, Oct. 12, due to the holiday. However, both the grades K to 2 clinics and grades 3 to 7 leagues, will resume play Saturday, Oct. 19.

After school activities

The after school activities for grades K to 3 do not meet Monday, Oct. 14, due to Columbus Day, but resume Tuesday, Oct. 15. Children who have missed programs for any reason including inclement weather, may make-up the lost days, any day, Monday to Wednesday.

Because of the loss of the holiday, the Monday group will not end until Monday, Nov. 4.

Registrations

Telephone registrations will be accepted for the following current programs and activities, soccer programs K-7, aero-circuit training, landscape design course, Wang Center, "Music of Andrew Lloyd Webber," Boston Ballet, and "Nutcracker."

Upcoming

Registration will be announced shortly for basketball, dramatic workshops, arts and crafts, dog obedience classes, indoor golf, volleyball, step training, furniture refinishing and restoration/repair, sports festival at the South Shore Sports Center and winter after school activities.

Ski lessons and ski trip information for the season will be coming soon.

Special events

Area residents who are interested in attending the Thursday, Nov. 14, Wang Center performance "The Music of Andrew Lloyd Webber" and/or the Boston Ballet Sunday, Dec. 1, performance of the "Nutcracker," may call the recreation department office at 383-6791, for details.

The price is $35 each and includes bus transportation and admission. Buses leave from Scituate Town Hall at 6:30 p.m. for the "Music of Andrew Lloyd Webber," Thursday, Nov. 14, and at 12:15 p.m., for the performance on Sunday, Dec. 1, for the "Nutcracker." Buses may stop at Cohasset Town Hall as well.

Deadline for registration is Oct. 17 and Nov. 1, respectively.

Deeds for the County or district in which the property is located.

• Include the following on the Declaration:

– a statement of your intent to claim an elderly or disabled person's homestead;

– a description of the property, preferably as it appears on your deed;

- a statement that you occupy or intend to occupy the property as your principal residence;

- your signature witnessed by a notary public;

• File the Declaration separately or as part of the deed by which you are acquiring the property;

• Pay a filing fee, usually $10 or $20.

You must submit one of the following additional documents if you are filing as a "disabled person":

- an original or certified copy of a disability award letter issued to you by the Social Security Administration, or

- a letter from a physician licensed in Massachusetts certifying that you meet the disability requirements in 42 U.S. Code, sections 1382c(a) (3) (A) and (C).

2. If filing on a mobile home-

• File a Declaration of Homestead at the city or town clerk's office in the city or town in which the property is located.

• Include the following on the Declaration:

- a description of the location of the mobile home;

- a statement that you occupy or intend to occupy the mobile home as your principal residence;

- a statement of your intent to claim an elderly or disabled person's homestead in your mobile home;

- your signature witnessed by a notary public;

• Attach disability claim documents, if appropriate;

• Pay a filing fee.

You can terminate your Elderly or Disabled Person's Homestead by:

• selling or transferring the property or mobile home (or the declarant's interest in the property or mobile home) on which the Homestead is claimed during the declarant's lifetime;

• signing a deed during the declarant's lifetime conveying the real property upon which the homestead has been claimed; or

• signing a written release of the Homestead, witnessed by a Notary Public and filed at the Registry of Deeds (or for mobile homes, the town clerk's office) where the Homestead was filed;

"Your Homestead will also be terminated if you file a new Declaration of Homestead on any property or mobile home. An Elderly or Disabled Person's Homestead will also end upon the death of the surviving declarant in the case of jointly filed Homesteads," Rep. Murray concluded.

was born. This structure has been restored and has now re-opened. Then on to have lunch at the new Milton Council on Aging Center with Alexandra Hakimdin, Director, as our hostess. The cost is $9. Call the Senior Center now and make your reservation.

November 8, Friday: With the season changing and fall well underway, it's time to bring your house plants back into the house for the long winter months. Interested in getting some professional advice on the care of your house plants? Come to the Senior Center at 9:30 a.m. on the 8th and meet Deborah Swanson, Horticulturist and 4H Agent from the Plymouth County Extension. She will also discuss various problems that we may have with our plants and how important the location in the home is for different plants. Call the Senior Center and make your reservations now.

November 17, Sunday: "Nunsense," the musical hit comedy that has been delighting audiences for several years, is back at Copley Place in Boston. The cost for this event has not yet been determined but reservations are being taken now at the Senior Center. Please call 383-9112 for details.

November 20, Wednesday: Central Artery Project — Big Dig Update. This will take place at the Cohasset Senior Center at 10:30 a.m., where Dick Jarvis, representative, will present a project overview about this tremendous undertaking. There will be slides and Jarvis has agreed to allow us the opportunity to ask questions. The topics he intends to cover are as follows: Why? Cost; How long it will take? Call the Senior Center now and let us know you're interested. You must sign up before Wednesday, Nov. 6.

December 6, Friday: "Holly Day at Ashumet Holly Reservation" — 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. This will be a full day with lots to do and see. A wonderful way to begin the Holiday Season and get in the Christmas Spirit. We will visit the Ashumet Holly Reservation in Falmouth, select fresh cut holly from a variety of holly trees, or you may purchase some unusual gifts from the Potting Shed where chowder and mulled cider will be available. Then we will board the bus to have a delightful buffet luncheon at the Daniel Webster Inn. The return trip will stop at the Christmas Tree Shop. If interested, call the Senior Center now as reservations must be made by Tuesday, Oct. 29. The cost is $29.

house on Gannett Road in Scituate in '49. They have lived there ever since.

There was a time when B.U. tried to lure him away from his Cohasset job. His alma mater was looking for a freshman football coach. But the offer just wasn't good enough.

The Dorrs have three sons. Chuck Dorr lives in Maine. Danny Dorr lives in Fort Lauderdale. David Dorr lives in Scituate. They have five grandchildren. And then there's the dog, Buffer, a two-year-old male English Spaniel, who is fond of snuggling next to visitors.

There are two walls of fame in the Dorr home. One wall has some of Mr. Dorr's awards — there's the Nelson plaque and certificates from coaching groups and other trophies. There's an award for a hole-in-one he hit back in 1987. There's a cartoon depicting Mr. Dorr and other members of the B.U. hall of fame.

The second wall is family-oriented. There's a photo of the Dorrs kissing after a Thanksgiving win back in the 1950s. There are photos of the other athletes in the family.

Family has always been important to both Evie and Fran. He gave up coaching football so he could watch his son Chuck play college football.

When Chuck played for Scituate High, his father was able to coach and watch the games by juggling the hours his own team played.

The Dorrs still sing in the choir at First Baptist Church in Scituate. They have been part of the choir for 40 years.

"I've had a busy and happy life," the gentleman said.

Bates sale held off

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Questions raised by the sewer commission led selectmen to hold off on approving any of the three subdivision proposals for the lot housing the Bates building and the wastewater treatment plant.

Sewer commissioners asked selectmen to retain space in the basement of the Bates building for office and storage use and creation of toilet facilities for employees at the sewer plant. Selectmen agreed to explore the issue with Habitat for Humanity, the group planning to convert the former town office building into affordable housing.

Commissioners also raised concerns about the impact the housing project would have on expansion plans at the wastewater treatment plant. Selectmen plan to review the matter with town counsel before proceeding with subdivision plans.

Cohasset resident Bob Davenport urged selectmen to section off a portion of the cellar for construction of toilet facilities rather than pursue more expensive alternatives.Selectman Rocco Laugelle suggested employees at the plant could use the shower and toilet facilities at the police-fire station at no cost.

Laugelle once again raised objections to selling the Bates building to the non-profit organization for one dollar. Laugelle and fellow selectman Martha Gjesteby had opposed selling the Bates building

Tinory gives great music a 'home'

By Lisa B. Eigner

His 24-track recording studio is a sanctuary for rock 'n rollers wanting refuge from Hollywood.

Set within the recesses of Cohasset, Rik Tinory Productions is more than just another fly-by-night recording studio... it's "home" for some of the biggest names in show biz.

The producer has been "in the business" for a solid 25 years and looks like he's good for at least 25 more.

Clad in an MTV baseball cap and Birkenstolk sandals, the mirror image of snapshots from 20 years ago brought the Mariner back to where it all began...

"I broke into the business as a jazz drummer in Boston when I was 12," he said, with a nostalgic tilt-of-the-eyebrow.

From the get-go, Tinory has been "inspired" to both write and produce.

His jazz playing in Boston was his motivation for writing the 1976 single, "Remember Old Scollay Square," a tune that's sold close to half a million copies during its lifetime.

His calling for vocals kicked in at age 15, when he composed and released

CCC fund drive ready to take off as addition won't require variance

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Debt-free in '93. That's the latest slogan for the Cohasset Community Center, CCC, which will celebrate the 50th anniversary of its founding two years from now.

The idea of retiring a debt doesn't seem so strange. The odd part is that the CCC is expanding at the same time both in programs, space and new equipment.

Next week the center hopes to begin a $250,000 fundraising drive to pay for the planned addition.

Glen Pratt, president of the CCC's board of directors, said the goal is to build the new space without adding to the center's debt. Senior citizens — who will be the prime users of the extra space — have agreed to help raise funds for the CCC.

The center is already expanding across Depot Court into rented space in a building used in the filming of

"There are a lot of people coming from out of town. We've built a reputation."
Judy Volungis
director of the Community Center

"Housesitter" — awnings left by the film crew add to the appearance of the building which will provide space for some exercise and dance classes as well as a separate area designated as a computer learning center.

The computer center is equipped with four high tech pieces of Leading Edge brain-power. Color monitors, color printers and modems are on line. Course offerings in computers begin for three-year-olds and work up.

"We're the closest to achieving the goals set out when we incorporated that we ever were," Pratt said, looking over the renovations underway in the rented space across Depot Court.

He said the original goals called for the Community Center to meet the recreational and civic needs of the town.

Tuesday night he went to the historic district commission seeking approval of the CCC's latest plan for building expansion. Last summer another plan sailed through the historic district

Cohasset's week

Radar cars are out there

Sohier Street and South Main are getting extra police attention these days. It turns out that speeding along the two thickly settled roadways is fairly high.

So far the police radar car has slowed quite a few travellers — most were given warnings, according to Police Sgt. Brian Noonan.

Sgt. Noonan said the radar car is available on the 4 p.m. to midnight shift now that the force is closer to full complememt. In January when officials expect to bring another officer on board, the radar car may get out there during the main part of the day.

Sohier Street, incidentally, is a 30 mile zone. Cars were tracked in the last few days going 50 to 60 miles an hour along the street. Many of the speeders were local residents.

The street was recently reposted as a 30 mile zone.

South Main going over the hill into Cohasset Village is a 20 mile zone.

Last week Patrolman Lisa Matos began working the midnight to 8 a.m. shift. At the same time, Patrolman Shelley Peters was transferred from the third shift to 4 p.m. to midnight, allowing the town to have three cars on the road during the evening hours.

Town beats state figures

Unemployment for Cohasset was 6.6 percent in August, the last month the state has broken down by community.

In August 1990, the rate in town was 7 percent. State figures for the same month, unadjusted, were: 8.8 this August and 6.4 in August 1990.

Road woes

Concerns about speeding, U-turns and accident-prone motorists occupied selectmen at Tuesday night's meeting.

The issue came up when selectman Diana Kornet said a resident contacted her about placing traffic barrels along Main Street, particularly near the hardware store.

The worried resident wanted to slow traffic in the village, but selectman Rocco Laugelle said the street near the hardware store was too narrow to accommodate the barriers.

"You know how some drivers take corners," he remarked.

From then on, selectmen griped about a variety of motor vehicle malefactors. They agreed to refer the problems to the safety officer and the highway superintendent for recommendations.

In a related matter, Laugelle told selectmen the stop sign at the triangular Sidney Park intersection of Summer, Harbor, Margin and Elm Streets had never been officially approved. Selectmen voted to correct that oversight.

Laugelle also raised the ongoing problem of accidents at the intersection of Route 3A and King Street. Laugelle said he was aware of at least eight accidents at the intersection. The town will work with Norfolk County highway engineers to improve signage at the intersection.

Ex post permit

Selectmen ratified the unilateral granting of an auction permit by Executive Secretary Greg Doyon and voted to give him authority to take such action in the future.

According to Doyon, the auctioneer for Majestic Motors came into town hall with completed papers and a copy of his auctioneer's license late Friday. The motor vehicle auction had already been advertised for the next day. Doyon was only able to reach one of the five selectmen.

After reviewing the situation with town counsel Richard Henderson, Doyon granted the permit unilaterally.

"It was unclear whether it was even required," Doyon told them.

The board officially designated Doyon as their agent to avoid any future problems.

66 candidates want to be chief

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Town officials face the daunting task of sorting through 66 resumes looking for a replacement for Fire Chief Daniel Brock. At Tuesday's meeting, the board charged Executive Secretary Greg Doyon and selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Jane Goedecke with responsibility for culling the list down to approximately 10 semifinalists.

Selectmen hope to have a list of semifinalists by the end of October. Brock's contract expires Dec. 31.

Selectmen Chairman Ned Tebbetts and selectman Martha Gjesteby volunteered to develop an addendum to the official job description for the position of fire chief. Tebbetts and Gjesteby said they intended to make the administrative responsibilities and expectations of the fire chief clear.

"My major criticism of the current chief is with his administrative skills," Tebbetts said. Brock has come under fire for his handling of ambulance billings, overtime and the high cost of fire protection in Cohasset.

The fire department has been the focus of considerable controversy in the past year. The government structure committee, the advisory committee and the selectmen have been extremely critical of the department in general and Brock in specific.

According to Doyon, the town received 68 responses to advertisements placed in the Boston Globe, Patriot Ledger and a national publication for firefighters. Of those resumes, one was withdrawn and one arrived after the deadline. Doyon said the names of applicants would be kept confidential until the board winnowed the list down to no more than five or so finalists.

In other business, selectmen:

• Granted a step raise to Administrative Secretary Joyce Studley. Studley's salary will increase from $11.99 per hour to $12.55 per hour.

• Voted 4-0, with selectman Rocco Laugelle abstaining, to name Margaret Charles of 85 Linden Ave. to the vacancy on the Registrars of Voters. Charles was one of three candidates for the vacancy created by the death of Alice Daunt.

• Appointed Linda McCarthy to the Alcohol and Drug Abuse committee and Cynthia Kuppens to the Handicapped Commission.

Bates sale held off . . .

for the nominal fee, arguing the cash-strapped town should get fair market value for its property

"We turned down a raise for the police department because we don't have the money, but we can afford to give away a $125,000 to $150,000 building," Laugelle complained.

Selectmen Diana Kornet, Jane Goedecke and Ned Tebbetts objected to his complaint.

Referring to a strong decision on the issue at town meeting, Kornet said, "The decision has been made and we are going to proceed."

Tebbetts noted his initial opposition to the Habitat sale, but added, "We do have serious financial problems in the community, but we are a town meeting form of government."

Gjesteby conceded the town meeting vote, but reminded board members that the town faces a probable vote to override Proposition 2 1/2 in order to fund essential town services in the next fiscal year.

Selectmen made a point of noting that plans for all three subdivision proposals are available in the selectmen's office for review by residents.

Voice of Democracy contest

The Cohasset Veterans of Foreign Wars are sponsoring a local competition for the Voice of Democracy Contest, which could lead to $71,000 in prizes.

This year's theme is "Meeting America's Challenge." Students from Cohasset High School will compete as the Cohasset Rotary hosts the contest in the Bates Building.

VFW Commander Ralph Perrencello said the broadcast scriptwriting contest offers valuable experience as well as the chance for national prizes.

Tinory gives great music a 'home'

"Blushing Girl" under the United Artists label.

Still composing his own material, Tinory had a yen for stand-up work. So, not long after "Blushing Girl" hit the scene, he tried his hand as a stand-up singer in Florida.

Working in Miami at the Americana Hotel, Tinory got his proverbial "big break" when he was approached by prize fighter, Smokin' Joe Louis offering him a gig singing for Cuba's Fidel Castro.

"Joe came to me and said that American talent was needed in Cuba to sing at the anniversary of the invasion of Havana."

Taking a risk as the first American performer to reach Cuba after Castro's takeover in 1959, Tinory saw it as a good opportunity to spread his name.

From Castro to Aerosmith in 25 years, Tinory has given the entertainment field the once over.

"I started off like Mowtown's Berry Gordy," said Tinory, "with one small recording box."

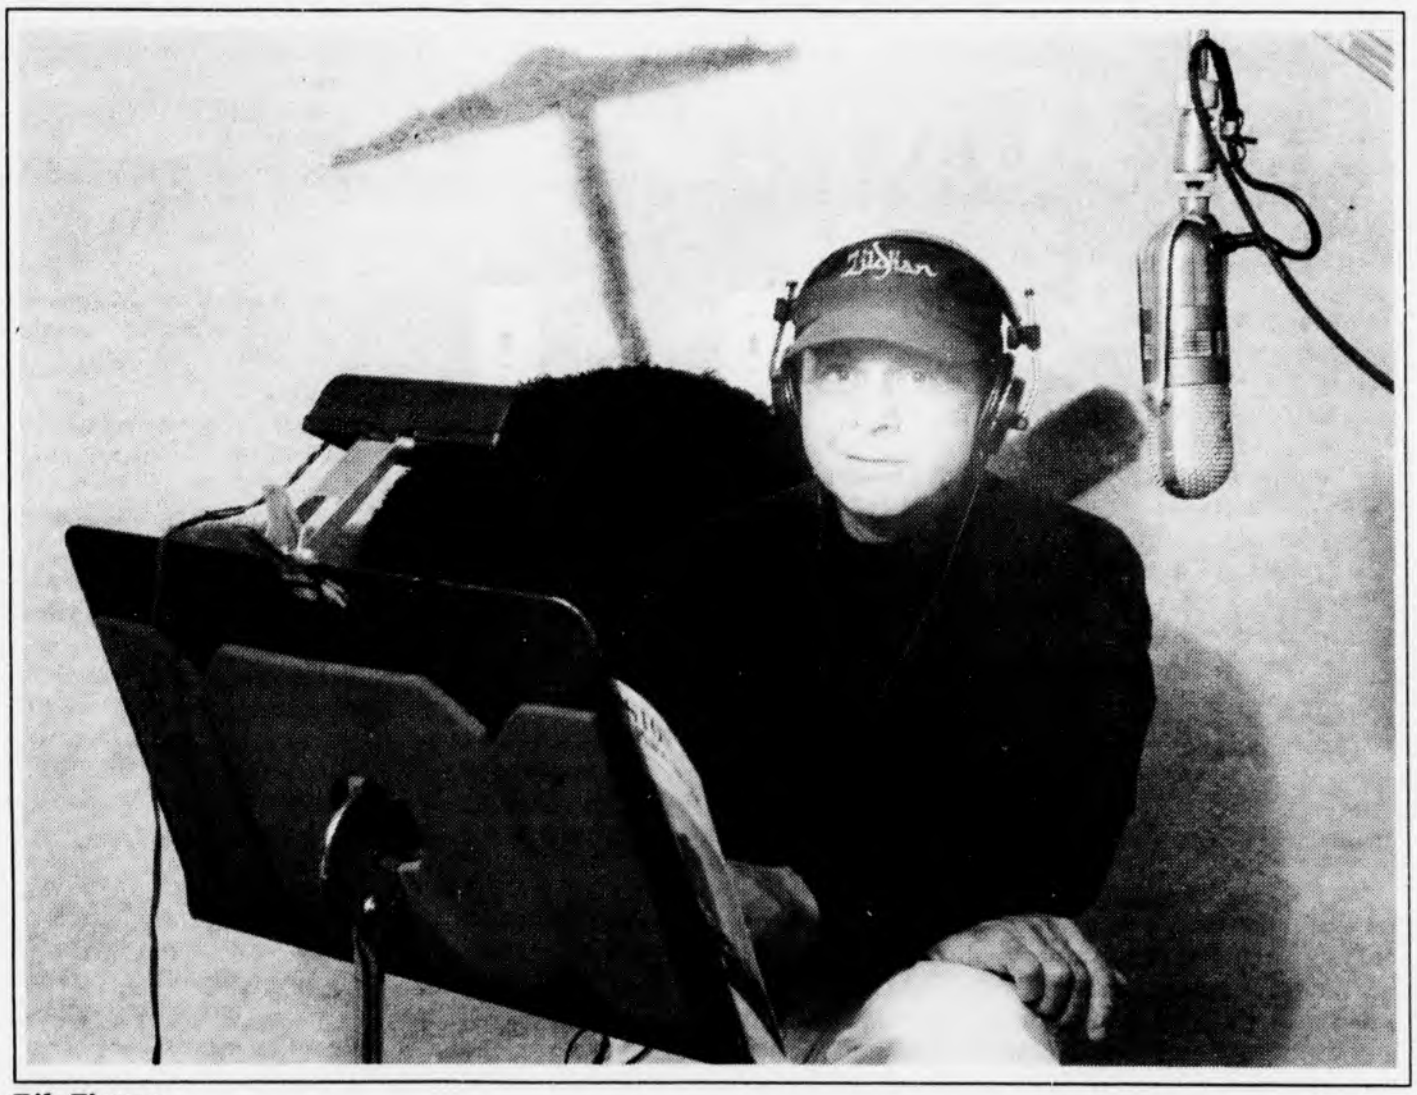
Over 250 songs later, this devotee of the recording industry still gives 100 percent of himself to his clients.

Showing no real signs of "wear and tear," the producer attributes his vim and vigor to just "doing what you like."

A firm anti-drug advocate, Tinory is convinced he'd be long gone if he'd gotten into the drug circle at the start of his career.

"Most of the talent that was around when I was starting out is gone now," he said.

It's a wonder that all that thick jazz club smoke I played in didn't kill me," he said.



More recently, Tinory has hit the record button for the likes of Aerosmith, Air Supply, and countless other big names celebs.

In fact, the mikes are still warm after recently winding up a five-month recording session with Aerosmith.

During the session, the top flight band recorded their newest album, "Aerosmith 1991," along with a sound track for an upcoming episode of 20th Century Fox's "The Simpsons."

Not a mogul out to work strictly with the hit bands, Tinory is clearly out to give unknowns their shot at the spotlight.

"My studio isn't just a closed shop for stars," he said, "I'm looking for young, undiscovered talent."

Rik Tinory

A firm believer in giving the underdog their chance, Tinory leaves the door unlocked for artists with a fresh, new edge.

With eyes ablaze and a lift to his tone, Tinory emphasized that, to him, "a discovery of new talent is what's exciting ."

Never knowing who's going to be on the other end of the phone when it rings is a big part of the business' attraction to Tinory.

Being a husband , a father of three, and operator of a known recording studio hasn't left Tinory much time to focus on his first love— song writing.

Although he's been contracted to write new material for an upcoming movie soundtrack he's trying to regroove himself to write new songs.

"I've got ideas for some of the best songs of my life," he said, anxious to find time to seclude himself to write lyrics.

Unfortunately, though, he's been too bogged down with professional commitments to scrape up the time.

A somewhat reclusive man whose dream is to find that "one superstar," he doesn't need big crowds of fans to pacify him.

"I shy away from intimate public appearances," said Tinory.

"I like the woods, my gardening, and quiet time."

How this liaison to the stars wound up in Cohasset is simple.

"When I first started out, I had aspirations of locating in New York or Hollywood," he said. "I never dreamed I'd end up in Cohasset."

But after gaining most of his acclaim from his off-the-beaten-track location, the record producer is thankful to be a part of the community.

"In Cohasset, you don't have to lock your doors like you would in L.A."

And best of all, said the proud East-coaster, groups don't have to worry about losing their anonymity.

As for what the future holds for Tinory, an agreement has just been made for yet another notable recording artist to begin recording this winter.

After that, only time will tell. But you're sure to see his label on the back of several hits to come.

commission but began to bog down before the zoning board of appeals. When the plan hit opposition, the CCC withdrew it for further consideration.

"The whole addition is going on the north side now," Pratt explained. The same space will be added but no variance will be required.

Pratt said the new plan works as well or better than the earlier plan that called for separate additions on the north and south sides of the building.

Once the space is built, the Community Center will be in a better position to offer meeting space for civic organizations — since a kitchen is part of the plan.

The new space is being created specifically to meet the growing requirements of the senior center, which is tucked into front rooms at the building at 3 North Main St.

Six years ago the senior center opened in the rented space.

But all the additional space — just like the space currently used by the seniors — will be shared with the Community Center when the seniors aren't using it.

"They tend to run their programs in the mornings or early in the day," according to Judy Volungis, director of the Community Center. "Most of our programs are later in the day or at night."

She's quick to point out there are daytime programs for preschoolers — cooking for preschoolers, gymnastics, dance — and some aimed at mothers who are home caring for young children.

Some days there are 300-400 young children who take programs at the Community Center.

Signup this year almost doubled from where the center was a year ago.

"There are a lot of people coming from out of town," Volungis said. "We've built a reputation."

In fact there are more Community Center members who live in Scituate than those who live in Cohasset right now.

"By percentage of the population, Cohasset still pulls more of its people but Scituate is a bigger community," Pratt said.

He sees the key to growth by providing additional space.

"The more space you have, the more you'll expand," he said.

If the rental space hadn't been available on Depot Court, the Community Center would have had to turn away some participants. The last expansion came in 1987. At that time, the center went through another growth spurt.

So who is the target market for the Community Center?

"Everyone, we have something for all age groups," Volungis said.

The list of course offerings includes 95 courses. There are 44 instructors who are involved in those courses.

The center itself employs 17 people, full or part time.

A series of dances for teens is scheduled. Several sessions to prepare for the SATs are offered. And, of course, there is bowling.

Pratt said he has been talking with members of the town's Drug and Alcohol Committee on ideas for teens.

"We're always looking for ideas," he said.

• Nancy Snowdale's son, Robert Lloyd Snowdale, married Donna Leigh Griswold at the Trinity Church in Copley Square, Boston, on Saturday, Oct. 5. Nancy's youngest son, Alan, has started a new business making lobster pots for South Shore Lobstermen. He mills his wood on the site of Mordacai Lincoln's mill off of Mill Lane in Cohasset.

• Another recent Cohasset wedding could almost go under the category of wedding/class reunion. On Friday, Oct. 4, in a candlelight ceremony at the Second Congregational Church performed by the Rev. Gary Ritts, Dan Tilden married Terri Fisher. Ian McCormick came from Dellaplane, VA, to perform his duties as best man; Stephen Keating made the trip from York, Maine; John Litchfield was there, he lives in Scituate, and Vin Todd came from Boston. Dan and Terri's reception was held at the Barker Tavern and they left from there to go on a Jamaican honeymoon. Upon their return they will be making their home in Houston, Texas. Dan is the son of Marie Tilden, formerly of Cohasset now residing in Scituate; Terri is from Charleston, West Virginia.

• On the subject of reunions, the Cohasset High School Homecoming turned out to be a grand one. Many alumni came home for the event, but we'll bet that Mike Rolandelli gets the prize for coming the greatest distance!! Mike flew up from college on Friday to watch his brother Chris play in the first varsity game he could see. How exciting for both brothers.

• Had a call from Ann Whiteley last week. She is the coordinator of the play park located at the Joseph Osgood School. Ann wanted everyone to know that there will be a cleanup and some landscaping taking place there this Saturday, Oct. 19. Bring your rakes, brooms, wheelbarrows etc., and help out. It begins at 9 a.m. and will be through at noon. Call Ann at 383-9310, Bob Protulis at 383-0383, or Phil Lehr at 383-1975 for more details.

• After cleaning the playground, run home, grab a shower and head for the football game. CHS is playing Weymouth Catholic, and you have to be there for the half-time ceremony when Evie Dorr gets long-deserved recognition for all he has done for Cohasset. Most that have ever been touched by him will be there, as well as a lot of the faculty that was teaching with him during the '50s and '60s era. It promises to be a touching tribute. Be there.

• Meredith Baker-Hayes and Brion Hayes had great news for us this week...they had their first baby, a boy, on Aug. 22. Christopher Baker Hayes, weighing 8 lbs 12 ozs, was born at Mt. Auburn Hospital in Cambridge. Grandparents are James and Florence Hayes, Great Grandmother is Ruth Baker of South Dartmouth.

• Good news comes from the Cohasset Consignment Shop. They will be open on Thursday nights. For all of you who work during the day, it is the perfect solution. You are able to consign and shop too, and you won't believe the great buys you can get. They are now accepting bridal gowns and "party dresses" too, they have even built a new room for them. Be sure to go, and while you are there give the gals that are working there a friendly thank you. They are working so hard to make it a huge success, the money all goes to the Social Service League, and they don't get paid for their efforts.

• Cadet Edward S. Graham III, son of Ed and Merle from Cohasset, is currently a member of Air Force ROTC Detachment 250 at Iowa State University. Cadet Graham is a 1991 CHS grad and is currently pursuing a Bachelor's Degree in Aerospace Engineering. In addition to his college curriculum, he is enrolled in the General Military Course and takes an Air Force Aerospace Studies course each term. The course teaches Air Force history, leadership and management, and national defense policy. Upon graduation, Cadet Graham will be commissioned a second lieutenant and enter active duty as an Air Force officer.

Duggan; 'Being an advisor is like running your own business'

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Special to the Mariner

"There's no politics to deal with on the advisory committee," second-year-advisory-board-member Chris Duggan says.

"We may be appointed by politicians, but once we arrive to make decisions at this committee, that's it." Duggan says the advisory board is an attitude. "It's like running your own business and trying to determine what's best for your business."

He should know.

In 1987 he started his own business in radio communications. In 1990 he sold his business to a division of Fidelity Investments. He is employed as "ACTICOM'S" national sales training manager; and sales manager for the company's Boston office.

The product is used largely by Fortune 500 companies for which cellular phone costs would be prohibitive. The company's Automotive Vehicle Location system can pinpoint 85-100 trucks within 100 feet of any location – an important feature for ambulance companies, who might need to know which of their ambulances is closest to any particular accident, Duggan said.

Chris Duggan – a townie – is the son of Assessor Tom Duggan and Eleanor Duggan. His mother passed away in 1975. Duggan says of his father's elected job: "I don't know why anybody would ever want that job; it's the worst job in town."

He says he was no great shakes in high school. "Although I was on the high school track team, and I did have the lead role in the senior class play - 'Little Abner'."

"My opinion about how the town is run is from observations made over 15 years. Basically, I feel the police department does a good job. Alternatively, I feel the fire department is in disgrace."

While in high school he was employed at the sailing club as dockmaster, did some recreational lobstering, and he worked for the water department for one summer ("This probably definitely qualifies me as a townie.")

Duggan had no inkling in high school that the former Terry England, a year behind him, would become his bride. (Terry has been an elected member of the recreation commission for a number of years. Her father, Frank England, is a former Cohasset selectman and school committee member).

Although both UMass Amherst graduates, they didn't court until after Chris did a three-year tour of Germany in the Army.

The Duggan family lives on Lily Pond Lane, Terry and Chris have two children, five-year-old Alex, two-year-old Kara and Sleak the cat.

Chris says when he first joined the advisory committee there were no big shocks. "I had always been involved in town meeting and was very interested in town issues.

"My opinion about how the town is run is from observations made over 15 years. Basically, I feel the police department does a good job. Alternatively, I feel the fire department is in disgrace."

He said he blames management (the selectmen) for poor oversight of both the fire chief and his department.

"Not only is the fiscal management poor, the training the men are given is not adequate, and their equipment is not maintained." Duggan said.

He said this year the fire department will overspend by $30-$40,000 and "We're obligated to pay them.

"The town has to become involved in some serious negotiations. If it involves serious litigation, I'd rather pay it now," he said, referring to the personnel committee's recent statement at special town meeting that the police contract had been inexpensive with regard to legal fees.

With regard to special town meeting's sending back the police contract to the selectmen, to be renegotiated, Duggan says he feels the police didn't have much of a choice but to reopen the negotiation process.

"I can't see a lawsuit. As far as I am aware, it will go through a series of arbitration boards, reaching a point it has never been gone through before. There's no doubt that it will be a test case," unless the police association agrees to renegotiate.

"Tightening up budgets" will be one of his personal goals in the upcoming year. He is liaison to the harbor, the sewer commission and the insurance (budget buster) committee.

"The harbor master does a great job, but the town is going to have to raise more money from harbor fees. In this economy, I don't feel anybody should have a boat on a town dock at no charge."

Duggan says there are three different town docks, with approximately 20 to 30 boats each. Many of the boats at town docks belong to out-of-town lobstermen, all of whom are responsible for wear and tear of the docks, to the tune of $5,000 a year in repairs.

On a positive note, Duggan says "The schools are doing a better job today than three years ago. There have been positive changes in administration. And to the school department's credit - they have a maintenance plan. A few years ago some of the schools looked like a ghetto."

Mostly what he likes about the school department is that they always stay within their budget "And they never come before us for reserve fund transfers."

Because of even tighter dollars this year, Duggan says selectmen should put selling the Bates Building on hold, and reconsider selling it privately; additionally, he feels it may reach the point where the advisory committee may be looking at the $5,500 in selectmen stipends.

While it may sound like nit-picking, Chris says selectmen should try to put as many of their affairs in order as they can, and not count on any override.

"It's not out there," he said.

Bob post-mortem

Vice President Barbara Hassan of Eastern Edison will meet with selectmen at 8 p.m. Oct. 21 to review Eastern Edison's response and performance during and after Hurricane Bob roared through town.

SAFE Homes

The contract involving the SAFE Homes program is out. The town's Drug and Alcohol Committee is working hard to increase local participation in the project.

The point of the contract is that parents agree not to serve or allow minors to have access to alcohol in their homes.

Hey, the law already demands that we keep liquor out of the hands of minors.

The additional step the contract calls for is that parents make all possible efforts to supervise young people who do come to our homes.

Now even Keith Knowles, chairman of the Drug and Alcohol Committee, agrees it is impossible to always be there.

But he talks about how the contract is one way to open communication between parents. The names, addresses and phone numbers of those who return the contract will be circulated among the other program participants to promote channels of communication.

It certainly seems as if the group is heading in the right direction. Communication is always a help.

We want to commend the committee for hard work, perseverence and dedication.

We also want to take a minute to promote the Drug Free Weekend that is coming up at the end of January.

A separate committee was formed to take the ball set in motion by the Drug and Alcohol Committee. We haven't seen the detailed plans yet but from what we've heard the weekend will be fun as well as drug free.

We wish the town's police department would begin taking a tougher stand on the issue of liquor violations.

Drinking by minors happens quite regularly from what we can see. Of course, the season to spot it is passing quickly as the weather makes beach-going unseasonable.

There was a time when a look at the police log would show calls about beer parties at the beach or about loud parties or even arrests. In those days the Cohasset Mariner printed the log as a way of letting people see the pulse of the community. Now the log is coded into categories that are relatively meaningless. Services requested, general services rendered is a great catch-all if you don't want people to know what's happening.

We wish the police department would spend less time putting the police log into a code the to protect the townspeople from knowing what — if anything — ever happens here and more time on enforcing the liquor laws.

The SAFE Homes program is a great beginning. We hope people will get involved.

We also hope people remember this is just a beginning. There's more to be done if we want to address the problem of alcohol abuse — especially by minors.

We take this opportunity to raise a cold glass of cranberry juice and salute the members of the Drug and Alcohol Committee. Here's to you: Keith Knowles, Sandra Kent, James Edward Carroll Jr., Thomas Wigmore, Elaine Burke Davis, Susan Shumaker, Ralph Kidder, Robert W. Jackson and Jonathan C. Hunter.

Cohasset's ten-year-old Little League Summer Team, the contest winners, recently had a chance to meet one of baseball's greatest, Carl Yastrzemski, for their own private batting lesson with the master. The event, sponsored by WMJX and Kahn's hot dogs, was the result of a label contest. Yastrzemski, the first former Little Leaguer elected to Baseball's Hall of Fame and the first player to have a lifetime total of over 3,000 hits and 400 home runs, signed books, balls, gloves, and baseball cards that the players had brought before lining them up for the batting lesson.

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce would like to thank all those businesses that contributed items to make this year's "Little Piece of Home" packages better than ever. We would like to extend our special thanks to the Mariner news organization for their efforts to keep our cost for the student subscriptions at a price we could afford. These subscriptions and the great Cohasset Chamber of Commerce tote bags (designed, made, and offered to us at rock bottom cost by Ron Goodwin) have become the staples in our yearly package. Our thanks to everyone who donated or worked on this year's package.

State House report

By Robert Hedlund
State Senator

Fall sessions have been active on Beacon Hill. Many issues of importance are being discussed and debated. Firstly, I am happy to report that after much deliberation and delay, Senate Republicans will finally receive proportional representation on Joint Committees. For 10 months, Republicans were only given one of six positions, (less than 20%), even though we represent approximately 40% of the Senate. Many Democratic Senators recognized the obvious unfairness of the situation and resigned seats on various committees. However, several other committees still possessed the lopsided character of old which ignored the electoral changes made by voters in 1990. The senate Leadership finally agreed to accept a fairer composition (4 Dems and 2 Reps.) of its committees that is more consistent with our nation's principle of one-man-one vote. This is a victory for Rules Reform.

General Relief Veto

On a vote during the October 7 session, I joined 15 of my colleagues in sustaining the Governor's veto of certain General Relief expenditures. Massachusetts was and still is in need of Welfare reform. We simply cannot continue to be as liberal with eligibility requirements for these programs as we were in the past. Negotiations for a compromise for further funding for the General Relief program continue between the Governor and the Democratic leadership. Other states such as Michigan and Wisconsin put forward far more innovative changes in similar programs. Hopefully, this pending compromise will reflect the need for restructuring State programs that exist in

S.A.F.E. plans more action

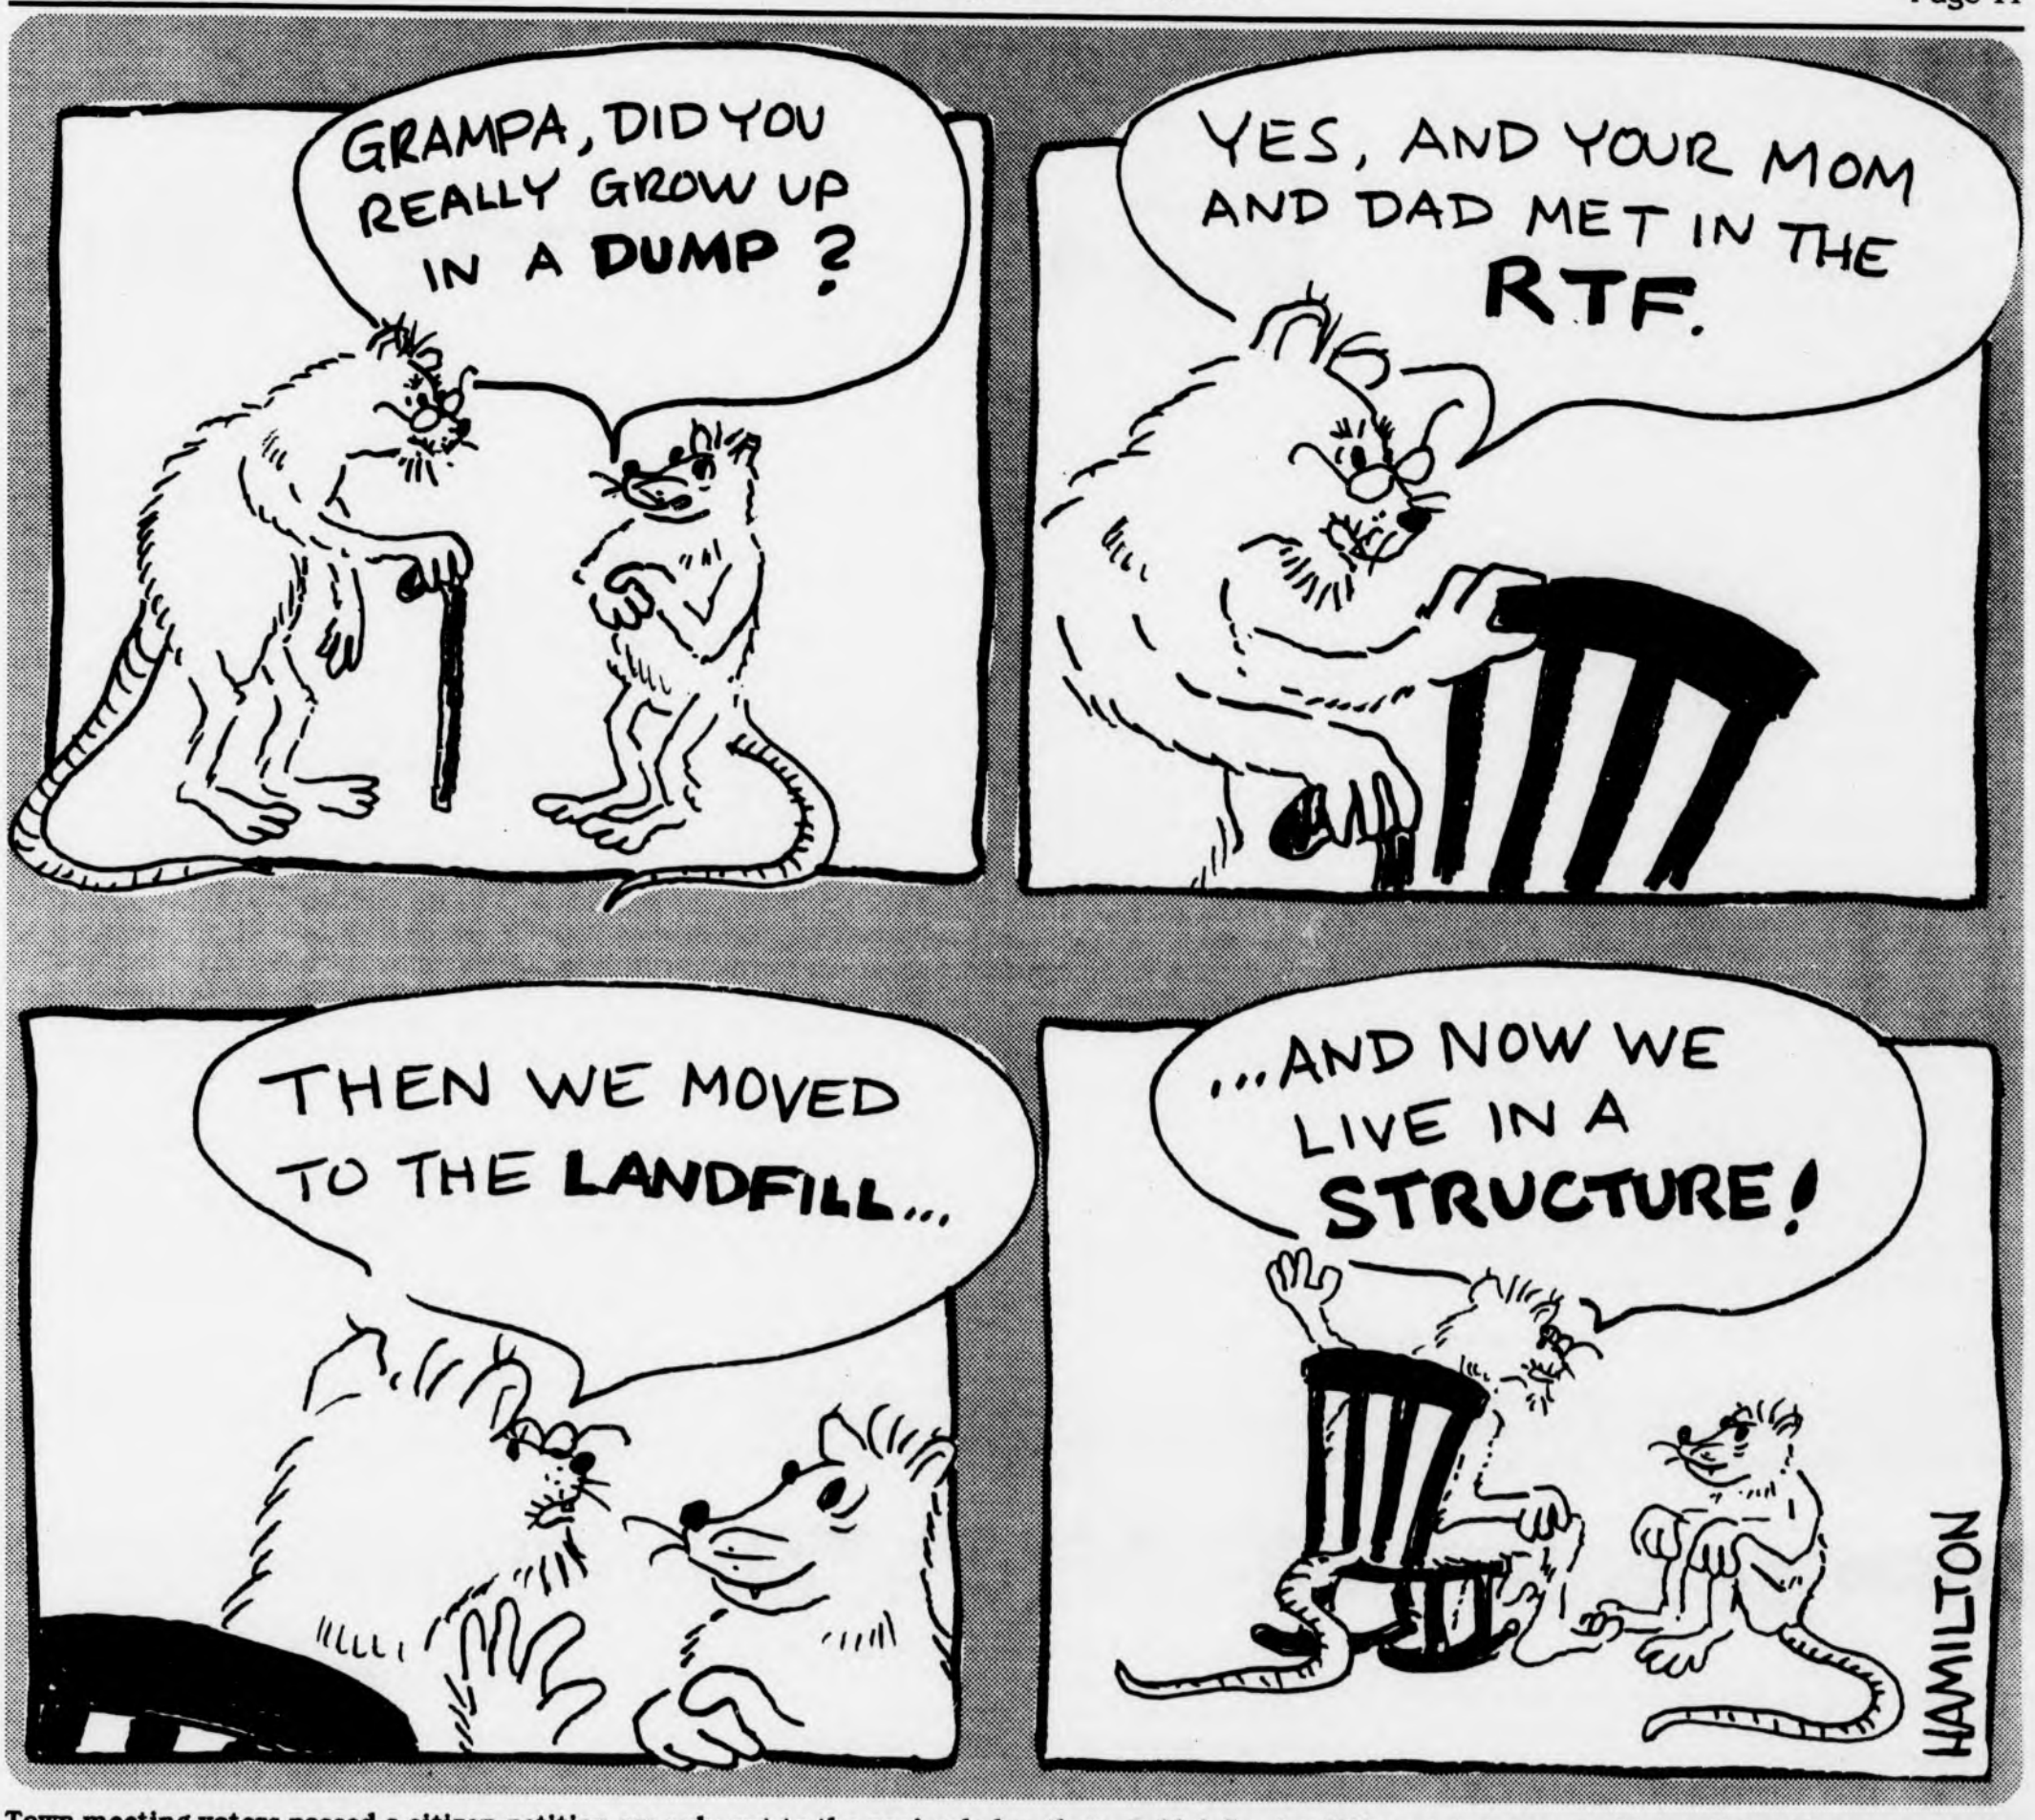
To the Editor:

In the six months since a diverse group of Cohasset residents came together to form Stop Any Further Expansion (S.A.F.E.), the fate of the landfill owned by Cohasset Heights, Ltd. (CHL) has been increasingly debated.

letters

As a result of the efforts of S.A.F.E., various town boards, concerned Cohasset residents and the news media, this issue has finally received the attention it deserves.

More than 650 Cohasset citizens have signed petitions expressing their concerns about a sludge dump and expansion of the landfill. Town Meetings in June and October responded to the growing opposition to CHL by joining in the following actions:



1) overwhelming approval of a S.A.F.E. resolution to prevent the Commonwealth of Massachusetts from siting a sludge dump at the CHL landfill

2) an overwhelming vote in favor of defining a landfill as a structure

3) a 60 percent majority vote in favor of rezoning which, while it fell just short of the two-thirds vote required for passage, nonetheless clearly expressed the majority opinion in opposition to playing Russian roulette with our water supply.

It is the intention of S.A.F.E. to continue to work with town boards, state agencies and concerned citizens of Cohasset to find the appropriate means to prevent further expansion at Cohasset Heights and to keep Cohasset safe for future generations.

Linda T. Keller
Secretary, S.A.F.E.
Cushing Road

Town meeting voters passed a citizen petition amendment to the zoning bylaw that would define landfills as "structures" which will limit future expansion of Cohasset Heights Limited.

Bush selects mediocrity at every turn

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner columnist

The only thing United States Republican Senators didn't call Professor Anita Hill last week was a lesbian for refusing Judge Clarence Thomas' charms. But they wondered about it. Here's what they did call her:

"Scorned woman."
"Out of Control."
"Experiencing fantasy."
"Politically motivated."
"Unstable."
"Perjurious."

Nothing unique about any of that.

Men say those things about women all the time. They're put-down control statements.

Sure Professor Hill could be lying about Judge Thomas.

And, Judge Thomas could be a secret porno flick watcher and like to talk dirty.

A third scenario is that both parties are correct; but that nothing is as bad as it seemed.

What I learned from watching the judiciary committee hearings:

Judge Thomas whined alot about how unfair all of this was. Almost all the time. And once he started whining all the Republican Senators started whining, too, about how unfair it was it got leaked, and how the press is a bum. This got very tiring. The prize is, after all, a lifetime job.

Remember the indignation when Watergate was leaked? I remember my mother calling me from Pennsylvania (Land of Nixon) complaining about the rotten press. After the Watergate hearings I asked my dad how he felt about Nixon now. He said: "Well, he lied to us."

Well, that's true. People certainly do lie. Just about all the time.

commentary

The U.S. Senate was aware of Professor Anita Hill's confidential allegations well before last week. They didn't act on it. Apparently they didn't consider it important. Until the leak.

Two high school girls wondered what any of this had to do with Judge Thomas' qualifications and ultimate nomination to the U.S. Supreme Court.

I asked them if they thought his being the former director of the EEOC might make a difference. They said why? I said do you know what the EEOC is? They said no. After I told them they said yeah, it might have a bearing.

Several people wondered why she followed him to his next job at the EEOC. Well, lots of people (men and women) hate their bosses; they stay because they need the job; because they love the job; because they need the experience on their resume.

Many people wondered why she didn't file charges.

Maybe because she worked at the EEOC and saw what happened to women who filed charges: mostly they lost their jobs. Ultimately, they lose their jobs. Does anybody know what happened to the Herald's Lisa Owens? - sexually harassed by several Patriots football players.

Angela Wright, a second person from the EEOC office who claimed sexual harassment, was described in a daily newspaper as having burned other "bridges," and having a "history" of making sexual harassment claims. What does history mean? Twice? Thrice? The message was: Angela's a troublemaker; nice girls don't complain.

In EEOC jargon, a "bridge~ is the highest person in one's field and/or life. Thomas was Hill's bridge.

And of course Prof. Hill wouldn't have been just

Update on MWRA Bills

The summer and fall of 1991 may be remembered for the period of time where the people and the Legislature finally began to challenge the completely independent status of the MWRA, and its unchecked policies. The five bills that I have co-signed are all progressing through the Legislative process. House Bill numbers 6142, 6143, 6144 and 6145 have all been admitted to the Joint Committee on Natural Resources and await a public hearing. Some of the objectives these bills would accomplish are the elimination of the added 15 cents/ 1,000 gallon tax to MWRA ratepayers, stopping the creation of another agency within the Authority, and rescinding the recent MWRA pay hike.

The other bill, S1643 has already received one public hearing in Boston by the State Administration Committee. Further hearings throughout the MWRA district are scheduled before that Committee under an official verdict on the bill, however supporters are optimistic. S1643 represents an attempt to significantly alter the structure of the MWRA.

Hibiscus for culturing

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its monthly meeting on Tuesday, Oct. 22, at 9:30 a.m. at the Walton Rodgers Hall. Lois Weltman will share her knowledge on Hibiscus culturing and Annette Sechen will present a bulb forcing workshop with all members of the club invited to participate.

Be sure to check your newsstand this week for the holiday issue of Colonial Homes. It will have a lovely spread on Cohasset featuring the Lothrop House and other homes decorated by members of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset. Remember that this is also the year that this club will hold its House Tour. Plans for this event are coming along well and tickets will be available soon.

Since the Lothrop House was photographed in Colonial Homes, it has received a new lawn, compliments of the Community Garden Club. Additional plantings will soon be seen also.

Update on AIDS

The Social Service League and the Cohasset Board of Health will present an "Update on AIDS," on Monday, Oct. 28 at 7:30 p.m. at Walton Rodgers Hall (St. Stephen's Church) in Cohasset. The program will include a panel discussion on the medical and social aspects of AIDS, complications and other conditions resulting from AIDS that are of concern to the community, and services and support groups that are available to P.W.A.'s (persons with AIDS) and their families in the South Shore area. A question and answer period will follow the presentation.

Panelists will be:

• Brother Benet Hill N/BSG, R.N., president of the Board of Directors of the South Shore AIDS project and a registered nurse with the I.V. Team of the Boston VNA.

• Kim Horte, R.N., AIDS clinical nurse with the Brockton VNA;

• George Mulligan LICSW AIDS coordinator with the Brockton VNA who will accompany a P.W.A. who will also take part in the discussion.

The program is free of charge and all area residents are urged to take advantage of this unique opportunity to learn more about this major Public Health problem that in some way will touch all of us in the future. Please call the Social Service League at 383-0771 or 383-0821 for more information.

Special events at CCC

The Cohasset Community Center is planning a seminar for those recently divorced, currently going through a divorce or contemplating this step. Led by Dr. Michael McNamara and Neal Brown on Monday, Oct. 21, 7:30 to 10 p.m. at the nominal fee of $15, these experts on finance and the law will teach women how to make intelligent investment and budgetary choices.

Men may find themselves with new financial responsibilities that are difficult to meet. Also, starting another life and retiring comfortably are real problems to be faced.

A babysitting course for ages 10 and over starts on Wednesday, oct. 30 from 3:30 to 5 p.m. The material is covered in a four-week session at a cost of $28. Linda Farrag, R.N. will stress better understanding of young children and infants. Their care and safety, as well as other practical tips will be covered. Participants will learn what is expected from a babysitter. Topics include first aid, fire safety, entertaining young children, child development and nutrition. An extensive babysitter's manual will be given to students.

The first Teen Dance of the season will be held on Friday, Oct. 18, from 7:30 to 10 p.m. Grades 7 to 10 from the surrounding areas of Hull, Scituate and Hingham are cordially invited to attend. Admission is $5 at the door.

A D.J. and light show are featured.

The Center offers a New England art form for those of us who favor Early American or French Country decor. A cut and pierced lampshade workshop will take place here at the Center on Saturday, Oct. 19 from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. There is a fee of $30. Patience, not talent, is the most important ingredient for participation. At the end of one Saturday's labor, you will have a 5"x8"x6" lampshade ready to use. Learn how to design and color and cut and pierce a flat arc, assemble the shade and add a rim. Printed directions and individual attention will boost your confidence. Please bring a hand towel, wax paper, a pencil, scissors, two small cans and your lunch.

For more information or to register for any of these courses, please call the Center at 383-0088.

Pre-Retirement seminar

During the month of November, the Cohasset Council on Aging will sponsor a four part Pre-Retirement Planning Seminar. Michael McNamara, host of McNamara and Money, will conduct this four part series, the first one to be held on Saturday, Nov. 2, from 10 a.m. to noon, at the Cohasset Council on Aging Office at 3 North Main Street, Cohasset.

This first session will cover Financial Planning and will cover such topics as: Cash Flow and Budgeting, Lifestyle Changes and Adjustments and Projecting Retirement Income Needs.

Session two covers Assessing Your Financial Situation. It will be held Saturday, Nov. 9.

Session three is Investment Planning. It will be held Saturday, Nov. 16.

Session four is Insurance and Estate Planning. It will be held Saturday, Nov. 23.

The cost of this entire series is $20. Space is limited so make reservations by calling the Cohasset Council on Aging at 383-9112.

Concert Oct. 27

Subscriptions for the 46th season of the Hingham Civic Orchestra are on sale now as the orchestra prepares for the fall concert on Sunday, Oct. 27, at 4 p.m. This concert, as well as most of the others in the season will take place at the Hingham Civic Orchestra's new permanent home, Brandon Woods of Hingham, 110 Charles Street.

In addition to the fall concert, the subscription series includes the Yuletide Concert, Sunday, Dec. 8, at the Old Ship Church, the Children's Concert, Saturday, Feb. 8, the spring concert, Sunday, April 5, and the POPS Concerts, Friday and Saturday evenings, May 15 and 16. Not part of the subscription is the traditional outdoor concert at Glastonbury Abbey on Sunday, June 7.

Subscription prices are as follows: Family pass $55, individual $30, students and seniors $18. For additional information or to order a subscription please call Caroline Baldwin at 749-1242.

turning in any old boss. "Chairman" Thomas was then the United States President's man in charge of job discrimination claims.

Prof. Hill was upset; she was not suicidal.

"Judge Thomas is a decent man; I don't blame him for refusing to listen to her filthy testimony," said the woman who was wrong about Nixon.

I told her that EEOC requires that accused persons face their accusers during a hearing (maybe not on national TV). But Thomas knew how it worked. Was he above EEOC policy?

Another person wondered why four pages of Anita's FBI testimony wasn't as specific as her eight hours of verbal testimony before the judiciary committee.

Four pages of 8-1/2 x 11 testimony is about as long as this column. Eight hours of verbal testimony, with U.S. Senators demanding specifics, might well add up to 30,000 pages of specifics.

Judge Thomas said he was very angry.

Not half as angry as the American public should be.

My issue is with President Bush.

Why does he continually reach to the bottom of the barrel to select mediocrity?

Under what bush did he find his quayle?

From what prehistoric cave did he dig up Chief Justice Souter?

And how is it that this man, this legal eagle, this brilliant man Judge Thomas never discussed his opinion on Roe vs. Wade, and told senators that over a 20-year period he really didn't believe what he said in his speeches, and even less of what he had written.

When Ms. Alvarez, a former aide to Judge Thomas, was asked if Judge Thomas had ever discussed pornography with her, she said:

"Not in the office."

Then where did he discuss it with her? – inquiring minds want to know.

The senator never followed up on the question.

By John Kinchla

The "new kids" on the junior high school sports scene this ice hockey season all hail from Cohasset. The "kids" are sponsored in the Pilgrim Arena's Junior High Ice Hockey League by Leo Fiori's Exxon on Route 3A.

Fiori is Cohasset's youth sports mogul. In the past, he has sponsored the Little League Champion Red Sox and the Cohasset High Boys Ice Hockey Team (The Tigers). He is now venturing into the junior high sports scene with the Tiger Cubs.

Fiori's Cubs roared onto the ice and pressured the Bridgewater Raynham Rangers (a select team from the Bridgewater/Raynham/Brockton area) for the first eight minutes of their season opening contest. However after twenty minutes the Cubs were down 2 to 0.

Matt O'Connor played stellar defense as Brendan Kinchla and Dave Noble had three breakaway attempts in this first 20 minute time frame.

Kevin Smith attempted to hold back the tide with his diving determined defense but the Rangers had a physical advantage with several players towering over the opposing Cubs.

Cohasset had several great opportunities at the 33 minute mark when Dave Noble tried three times from the left side to penetrate the B/R goal. Jared Graves and Greg Schultz kept the left side buttoned down with excellent defense until B/R found a seam in the Cohasset zone going across center ice from left to right.

Nevin Bunstien tried to provide some offensive spark at the 30 minute mark, but Cohasset couldn't get his rebound past the B/R goalie. At this juncture Jeremy Williams replaced Kevin McKenna in the Cohasset net. McKenna had every reason to feel triumphant despite the 3 to 0 score, both goalies played solidly in this contest.

Dave Hansen played well at center with Jeff Thompson on his wing as both boys kept hunting for that first Cohasset goal.

Cohasset's offense kept sweeping into the B/R end and the Cubs defense played a quiet and steady game. The Cubs had three practice games with select teams prior to this game with Bridgewater Raynham. This fourth game as a team dramatized that the Cubs are improving.

Synchronized swimming

The Cohasset Swim Center under the direction of Abbie White presented an end of season water show.

Coach Dawn Meehan had high praise for all the swimmers.

Cohasset girls swimming in the show were Dawn Meehan, Abbie White, Jill Magner , Katy Whitehouse, Elizabeth Ingber, Mareth Collins-Wooley, Jennifer Meehan, Jamie Kurtz and Taylor Strecker.

The Synchronized Swimmers gather for an end of the season celebration.

Homecoming was sweet

Sugar Ray Jones gallops in for one of four touchdowns in the first half of the game against St. Clement's Saturday.

A 'Ray' markable homecoming for Skipper football

By Michael Farley
Mariner Sports Writer

After being on the road for its first four games, the Cohasset Skippers came back to their own playground and feasted on some home cooking in the form of the St. Clement's football team.

With a punishing ground attack led by junior running back Ray Jones, the Skippers scored early and often in the process of mutilating its feeble opponent by the score of 36-6. The game was really no contest from the opening minutes, as Cohasset ran up a 22-0 lead by the end of the first half.

The story, however, was the continued offensive exploits of one Ray Jones. A possible page from the Cohasset playbook might look something like this:

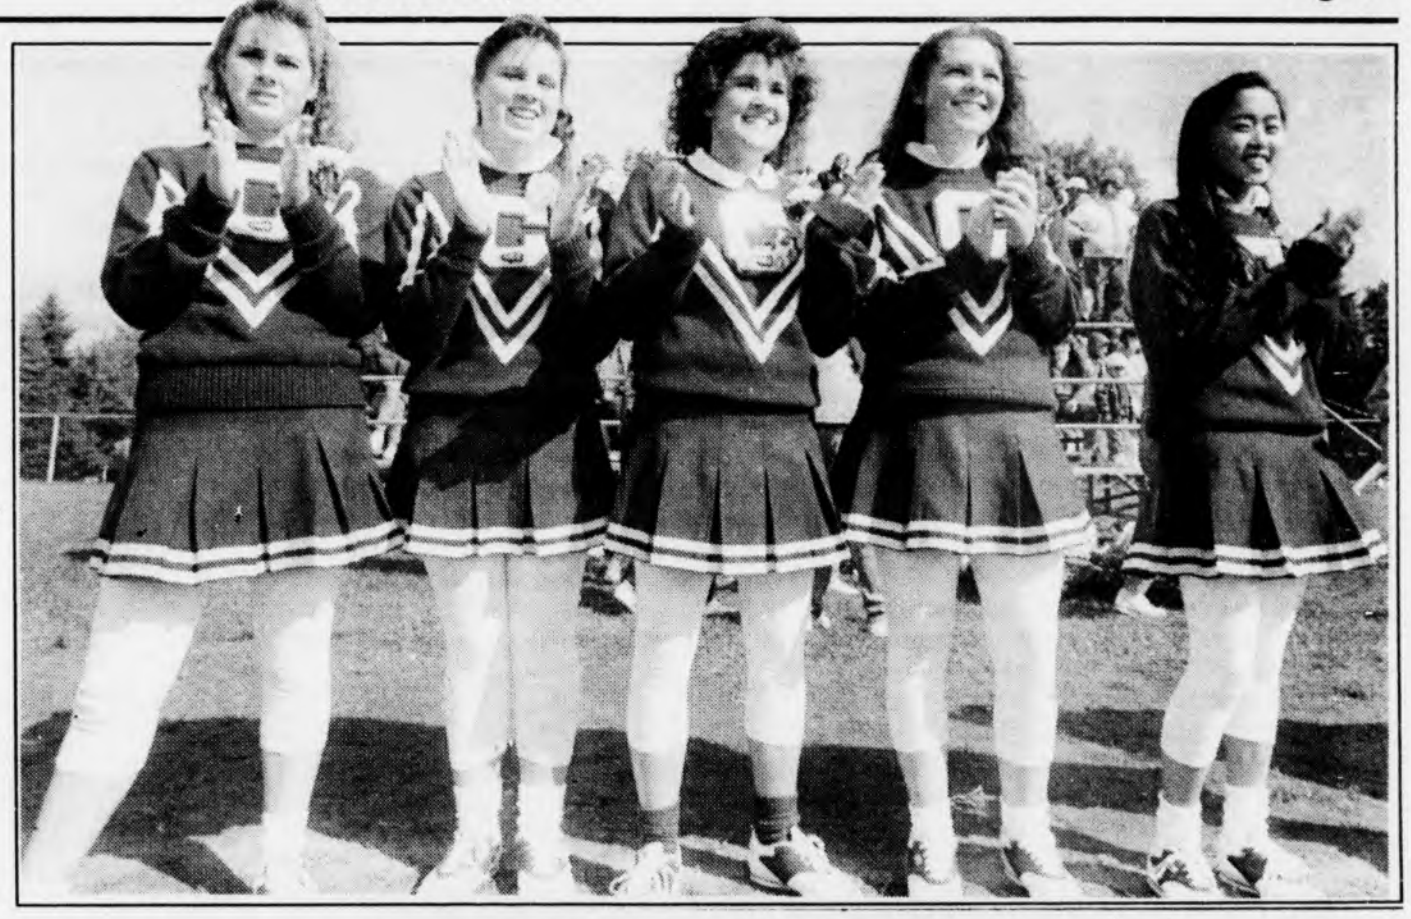
Ray Jones up the middle.

Ray Jones - touchdown.

In all, Ray Jones would make it into the St. Clement's endzone four times, three by land and one by air. He would amass 147 total yards for the afternoon

Cohasset's offense was stern — including Tim Conroy, 74, Matt Keefe, 7, and backs Chris Rolandelli, 34, and Sean Mulligan, 29.



Homecoming King Carlo Lagrotteria and his Homecoming Queen Amy Gallant were crowned during ceremonies Oct. 12 at halftime.

The Skippers initial touchdown drive began with 2:35 left in the first quarter following a St. Clement's punt. Jones was responsible for Cohasset's opening three plays, picking up a first down on a third down and five carry. Cohasset managed to work its way down to the St. Clement's five yard line with the second quarter under way, and Jones went to work. Taking advantage of some power blocking in the trenches, Jones was able to dance his way by the St. Clement's defense for his first touchdown. Coach McDermott decided to go for the two point conversion and junior Sean Milligan obliged with a second effort through the right side for the 8-0 mark.

Feeling the pressure to keep up, the defense showed its force on the ensuing series of plays with senior Brendan McCarthy rallying the troops. On first and ten at the St. Clement's 30, McCarthy, with help from sophomore Chris Rolandelli, threw St. Clement's for a one yard loss. Then on 2nd and eleven, McCarthy teamed up with junior

Undefeated streak ends, but girls still earning points

By Michael Farley
Mariner Sports Writer

Heading into last Tuesday's game against a young and inexperienced Carver team, the Cohasset girls soccer contingent was seeking to continue its seven game unbeaten streak. No problem, as the Skippers lit up the scoreboard with a 7-1 thrashing of Carver.

The streak would come to a halt though in their next contest with Abington. Despite outshooting the Green Wave, 15-7, Cohasset could not muster enough offense to overcome the 2-1 deficit before heading back to their backyard for a homecoming celebration at the expense of Stoughton Saturday afternoon.

At Carver, the league's leading scorer and Cohasset's own Jen Reidy kicked in with three goals. Coach Kenan Startzell's team experienced an early scare in the opening moments with Carver striking first just three minutes into the contest. Have no fear. Faster than you can say "blowout," junior midfielder Allison Ludlow put the Skippers on the board for the game tying goal and Cohasset would pour six more unanswered goals on the Carver defense for the 7-1 final.

The showdown of the week had the Skippers playing host to Abington, which took advantage of a fortunate bounce late in the first half. The Jen Reidy - Erin Murphy was the headline act once again as the senior forward was the benefactor of another Murphy set up. With Cohasset up 1-0, Abington capitalized on a deflection to even the score.

"Abington only had two shots on goal in the second half, but managed to score on one of them," mentioned coach Startzell. Down by a goal with time running out, the Skippers pushed on.

"The girls pressed hard for the last two minutes, but just couldn't convert," added the coach.

Needing just five more points with six games remaining, Cohasset entertained themselves and the fans at homecoming by watching Stoughton fall like leaves in autumn in the face of a barrage of offense from Cohasset's front lines. Cohasset pounced on Stoughton and continued to suffocate the opponent's defense in the process of establishing a 4-0 margin in the first half.

Jen Reidy took the honors for the Skippers' first goal of the day on a breakaway down the middle and punched it by the Stoughton goalie. Reidy decided to give her sidekick Erin Murphy a little glory on a well timed centering pass from the left sideline. Murphy took the pass in stride and whistled one through the posts for a 2-0 lead. After a tally from junior midfielder Kathleen O'Brien, freshman midfielder Martina Snyder felt it was time to show her stuff.

Snyder broke past the Stoughton defense while one of her teammates floated a high kick up over the opposition. The goalie fumbled the ball, and Snyder outraced her, gaining control and sneaking a shot by for the fourth mark of the half. Cohasset would add one more before the afternoon succumbed to linebacker Steve Cahill to force a third and long situation.

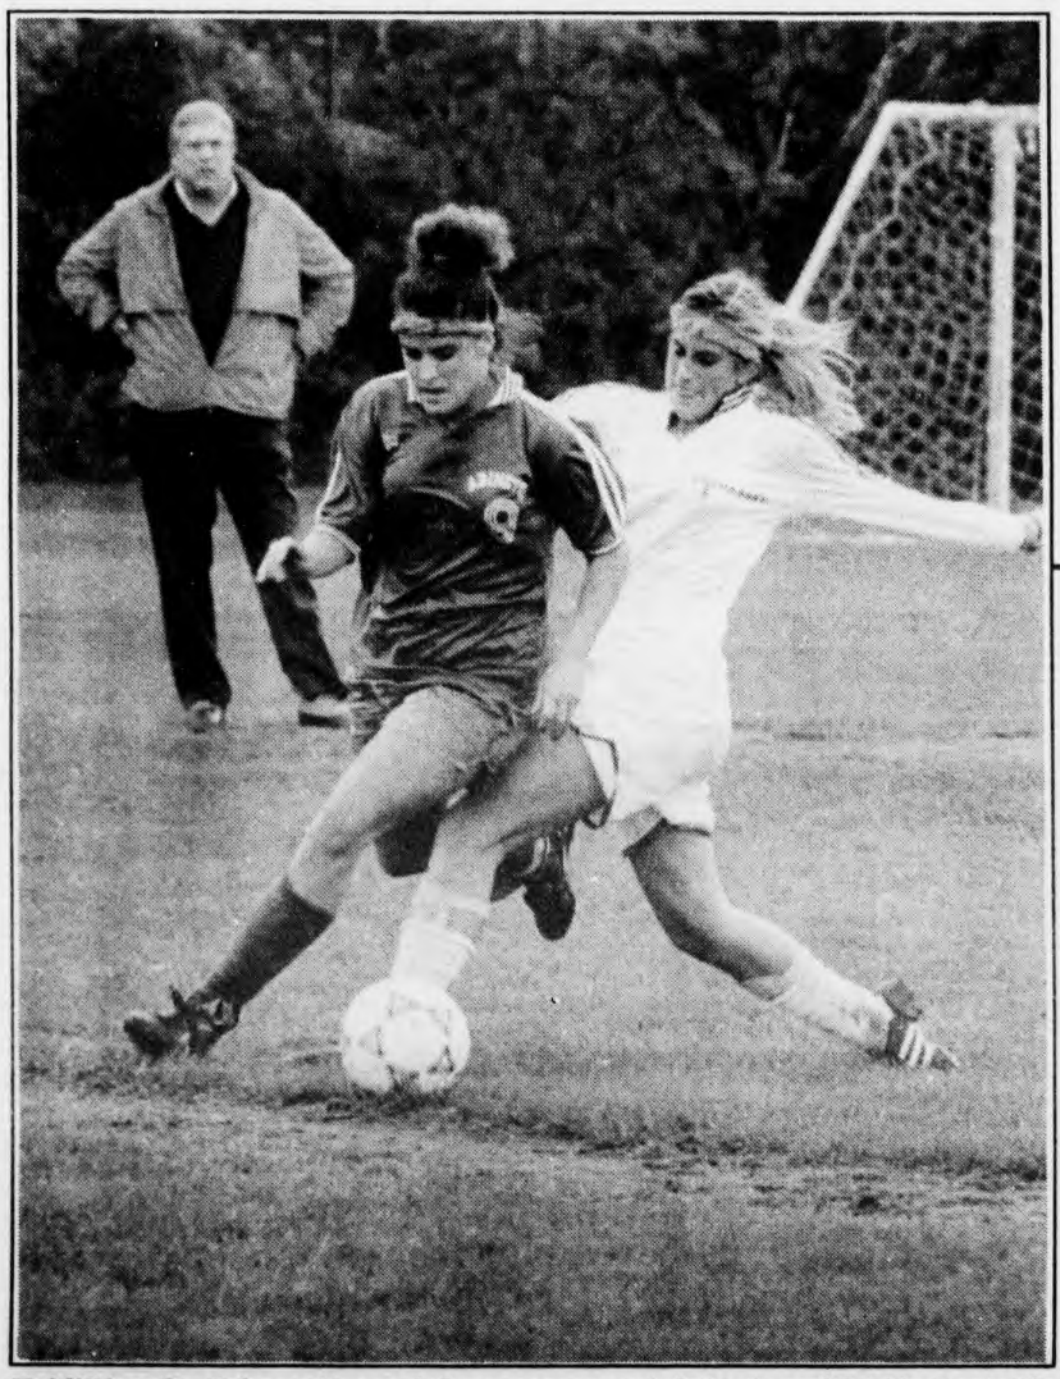
St. Clements squeaked out a first down, but the defense kept applying the pressure. Sophomore defensive tackle Andy Church worked his way into the St. Clement's backfield and just missed a sack on a third down play, forcing an incomplete pass and creating a fourth down and 14.

The next offensive play from scrimmage began at the Cohasset 25 yard line and ended in the St. Clement endzone. Quarterback Matt Keefe found Jones on a short crossing route over the middle and then watched along with the rest of the way for a 71 yard touchdown completion. Who went for the two? Ray. Keefe handed off to number 25 who walked through a gaping hole opened by the front line making the score 16-0.



Like clockwork, it was the defense which came in and convinced the St. Clement's offense to take the day off, setting up the Skipper offense to march onto the field to do more damage.

After a key third down and nine connection from Keefe to senior tight end Charles Shield, the Skipper train steamrolled its way deep into its opponent's territory to set up the third Ray Jones score. On first and ten, just outside the 10 yard line, Keefe saw Jones in the back of the endzone, but unfortunately, so did a St. Clement defender as he tipped the pass just enough to break up the bid. However, the dam soon broke as the Cohasset front six surged like high tide during a hurricane, giving Ray (and perhaps a busload of family and friends) enough room to stroll through for his third touchdown of the day. The extra point failed, and Cohasset would enter the locker room at the half with a 22 point cushion. The lead was protected by a late interception by Matt Keefe just prior to the intermission.

The second half opened with the Skippers taking over on downs early, and the Jones show continued its act on second and six from the Cohasset 39 yard line.

Ray cradled the handoff, and glided along the left side of the line, turned upfield and galloped down the sideline before cutting back against the grain while leaving two defenders looking for their shoes. By the time it was over, Ray had notched his fourth touchdown of the game, giving his team a 28-0 lead. Cohasset would score once more before St. Clements salvaged a last gasp touchdown drive for the 36-6 final.

Field hockey team finishes on a positive note

By Michael Farley
Mariner Sports Writer

On paper, coach Deb Bostwick's girls are playing out the schedule. On the field, they're playing out their hearts. After a tie against Scituate virtually eliminated the Skippers from post-season contention, they were faced with the challenge of wrapping up the schedule without an emotional letdown. Cohasset responded by dishing out defeats to East Bridgewater and Carver, respectively.

Last Wednesday, the Skippers traveled to East Bridgewater and packed a 2-0 victory into their road luggage. After an uneventful first half, the teams headed to their respective benches with the game tied at zero.

"The girls were very blah in the first half, and I could only thank God for their skill level," were the words of Bostwick.

"I called a timeout and gave them a pep talk. I told them that we were a better team," she continued.

Bostwick injected just the right amount of pep as the girls struck first in the second half on a goal from Danielle Shaughnessy, the junior inner, assisted by sophomore link Katie Norris. Norris executed a crisp push pass to Shaughnessy, who converted.

The second goal came from junior inner Sarah Douglas, who was "crating havoc for the opposition" all day long, according to Bostwick. The tally was engineered with 40 seconds left in the game, as sweeper Katie O'Connor fed the ball to Corkery who found Douglas. Douglas exploited a rare opening left by the Viking goalie, who had played phenomenally throughout the contest.

The Skippers then took their traveling show, victory in hand, down to cranberry country to play the role of unwanted guest in Carver. Carver entered the match with a 4-0-5 record, but was faced with the task of playing a tenacious group of Cohasset girls who had been left off the dance card for Cohasset's homecoming festivities. They took out their frustration on Carver with a second consecutive shutout, 2-0.

The strategy heading into the contest was to shore up the defense, as Bostwick shifted two of her sweepers, Karyn Murray and senior tri-captain Stacey Pierce, back to defense. Proceeding to operate with two links and three forwards, the Skippers jumped out to a 1-0 lead as sophomore wing Cilla Goff hooked up with Danielle Shaughnessy for the eventual game winner. Shaughnessy would again benefit from Goff's generous play-making capability for Cohasset's insurance goal.

"We all played great today. My defense was really strong, the offense had shot after shot, and Becky (Golden, soph. goalie) really kept her head in the game," boasted an excited coach Bostwick.

In addition to the nucleus of starters, the coach could not help but praise the play of her supporting cast.

Road race for drug treatment

Project Turnabout, Inc. will be holding its third annual Road Race and Fun Run/Walk on Sunday, Nov. 10 in Hingham,to raise funds to support their drug treatment program on the South Shore. The 10k Road Race and 2 mile Fun Run/Walk will start at the Hingham High School, 41 Pleasant Street, go into Wompatuck State Park and back to the high school.

The 10k Road Race will start at 11:30 a.m.; the pre-entry fee is $7 if postmarked by Nov. 1; post-entry fee is $8 if postmarked after Nov. 1 or received on the day of the race. The 2 mile Fun Run/Walk will start at 10:30 a.m.; the pre-entry fee is $5 if postmarked by Nov. 1; post-entry fee is $6. Registration will start at 9:30 a.m. and runners may register for either event on the day of the race.

Running gloves will be given to the first 100 entrants. Awards will be given to the first three male and female runners in the following categories: Youth (to 18 yrs); Open (19 to 39); Masters (40 to 49); seniors (50+).

Project Turnabout is a non-profit, residential drug treatment program located in Hingham. The money raised from this event will be used to support current operations. According to George Smart, Executive Director, "Due to the state fiscal crisis, this year alone we have already been subjected to two budget cuts, with a possible third cut coming up. We have already had to cut back on staff positions, and any further cuts could severely limit the number of new clients we can treat. On the average, we receive 12 calls each week from people looking to enter a treatment program. We currently have a waiting list of 15 individuals for whom we do not have a bed available.

Project Turnabout has been providing this much needed treatment service for over 20 years. This is the only program of this kind to serve the residents of the South Shore. This successful program has enabled many individuals to turn their lives around and become successful and productive citizens in our community.

For further information about the Road Race or the program itself, contact Martha Hawkins at 749-6320.

recreation report

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a four week Landscape Design Course to be taught by Greg Bilowz, Landscape and Environmental Design architect.

The program is scheduled to begin on Wednesday evening, Nov. 13, at 7:30 p.m., at Cohasset High School meeting weekly to Wednesday, Dec. 11. The fee for this unique opportunity is $32 per person and class must be limited in size. To register please call the Cohasset

The course outline follows:

Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

Basic Horticulture Practices: Including propagation techniques, pruning, soil preparation, fertilization, mulching, edging and how to survey your land.

Seaside Landscaping: Methods of overcoming the elements and creating wind breaks for delicates.

British Gardens: A slide presentation of Britain's finest gardens, including Bodnant Garden, Hidecote Mannor, Knightshayes Court, to name a few.

Class Project: Class members to plot a section yard and design an improvement scheme for the site. Participants will need to bring a piece of graph paper, pencil and ruler to this class.

Bilowz holds a B.S. degree in Environmental Design from U. Mass and an M.A. degree from the University of Sheffield, England and has been actively involved in the field for fourteen years, specializing in Coastal Landscape design.

Due to restrictions of class size, early registration is advised for this program and should demand warrant, a second class could be established.

Special Events

Anyone interested in attending the Thursday, Nov. 14, Wang Center performance "The Music of Andrew Lloyd Webber" and/or the Boston Ballet Sunday, Dec. 1, performance of the "Nutcracker," may call the recreation department office at 383-6791, for further details.

The price for each performance is $35 and includes bus transportation and cost of admission. Buses leave from Scituate Town Hall at 6:30 p.m. for the "Music of Andrew Lloyd Webber," on Thursday, Nov. 14, and at 12:15 p.m. for the performance on Sunday, Dec. 1, for the "Nutcracker." Should enough Cohasset residents register, buses will stop at Cohasset Town Hall as well at the above approximate times.

Deadlines for registrations are Oct. 17, and Nov. 1.

Aerobic Circuit Training

Aerobic Circuit Training Classes will be taught by Margret Watson.

Aerobic Circuit Training combines muscle building benefits for weight training with cardio-vascular benefits of aerobic exercise, all in one class.

The hour long classes will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6:15 to 7:15 p.m., in the auditorium of Town Hall.

Each class consists of a group warm-up, circuit exercise using free weights, with aerobic activities interspersed throughout the circuit and a cool down and stretch.

Whether a beginner, or accomplished exerciser, circuit training will be the most efficient workout. Lose weight, burn fat, build muscle, improve cardio-vascular efficiency/condition and achieve total fitness through aero-circuit training. The fitness concept of the 90s.

Program fees for this self-supporting program will be $32 for eight, one-hour classes. Circuit training is conducted continuously on a year round basis and the $32 is applicable towards any eight classes. That is, consecutive classes, or classes may be taken more intermittently. Checks are payable to: Town of Cohasset and are due upon registration at class.

Late registrations for some programs will be accepted and fees will be prorated accordingly. Late registrations will be accepted for both soccer Clinics grades K-2, and soccer leagues, grades 3 to 7, as well as grades K to 3 afterschool sports and games programs. If interested please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at: 383-6791 as soon as possible.

Should program fee charges represent undue financial burden, please consult with the Recreation Commission.

Halloween Fair

The Cohasset Community Center's annual Halloween Fair will be held on Sunday, Oct. 27 from 1 to 3 p.m. on the Common.

Children of all ages will gather in their Halloween costumes to partake in an afternoon of fun and laughter. The fair will begin with the traditional costume parade around the Common followed by many special activities and "games of skill." Activities include cupcake decorating and apple creature creations.

This year some new games have been added for the children to enjoy. Be sure to stop by "The Fish Pond," "Duck Pond" and "Tip the Dolls" in the circle of games. Last year's game of chance, "Lucky Lollipop" was such a success that another has been added; the children will delight in "Apple Picking."

Every child will leave each game or activity with a prize or something to eat. Face painting, balloons and refreshment stands will complete an afternoon of fair-going.

Pumpkins decorated for the Pumpkin Contest should be dropped off at the Common at noon. Pumpkins will be judged in many categories, each one is sure to be a winner.

Tickets for all games and activities may be purchased at the fair; tickets are four for $1. Most games will cost 50 cents to play.

The Cohasset Community Center Nursery School sponsors this event for the enjoyment of all!

It was Evie Dorr Day last Saturday as CHS celebrated a Dorr-like victory over St. Clement's on the football field. Everett Dorr, center, was honored by friends and former colleagues in the Cohasset school system for his years of dedicated service. In this picture are the town officials past and present who turned out for the tribute. The upper gymnasium at CHS was dedicated in Mr. Dorr's honor. A suitable sign is in place. (PLD photo)

Child abuse prevention written into curriculum

By Lisa B. Eigner
Mariner staff

Child abuse prevention is already part of the public school curriculum.

School committee heard about the new area of study last Wednesday.

Students in grades K-12 will be better equip to fend off potentially dangerous situations, acording to officials who know of no other school system taking such an extensive approach.

Developed by health education coordinator Michael Gill. the curriculum was designed to educate students on an "age appropriate" basis, starting with the basics for kindergartners and moving up to a more intricate curriculum for high school seniors.

Included within the more than 150-page curriculum/ workbook are sections on:

• goals for sexual abuse prevention (kindergarten and grade 2);

• main points children need to know about sexual abuse;

• kindergarten— sexual abuse prevention— "Little Bear" program;

• grade 1— physical abuse prevention— "Sometimes it's O.K. to tattle";

• grade 2— sexual abuse prevention— "Some secrets should be told";

• grade 3— personal safety while at home alone— "Home alone";

• grade 3— identifying community support systems— "Who do you tell";

• grade 4— emotional abuse prevention— "Some scars do not show";

• grade 5— sexual abuse prevention— "Yes you can say no";

• grade 6— sexual abuse prevention— "No more secrets"; and

• grade 7-12— sexual abuse prevention

"The most practical reason for educators to become involved in the identification, treatment and prevention of child abuse and neglect are part of the every day reality of working with and for children," said Gill.

In the introduction of the booklet, Gill writes that, "schools are the only environment where children are seen daily, over periods of time by professionals trained to observe their appearance and behavior."

In the program, Gill stresses five core points that form the foundation of his curriculum. These points were adapted from the Child Abuse Prevention Project, Illusion Theater, Minn.eapolis, Minn.

"Sexual abuse is any sexual contact between a young child and an adult, even in the absence of coercion or force," states the first point.

"No one, even a friend or relative, has a right to do

Eastern Edison promises more

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Geographic location and Mother Nature's bounty do not always work to Cohasset's advantage — at least not when it comes to restoring electrical service after a hurricane.

That's the bad news from Eastern Edison respresentatives. The good news is that they are doing all they can to minimize the problems created by geography and trees.

Representatives of the utility came to town Monday night to answer questions about their response to power outages caused by Hurricane Bob. They also took suggestions for improving their response in the future.

According to Barbara Hassan, vice president of Eastern Edison's Brockton Division, all of the electrical power for Cohasset is carried on lines from Scituate and Norwell. Cohasset is, literally, the end of the line for Eastern Edison service. If the Civil Defense directors of Scituate and Norwell request a power shutoff, as they did in the aftermath of Hurricane Bob, Cohasset loses its power.

Falling branches and downed trees cause most of the power outages in Cohasset according to utility respresentatives and local officials. Some of those

A Kennedy advance woman gives advice

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

Long before Camelot there was a young woman who, like the Kennedys, had lots of children and much love and fervor for her town, her family, her neighbors.

While anybody else might have thought it was quite enough to have produced seven children in eight years; to have completely renovated one's home; be involved in kid things and help to found the Cohasset League of Women Voters....Ann Whelan had some time to spare, so she gave it to the Democratic party.

From the early 1950s through 1960, Ann Whelan travelled all over the country with the John and Robert Kennedy campaigns as one of five Kennedy Advance Women. Her personal history of the years she spent, and the people and issues she met, is on tape at the Kennedy Library, waiting for a writer.

THE EARLY YEARS

Ann Flaherty Whelan grew up in Milton. "In those days it was a very Yankee community - we were the first Catholics on our street.

She graduated from Framingham State College where she had studied to be a dietician, and continued her studies in Europe. After teaching in the Boston Public Schools she met and married her husband, Jim Whelan (a current member of the Government Structure Committee).

"In those days it was a disgrace to work if you were

Phone company permit

Selectmen approved a request from New England Telephone to install an underground conduit and vault at the intersection of Route 3A and King Street. Voicing concerns about the safety of the intersection, selectmen made their approval contingent on a possible reconfiguration or reconstruction of the intersection.

According to the telephone company representative, construction is not expected to begin until April or May. The vault is expected to be erected entirely on state-owned land.

SAFE vs CHL, III

SAFE, the environmental group opposed to expansion plans at Cohasset Heights landfill, has tackled the existing landfill. They hope to flood the state Department of Environmental Protection with objections to the landfill.

Under a new state requirement, landfill operators must secure a permit to continue current operations. DEP is slated to make the decision on CHL's permit request by October 30. SAFE wants DEP to open a 21-day period for comments on that permit request.

SAFE raises concerns about odor, contamination of the public water supply, wetland damage and other environmental problems at the landfill site.

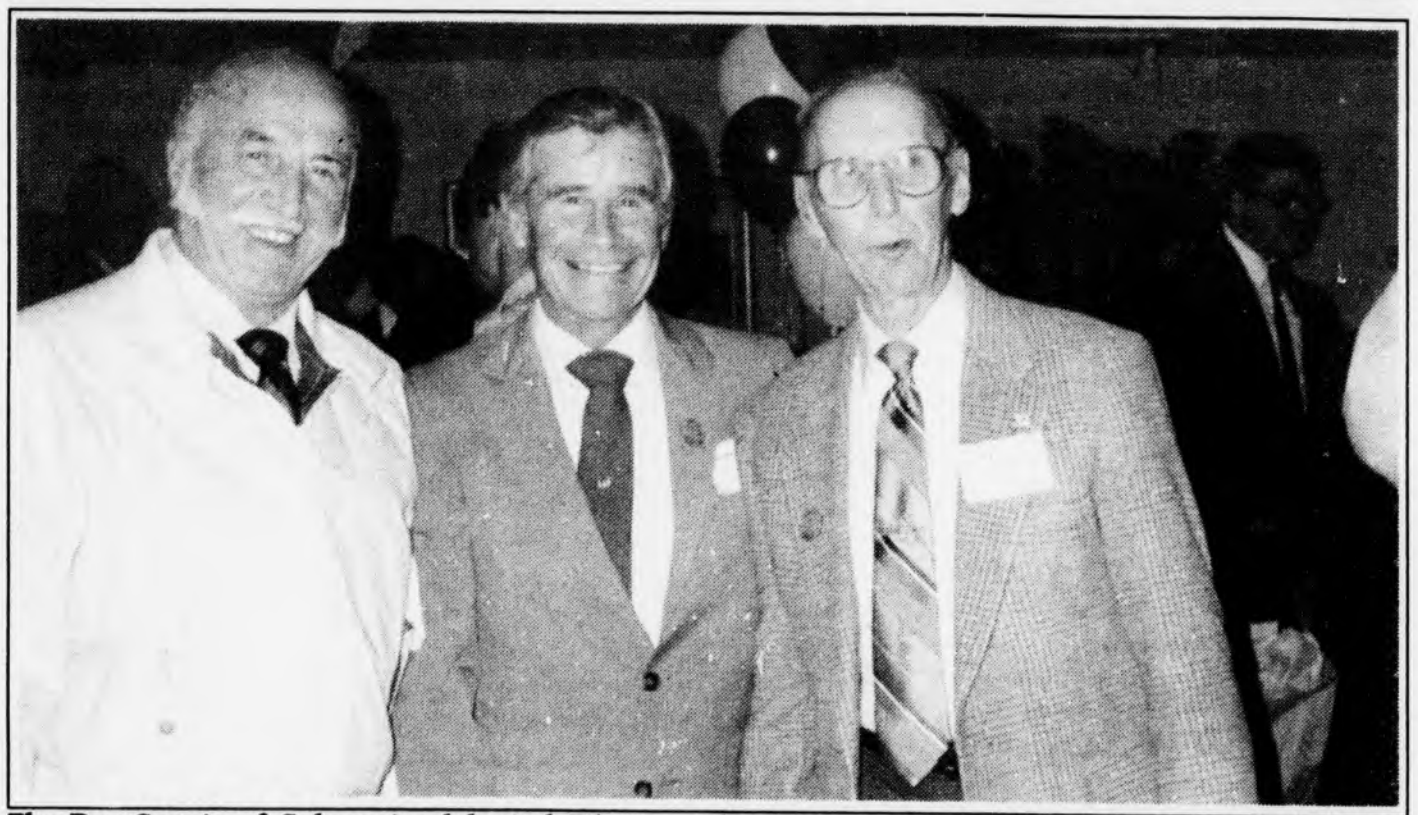
If the DEP grants a public comment period, their Oct. 30 decision will become provisional. The agency will have 30 days following the close of that period to issue a final decision.

The board of health and selectmen joined the effort by requesting a comment period as well.

The board of selectmen voted 4-0 to request the comment period.

Cushing Plaza auction

Cushing Plaza goes on the auction block Nov. 7 as part of a foreclosure action by a Rhode Island bank. Selectmen granted a permit to hold the auction, but noted the parties could resolve the matter before that date.



Old Stone Bank of Providence, R.I. took possession of the shopping center from Cape Elizabeth Realty Trust.

The 13-store operation suffered a series of vacant store fronts when major tenants went belly up, notably J. Bildner & Sons. Things seemed to stabilize this year, and three tenants recently sought to expand their operations.

The shopping center remains plagued by septic system problems caused by a high groundwater level. The Cohasset board of health has taken legal action to compel corrective measures.

When asked, selectmen said they had no information about the effect the auction would have on current tenants in the Plaza. However, they stressed that viable tenants in the complex make the property more desirable to potential buyers.

"I don't want the townspeople to panic, thinking there are going to be fire sales there," selectman Diana Kornet said.

The Boy Scouts of Cohasset celebrated 75 years of existence with a party at Kimball's By the Sea. Selectman Rocco Laugeli, Gordon Flint and Arthur Clarke, former selectmen's executive secretary and longtime official, were among the guests on hand to pay tribute to the Boy Scouts. (PLD photo)

Cohasset's week

Hauling all dories

Harbormaster Irv Gadow plans to pull the Margin Street and Lawrence Wharf floats during the week of Nov. 1. All skiff and dinghy owners must remove their boats before that date, according to Gadow.

If the harbormaster is shutting up shop, can winter be far behind?

The Renaissance continues

Not content to rest on their laurels — or town pumps, in this case — the Village Renaissance people are cooking up plans to beautify Depot Court and make it safer for cars and pedestrians in the process.

Jackie Dormitzer and Beth Christoffel approached selectmen for authorization to go forward with plans to install a landscaped safety island at the intersection of Ripley Road, Depot Court and Pleasant Street.

Dormitzer and Christoffel described the intersection by South Shore Art Center and the town parking lot as causing confusion for motorists. They believe the island will improve the flow of traffic.

"It will also help tie in the village aesthetically with the town parking lot," Dormitzer said.

Local architect James Sandell has volunteered to assist in the design and planning of the intersection. Sandell served as architect to the town pump project as well.

Curiously enough, project organizers discovered the town had asked Norfolk County engineers to draft conceptual designs for safety improvements at the intersection in the '70s. Norfolk County engineer Al Downs turned up seven different designs prepared for the area.

Selectmen approved release of the designs to the citizen group. Doyon said Downs offered to meet with the group and explain each design in detail.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle told Dormitzer and Christoffel that Highway Superintendent Harold Litchfield would work with them. Laugelle said Litchfield could get the state to donate granite curbing to the project.

Child abuse prevention . . .

this," is the second.

"It's important to tell someone when you don't like the way you are being touched or treated," says the third.

The program's fourth point stresses that "sometimes, no matter what you do, you can't protect yourself. It is never your fault when this happens."

The final point representing the framework of Gill's project is that "sexual abuse should not be a secret. It's okay to talk about it. Tell adults. Keep telling until you find someone who will help stop the abuse."

The child abuse prevention program will continue until Nov. 1.

Eastern Edison promises more . . .

outages could be prevented or minimized by what utilities call "vegetation management" —or tree trimming in layman's terms. It's a form of management Cohasset residents don't cotton to.

"The public doesn't want their trees cut, but they want their power," selectman Rocco Laugelle said.

Wire Superintendent Stephen Wigmore put it more graphically as he described a Linden Drive resident chasing his crew out of the street to protect her trees from pruning.

Hassan said the problem wasn't unique to Cohasset.

"It is not received well," she said. "The only time people are receptive is the week they are without power. It continues to be an ongoing problem."

According to engineer John Hoffman, Cohasset would suffer more outages from tree and animal damage if the voltage carried by the lines was greater. He and Laugelle, who works for Eastern Edison, explained the higher voltage lines are frequently knocked out by squirrels and birds.

The advantage from lower voltage service becomes a disadvantage in a widespread power outages because the utility must restore service in a chain. The highest voltage lines must be brought back on line first, Hoffman said. Service work begins on the 110,000 volt lines. Cohasset lines only carry 4,000 volts.

Although the utility is constantly upgrading the lines to higher voltage levels, Laugelle said Cohasset really has no demand on electrical service that would justify installing the high voltage lines.

On more practical matters, Hassan explained that the utility had ordered outside work crews the Sunday before Hurricane Bob struck. Those teams could not be sent to Eastern Edison until their own companies determined that their areas were safe from the storm's effects, Hassan said. She said all teams were on their way to the South Shore Monday morning and the last one arrived Monday night.

Each outside crew had an Eastern Edison supervisor to coordinate activities. The crews were also assigned to restore service along a feeder line to reduce problems of unfamiliarity with a location.

"They don't need to know where they are, they just follow the line," Hassan explained.

In addition to regular work crews and out-of-town teams, every Eastern Edison employee, from clerical workers to executives, had a special hurricane assignment.

"We even called in retirees," Hassan told the selectmen.

The biggest challenge facing Eastern Edison is communication.

"This is the last piece of the puzzle I'm working on," Hassan said.

Many of the problems experienced during Hurricane Gloria were alleviated by improved telephone and information systems.

During the reign of Gloria, the utility only had 12 telephone lines. Today they have 36 customer lines, 16 of which are toll free lines. Additionally, there are special numbers for hearing impaired customers, customers with medical priorities, police and fire officials, and the designated municipal contact person. In an emergency, the utility mobilizes a back-up phone system for those special lines.

"We've done a lot to improve communication since Gloria," Hassan said. Unfortunately, it hasn't been glitch-free. During the hurricane emergency, the municipal phone line between the utility and Cohasset was out of service for a while.

The utility also tried to improve coordination with Eastern Edison responds . . .

local officials following the Hurricane Gloria debacle. They make annual contact with the towns to set restoration priorities. Following the Bob experience, local officials asked Eastern Edison to put Ripley Road Nursing Home on the priority list for service restoration. The utility also converted the electrical service to the traffic light at the intersection of Route 3A and Beechwood Street so it wouldn't go out of service in future power outages.

Cohasset Civil Defense Director Arthur Lehr told Hassan and her associates that Eastern Edison needs to update the priority list for service restoration in Cohasset. He told them that every time he gets a list he strikes off the abandoned Nike site and the discontinued pumping station on Sohier Street. Both have been out of commission for 20 years or so. When the list comes back again, the two sites appear on the list.

Lehr also suggested the utility should send a list of the medical priority customers to town officials responsible for planning for evacuations of residents. Hassan said that had already been done following a meeting between the utility and safety officers in the region.

Cohasset police sergeant Robert Jackson told the Eastern Edison representatives that police officers would like some training or informational pamphlets on handling electric service emergencies. Jackson said the police phone was flooded with calls from residents wanting to know when service would be restored.

In the early stages, callers accepted the news that it would be three to five days before service could be restored. But, said Jackson, as soon as they saw a neighbor had lights, they'd get angry and call back. Those calls tied up the police emergency lines.

Laugelle and selectman Jane Goedecke objected to the notion of the police department trying to provide detailed information.

"You can't tell anybody when they're going to get [service] back," Laugelle pointed out.

Goedecke was adamant that the police department should not be bothered with those kinds of calls at all.

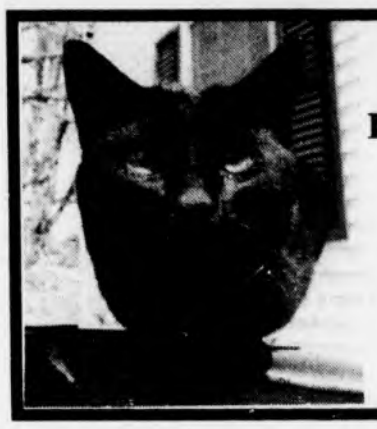
"In a small town, you call the police department about everything," she complained. "The public needs to find another way. I'm not in favor of police learning about feeder lines. I want the police department to be given a phone number to tell people to call."

Although Eastern is more than willing to provide the training Jackson was looking for, Hassan warned selectmen that customers are looking for a level of information no one can provide.

As long as no one has any electricity, she explained, everyone is calm. "The minute the first light goes one, they want to know 'when is my house going to be turned back on?' and 'why can't my street be next?'" Hassan said.

Just as the police department cannot provide that detailed information, neither can the utility, she said. With 60,000 customers without electricity, a large information center cannot provide information on individual streets. Hassan said the utility frequently does not know that status of reconnection efforts until work crews turn in their paper work at the end of their shift.

"They just keep working," Hassan said. "They don't call in on an hourly basis."



On a humorous note, the utility has proved the old adage that you can't please all the people all the time. According to Hassan, the utility routinely told customers that it would take three to five days to restore service to 90 percent of the customers. Rather than being pleased at being restored sooner, customers who came on line earlier than expected were as angry at being misled as those who were without service for more than five days.

One promising new piece of technology will allow Eastern Edison to identify and tag wires as either live or dead. That will relieve safety officers from the need to guard every downed wire as if it is a live wire. That frees up police officers and firefighters to clear blocked streets and take on other duties.

Hassan said the utility has ordered the equipment and expects it to be delivered soon. Eastern Edison plans to train employees who will be assigned to towns in the district in case of emergency.

According to Hassan, the utility has tried to learn from each major power outage. Following Hurricane Gloria, customers were without service for seven days. By comparison, 90 percent of Eastern Edison's customers had service restored within three days of Hurricane Bob.

Everett Dorr honored

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Everett Dorr told the hundreds of people who rallied to honor him that Oct. 19 "had to be my most outstanding day ever."

Mr. Dorr worked for the Cohasset school system from 1949 to 1982 when he retired.

During his years as a sports star and then coach, he won national, local and regional awards for his own sporting endeavors as well as many accolades for his coaching ability. It was from a man who scored wins in many areas—football, basketball and baseball.

"This means so much to me," he said and the crowd cheered.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, who was head cheerleader for one of the teams Mr. Dorr coached to victory, was on hand to make a special presentation honoring the retired athletic director and sportsman.

There were too many officials, too many words of praise to find room for all.

Suffice it to say: the stands of the stadium were filled with people who respected the longtime coach.

The upper gymnasium is now officially the Everett W. Dorr Gymnasium. A sign carved by Mr. Dorr's eldest son, Chuck, was presented during the ceremony.

Chris Ford, school committee member, pointed out that Mr. Dorr's true character came from his willingness to encourage all the students who went out for sports, not just the stars.

Mr. Dorr said he took pride in teaching kids who tripped over their feet how to play sports.

School Superintendent Stephen Hart introduced Mrs. Dorr and two of the couple's three children, David and Chuck, who were on hand for the day. The Dorr's third son, Danny, lives in Florida.

After the game, everyone was invited back to the Dorr home.

• Two Cohasset residents have joined the 556 other freshmen at Middlebury College in Middlebury, Vermont. Stephen M. Pozatek, son of Dr. and Mrs. Zigmunt W. Pozatek and Kristin K. Martin, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John D. Martin Jr.

• Nora Rose McPartland was born Sept. 14 to Ed and Audrey (Knight) McPartland, at Cape Cod Hospital. A tea was recently held at her grandparents home (Norman and Nancy Knight). Friends, her brother Ian, and her great-grandmother, Lydia Ericsson were all in attendance. Sounds as though Nora has lots of love surrounding her.

• Happy belated birthday greetings go to Ken Fone this week...it isn't fair how some people get older but never change one bit. Keep up the good work Ken, you are a super guy and we love you.

• The captains and players of the Cohasset Varsity and Freshman football team want to say thank you to all the mothers and the Gridiron Club for the great pasta dinner. The night was a success and all that pasta helped in the big win over Weymouth Catholic on Saturday. Again thank you all and see you next week.

• Tracey Stohl of Cohasset has arrived at Colby-Sawyer College in New London, New Hampshire to begin her freshman year. Her major is nursing. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Stohl of Cohasset.

• Barbara Lagrotteria, another freshman, has entered the class of 1995 at Wheaton College in Norton. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Lagrotteria and a graduate of Cohasset High School.

• Congratulations to Jennifer C. Martin, who is participating in St. Lawrence University's International Study Program this year. Jennifer is a member of the Class of '93, a psychology and French major, a member of Chi Omega sorority, and a participant in the International Study Program in France.

• Mark Nov. 2 (Saturday) and Nov. 3 (Sunday) on your calendars. It's time for the Cohasset High School's Drama Workshop Production of "Crimes of Heart," by Beth Henley. Under the direction of Ron Emmons, it promises to be a great one. Be sure to watch for more details.

• Congratulations go to Ellery Clark once again. He has won another big event. This time it was the Maryland Senior Olympics and he won the 200 and 400-meter dashes for the third straight year. He didn't even have any stiffness or soreness, and was able to repaint his wooden fence the next day.

• Had a chat with Jean Syrmopoulos last week, and she told me the 10th anniversary of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church is coming up. They are celebrating with a dinner-dance with Greek American music at the Barker Tavern on Nov. 8. Tickets are available by calling Jean at 383-9071.

• Bill Fallon made the front page of the sports page again, but this time the paper is the Foster's Daily Democrat, a newspaper in New Hampshire. Bill has been named the Portsmouth High School Clippers' head girls' basketball coach. Most know Bill's impressive record that he tallied when he was the CHS girls' coach. He coached for nine seasons and had a 135-60 record, won a state championship in 1988 and was named The Boston Globe Coach of the Year in 1985, all in Cohasset. Thanks to lack of funds, Bill had to leave Cohasset, but our loss is Portsmouth's gain and we sure do wish him and his Clippers well...we will be watching....

• Talking about coaches, what a fine tribute was paid to Evie Dorr last Saturday at halftime of the Skippers' football game. People of all ages, from all locations, friends, co-workers and relatives all were there. Evie's son, Chuck, carved a sign to dedicate the gym to his father; it is a fine one. The whole day was a success, and one gal reported that she hadn't had so much fun in years, seeing all of the "old" faculty and administrators together again. Certainly lots of reminiscing and fond memories for Evie and Fran, and for all of us.

• Congratulations go to Ellen and Michael Maher on the birth of their baby boy, born on Oct. 6 at South Shore Hospital.

That's the news for this week, please let us know what is going on in your life.

Colonial Homes magazine features Cohasset treasures

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The December issue of Colonial Homes magazine is a hot seller in this area.

The national magazine focused on our history and maritime heritage as well as on the beauty the magazine's staff discovered when they came to town last winter.

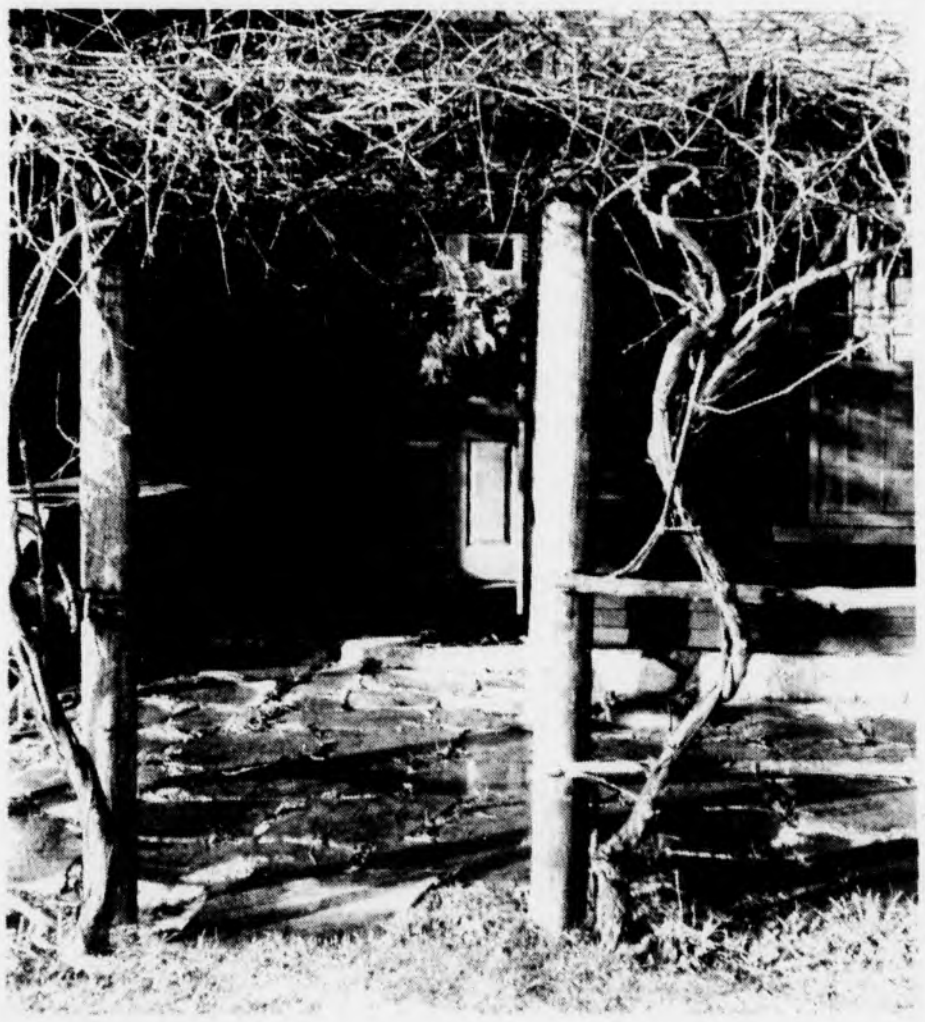
The folk art of Jeanne Replogle earned a four-page display in the magazine along with photos of the home the artist shares with her husband, David. Some of the work shown in the magazine will be included in the folk-art exhibit scheduled for display at South Shore Art Center from Nov. 14 through Dec. 21.

Copies of the December issue of the magazine are on sale at the Art Center as well at local newstands.

The home of Dr. John and Suzanne Moyer, decorated in her own authentic yet stylized ways, captured four pages more of attention as a "Festive Farmhouse." Suzanne is one of the featured folk-artists in the upcoming show at the art center.

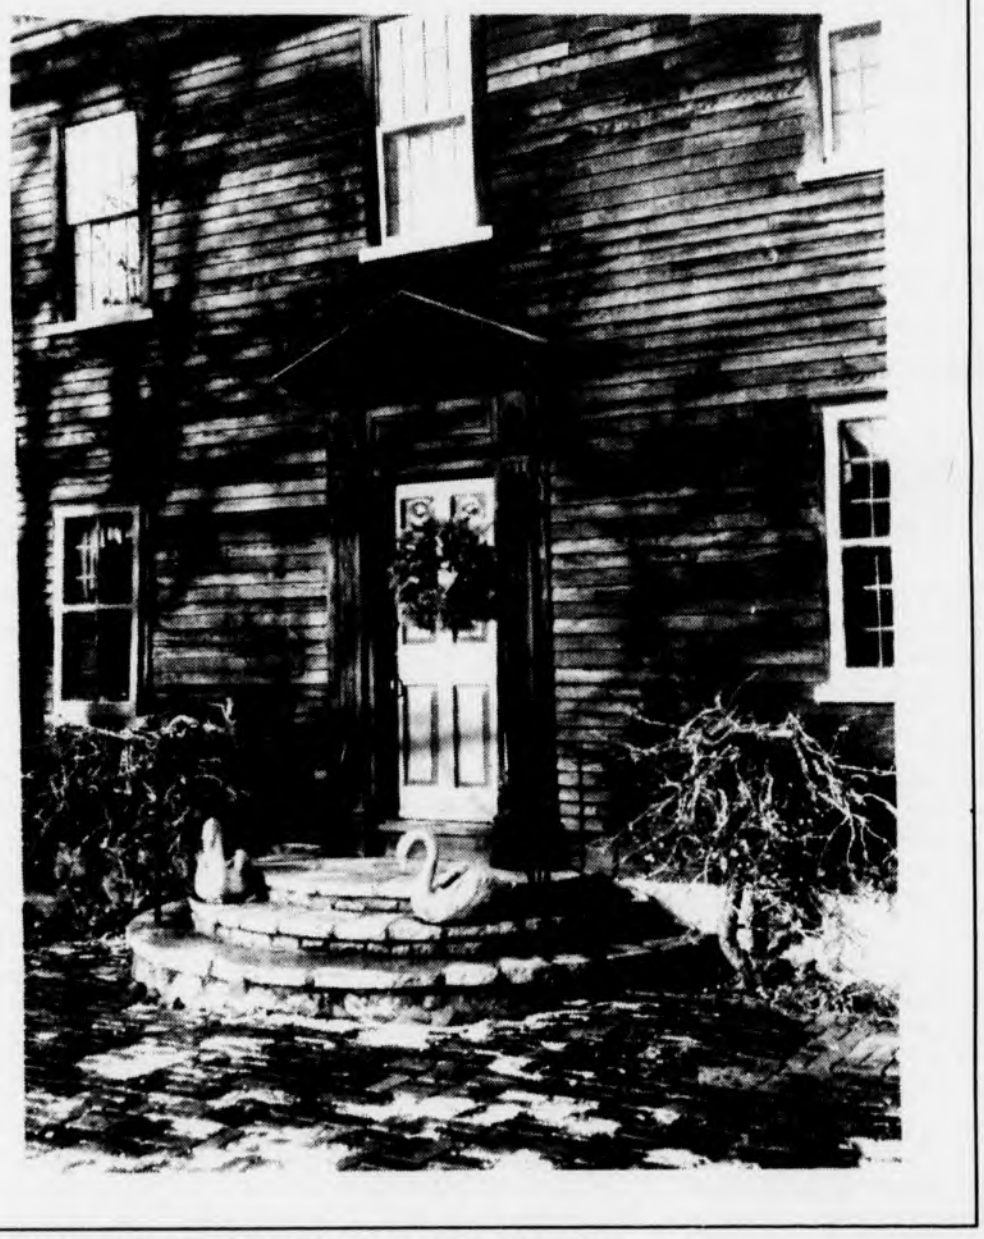
The waterfront home of Richard and Maggie Tibbetts took six pages of the magazine under the title "Time and Tide.

The Historical Society's Lothrop House and food cooked by members of the Cohasset Community Garden Club provide a tasty four-page display called "Mariner's Legacy."



Scene from the community at large introduce the glossy, full color feature on the town.

The Community Garden Club gained a piece of national attention with the article in time to draw larger than usual crowds for its Holiday Images House Tour. The tour is held every other year. After the tour two years ago, women from the club contacted Colonial Homes to let the staff there know what a photogenic community Cohasset can be.



This year the tour is 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Dec. 5. The tour includes six private homes, the Lothrop House and the Second Congregational Church.

Over the span of more than 20 pages, the magazine manages to touch almost all the pieces of town that matter. There is the steeple of First Parish Church, the Community Center, several harbor views, Minot's Light, the Paul Pratt Library, the Yacht Club, the Second Congregational Church and, of course, the homes.

More homes were scheduled for the shoot, but magazine staffers said the policy of the publication is to give in depth display to the homes featured.

The home of Dr. John and Suzanne Moyer off King Street as it looked last winter when the staff of Colonial Homes magazine photographed their antique farmhouse, built around 1727.

The classic style and elegance belies the fact that the Moyer home off King Street began its existence in the 18th century as a simple farmhouse.

Holiday trim with wreaths and swags bedecks the Moyer home, one of three private home included in the more than 20-page spread on Cohasset "fishing village to actor's colony," as the national magazine sayd.

Let's lighten up

Halloween is coming—this weekend there's Halloween fun thanks to the good people of the Cohasset Community Center.

It's time to think of candy and magic.

All Hallow's Eve is the traditional day for witches to celebrate. We think it's appropriate for Cohasset to enjoy the full flavor of the day.

After all "Witches of Eastwick" was filmed here.

Maybe there's a witch or two still practicing somewhere in the Village.

If there is, we wish she would cast a spell or two to help the community lighten up and enjoy the sunshine.

Sometimes it seems the true frivolity of holiday is escaping as we send out our children armed with a dozen or so rules about trick or treating and followed by a parent bearing a flashlight.

The reality of the world we live in demands precautions.

For a brief minute or so, let's suspend reality and think about a giant Halloween party for all the town's notables.

We have some costume suggestions and since there's still a week to the big day, maybe there's a chance we'll hit a responsive chord.

How about Rocco Laugelle in a police uniform?

How about Greg Doyon as a knight-in-dull armor?

How about Tanna Kasperowicz in a crown and gown, carrying a scepter, all the better to hit on the politicians?

How about Bill Ramsey in a magician's cape?

How about Jack Worley looking hyperactive?

How about Dickie Barrow without his sleuthing gear?

How about Jane Goedecke in something that clashes — say an aqua skirt, yellow blouse and red shoes?

How about Laura Doherty as a retired teacher?

How about the entire Cohasset High School coaching staff posing as easy to reach and intent on getting the scores into the paper.

Imagine the receptionist at the Mariner as lonely and isolated.

Imagine Howie Motenko without his Boy Scout outfit.

Imagine Bill Weeks as a Presidential candidate.

Imagine Gerry Studds hanging around the Village.

Imagine Bob Hedlund in torn and faded dungarees and a T-top.

Imagine Mary Jeanette Murray in her old CHS cheerleader uniform.

Imagine Connie Afgar campaigning for expansion of the dump.

Imagine Joseph Godzik as a walking cigarette in a commercial.

Imagine Richard Henderson as a radio newscaster doing 30 second sound bites.

Imagine Martha Gjesteby as a train conductor for the Old Colony.

Imagine Gov. William Weld as keeping his campaign promises.

Imagine Herb Towle as a lighthouse keeper.

Imagine Diana Kornet as chairman of the board of selectmen.

Imagine Joe Kealey as the new fire chief.

Imagine Steve Hart in something frivolous

And what about Bill Quigley working fulltime on dog catching.

How about having the entire town dress down to lose the preppy look.

Chamber Chatter

By Paula Knowles
Cohasset Chamber of Commerce

What has child authors, in-house publishing, new wave mathematicians, film makers, satellite and cable classrooms, and computer friendly students and faculty? Believe it or not, the answer is "the Cohasset School System."

This was the message brought to us last week when the Chamber held its annual School Forum program. And it was brought to us forcefully, not by the words of the School Committee or Superintendent, but by the amazing works of the students themselves as presented by the principals of the three schools. Principals Linda Whitney and Ken Eckberg delivered a quick 1-2 punch as they demonstrated first the books and stories written and published by the grade school students and their adult assistants, and then the basics of a new Math program that places emphasis on learning by seeing not only what is, but also what the possibilities are.

But the knock-out punch was delivered by High School Principal Meg Gallegher, and all she had to do was push a button. That button was attached to a VCR, and what it played for us was a video, produced and directed by students, that illustrated the widespread use of computers and word processors throughout the schools. Classrooms, library, art and industrial science labs...video and computer technology was everywhere. By the time Gallegher had finished telling us about the present and future uses of satellite and cable classrooms, the bout was over, the crowd was on its feet, the judges were unanimous. The schools had taken every round.

Now, the fight analogy may seem a trifle forceful for a simple meeting with school administrators. But I have used it for a reason. Since the passage of Prop 2-1/2, we voters have been getting tougher and tougher when asked to vote for an override. The message seems to be "give us what we pay for, and we'll consider paying for a little more?" The schools, along with every other department in town, have been fighting for their lives. Well, this is one fight that seems to have been worth it. Because we are now, I feel, truly starting to get what we have been paying for. We are getting kids who are being trained to live in the world as it really is. And we are seeing administrators who are thinking about the future.

Those present Tuesday night were amazed at the changes that have taken place in our schools. They were also filled with ideas of how we, the business community as well as we the taxpayers, could help get the word out. The Chamber will continue to assist the school committee in any way that it can; but a lot more is needed. Find out what is going on in our schools. Go up and see for yourself. You don't have to have a child in school to be welcome; after all, your tax dollars pay for this educational system whether you want them to or not. And when you are at the High School, ask how you can become part of the cable classroom team. All it takes is a VCR, a blank tape, and a cable program that is free of charge to cable subscribers. You might also ask about helping out in the library, or the Osgood playground, or as an aide at Deer Hill, or.... I'm sure you get the idea. Find out what we have, and where we are headed before you are asked to pay for more. My mind was changed by what I saw. I think yours may be too.

A SECOND THOUGHT: Don't forget the Chamber Auction Nov. 16 – you don't have to be a company to donate. Just call Keith Knowles at 383-6266 for information or gift pick-up.

Kasperowicz commentary praised

letters

To the Editor:

For sure, "Bush selects mediocrity at every turn."

Bravo! Bravo to Tanna Kasperowicz. Let's hear more from her — only next time please put her commentary in South Look for readers of the other towns.

I was frustrated by discussions of the question: "Why did Anita Hall wait ten years to speak out about the sexual harassment? Don't those questioners realize that, ten years ago, victims of battery, rape, incest and sexual harassment were ignored and scorned? Rarely were they helped — or believed.

These are sad days when the leaders of our great country replace specifics and facts with jokes and emotion.

Those hearings were a fiasco, typical of the trend in this nation today.

Thank you, Tanna, for your valuable words.

Tinytown to donate $125,000 to charity

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner political columnist

commentary

Just remembering...a couple of years ago when the Tinytown selectpersons tried to sell the Independence Building without knowing its boundary lines. That caused a few little snags and jags, and ended up with nobody wanting the Independence Building.

Wonder what Tinytown selectpersons think happened Oct. 7, when town meeting refused to fund the police contract? It's always a riot to hear what they think happened. Looks like selectmen are going to do nothing about the contract – just return it to next spring's annual town meeting and hope it squeaks through.

The rumor mill (it never stops) says selectmen's labor counsel, Atty. Robert Garrett, has been asked by the Tinytown Police Association to speak on its behalf at town meeting next spring. Wouldn't that be cozy? For several years, a lot of people have been wondering who Garrett works for - the police or the town.

If town meeting is ignored, it could be very angry by next spring...and selectmen challengers (please, God, please) could make things knotty for incumbents.

Now. Consider this.

The Oct. 7 special town meeting voted, resoundingly, to return the police contract to the selectmen for rethinking.

Special town meeting said: we shouldn't be negotiating three year contracts in these trying times; 2 or more percent of the negotiated 4 percent increase in consecutive years should be tied to an override; minimum manning should be removed as a message to the fire department. Stuff like that.

During a special Tinytown meeting cable TV exit interview, Selectperson Ned Tebbetts told Wigy Pierson the police contract had lost because of "all the campaigning." But it seemed to most people there they were just voting their empty pocketbooks.

So, here's the point.

On Oct. 7 voters legally directed selectmen (who claim they are town meeting driven) to renegotiate the darn police contract. But it sounds like they're going to just ignore that vote, and wait 'til we're in a better mood.

At the same time they're ignoring voters' legal directive to renegotiate, they're trying to say town meeting told them to give the Bates Building to Habitat.

The Bates Building, which always brings out the worst in the Tinytown selectpersons, is starting to make people crazy.

Tebbetts said while he and his fellow selectpersons recognized the seriousness of the financial problems, they were, after all, only following town meeting's directive to make a $125,000 donation to charity.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said, "Town meeting just voted down the police contract...let that be your guide" (as to what town meeting is feeling about finances these days).

Further, Laugelle said: "Town meeting didn't tell you to give the Bates Building to Habitat. You three people (Tebbetts, Diana Kornet, Jane Goedecke) voted to give it away. There was no vote of the town. All you have is a non-binding resolution."

Kornet said: "I resent your bringing this up once more. You're wasting time; (but) you may be regarded as a saint by the people who agree with you." (Yep, he is – this week, anyway).

In an effort to educate us about the substantial override he wants next spring, Tebbetts worried aloud about the trial balloons Weld is floating on further state aid reductions.

So you see. If you vote down an operating budget override next spring it will be your fault for not giving Tebbetts the money. It will not be his, Kornet's and Goedecke's fault for not downsizing government (contracts, departments, etc.). It will be your fault they don't "get it."

It's very crafty the way this group mixes things up. You'll note they didn't put their $125,000 charitable donation on the override ballot last spring...nope, a menu they thought you couldn't resist went on the override ballot: $3,000 for the King Street intersection;' $20,000 for a paint job; and other stuff for the schools they thought you couldn't possibly resist.

Selectperson Martha Gjesteby tried to deliver a "state of the taxpayers out there" message which Laugelle should have supported, as it fed right into his philosophy about not giving the Bates building away. But it fell on deaf ears.

Wouldn't it be fun to own a property on which the Tinytown sewer plant encroached upon your backyard; the sewer workers took showers in your basement (where they also stored poisonous chemicals?); and the town had an easement to drive big trucks through your property?

This is a current description of the Bates Building easements.

I am beginning to hate the Bates Building. How did it get there? Whatever was its original purpose? It is becoming a real headache. Selectmen have discussed it for thousands of hours; the advisory committee has also worried over it. Now, Hostile Sewer Suitor Ted Guild has arrived in the 11th hour, like Prof. Hill, and has made claim on the Bates Building on behalf of the sewer commission.

Seems like everything selectpersons have done recently is becoming unwound. Like bad knitting.

Curious that Tinytown selectpersons didn't take a position on the Thomas confirmation hearings. President Bush has enjoyed their support in the past.

Spirit Pasta Feast was tasty

letters

To the Editor:

I would like to thank all the mothers who so generously baked for our traditional Spirit Pasta Feast for the varsity and freshman football team, cheerleaders and coaches. The mothers of the football players and cheerleaders surpassed themselves this year with the quantity and quality of food and with serving and cleaning up after the festivities.

A special thank you to the Gridiron Club for providing the paper articles and soda for the evening and to Rose and Peter Collins for their extra efforts.

All 90 people who were fed appreciate the kindness and support from the First Parish Unitarian Church for allowing us to use their kitchen and banquet hall.

What a display the football team put on the following day with a win against Weymouth Catholic High School. All that pasta and enthusiasm really helps!

Many thanks to all,
Sandy Theriault

Plans in place for 51st Cohasset Village Fair

Christmas and the holidays may seem ages away, but time is running for planners of the 51st annual Cohasset Village Fair, this year to be on Saturday, Dec. 7, when the historic Common and buildings around it will be transformed into an extended bazaar scene from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Representatives from the four sponsoring churches under the leadership this year of Chris and Rose Kierce of St. Anthony's as co-chairs, have been meeting over the past couple of months and already have determined the outlines of the day's activities that build on a standard format but attempt to introduce novelties that add a special appeal.

Working with the Kierces on the Central Committee are John and Gail Brooks and Sheila Wallingford of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church; Sharon Moody and Debbie Anderson of the Second Congregational; and Jean Syrmopoulos and Cindy Dedes of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church. Completing the central organization are Georgine Butman, Secretary and Deanna Mulligan, Treasurer.

Already, the flood of attic treasures and basement bargains that go on sale at the Fair's Bargain Bazaar has started to flow into the collection point in the basement of St. Anthony's Rectory on South Main Street. This will be open to receive these donated items on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m., until Nov. 25. Books for the popular Book Table of the Fair may also be left there.

As plans stand now, the Town Hall will again be the focal point of activities, housing the Boutique, raffles of donated items and dolls, cheese, plants, baked goods and candy, grabs and ornaments. The adjoining Second Congregational Church will be the site of the Bargain Bazaar and Book Table, with wreaths to be sold on the patio between the two buildings. St. Stephen's will be the focus of the Secret Room for children's private shopping, and of the traditional Village Fair Dinner that concludes the day.

Santa Claus will park his sleigh in the Community Center after arriving via a fire engine in mid-morning. The Community Center will also host the Chowder Bar and children's activities.

Committee chairmen of the various events and tables are currently setting up workshops where hand-crafted articles will be fashioned or collected, so that by December 7 tables and booths will be overflowing with items designed to meet the holiday shopping needs of the hundreds who annually have this event on their calendar.

Flowers By The Sea opens

Lee Androski of Cohasset will be celebrating the opening of her new shop, "Flowers By The Sea." She is having an Open House Saturday, Nov. 9 from 1 to 4 p.m. with refreshments and a display of Holiday ideas.

Androski formerly owned the day care center, Miss Lee's By the Sea in Cohasset. After many years of floral work at her home, she has now opened her own store.

Flowers By The Sea is a full service business, preparing flowers for all occasions.

Flowers By The Sea is located in the Cushing Plaza on Route 3A next door to Sea & Cheese. For more information call 383-6764.

Singers ring out

A newly formed singing group — the S.C.C. Men of Harmony and a couple of women — specializing in barbershop-style tunes, debuts Saturday, Oct. 26 at the Second Congregational Church Ham and Bean Supper starting at 6 p.m. Some of the singers include: Al Sencabaugh, Frank Wheelwright, Gary Ritts, David Clinton, Millard and Bob MacNeill, Lisa Fichtner and Joan Trask, directed by the master of all choir masters — Bob Leavitt. Tickets available $4 adults, $2 children. Call the church office at 383-0345 9 a.m. to noon, Monday to Friday.

Ann Whelan: Kennedy advance woman . . .

married," so Ann stayed home and produced seven children in eight years.

Ann and Jim moved to Cohasset as young marrieds in 1954, living in an apartment in the old Piepenbrink house on North Main Street, and then built a home on the Fenway.

"But the house on the Fenway was not made for seven children, so we had to move," Ann said. "We had Roger Whitley (a current member of the advisory committee) look at the house architecturally, but all that could have been done is a wing with a separate entrance and there is no way we were going to have teenagers coming into the house through their own entrance."

So, they sold their Fenway home (in four days) and moved into a summer home on Atlantic Avenue, where they still reside. Within 10 years they had completely renovated and insulated the house, and installed a tennis court.

Ann remembers that "The family tennis court was done before the kitchen," by a completely democratic vote of the Whelan family. "But it paid off - three of the kids gave tennis lessons for years. Robby (youngest son) still runs the Children's Hospital Tennis Tournament," Ann said.

THE KENNEDY ADVANCE WOMAN

"Jim and I raised our kids in the Supermom era," Ann said. "Everybody had large families in the '50s and '60s. It was right after the war, and we were all invincible.

"No one ever had a feeling they couldn't have everything they wanted. Today, young marrieds need two incomes in order to survive. Back then, everybody had beach wagons, everybody played tennis."

Polly Fitzgerald, Ann's friend, was Rose Kennedy's first cousin. When Polly called Ann and asked her to be one of five Kennedy Advance Women in JFK's efforts against Henry Cabot Lodge for Senate, Ann couldn't resist.

After JFK's Senate victory, came the presidency. And after JFK's death, came Bobby Kennedy and his campaigns, victories, and ultimate death. Ann was with Bobby Kennedy the night he died.

The Kennedy Advance Women were responsible for organizing teas and coffees through the United States. "Each day six Kennedy women would greet anywhere from three to ten thousand people across the country. We worked with state governors and female democratic leaders and I remember we always had to insist on open, public meetings, because we wanted black Americans to attend.

"We always planned the teas at an armory, a gym, a YWCA...never a Ritz Carleton."

Ann said: "The night Bobby Kennedy died, we had been down in the hotel function room with him. Three of us had gone upstairs to change for dinner. The hotel operator called our room and told us the news.

"I look back on those years now, and I feel we saw both the beginning and the end of an era. In the beginning of the 5'0s the media was in its infancy. By the '60s the media had grown up, there were easier ways to reach people. The teas and coffees we had been organizing were no longer necessary.

"When JFK first walked down the street in Wisconsin (Wisconsin Primary) no one knew him."

Within ten years, television had metamorphasized the world.

WHAT HAPPENED TO THE WHELAN KIDS

Katie, the oldest, works in Washington, D.C. where she is employed as National Finance Chairman of the Democratic Governor's Association.

Martha, who is next in age, lives in Plymouth where she is employed in day care.

Before she was married, Ann, the next, worked at Southby's as an art expert, and then at Grogan & Co. on Commonwealth Avenue. She lives in Connecticut, and has two children.

Jim, fourth in line, is in New York City where he is struggling to become a writer, and drives a taxi to support his writing habit. I suggest to Ann that his mother has his book - "The Kennedy Advance Women." Ann smiles.

Elizabeth, the fifth, graduated from Rhode Island School of Design last spring. Her major was textile design. She's living in New York.

Joe sells paper, for a large company.

Robby , the youngest, is a transportation energy broker in Boston.

Cohasset resident, Gary Garber, joins Brockton staff

Brockton Hospital President Norman B. Goodman has announced that Cohasset resident Gary R. Garber, MD, is joining Brockton Hospital as the Medical Director of its new $1.2 million cardiac catheterization laboratory, opening in October.

Dr. Garber comes to the hospital from University Hospital in Boston, where he served as director of computer applications in cardiology and assistant professor of medicine. Dr. Garber has extensive clinical and computer experience in the field of cardiology and is board certified in both cardiology and internal medicine. He received his medical degree from S.U.N.Y. Downstate in Brooklyn, New York and served his internship and residency at Boston City Hospital.

"Dr. Garber is a highly credentialed and well-respected cardiologist. Under his direction, Brockton Hospital' s new cardiac catheterization laboratory will provide patients with access to an important procedure from a highly qualified health-care team," said Goodman.

Dr. Garber will oversee all staff and clinical operations of the new laboratory which occupies 2,500 square feet of newly renovated space on the fifth floor of the Hospital. During his own medical career, Dr. Garber has performed close to 3000 cardiac catheterization procedures.

"I think it is essential to provide patients with this important service in a community setting. Brockton Hospital is an excellent hospital, and the procedure will be well-regulated, and performed only by those physicians who meet the hospital' s credentialing guidelines," says Dr. Garber.

During a cardiac catheterization, a catheter is threaded from the groin to the heart where a contrast dye and X-rays are used to image coronary blood flow. The procedure is used to diagnose heart disease and the extent of damage to the coronary arteries. Approximately 1.3 million cardiac catheterizations are performed annually in the United States .

Last year Brockton Hospital was designated by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts as a regional site for cardiac catheterization. Several reasons were cited, including the excellence of the Hospital's medical care and services, its established affiliation with the Boston University School of Medicine and University Hospital, an existing site for catheterization, and its accessibility to the extensive and diverse population it serves.

Dr. Burton J. Polansky, Chief of Medicine and Cardiology at Brockton Hospital, says that Dr. Garber, a skilled administrator and clinician, is developing a service that will be responsive to the community .

Dr. Garber' s interest in cardiovascular disease and computer applications has led to the development of a series of educational software programs for cardiology. He and several colleagues are developing hardware and software that produces a three-dimensional picture of the coronary arteries, enhancing cardiologists' ability to see and evaluate damage to the heart. "I think it will represent a significant aid to cardiologists, helping with the entire diagnostic and treatment process," says Dr. Garber.

Goldilocks

The following stories were written by fourth graders after hearing "Goldilocks and the Three Bears." A level of thinking called synthesis (from Bloom's Taxonomy) was employed.

Goldilocks and the three Fishes

By Liz Hassan

Once upon a time there was a little barnacle named Goldilocks. One day she was swimming along when she saw some clam shells stuck together. She looked closer at it and saw a door. So she decided to go in. When she was inside she found three bowls of cooked apples with cinnamon. First, she tried the big bowl, it was too hot. Then she tried the medium sized bowl, that was too cold. Then she tried the littlest bowl and that was just right so she ate it all up! Then she went into the living room and saw three chairs. A medium, a big and a little tiny chair. First she tried the big chair it was too hard, then she tried the medium sized chair it was too soft, then she tried the little baby's chair and it was just right so she stayed. Then she got sleepy to she went into the papa fishes bedroom and tried his bed it was too hard. Next she tried mama fishes bed it was too soft. Finally she tried the baby fishes bed it was just right. So she went to sleep then in swam the fishes. Then all of a sudden the papa fish thundered out with, "Who's been eating my cinnamon and apples!?!" Then mama fish yelled in her fairly high voice, "Who's been tasting my cinnamon and apples?!" Then baby fish cried, "Somebody's been eating my cinnamon and apples and ate it all up! "Then they went upstairs and papa yelled "Somebody's been sleeping in my bed!" Then mama cried, "Somebody's been sleeping in my bed!" Then baby fish screamed, "Somebody's been sleeping in my bed and she's still there! "At that Goldilocks jumped out of the bed, screamed and swam as fast as she could out the door and the fish family never saw her again.

By Ben Peterson

One morning, the three fish were eating their kelp. "Mine's too hot," said Papa fish. "Mine too," said Mama fish. "Mine three," said the wee Baby fish. So the three fish left the reef and set off for a swim on the ocean floor. Meanwhile a little girl named Goldilocks was swimming nearby. When she went under and opened her eyes she saw a big beautiful coral reef.

She decided to go in. The first room she came to was the kitchen. "Nice stove, nice refrigerator." She thought to herself, "When I get out of here I'm going to check out the Lechmere down here and buy my mom one of those stoves." Then she said, "Look what I found ... kelp! I think I will try some."

She went and tried Papa's kelp. "Yuuuuck! Too dry!" She tried Mama's, "Pteewy ... too soggy." Then she tried Baby's kelp, "Mmmm ... just right!"

Then she walked into the living room.

She saw some sand chairs with sand fresh from the bottom. She sat in Papa's chair, "Ohh, too rocky," she said. Then she sat on Mama's chair, "Uhg, too squishy," she cried. Then she sat in wee little Baby's chair, "Ahhh, just right." But it was so little it smushed into little bits of gravel. "Whoops," she cried and tiptoed up the stairs as quietly as possible. When she got to the top of the steps she was so tired. Surprise, surprise there were three beds.

She tried Papa's bed, "Eww, too hard,"she yelled. She tried Mama's bed. When she hopped onto the bed she sunk in the middle. "Too soft," she said. Then she tried Baby's bed "Ahh, just right," she said and fell asleep.

Meanwhile the fish had entered the reef. "Someone's been tasting my kelp," said Papa. "Someone's been tasting my kelp," said Mama. "Someone's been tasting my kelp and they ate it all up," said Baby fish.

Then the three fish walked into the living room. "Someone's been sitting in my chair," said Papa fish. "Someone's been sitting in my chair," said Mama fish. "Someone's been sitting in my chair and it broke into itsy bitsy pieces," said Baby fish and he began to cry.

Then the three fish walked up the steps. "Someone has been sleeping in my bed," said Papa fish. "Someone's been sleeping in my bed," said Mama fish. "Someone has been laying in my bed ... and there she is!" cried Baby fish.

Goldilocks heard Baby fish cry and swam out of the reef as fast as she could!!

THE END

P.S. She never got to Lechmere!

By Liz Myers

Once upon a time a little girl named Goldilocks (a very naughty girl) was walking near the harbor. when she saw a tank, a mask and a snorkle.

She put them on and jumped i the water. She saw all sorts of fish and coral.

Soon she came to a path and a coral castle. The gate was open so she went right in.

She didn't know that in the ballroom a party was going on.

First she went in the refrigerator and took out three seaweed salads. A big one, a medium one and a small one. The big one was too soggy, the second one was too dry, but the little one was just right! Then she went to sit down because she was so full. First she sat in the big chair that was too big, the medium one was too soft, but the tiny one just right. So she sat down. But the telefishon was broken! So she went to take a nap. The first bed of coral was too pointy, the second was too squishy, but the third one was just right. Several hours later the fish came down from the party. They were so tired they didn't see the mess that Goldilocks left. When the baby fish went to go to sleep he saw Goldilocks and screamed his gills out.

Goldilocks woke up, she was so scared she swam as fast as she could to the dock, returned the snorkle and ran home.

Surviving and healing

Thursday, Oct. 24, Host Wigmore Pierson's guest(s) on Pierson to Person will be clinical social workers Catherine Brennan and Lola Cohen and three survivors of incest who will discuss their traumatic experiences, their memories, surviving and healing.

The Pierson to Person television show is broadcast live each Thursday, 8 to 9 p.m., from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hanover, Hingham, Hull, and Norwell; on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset and Scituate.

The public is invited to be part of the studio audience each Thursday evening and those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m.

For further information about upcoming guests and additional show information contact the Pierson Show's Executive Producer, Robert Belliveau at 545-0643.

Fish expert at Gulf

Are stripers really coming back? What happened to the eels that used to be so plentiful? What other kinds of fish frequent Gulf waters? Questions like these — and many others related to Fishlife in the Gulf River will be addressed in an illustrated lecture by Dr. Alan Hankin, Associate Director of Programs and Exhibits for New England Aquarium Tuesday, Oct. 29 at 7:30 p.m. at the Parish House of the Unitarian Church on Cohasset Common.

Dr. Hankin is an expert in coastal marine ecology. A graduate of the State University of New York, where he received his Doctorate in Environmental Science, he was for ten years Executive Director of the Lloyd Center for Environmental Studies in South Dartmouth, Mass. He was principal investigator for the Buzzards Bay Project and conducted studies of marine mammals of Buzzards Bay and the maintenance and management of salt ponds and tidal inlets. He joined the New England Aquarium in 1990.

This will also be the Annual Meeting of The Gulf Association. Reports on Association activities, and votes on next year's officers are planned.

Volunteer meeting for PSO

The first organizational meeting for the PSO Christmas tree and wreath sale will be held at the Deer Hill School Cafeteria on Tuesday, Oct. 29 at 8 p.m. The agenda for this meeting will include an analysis of last year's successful task list. Interested parents and students are invited to attend.

Additional meetings will be held at Deer Hill on Thursday, Nov. 7 and Thursday, Nov. 21. All meetings are at 8 p.m.

The Christmas tree and wreath sale will take place at Cohasset High School Sunday, Dec. 8 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Last year's one day sale raised over $2,000 for the PSO.

Scary tales

Celebrate Halloween with a visit to Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset Saturday, Oct. 26 at 10 a.m. to meet author Alvin Schwartz. Schwartz will be signing his latest children's books, Scary Stories 3: More Tales to Chill Your Bones and Ghostly Tales From Folklore, a new I Can Read for the younger set.

Alvin Schwartz's new collection of 25 terrifying tales, Scary Stories 3: More Tales to Chill Your Bones, is guaranteed to set spines tingling with stories of swamp creatures and strange dreams that come true. Ghostly Tales From Folklore is about singing ghosts, toast-eating ghosts and teeny-tiny ghosts. Both books will keep readers and listeners on the edge of their seats. Schwartz's many other books include, Ten Copycats in a Boat and Other Riddles, Flapdoodle: Pure Nonsense from American Folklore, In a Dark, Dark, Room, and Scary Stores to Tell in the Dark.

Each of Schwartz's collections explores a different aspect of our folklore. His books deal with tongue twisters, word play, riddles, folk poetry, nonsense and superstition. They also take in scary stories, tall tales and other types of tales and legend she collects and retells.

Schwartz lives in Princeton, New Jersey, with his wife, Barbara.

For further information, please contact Buttonwood Books and Toys at 383-BOOK.

Falmouth author tours

Falmouth author Susan Baur will sign copies and read from her latest book, The Dinosaur Man: Tales of Madness and Enchantment From the Back Ward, Sunday, Oct. 27 at 3 p.m. at Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset.

In The Dinosaur Man, psychologist Baur enters the worlds and minds of her schizophrenic patients at Mountain Valley Hospital. Though stories of the patients Baur befriends are often humorous, the reader is immediately struck by the author's respect for these patients and their private worlds.

Baur's previous books include Hypochondria: Woeful Imaginings, The Edge of an Unfamiliar World: A History of Oceanography, and On Almost Any Wind: The Saga of the Oceanographic Research Vessel Atlantis.

The compelling art work of Domenic Cimino, the "boxes" inspired by the book, The Dinosaur Man, will be on display at Buttonwood Books and Toys prior to Baur's appearance, and during the time of the reading.

For further information, please call Buttonwood Books and Toys at 383-BOOK.

Cultural Homestay Institute (CHI), a non-profit educational exchange organization, is sponsoring a student exchange between Cohasset and Czechoslovakia from Nov. 15 to Dec. 15.

The High School age Czech. students will stay with local host families, visit cultural and historic sights, and get acquainted with the American school system. Fifteen Czechoslovakian students, accompanied by two female teachers, will ride the school bus daily to the Cohasset High School.

At a time when so many changes are happening in the world, Cultural Homestay needs volunteers to help by hosting a Czech student for either two weeks or one month. Host family requirements are just room and board. No driving is necessary. If you are interested, please call Jill Suddath at 545-0767.

Coffeehouse opens

A New Bethlehem Coffeehouse for developmentally-delayed adults will take place in Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephen's Church, 16 High Avenue, Cohasset, on Sunday, Oct. 27 from 2 to 4 p.m. Entertainment and refreshments will be provided. This is the first in a series of coffeehouse programs that will be offered by St. Stephen's Church every other month on the fourth Sunday.

The coffeehouse program is sponsored by the Outreach Committee at St. Stephen's Church whose mission is to be a unifying, freeing and healing expression of Christ's love. For more information you may call 383-1083.

Pot Luck at SSAC

The Adult Fall Pot Luck will be held at the South Shore Art Center Saturday, Oct. 26 from 7 to 10 p.m.

The center is located at 119 Ripley Rd. in Cohasset.

senior center news

News from Sue Connolly Coordinator

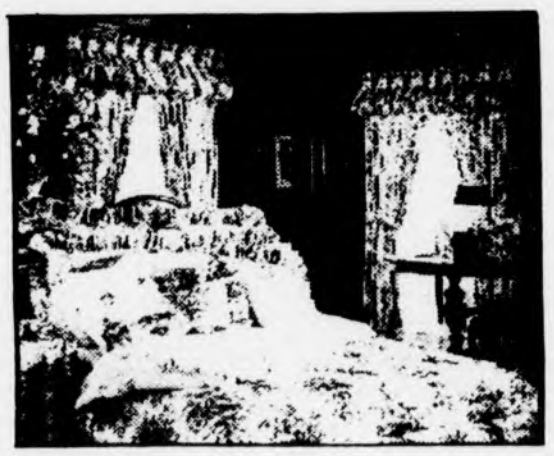
The Outreach Program "reaches out" to seniors in the community, for the purpose of identifying needs, providing information and referring persons to service providers and agencies. Under Outreach, there are several new programs, including a Caregivers Support Group which meets once a month to help provide emotional support to caregivers, to address issues of concern and inform them of available community resources. The newest program under Outreach is Services for Seniors, a job registry program of private pay workers who provide in-home support services to the elderly. These services include homemaking, personal care, meal preparation, respite care, errands and companionship.

If you would like further information about Outreach, the Support Group, or Services for Seniors, please call Sue Connolly at 383-9112.

Nov. 20 - Wednesday — Big Dig update! This is regarding Central Artery Project to take place at the Senior Center at 10:30 a.m. Dick Jarvis will present a project overview about this tremendous undertaking and will show slides about why, cost, length of time, and how all this is done. Sounds interesting? Call the Center now and make your reservation as we must know by Nov. 6 if you plan to attend.

T'ai Chi for Beginners by Tony McAllear — This class of T'ai Chi Ch'uam is a beginners-level introduction to the Chinese art of meditations in motion. T'ai Chi promotes mental, emotional, and physical healing by combining movement meditation, relaxation, and self-defense. Its principles are so fundamental, proficiency in any physical activity or sport is greatly enhanced by its study. In western terms, it can be described as no-impact aerobics and, to an outside observer, resembles a slow-motion dance. Every muscle, joint, ligament, and organ is thoroughly exercised. We need ten (10) people to offer this class on Friday mornings. Come join us and learn to enjoy relaxation! Call the Senior Center now and let us know you'd like to participate.

Dec. 8 — "First Ladies" — You won't want to miss this one! Robin Lane, well known entertainer, will join us. Robin portrays many of our "First Ladies." This is certainly an honor to the Council on Aging to have her as our guest. As she entertains us, you will almost feel the presence of the First Ladies. This will be the first fund-raiser by the Friends of the Council on Aging so please save Sunday, Dec. 8, and make this event a successful one for us and an enjoyable afternoon for all of you!



TUESDAY LUNCHEONS

Nov. 5 — Dr. Susan Emmer, Chiropractor with practice at 87 Sohier Street in Cohasset will be our guest speaker. Her emphasis will be on wholistic care, gently chiropractic techniques, nutritional counseling, preventive care and a particular focus on overcoming overeating.

Nov. 12 — Khalil Sharifzadeh, MPH, recommended speaker by the Cohasset Board of Health, will cover issues of proper care and handling of food as they apply to special conditions relating to senior citizens. Her talk will be followed by a question and answer period.

Nov. 19 — Dorothy Monouri, third grade teacher at the Joseph Osgood School, has agreed to bring her third grade class to join us. Those of you who were present when these children visited us last year may well remember what a pleasant and joyful occasion this was. These children can really help us smile.

Babysitting course

Registrations are still available for the Babysitting Course given by Linda Farrag, R.N. at the Cohasset Community Center on Oct. 30 for a four-week period on Wednesdays, from 3:30 to 5 p.m.

This course stresses a better understanding of young children and infants, their care and safety and other practical tips. Participants will learn what is expected from a babysitter. Topics include: first aid, fire safety, entertaining young children, child development and nutrition. Students receive an extensive babysitter's manual.

For kids only

This group led by Velma Begley at the Cohasset Community Center is designed especially for children who can function comfortably in a playgroup without a parent present. Children will participate in all the fun Ms. Begley has in store — music, games, crafts, stories, free play and group activities. Group meets Mondays and Fridays, from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. Interested? Please call the Center at 383-0088 for further information.

Dog obedience classes

The Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for Beginner and Intermediate Dog Training Classes to be taught by Mrs. Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Tuesday evenings, at the G.A.R. Hall, Scituate, beginning Nov. 5.

Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and the Intermediate - Advanced class will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. The fee for the eight week program will be $40. Checks made payable to the Town of Cohasset, may be brought to the first class. Participating Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age.

DRAMA WORKSHOP
FOR AGES 5 TO 17

The Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for Drama Workshops for children and youth ages 5 to 17 years. Instructing the Drama programs will be Ms. Darcy Pratt of the Cohasset Dramatic Club. Pratt has previously taught children's drama workshops and is active in local theatre productions. Pratt conducted the Recreation Department's Drama Workshops last season. Workshops meet for seven week sessions and the first session is scheduled to begin on Saturday, Nov. 16, at Cohasset High School as follows: 9 to 10:30 a.m. for ages 5 to 9; 10:30 a.m. to noon for ages 10 and over.

The fee for Drama's seven week session is $54 a child and a $10 family discount for additional children is available. Checks should be payable to "Town of Cohasset." Drama Workshops are designed to orientate children and youth to the many aspects of the theatre and play production and to teach and reinforce the various skills and techniques essential to stage acting.

Participants with or without prior acting experience are encouraged to register. To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791 as soon as possible.

Cohasset to be featured in TV commercial

Kermit the Frog went west to Hollywood to sign a standard rich and famous contract. Cohasset is doing just as well by staying home. This time it was a company making a Brooks Pharmacy commercial that came calling.

According to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon, Redtree Productions contacted his office Thursday, Oct. 16 for permission to film in town the following day. Doyon polled selectmen by phone and consulted with Police Chief Joseph Kealey before granting a hasty permit.

Redtree shot footage on the sidewalk in front of the Red Lion Inn and in the parking lot at Sandy Beach. The grateful production company donated $200 to the town common maintenance fund.

Selectmen confirmed Doyon's action in a unanimous vote, but expressed contradictory opinions about the need for police details for film crews.

Doyon and Kealey decided there was no need for a police detail since the filming required no obstruction of the street. Selectman Rocco Laugelle took the position that a police detail should have been required.

"You can't believe the dangers to people working out in the street," he said. Even when the action is confined to the sidewalk, Laugelle worried about pedestrians wandering out into traffic. He insisted that a police detail should be required to protect public safety in all situations.

Selectmen Diana Kornet and Jane Goedecke took exception to his position.

"If there is no obstruction of the street, I am not going to make them pay for a policeman," Goedecke said forcefully. "Personally, in this state, entirely too many police are standing around watching holes being dug. It's a waste of the people's money."

Goedecke and Kornet contend decisions about the need for a police detail should be left to the discretion of the police chief.

Laugelle continued to hold out for his position, saying it made things run smoothly and avoided citizen complaints. He stressed that he had no objection to film projects.

"I welcome anyone doing filming in Cohasset," Laugelle said. "I love it. I love people to see our town."

Doyon took the opportunity raised by Redtree to update selectmen on Housesitter business.

According to Doyon, the vegetable dye used by the film crew to create a more autumnal scene on the common washed off the leaves, but remains on the sidewalk, road and duck pond wall. Doyon said a contractor has been hired to steam clean the paint at Hollywood's expense.

Doyon also said that the Housesitter company has made arrangements with a local contractor to plant the trees promised in partial payment for filming in Cohasset. Because the season for tree planting is over, eight new trees will be planted in the spring. The company will pay the town the full amount the contractor will charge for the work.

Tree and Park Superintendent Peter Laugelle is scoping out the village for appropriate planting locations.

Ham-and-bean supper set

Ladies of Cohasset's Second Congregational Church will present an old-fashioned home-cooked ham-and-bean supper in the Bates Hall vestry of the church, Saturday, Oct. 26, at 6 p.m. Tickets for the event, are $4 for adults and $2 for children under 12.

Planned is a traditional New England Saturday night menu of home-baked beans, ham, cole slaw, home-baked breads and rolls, and pies.

Following the supper there will be a musical program featuring a Barbershop Quartet and sing-along under the direction of Bob Leavitt, Minister of Music.

Workers on the supper include Fran Walton, Mary Campbell, Phyllis Peck, Eleanor Smith, Marilyn Adams and Florence Beal. Reservations may be made through Fran Walton, 383-1798 and Mary Campbell, 383-0569.

Bets are placed on parent-daughter game

By Michael Farley
Mariner sports writer

You will be hard pressed to find any of these bets in Las Vegas, but these just might be some of the wagers you'll hear at the dinner table this week for some of the members of the 1991 Cohasset field hockey team. A week's worth of chores against a week's worth of rides to the mall. A week of setting the table versus an extra hour on curfew. Double or nothing on allowance.

Oddsmakers will be scrambling throughout team members' households to make sure all bets are in before the momentous parent-daughter field hockey game this Sunday. Both varsity and junior varsity teams will participate in the festivities. Parents, please remember: Legislation was passed in Congress stating that under no circumstances shall a parent of an athlete ground their child as a result of losing to that child in a parent-daughter competition. Well, good luck to all those involved ... Also in the works is a matchup featuring the boys soccer team taking on the field hockey team. Shades of Bobby Riggs versus Billie Jean King hover around Cohasset as the boys will try their hand (or feet) at field hockey ... The girls will celebrate their season's accomplishments at a banquet Monday night at Friday's restaurant. The location can be confirmed with Coach Bostwick.

From the Sports Archives ...

The football team evened its record last Saturday, treating themselves to a 37-6 trouncing of Weymouth Catholic in Cohasset. The Skippers (3-3) stormed Catholic with 31 unanswered points in the first half, highlighted by another spectacular performance by junior halfback Ray Jones. Jones rushed for 148 yards and scored four more touchdowns Saturday (he had four the previous week against St. Clements), all in the first half. In addition to runs of 19, 30, and 51 yards, Ray showcased his defensive talents with a 25 yard interception run for a touchdown. Cohasset's other score was the result of a Matt Keefe to Charlie Shields connection of 50 yards ... The Boston Globe acknowledged Jones by selecting him to the week's Division six honorable mention list for offense. For the season, Ray has accumulated 12 total touchdowns (ranking him third in the division, second in league play), while three tied for division lead of those have been the result of Matt Keefe touchdown tosses ... It appears as though the boys and girls soccer teams will both be headed for the tournament this year. The boys are 8-4-1 in the South Shore league, just a couple of points behind second place Rockland ... There is a familiar expression in sports that offense wins games, but defense wins championships. Adhering to that notion, the Skippers boast the second ranked goalie in the league in Chris Goodman. In 13 games he has allowed 13 goals for a 1.00 goals against average ... Meanwhile, Jen Reidy and Co. had played their way into second place, just a handful of points behind Abington. With a 7-3-2 record, the girls should be one of the seeds in post season competition. Senior forward Jen Reidy is at the head of the field in scoring with 15 goals and 10 assists and with more games to play.

Chuck Endris congratulates Ryan Cibelli, co-captain, after he scored the only goal in the 1-0 defeat of Hanover last week.

Dalton awarded teaching chair

The South Shore Art Center recently awarded the Shirley F. Neer Teaching Chair for Children's Art to faculty member George Dalton. A Plymouth resident, Dalton has been on the faculty for four years.

Dalton has taught clay for 20 years, including tenures in Detroit before coming to Massachusetts. A Special Needs Teacher in Brockton, he holds a Master Degree in Special Education from Bridgewater State College. In addition to teaching at the SSAC, Dalton teaches clay with his sister Judy Rossman, also an SSAC faculty member, at Country Way Pottery in Scituate.

Shirley Neer, a devoted teacher of children, headed the SSAC's fundraising program in 1985 for the 119 Ripley Road (Cohasset) building. After her enormous success, she took over as President of the Board of Directors in 1987. Upon her death in 1988, her family and the SSAC board and staff established the teaching chair in her name.

Dalton is the second recipient of the Shirley F. Neer chair. He is not only known for his outstanding teaching skills, but also his creative pottery. Many of his pieces are available at the SSAC Gift Gallery. The Main Street Gallery in Plymouth is also currently displaying Dalton's works.

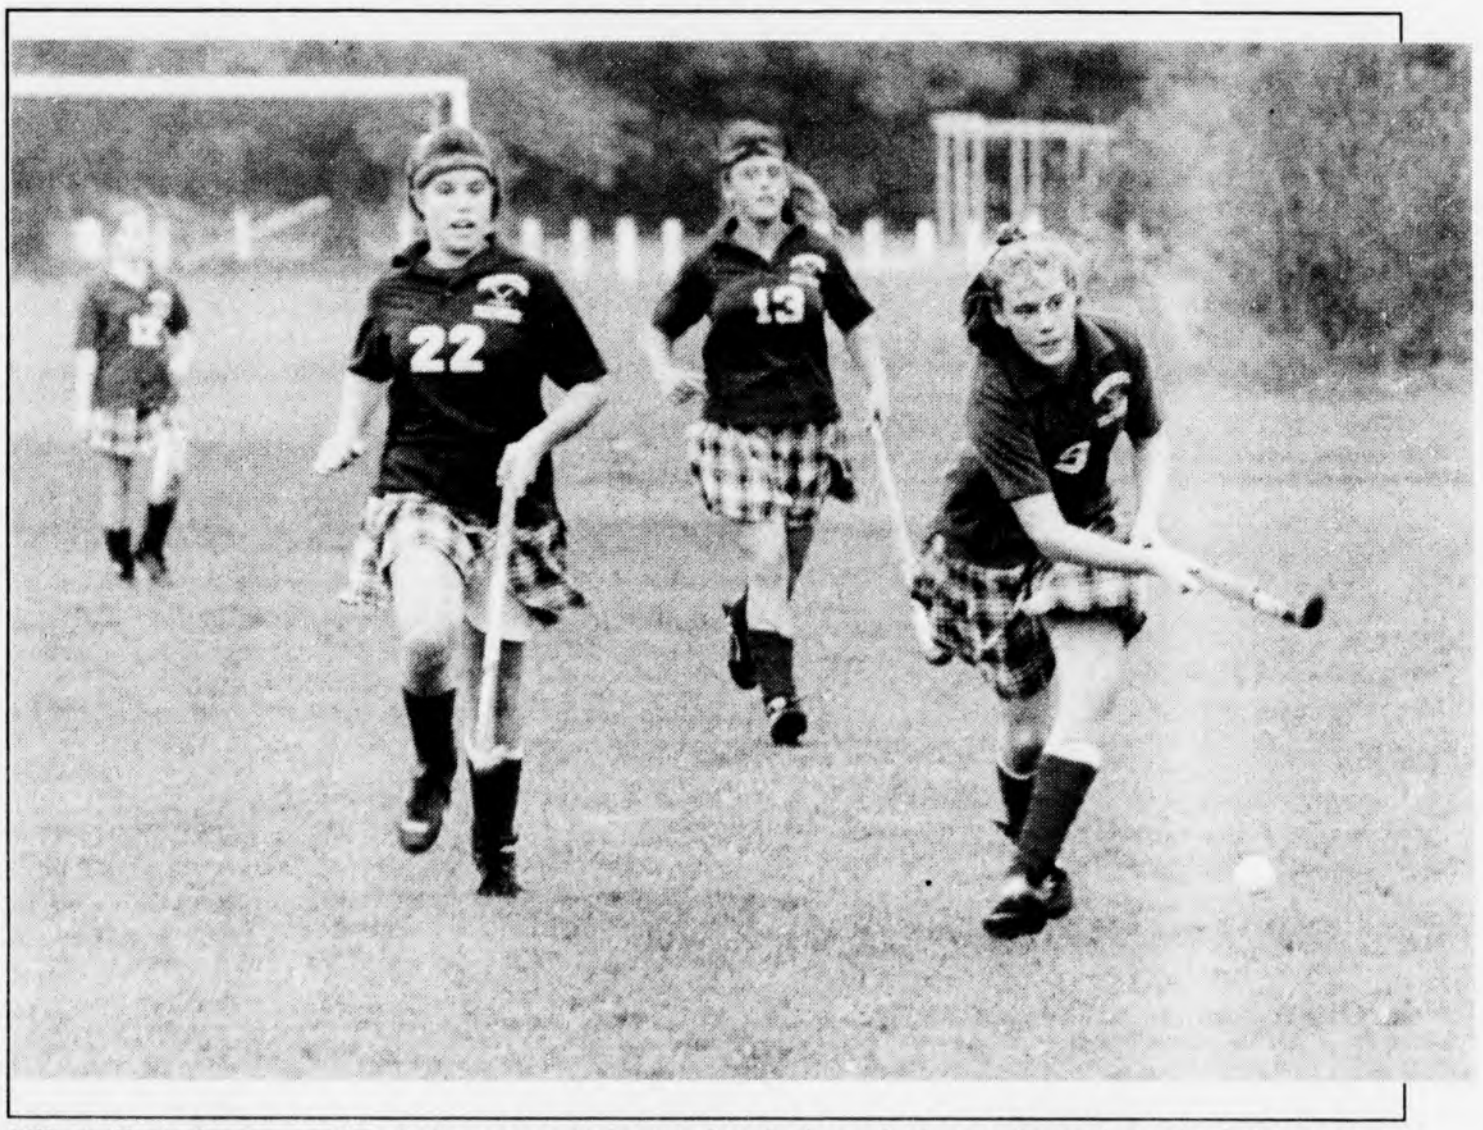
CHS field hockey team wraps up league play at Hull



By Michael Farley
Mariner sports writer

During the summer months, Hull means Nantasket Beach, arcades, tourists, and Coppertone tans. During mid-October, it means cottage rents cut in half, vacancy signs and the most dreadful thought for a high school athlete: playing in hell, I mean Hull, on a cold, rainy afternoon. With high winds and rain filled skies wreaking havoc on playing conditions, Deb Bostwick and her girls paddled and battled for what probably seemed like 40 days and 40 nights before dropping their league finale to the Pirates, 1-0.

The lone goal of the game came as a result of a scuffle in front of the Cohasset net. Several players tussled for ball control when Hull gained possession just long enough to expose an opening left by Becky Golden. "We played well today," commented an enthusiastic coach. "Hull came into the game needing the win to qualify for the tournament, so they were very motivated for the game as well," the coach added. She did point out one noticeable weakness.

"We couldn't get our corners working today. We practiced them, but we're going to have to refine that part of our game," was the analysis of Bostwick. Although a lack of scoring was etched on the scoreboard, lack of effort and support was nowhere to be found. Bostwick noted the fine play of sophomore sweeper Katie Norris and senior tri-captain Kathleen Conroy, as well as the support of the parents who braved the might of the adverse weather conditions.

Congratulations to three members of the Skipper field hockey team who shared the spotlight Saturday (Oct. 19) with the rest of the League All-Stars at East Bridgewater. Representing Cohasset were senior tri-captain Stacey Pierce at defense, senior tri-capt. defense/link Laurie Bronstein, and Karyn Murray, a junior sweeper who also spends time at the center halfback position.

Cilla Goff, 9, charges as the stickwomen attempt to break through the scoring column in action against Hanover. Bridget Corkery, 13, follows Goff's lead. (John Stobierski staff photo)

Soccer Boosters succeed

The Cohasset Soccer Boosters Club congratulates Terry Mulcahy, lucky winner of the Cohasset Soccer sweatshirt. The winning ticket was drawn during homecoming festivities on Oct. 12.

The Boosters thank everyone who so generously supported the Cohasset High School soccer program by purchasing raffle and Pancake Breakfast tickets — helping to raise almost $3,000.

Our soccer teams have worked and played hard to achieve a very successful year.

Early Release Day

Oct. 24 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Junior/Senior High School, noon; Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; Joseph Osgood School, 12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and food service will be available at the Junior/Senior High School.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff to attend inservice workshops on Literature and cooperative research and development programs.

Democrats hold annual auction

Co-op 8, the South Shore Democratic Coalition, will hold its seventh annual auction party Saturday, Oct. 26, at Temple Beth Sholom's Boyer Auditorium, 600 Nantasket Ave., Hull.

Doors open at 6:30 p.m. and the auction begins at 7 p.m.

More than 100 items will be gaveled down by Reps. Jan O'Brien (D-Norwell), Paul Haley (D-Weymouth), and Frank Hynes (D-Marshfield). Long-time auction host Jim O'Gara of Marshfield will again be on hand.

Additionally, a silent auction will be part of the evening's festivities, and regional, state and federal Democratic leaders have been invited to auction off items they donate.

Tickets are $5 per person and are available from Democratic Town Committee members in Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth. A limited number of tickets will be available at the door.

The auction is Co-op 8's primary annual fund-raiser. Proceeds benefit the individual town committees in their efforts to provide education about, and support for, the Democratic Party.

Caregiver's support group

A SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders) counsellor will be speaking at the next meeting to be held Tuesday, Nov. 5, at the Cohasset Community Center from 7 to 9 p.m.

The counsellor will discuss insurance matters and answer questions you may have about Social Security, Medicare, Medex or Medicaid.

The support group is open to anyone caring for an elder at home and has questions or concerns you would like to have addressed.

Capital treats

Sen. Robert Hedlund R-Weymouth wishes to invite anyone interested in attending a trick-or-treat party hosted by The Massachusetts Candy Distributors Association at the State House in the Great Hall on Oct. 31, from 3 to 6 p.m. in the afternoon. Any little hobgoblins who want to trick-or-treat Sen. Hedlund or Gov. William Weld will get to visit the very spooky Great Hall and receive a bag stuffed with goodies.

This event is sponsored by The Massachusetts Candy Distributors to provide a fun and safe trick-or-treating experience for the children of Boston and surrounding communities.

Leo's Tiger Cubs defeated by Blackhawks

By John Kinchla

Leo's Exxon Junior High School Hockey Team (the Tiger Cubs) were defeated by the Braintree Blackhawks in a tumultuous game before 200 rabid fans at the Pilgrim Arena on Friday night.

Playing their strongest game of the season, the Tiger Cubs kept Braintree in check for 25 scoreless minutes before they started to fade.

Jeremy Williams excelled in goal during the first half. Countless times he made diving, leaping stops. Cohasset's outstanding four man defensive corp of Kevin Smith, Jared Graves, Brendan Kinchla and Matt O'Connor kept the Blackhawks at bay.

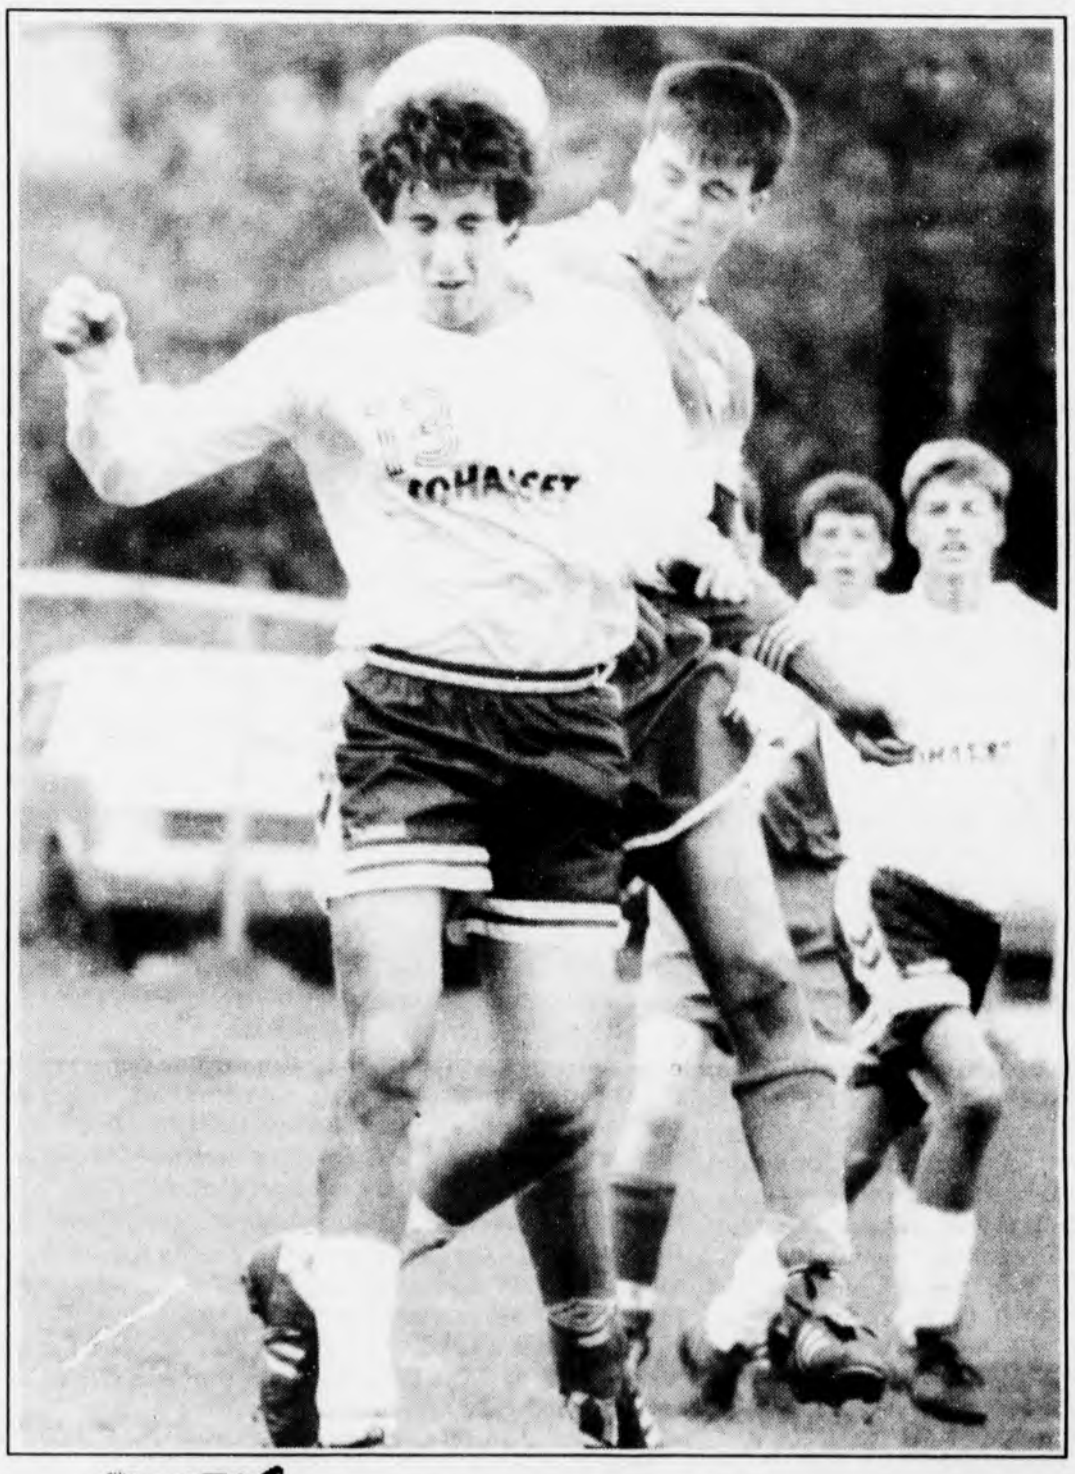
Cohasset's defensive strategy during the first half was to "ice" the puck on every occasion. The defensemen were instructed to stop the puck (if possible), three feet from the Cohasset blue line; and to fire it back into the Blackhawks' zone.

The Cohasset's wings were instructed to chase the puck midway through the Blackhawk zone and to apply pressure along the boards in the neutral zone.

During the second half of the contest, the Tiger Cubs began to show their fatigue. Cub wingers Jeff Thompson and Tom Kittle played outstanding games against the larger, more experienced Blackhawks. Both boys absorbed the complexities of the Tiger game plan and fought to maintain their positions on the ice. Both boys are learning the game fast and should become important contributors to the program as the Cubs mature.

Braintree found Cohasset's weakness in the second half as they swept numerous times from left wing to right wing, where they found a huge swath of ice along Cohasset's boards. Cohasset's wings were overpowered and the defensemen were sore from their over-effort.

The Tiger Cubs tried to fill the gap by reassigning stronger players to the right side, but Cohasset was short on numbers. Many key players for Cohasset were participating in a soccer game on Saturday and could not play against the Blackhawks on Friday night. Eventually, the Tiger Cubs became fatigued and Braintree started to score.



Jeff Tosi replaced Jeremy Williams in net for the second half. Tosi's stand-up style frustrated the Blackhawks. By the 45 minute mark, Cohasset's defense had collapsed, yet Tosi fought on.

Cohasset adopted many player combinations to combat their increasing fatigue. The addition of lightning fast, Guy Scarpaci to the roster allowed Cohasset to experiment with him at both wing and defense. Guy's first competitive hockey contest in over two years was received with much enthusiasm by the team. Even an out-of-shape Scarpaci is a Cohasset varsity prospect.

Scarpaci's play allowed 9th graders Brendan Kinchla and Mike Shields to play with some abandonment on offense. Kinchla's two way play, strong defense and backchecking created several scoring opportunities. The Kinchla, Scarpaci, Shields line combination resulted eventually in a goal for Kinchla and an assist to Scarpaci and Shields.

Eighth grader Dave Hansen played an outstanding game, switching from left wing to right wing and occasionally back to defense. His enthusiasm for defense caused a mismatch on the right side which resulted in a Braintree goal. Dave fought back though. In this game Dave showed improved quickness while on offense and an improved awareness of his responsibilities on defense. In this game, Dave took on many of the tougher defensive assignments and did an admirable job.

The next game for the Tiger Cubs is Friday.

Brooks Doten heads toward victory as Cohasset won 1-0 over Hanover in soccer action last week.

Weir River competition

Cohasset High School Alternative students will compete in the Head of the Weir Race Saturday, Oct. 26 in the lifesaving boat restored by them last year. The "John Warren II," on permanent loan to the school from the Hull Lifesaving Museum, is the mainstay of a rowing program for the Alternative School and other high school students.

The "John Warren II" is a 26-foot, multi-oared, Monomy Surfboat originally built for lifesaving activities. Other types of boats racing will include multi-oared gigs, doreys, sliding-seat shells, and kayaks. The race begins at 2 p.m. and good viewing locations would be at the George Washington Boulevard bridge over the Weir River, Hull, and the boat house at Hull gut.

MBTA budget battle could derail Old Colony plans

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Political wrangling over next year's budget threatens to derail the Old Colony project, according to MBTA officials.

"If the budget goes through as proposed, then I would say Old Colony is dead at least for this year," said Anne Larner, executive director of the MBTA advisory board.

The MBTA board of directors is seeking a budget that could force towns to choose between saving current services or funding future construction projects, according to Larner.

"Already the subject of the Old Colony Rail is controversial on the advisory board," Larner said. "I would say there is a split decision among the 78 communities (who have representatives on the advisory board). But now the board of directors is putting the towns in an even more difficult position. How could Boston, or Quincy or Cambridge support new projects like the Old Colony Line while taking cuts to their own service?"

The budget is expected to be finalized in early November. From there, the advisory board must approve it without being able to add any additional funding.

The board of directors, appointed by Gov. Weld in April, have proposed a level-funded $740 million budget for FY93, after MBTA officials submitted a request for a $785 million budget.

In order to level-fund the FY93 budget, the board of directors chopped $45 million from the proposed operating budget of $566 million.

This reduces the operating budget to $521 million after a budget of $550 million for FY92.

However, the board of directors increased the debt service on the capital program for the MBTA, which funds construction of new projects such as the Old Colony Line, from $190 million to $219 million.

"The board of directors is showing they support expansion of the MBTA, but it will be at the expense of current service. They just cut right from the bottom line without really thinking of the consequences." Larner said.

But even with the debt service increase, there might not be the finances for new projects like the Old Colony Rail.

"I would say of the $219 million allocated, $200 million is already owned on bonds for previous work," Larner said. "So there is not a lot to cut in that line item, if the board is looking to even things out."

The cuts in the operating budget will lead to political in-fighting between towns that have full MBTA service and those who are seeking more, according to Larner.

"The board did this without any sense of what's going on," Larner said. "They said they want to maintain the same level of service, but with less funding and another year of inflation, they realistically can't. They have put the advisory board in a tough spot and I think politics will sink the Old Colony Rail."

Larner said a fare increase is not a possibility.

As for the cuts in service, Larner could not be specific.

"I would say that the cuts would have to come from everywhere," she said.

However, Larner said the board of directors can still add to the budget by reviewing the 41 different line items in the budget.

The board of directors is scheduled to meet on Nov. 6 to review the FY93 budget.

Once the board of directors reaches a final decision on the budget, the advisory board has 45 days to debate the budget and make it legal.

However, once the budget reaches the advisory board, it cannot be increased from the figure approved by the board of directors, according to Larner.

"I have no idea what the board of directors is up to or what their motivations could be for putting us in this position," Larner said. "But if things continue like they have in the past week, services will be severely hurt and Old Colony could be through."

The MBTA recently completed environmental impact studies on the $600 million project. When the studies were released, MBTA officials estimated the construction could begin on the project in the spring and would be complete by 1997.

Project writing lab takes off at Cohasset High

By Joan Kovach
Special to the Mariner

Who can forget the dreaded essay question on a high school exam? Probably many of us feel that we are on safer ground with good old multiple choice questions. Composing the sentences and paragraphs for essay questions requires a confidence in writing that so many educated Americans just don't have.

Project Writing Lab, an effort undertaken by the high school faculty, the PSO and community members, is an attempt to change all this. "The lab (would) improve the writing environment of the ... school in which it is instituted; ... foster the practices of peer editing, conferencing and publishing, ... integrate writing into science, art, social studies, math and other courses (besides English), (and) combine the teaching of writing with the learning of word processing," states William Kite, Chairman of the English Department at the Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School in his Writing Lab Proposal.

So far, the town has been unable to provide the funds necessary for the lab. Project Writing Lab chairwoman Kathy Walsh hopes that the more the town knows and understands about the project, the more willing they will be to support it.

"Perhaps people feel the computers obtained through the Stop and Shop program over the past two years should be used," said Walsh. "They should be and they currently are being used, thanks to this terrific program and the support our community gave." The Stop and Shop program went a long way toward establishing the use of computers throughout our entire school curriculum, and two of these are in use at the high school in the form of a small writing lab. Walsh said, "From the computers obtained through the Stop and Shop/Apple program, six Apple computers are in daily use at Osgood, ten Apples are the basis of the Deer Hill computer lab, and the remaining five are Macintosh computers in constant use at the high school library (1), alternative School (1), foreign language program (1), and the start-up writing lab in the English department (2). Through the efforts of Project Writing Lab, these two Macintosh computers will be combined with others and networked to several printers. This hardware, together with appropriate software such as Writer's Helper will create the learning environment in which students, in the context of a group of peers, with faculty supervision and input and computer analysis of their work, will practice writing and master writing skills.

Future news articles in this paper will describe in more detail how the programs can improve students' writing and invite an increase in writing activity.

Putting In Your Two Cents

The community at large can begin to support the program when they purchase gas at the Mobil Station on 3A. From Monday, Oct. 28 to Sunday, Nov. 3, Cohasset Mobil Mart will donate two cents from each gallon of gas purchased to Project Writing Lab. This generous start-up effort will be enlarged when theatre-goers attend the Cohasset Drama Club's Dec. 12 performance of "The Homecoming." Proceeds from that performance will also go to Project Writing Lab. Individuals may contribute to the Project by sending a check to the Cohasset PSO, Box 30, Cohasset, MA, and noting "Project Writing Lab" on the contribution, as well as by filing up their tanks at Mobil and attending the special performance of "The Homecoming."

There is hope yet that the college application essay, the open ended question and the long overdue thank you note to Aunt Emma won't be the impossible task we've always known it as.

Fall concert October 27

Subscriptions for the 46th season of the Hingham Civic Orchestra are on sale now as the orchestra prepares for the fall concert on Sunday, Oct. 27, at 4 p.m. This concert, as well as most of the others in the season will take place at the Hingham Civic Orchestra's new permanent home, Brandon Woods of Hingham, 110 Charles Street.

In addition to the fall concert, the subscription series includes the Yuletide Concert, Sunday, Dec. 8, at the Old Ship Church, the Children's Concert, Saturday, Feb. 8, the spring concert, Sunday, April 5, and the POPS Concerts, Friday and Saturday evenings, May 15 and 16. Not part of the subscription is the traditional outdoor concert at Glastonbury Abbey on Sunday, June 7.

New officers at Art Center

The South Shore Art Center recently held their annual meeting at which new officers and members of the Board of Directors were voted in. Keith Kretschmer of Hingham was named president, while Ronald Rawson and Kenneth Ingber, both of Cohasset, were named 1st vice president and 2nd vice president, respectively. Virginia Allen of Scituate was named corresponding secretary and Eleanor Gorman of Cohasset elected secretary.

Nancy Cusack of Scituate, Meg Robbins and Richard Lee Evans of Hingham, and Margo Vickery of Quincy were elected as new board members.

Chris Rifkin of Hingham, the board's outgoing president, was applauded for her dedication to the Art Center over the last three years. Rifkin will remain on the board as head of the Exhibition Committee. Eleanor Gorman was also cited for her coordination of the Saturday volunteer program for the Art Center.

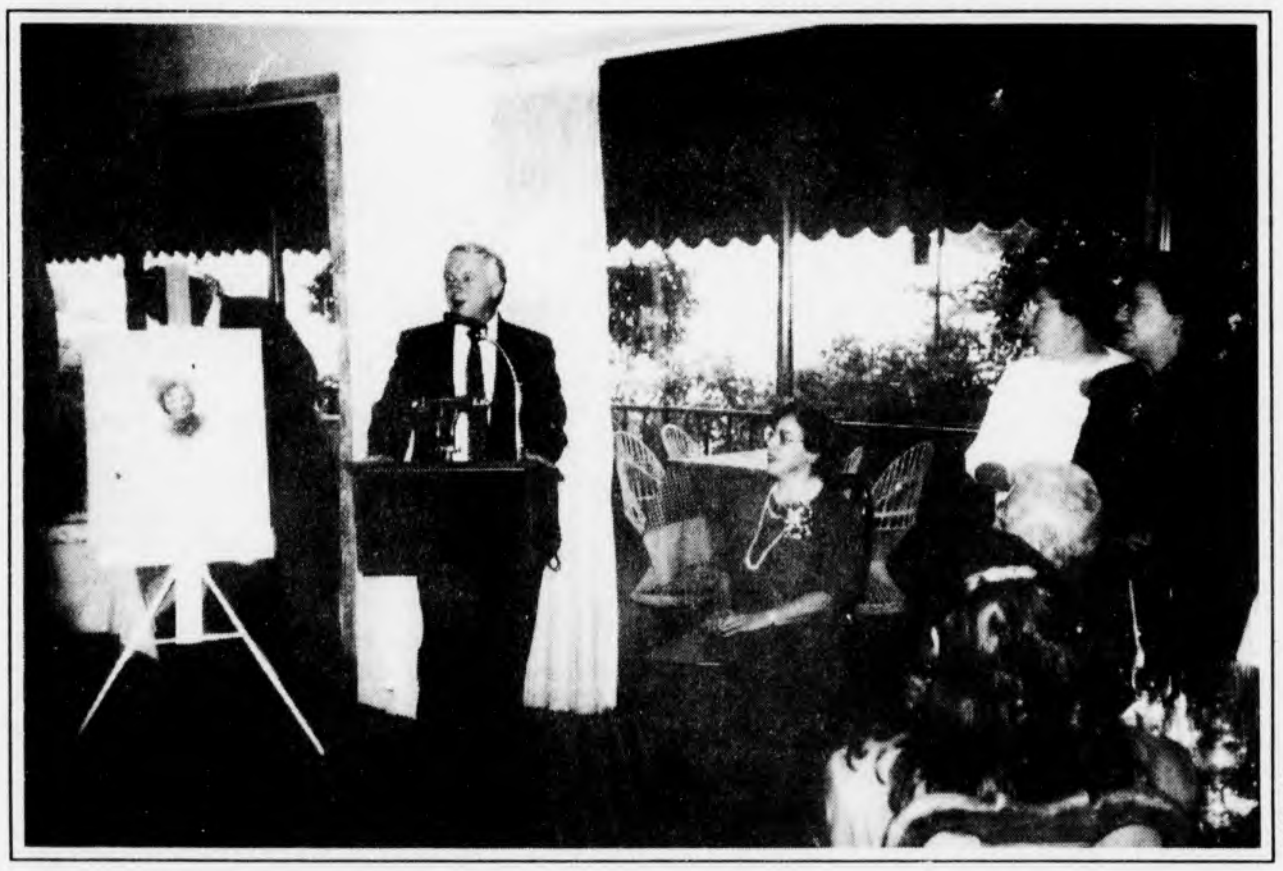
Barbara Conte looks toward the future

By Barbara Conte
Special to the Mariner

I am looking forward to retirement. The most difficult part for me is leaving the staff, parents and students that I've come to know so well over the thirty-seven years. All of them have been such an important part of my life.



Now, it is time for me to look toward the future. Over the years, my father took great pleasure in building a replica of an Italian villa, which he had not finished. I am looking forward to having the time to continue working on it and to completing the project which we both enjoyed so much. My father also taught me the skills and techniques needed to design and to make authentic scaled models of period furniture. It is a skill which I have enjoyed developing, and I intend to continue to pursue it. In addition to the Italian villa and miniature furniture making, I have always enjoyed art. Working with the Cohasset Historical Society and developing the History of Cohasset coloring book was thoroughly enjoyable. I plan to continue and perhaps to further expand my endeavors in illustrating children's books.

Working at Deer Hill has been a pleasure in my life. I'm now looking forward to further developing and enjoying these interests.

I would like to thank everyone who attended my retirement party and made this event such a memorable one for me. I would like to thank the Deer Hill staff, and everyone who worked on the committee for making this event possible. It was a wonderful day!

Barbara Conte

Supt. Steve Hart leads the praise during the retirement party for Barbara Conte recently at Kimball's -by-the-Sea. Miss Conte is seated.

Monte Carlo Night auction to benefit schools

A collection of terrific items will go on the auction block at 11 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 2 at the sixth annual PSO "Monte Carlo Goes West!" night at the Cohasset Community Center. All proceeds will go to Cohasset schools.

At the top of the list will be a week's vacation at a newly renovated, four bedroom, two bath, fully equipped Cape house with wrap-around porch — a three minute walk to the beach, for the last week in August.

Other desirables include:

- a weekend at the Boston Harbor Hotel;
- Boston Bruins tickets for two;
- an estate planning session;

There will be many other exciting products and services in live and silent auctions — also, door prizes.

Buy your tickets today from any PSO board member, or by calling Jim or Donna French, 383-9901, or Carol Riley, 383-6215. Tickets are $20 each and include a $5 start-up stake at the door. Games will include poker, blackjack and craps.

Town Clerk Frances L. Marks resigns

Town Clerk Frances L. Marks sent a letter of resignation to selectmen. Marks, who has been hospitalized with heart problems, tendered her resignation effective Dec. 31.

Marks, whose current term expires April 1993, has been town clerk since 1984. Prior to that she served as assistant town clerk for 13 years.

Selectmen reportedly will appoint an interim town clerk until regular town elections are held in April. Monday night they did not comment on the matter except to note receipt of Marks' letter and send her their wishes for a speedy recovery.

Town tries to cap soaring legal costs

By Lisa B. Eigner
Mariner staff

In the past 10 years, the town's legal budget more than doubled, according to town counsel Richard A. Henderson.

"However, they're only about one third of what Cohasset incurred during the mid '80s," Henderson said, explaining that steps are being taken to hold the figure down.

Henderson said the costs are becoming more reasonable.

"For FY '91, the town counsel went under its budget by $3,248," said Henderson.

For FY '91, legal costs totaled $63,768, a substantial decrease from FY '88 when costs totalled $163,083.

"Yearly costs have fluctuated," said Henderson, who attributed this year's decrease to the declined activity in the town's two main legal cases.

"When the economy was better," Henderson said, "there were more development projects. Now, there aren't any commercial development projects pending in Cohasset."

"The best way to cut back on legal services," said Henderson, "is to be very cautious of retaining specialized counsel unless it's absolutely necessary."

According to Henderson, litigation is far more costly to the town than general legal services.

"We've cut legal costs by taking advantage of the district court system," Henderson said.

"As of this year," said Henderson, "the health inspector, building inspector, dog officer, and harbor master can go to the district court in Quincy and file a simple request for a criminal hearing instead of filing a civil suit."

Henderson claims that thanks to this new procedure, the town will eliminate: paying a $100 court entry fee, preparing a formal complaint, and hiring a Norfolk County sheriff to serve the complaint. All of which represent substantial savings to the town.

"Civil litigation," Henderson said, "equals lots of expense and court time. And the more steps that can be avoided, the better off the town will be."

Included among the town's legal costs are services rendered by town counsel, the labor counsel, the assessor's special counsel, the environmental counsel, and the sewer department's special counsel.

Since 1983, all labor negotiations on the police and fire departmentshave been handled by the law firm of McGowan, Engel, Tucker, Garrett & Schultz.

Last year two more groups of town employees voted to unionize, the clerical union and library employee union.

Legal costs for labor negotiations and collective bargaining have peaked as high as $20,969 in FY '86

Social Service League spotlights AIDS

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Donna looks like the very picture of health. She is attractive and vivacious. Her life is filled with a good job, a 13-year-old daughter and a serious relationship. There is talk of a marriage in the not-too-distant future. She calls herself lucky.

But Donna also has AIDS.

Donna shared her story at a workshop sponsored by the Social Service League Monday night. Nearly 30 people turned out to hear from Donna and representatives from agencies working with people with AIDS, their families and friends.

"I'm exactly the same as you except I have this virus," she told the audience. "I've gotten sick and I've gotten well." Currently Donna's T-cell count, an indicator of the state of her immune system, is in the normal range.

Donna doesn't know for certain when or how she contracted AIDS. It could have come from a transfusion during one of several operations she had before the High winds & rough waters smash boat

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

As high winds whipped the surf to 29-foot swells this week, boats rocked in Cohasset waters.

Sometime Monday night the Arabello, a 38-foot sailboat owned by Clark Chase of Cohasset, tore itself away from its mooring in Sandy Cove and crashed upon the shoreline, according to Harbormaster Irving Gadow.

The Arabello was a wooden hulled boat.

No one was injured in the incident.

Winds hit 48 miles an hour Monday night.

The harbormaster said he expects to see quite a bit of activity in the harbor this weekend as owners move their crafts into safe docking for the winter.

The past season was unusually light for accidents in the water, Gadow said.

Throughout the summer, the harbormaster was involved in 28 rescues, most of those were boats stranded after running into engine trouble or running out of gas.

Cohasset's week

Hiltz will be roasted

Friends of Lester Hiltz, who is a Cohasset resident, are holding a dinner roast in his honor at the Barker Tavern, 21 Barker Road, Scituate, on Friday, Nov. 22. Hiltz is retiring as Norwell Health Agent.

Cocktails will be from 7 to 8 p.m.. A dinner dance will follow.

Tickets are $30 per person and must be purchased in advance at the board of health office, 345 Main St., or by calling Carol Dunn at 659-1863 or Dottie Jenkins at 545-2554.

The deadline for purchasing tickets is Nov. 11.

Voke 'super' search

South Shore Vo-Tech officials began the search for a new superintendent this week to replace Dr. Clifford Easton, who is leaving at the end of the school year.

The position, which will be advertised in regional and national trade/education publications pays an annual salary in the range of $58,000 - $62,000.

Requirements include a business background and 10 years of experience in educational leadership dealing with students, staff, and the community.

The regional school committee hopes to select semi-finalists in December and conduct interviews in January. Finalist interviews have been tentatively set for the first or second week of February.

As of Oct. 1, the enrollment for the regional technical high school, which has campuses in Hanover and Abington, was 383 students.

Mariner editor Pat Desmond talks about newspaper production to a group of Cohasset Weblos who toured the Mariner plant Oct. 24. The group led by Allen DeVito includes: Joey Carbone, Justin Maitland, Mario Bruzzone, Kevin DeVito and Mike Sadler. The young men said the Mariner should run more sports and more humor.

Tax Bills due Nov. 21

The first half Fiscal 1992 real estate and personal property tax bills have been mailed. Both taxes are due on Thursday, Nov. 21. Office hours on Nov. 21 will be: 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. Postmark dates will not be accepted. Payments must be received in the Collector's Office by 7 p.m. on Nov. 21. The Tax Collector's Office is usually closed to the public on Wednesdays. On Wednesday, Nov. 20 it will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. to process tax payments for those people wishing to pay in person.

"Each year a number of tax bills are returned to the tax office because of improper mailing addresses. Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should contact our office at the town hall by calling 383-9900, extension 113. Failure to receive a tax bill does not waive payment of the tax and does not excuse the homeowner from interest charges on payments received after the due date. New property owners should also contact our office to obtain copies of their tax bills," said Elizabeth Ripley, Treasurer/Collector.

"Again this year we are using the automated lock box system to process and record the tax payments. The bills are printed on special paper with special ink to provide a readable scan line. Please be sure to use the original copy of your bill when paying by mail or in person so that the payment can be processed through this system. If you have an escrow account you should send both copies of the original bill to your bank immediately to ensure a timely payment," Ripley said.

She added that 10 volunteers from the Senior Center and friends helped again this year prepare the tax bills for mailing.

This is the third year in a row that this group has helped the town hall departments with special projects.

"This year the group arrived at 9 a.m. and by 2 p.m. I was able to take over 3,000 bills to the post office for and gone as low as $4,137 in FY '88.

Henderson said he is opposed to department heads seeking outside help for legal services, and feels that other routes should be consulted first.

"If a department head needs legal consultation," said Henderson, "there are one of two avenues they should explore before seeking outside help."

First, he said, department heads should pose their questions to legal counsel at the state level.

"State agencies will answer questions about legal matters on the local level," said Henderson.

"The state can provide free legal advice to local town government, but it's up to the department heads to seek the advice."

If that doesn't produce the necessary answers, Henderson said that the potential for future legal problems can be minimized if bylaws, contracts, and regulations are reviewed in advance of publication.

"If the town observes procedure," said Henderson, "they're less apt to run into legal snags."

In litigation since 1979, is the lawsuit filed by the state Attorney General against Cohasset's sewer commissioners.

While the town signed an agreement with the state on the issue years ago, the suit still exists and fees continue to mount.

The state contends that Cohasset is polluting the waters of the James Brook and Cohasset Harbor. The solution, according to the agreement is construction of a new sewerage plant.

More than 10 years later, Henderson said that lawyers and engineers are still trying to find an alternative to building a new facility.

Invoices show that during that 10-year period, the Boston-based law firm of Goodwin, Procter & Hoar was paid well over $100,000 in legal service fees.

Cohasset Heights, the private landfill off Route 3A, is number 2 on the list of ongoing town cases. Litigation continues. The board of health employed the law firm of Davis, Malm & D'Agostine from 1984 to 1985.

Since 1985, the board of health has been using Boston's Warner & Stackpole for the case.

For FY '86, when their services were first employed, Warner & Stackpole were paid $16,116.

The following year, the firm received $108,235 for work on Cohasset Heights issues.

According to Henderson, the marked legal fee increase was because 1987 was the year when most of the activity involving the Cohasset Heights project took place.

blood supply was purged of AIDS-contaminated donations. She could have caught the virus during the years she abused alcohol and drugs. It could have been the result of sexual contact in prior years.

The only certainty is that her exposure came more than six years ago. That is when Donna decided to lick her drug and alcohol dependency and get her life back together. During the first five years of recovery she suffered from recurrent sinus infections, two bouts of cancer and a series of gynecological problems, but no one ever tested her for AIDS or even suggested she could have been exposed.

Although the possibility of exposure crossed her mind from time to time, she pushed it aside.

"I thought it was a gay man's disease," she confesses.

Donna spends little time or energy trying to determine how she got the disease.

"It really doesn't matter to me," she explains. "I have it, and that's the bottom line."

Happenstance led to the discovery of her AIDS status a year ago last week. A friend was going in for premarital blood tests and decided to have an AIDS test to be on the safe side. Donna accompanied her to the anonymous testing site in Boston.

"I thought, 'What the heck, I'm here. I'll be tested, too'," she said.

Donna got the bad news in person.

"All I wanted to do was get out of the room," she said.

At the time Donna was involved in a serious relationship.

"I went into shock. The only thing I could think about was the relationship," she told the audience. "I thought, "Oh God, it's gone!" I wondered who was going to love me, who was going to take care of my daughter."

Donna describes herself as being in shock.

"I fell apart the next day. I was crying for my mother, but I didn't want to tell her."

Telling her daughter and her parents was essential, but frightening.

"You spend your whole life protecting your children. How could I be the cause of so much pain?

"I felt such guilt and shame. I thought I deserved it.," she said. "But nobody deserves a disease like this, I know that now."

Donna credits the knowledge and skills she learned through recovery and membership in a 12-Step program for the positive steps she has taken to deal with her life since finding out she had AIDS.

"I knew I had to find somebody who knew what I was going through," Donna said. "I needed to find out that this rock in my gut would go away and that I could live with this."

She found a support group and the courage to tell the people closest to her.

The man she was involved with stayed with her for the next six months. When the relationship ended, it ended for a variety of reasons.

Telling her daughter was even harder. She chose to tell her at the beginning of a school vacation to give both of them time to get used to the idea before having to deal with the pressures of school life. Her daughter took it better than expected.

"She put her arms around me and said, 'Mom, it's okay. It's not your fault."

Donna's parents and friends also continue to provide her with emotional support. Since finding out about the AIDS, she's started a relationship with a man who is is not infected.

"I realized it was not my choice, it was his," Donna says of their decision to go forward with the relationship. They are talking about making a more serious commitment to each other.

Her employer and the co-workers she has chosen to tell have been remarkably accepting and understanding. Her employer bluntly told her not to let anyone drive her out until she is ready to stop working.

"I haven't met up with a lot of rejection. I have seen some fear," Donna says. "Then they realize, "Oh my God, it's Donna we're talking about.'

"I guess they found out what they needed to know, too."

Donna's story is neither typical nor unique.

"I've been lucky," she says. "I'm luckier than a lot of people I know. What has this virus given me? I've looked a myself more fully. I know who I am and what's important. I feel like more of a person."

Donna laughs and adds, "I broke a nail in the ladies' room downstairs and I was really upset."

Chances are you have never met Donna, although she is real and that is her real first name. But Donna is not the only person with AIDS living on the South Shore. If AIDS has not touched your life yet, it will soon. Cohasset has had its share of AIDS victims.

According to Kim Horte, a registered nurse with the AIDS project run by the Brockton Visiting Nurses, there were 4,353 people with AIDS living in Massachusetts as of Sept. 1. Many more are HIV positive and will, in time, develop AIDS. Scientists calculate that it may take as long as 10 to 12 years after exposure to develop symptoms.

According to Donna, only 12.5 percent of the people with AIDS know they have it.

Donna, Horte and the other panel members stress the importance of information. Know how AIDS is transmitted, how to protect yourself and how to help if someone you know is diagnosed as having AIDS or being HIV-positive.

In a nutshell, AIDS is caused by a virus that attacks the body's immune system. It is a blood-born disease. The virus is passed by having sex with an infected person, by sharing needles to shoot drugs or other contact with blood and can be passed from an infected mother to her baby during pregnancy or birth. There have only been five documented cases of a health worker contaminating a patient, all five cases were caused by the same person.

Anyone — male or female, adult or child, gay or straight — can get AIDS.

If you suspect you may have been exposed, get tested. But Benet Hill, a registered nurse with Boston VNA's AIDS project, stresses the importance of being tested anonymously at first to protect your confidentiality.

It takes one to three weeks for the results to come back. Hill said people going in to get their test results need to bring a close friend along for support.

"If the test result is positive, it is a traumatic time," he said. Many people have suicidal feelings when they first learn they have AIDS or are HIV-positive.

Hill also recommends working with a doctor and hospital with expertise with AIDS. It is also essential to sign up for employee health benefits to maintain access to medical care.

There are painfully few resources for people with AIDS or those who are HIV-positive on the South Shore. Most people will need to travel to Boston or Brockton for medical services, although Hill said Jordan Hospital in Plymouth has developed some expertise.

The message Donna, Hill and Horte want spread is that sooner or later AIDS will touch your life.

"It's an epidemic," Hill said. "It's pandemic — it's all over the world.

"The people who have AIDS have a strong will to live. If the people don't give up, we can't give up."

If you or someone you know has tested positive or may have been exposed, you need to educate yourself. For more information, call the South Shore AIDS Project at (508) 559-1174 or the AIDS Action Committee at 437-6200. All calls will be kept strictly confidential. You can bet your life on it.

'Color on Silk' by Nancy Jaye

The Artist's Son Gallery presents "Color on Silk," by Nancy Jaye, throughout the entire month of November. A wine and cheese reception will be held Friday evening, Nov. 8, at 7:30 p.m. in honor of the Hull textile artist, who has achieved national recognition.

Jaye received her formal training from the Philadelphia College of Art where she earned a BFA in Printmaking and Fibers. In her professional experience over the past 15 years, Nanci has enjoyed batik painting, a process of painting on silks using dyes and wax. Her work varies from patterned, stylized figures to bold, sweeping abstracts. Because silk is luxurious in nature, it offers great versatility and reacts well to the dye. She uses a broad range of colors from subtle pastels to bold, bright tones.

She has displayed her unique work in group shows throughout the East Coast as well as in solo exhibitions at The Corner Gallery-New York City and others throughout Massachusetts.

Also interested in fashion and costume, she has developed a line of hand-painted silk scarves which incorporate her strong graphic compositions and unique color combinations. These scarves have been marketed and sold throughout the country in better fashion stores and museum gift shops. Currently, the American Craft Museum-New York City, The Museum of Fine Arts-Houston, Nordstroms-Washington, Fred Siegals-Beverly Hills, Henri Bendals-New York City, and Snooty Hooty-Georgia, are carrying her scarf line.

As a selected gallery artist-member of the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset and co-founder and

Council on aging help means lower pay for Kathy Bryanton

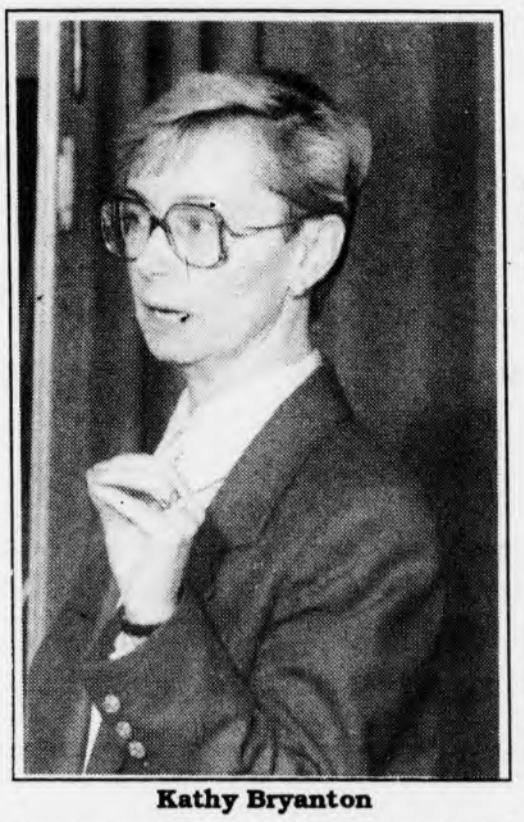
The personnel board and selectmen met Monday to talk about reclassifying the director of the town's senior center, Kathy Bryanton.

The meeting was held at the request of the Council on Aging, Bryanton's employer. Not long ago several members of the COA appeared before selectmen to ask help in gaining a raise through reclassification for Bryanton.

At the time David Chittim and Gerard Keating asked the selectmen to speak to the members of the personnel board on Bryanton's behalf. The COA would like to see the director's job paid at a higher rate.

Bryanton is a grade H on the town pay scale, which amounts to $467 for the job which is classified as 35 hours a week.

One of the requests of the COA is to upgrade the work week from 35 to 40 hours and add the possibility of obtaining overtime money for extra hours work.



The personnel board is still researching how the director's job ended in the overtime exempt category — but it has been that way since 1987, a year after the position was created.

Barbara Moore, co-chairman of the personnel board, said the position does not carry enough responsibility to be upgraded to the J level sought.

"This isn't to say the individual isn't doing the job well or isn't qualified. It's just that the job itself doesn't rate the change," she said.

She pointed out that among the positions at the J level is that of harbormaster and director of the recreation department — both jobs require independent action on the part of the employee.

Moore pointed out that the COA is actively involved in the day-to-day operation of the senior center, unlike other boards that set goals and leave the implementation up to the director.

Kathy Bryanton

She said the volunteers from the COA help create programs as well as help carry them out.

In a three-page handout from the personnel board, the job of director was analyzed. Many of the responsibilities listed by the COA as part of the job description were said to be run by other organizations.

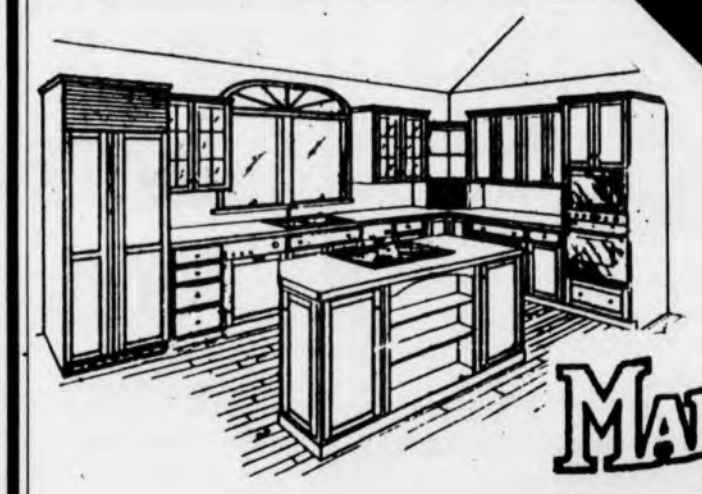
"We took the COA senior center community focal point wheel, provided to us by the board and its new job description, and determined what is actually done by the director," the hand-out said. "We concluded that the current position designbated as director of COA and paid at grade level H is appropriate and fair given the level of responsibility this position handles."

ALS ambulance may lead to more regionalization

Selectman Diana Kornet and Executive Secretary Greg Doyon toured a regional communication headquarters for Dukes County this week.

In a report to the rest of the selectmen, Kornet said the tour was part of her work on the regional committee working out details for the Advanced Life Support ,ALS, Ambulance that South Shore Hospital will run next year for the region.

Kornet said all of Martha's Vineyard uses one central emergency dispatcher. Two to three dispatchers are on duty at a given time. The headquarters serves the six towns on the Vineyard which have a summer population of more than 100,000 but a winter population of about 12,000.



There are seven dispatchers who work the various shifts. The same people handle the work year-round.

Martha's Vineyard uses 911. All 911 calls go to the central communications center.

Kornet said the tour, which included officials from the other communities involved in the ALS plan.

"It was thought we might benefit from a regional dispatcher," Kornet said, explaining that the ALS plan is not worked out in detail as yet.

Earlier this year Town Meeting voted to accept the concept of an Enhanced 911 emergency system. Under a new state law, the telephone company must provide the enhanced 911 service at no additional wiring cost to communities seeking it. Until now Cohasset has not had a 911 emergency number. In the past the telephone company charged communities a fee for the rewiring needed to make 911 work.

Ken Ingber joins the advisory committee

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

Making King Street one way would have been stupid. "The additional traffic we (King Street residents) foresaw as a result of the new Super Stop and Shop never happened," Ken Ingber concedes, of his first effort as an active citizen in town.

Ingber's second effort was to redesign the nutty intersection at King and Beechwood Streets. Ingber, a lawyer, doesn't have any particular facility with intersection design, but out of all the engineering plans submitted his was chosen.

During all of the above, Ingber didn't know it, but he was attracting the attention of the town fathers and advisors.

Hmmmm, they said, as they scratched their brows. Ingber had been active on his street, would he be interested in serving the town at a higher level?

He was interested, and last October he and fellow King Street resident, Debbie Cook, joined the advisory committee as new members. Last month the Ingbers moved to Woodland Drive.

Ingber finds the entire "town" experience enchanting. Selma and Ken Ingber were both raised in Brooklyn, New York and graduated from Brooklyn College. In 1979 he graduated from Boston University Law School (where Selma obtained her master's degree) with a slew of honors; after which he joined the law firm of Gaffin and Krattenmaker in Boston, where he is now a partner.

Selma, a psychotherapist, is associated with Mar Vista Psychological Associates on Parkingway in Cohasset. The Ingber children are 8-year-old Elizabeth, and David, practically 7.

Ken says after 11 years in Cohasset, he and Selma are still loving small town life. In addition to his "street work" he was also a participant in the Osgood Playpark (foundation and construction) and he is vice president and legal counsel of the South Shore Art Center.

"It's fun to live here. If you have a problem with your children in New York City, you get scared. Here, you know your children's friend's parents, you know the policemen, you know the reporters," Ken said, adding that he is not in the habit of trusting "the press," but he finds the local press nonthreatening with the exception of the Tinytown columnist.

In other matters, Ken says the Thomas confirmation hearings as conducted by the Senate were not unlike the kind (but not type of issues) the Cohasset Selectmen must consider weekly. "They (senators and selectmen) deal more with people. It's a due process issue, they diffuse warfare. It's critical that warfare be diffused."

Regarding the confirmation hearings, Ken says "I feel something happened (Thomas vs. Hill). When you write a review article (Ken was Developments Editor of the Boston University Law Review) you pursue a theory and test it. You don't criticize a scientist for having a hypothesis.

"Anita Hill gave him (Judge Clarence Thomas) a character reference. This was not a criminal charge. The Supreme Court operates through its prestige, it doesn't call in its Army. What was at stake here was the prestige of the court."

Will the U.S. Supreme Court lose anything through the addition of Judge Thomas?

"Unlike Judge David Souter, Judge Thomas will certainly bring life experience to the court," Ken said, adding Thomas' regulatory experience could be very significant. "But we should all remember that no one is natural under the scrutiny of the TV cameras. The whole process is artificial."

Ken talks about how the truth is a very strange thing. In an earlier job, Ken worked a calculator. Almost immediately, he realized something was kooky with the calculator. It was broken. But then, after a brief trial, it was discovered the second one was broken, and the third one was broken.

"How many times does that happen - three calculators in a row not working? My boss asked if I was dropping soda into the machines, he couldn't believe this was happening."

Ken relates the calculators to another level - town government. "Running a town is like operating a household. Basically, you want to keep it clean, and running in order. If it's not clean, if it's not running properly, something's going on. Something needs to be fixed."

Ken says Sen. Arlen Specter (R - Pennsylvania) is the most effective cross-examiner in the Senate. With respect to the Thomas confirmation hearings, Ken feels Specter was "Constitutionally sensitive. He could have given Professor Hill a much harder time. He didn't. He was gentle. He toned it down."

Would Ken have selected Judge Thomas as a U.S. Supreme Court Justice?

"No. Scalia was a scholar; Robert Bork was the most qualified nominee to go before the confirmation hearings in this century." Ken agrees with the president's critics who say both Presidents Reagan and Bush "have been committed to hiring nobodies." But he feels the law is so exciting, so great and inspiring, that the law itself will compel Judge Thomas.

Judge Learned Hand once said he was responsible "To these books around us. That's to whom I'm responsible."

As a newly-appointed member of the advisory committee with a three-year term, Ken says his committee assignments will be looking into town buildings, law, town counsel and outside counsel.

Long before his appointment to the advisory committee, Ken said he spoke on town meeting floor in favor of giving the Bates Building to Habitat. Aware that the advisory committee has taken a stand against donating the building to Habitat, Ken said in his new role he will have to consider the public's increasing reluctance to overrides, the public's personal financial situation, and the advisory committee's fiscal knowledge and perspective.

around town

• Congratulations go to Janet and Richard Wisenfeld this week, they became the parents of a brand new baby girl on Oct. 10. They can join the proud grandparents, Judy and Peter Kulturides walking around Aaron River Road.

• Mark this Saturday, Nov. 2, on your calendar for a night of fun. It is the sixth annual PSO Monte Carlo night, and it will be at the Cohasset Community Center from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. There will be blackjack, craps, poker, a live silent auction, door prizes, Tex-mex hors d'oeuvres, and a cash bar. The dress is rhinestone cowboy (optional) and the music is country western. Tickets are $20 per person, which includes a $5 start-up stake, and proceeds benefit curriculum enrichment for Osgood, Deer Hill and Cohasset Jr/Sr. High. Call Jim and Donna French at 383-9901 or Carol Riley at 383-6215 for tickets and information. Tickets will also be available at the door.

• We have to keep watching Sports Illustrated magazine. Krissy Pompeo is going to be in one of the articles that is coming up. Krissy, daughter of Hap and Leah Pompeo, will be in a photo as well as being quoted...how exciting.

• Tom Wigmore was recently chosen co-employee for the month of September at the Baird Center. Tom was told that he has been a breath of fresh air at the Baird at a time when they all needed a lift. His sense of humor and good nature has made him an immediate hit with both the kids and the staff alike. Tom has also been a great help in filling in for extra overnights whenever staff are in need. Tom has caught on to their system very quickly and should be an "excellent counselor if his supervisor ever spends any time with him." Everyone thanks Tom for his efforts and we will also add that the Baird Center's gain is certainly the State's loss.

• Another event that is newsworthy this week is the Gridiron Club's dinner-dance. This year it will be held on Nov. 11 at Kimball's-by-the-Sea, and there will be a live band. For more info, please contact any member of the Gridiron Club, or ask them about it at the game this Saturday.

• We are hearing rave reviews once again this year, and our hats are off to the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. They, and all of the businesses, of course, sent tote bags designed and made by Ron Goodwin and subscriptions to the Mariner (write me about your news concerning college life, okay?), and lots of other little items that thrill the students. Thanks to the Chamber.

• Hope everyone got a chance to see the festivities at the Common last Sunday, when the Community Center had its annual Halloween Fair. It was wonderful. The kids looked great and had such fun at all of the games that were provided. If you missed it, be sure to catch it for your little one (or big ones too) next year. It was a great effort by all of those involved.

• It is hard to imagine the Town Clerk's office without Frances Marks at the helm. As you probably know by now, she resigned effective Dec. 31; health reasons prompted her to do so. Be sure to make a trip to the town hall to tell her what a fine job she has done for our town. She really is a hard-working, fine lady. We certainly wish you well, Fran, and thank you for your efforts.

• The schedule is out for the weekly Cable Show, Pierson to Person, and here it is: Thursday, Nov. 7, Hingham's three member Board of Selectmen; Thursday, Nov. 14, two-hour special on AIDS; Thursday, Nov. 21, World Globalization and what it means; Latin American Economist, Dr. Alejandro Toledo, and Sociologist, Dr. Braulio Munoz, and others; and no show on Thursday Nov. 28, as it will be dark due to Thanksgiving Day.

George Dalton and Susan Neer talk about his plans for the teaching fellowship he was recently awarded through South Shore Art Center.

• That's all the news for this week. Be sure to give me a call with your newsworthy event as that is what makes this column possible.

• And, be sure to watch out for the ghosts and goblins tonight. Drive carefully and have tons of goodies waiting for them when they arrive at your house.

Lessons in Natural Foods
presented by 14 KARROT NATURAL FOODS

Lesson #1 - NATURAL HISTORY

Contrary to popular opinion, natural foods were not invented in California sometime during the 60's. They've been around a whole lot longer. In fact, you probably saw them in your own Grandmother's kitchen. Hearty hot cereals without any artificial flavors, colors, or preservatives. Whole grain breads from scratch. Fresh meats raised without any synthetic growth hormones... Naturally Good Food. And at 14 KARROT NATURAL FOODS that's all we sell.

We invite you to come in and see for yourself...and take advantage of our Grand Opening November Specials.

In tribute to the many volunteers of our own Boy Scout Troop 28

The Boy Scouts of Troop 28 are an exception bunch. It's easy to see, the troop is working on the side of the good and valuable.

Troop 28 celebrated its 75th anniversary this month as troop members from earlier years joined with the young men now enrolled on the trail to Eagle.

The troop was founded in 1916, according to the present batch of officers. The Rev. Fred Stanley, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, was once scoutmaster of Troop 28, at the time known as Troop 1, serving in the position for 23 years. The minister was followed in his leadership role by Lewis Bell, who relinquished his position as scoutmaster to Arthur L. Lehr Jr.

Mr. Lehr was honored during the anniversary dinner for troop members Oct. 20 at Kimballs by the Sea.

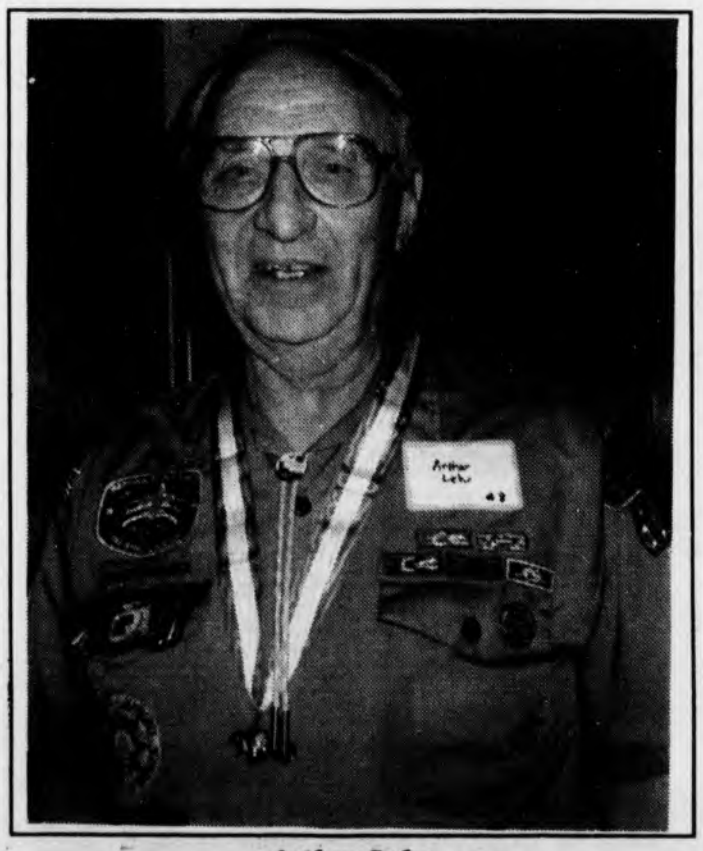
He was followed as scoutmaster by Harry Meserve, Donald Sladden, Nelson C. Pratt Jr., David E. James, Merle S. Brown, John Pape, Earle Bestick and finally the current leader, Howie Motenko.

Lehr was honored by the scouts as the Oldest Silver Beaver. The Silver Beaver award is given outstanding scout leaders.

Warren Bates was honored at the dinner as being the oldest scout from the troop. He began in scouting in 1917. Irving C. Blossom was honored as the oldest Eagle Scout from the troop.

The point is that many people have volunteered to bring some old-fashioned fun into the lives of our young men.

Scouting concentrates on teaching skills that have application in the wider world. Sure, it's great to know how to camp in the wilderness and build fires without matches.



It's greater yet to understand how to cooperate and work as a team toward a goal.

We want to take a minute and salute the values of the scouts. We want to pay tribute to the many volunteers who make the program a success.

Over the 75 years of the troop's history, 60 young men earned their Eagle Scout award. Last year two young men — David H. Farrag and Christopher J. McElroy — received the honor. The year before one scout was given the Eagle — William Anstead. In 1988, no one earned the award.

The present troop committee includes: Harold Barnes, Carol Bestick, Joseph Buckley, Norman Card, Frank Chatterton, Lawrence Clarke, William Cole, George Collier, Roger Coulter, Pat Curtin, Allen DeVito, Michael Equi, Linda Farrag, Herbert Fielding, David Fulton, Charles Gammons, Eben Hall, Charles Harris, Oliver Hunt, Eustis James, Frederick Kaveney, M. Frank Knoy, David Lavange, Arthur Lehr Sr., Peter Lelecas, John Long, Tyrone Martin, Dr. William Matteson, Dr. John May, Lisa Merchant, Maurice Noonan, Taffy Nothnagle, Geoffrey Nothnagle Sr., Franklin Ogden, Robert Pensinger, Henry Perry, Charles Piepenbrink, Burtram Pratt, Elmer Pratt, Lloyd Prescott, Holy Preston, Robert Pyne, Peggy Reed, Robert Roig, Robert Rooney, William Russell, Michael Sawchuck, Mimi Sestito, Bradford Tite, Edward Tower, Richard Towle, Bronson Waterman, William Watson and Edward Woods.

We want all the men and women who volunteer to help teach the lessons of leadership to know they are appreciated.

Arthur Lehr

Why are some people so mean?

Recently, my family and I have been the subject of harassment by some children of the general neighborhood. It took some time to come up with a possible reason. A month ago, I found someone deliberately stopped right across my driveway. I was not only greatly annoyed by this but also late for work and ordered them away in no uncertain terms. This apparently upset them and they have retaliated.

By what right do people have to trespass upon your property uninvited and unwelcomed? Then, when told to leave, to send their children to accost you upon your own land, to curse you, to harass you, and to vandalize your property?

It is, of course, possible that the parents do not know of their children's actions.

I have worked for nearly thirty years in the Cohasset Historical Society and more recently in the South Shore Art Center. In nearly forty years of service, I have dealt with many Cohasset kids and I am happy to say that I have found the vast majority polite, kind, considerate and helpful. Even they know that one rotten apple can spoil the barrel.

Some Cohasset kids say that they are bored and have nothing to do. I work seven days a week, including holidays, and while the jobs are far from glamorous and are low paying, they are necessary. Nothing to do? There are a lot of old folks here that could use a hand but the few "rotten apples" have caused many to mistrust kids. The good kids feel trapped in this town. One told me that he would be very happy when he grew up and could leave Cohasset. What makes Cohasset so mean that it even drives away its own children? And when was the last class of the Cohasset High School to have a reunion?

Time and again, I have heard people say that Cohasset is mean, mean, mean. I know of a number of good, kind, helpful persons that were driven out by some action in this town that was hateful. And I can recall at least two incidents where tourists left, literally, in a screaming rage, swearing that they would never again visit Cohasset and would warn their friends from coming here. What makes Cohasset so mean as to even drive away the tourist dollar?

Cohasset has physical beauty equal to none. This has been proven by the two recent movies Hollywood made here. Yet, I was told by one of the workers of "Housesitter" that they did not feel particularly welcome by the townspeople.

It is said that Massachusetts drivers are the worst in the nation and it appears that Cohasset drivers wish to be the worst in the state.

They run stop signs, stop lights, speed, pass on curves, turn without signalling, and cut off other drivers with little regard or concern. In fact, all a flashing turn signal seems to indicate is that the bulb is working. Why is Cohasset so mean as to violate the basic safety laws, much less politeness?

Years ago, while in the State House, I ran into a group of politicians in a hall. One asked me where I was from and I answered, "Cohasset." "Oh," said another, "the (expletive deleted) of the State." It takes great effort to make a reputation like that. Recently, I was told that Cohasset is like Roxbury in vandalism. There is no comparison. Roxbury is poor and poverty breeds crime and hatred. Cohasset is not poor. So, what is the reason?

Cohasset was the first town around to give up foot patrolmen in its business area. A saving of money, it was claimed. But shopkeepers will say otherwise. Money saved on police protection ends up being spent to repair vandalism. Even the Cohasset Police have changed. I know of none today who have gained the respect and love once given to Thomas "Burkie" Kane.

Someone once claimed that Cohasset is mean because it is too rich and greedy. Yet it is also known for its volunteers. Again, what is the reason?

Maybe it is the Indian curse someone mentioned years ago. In recent years, talking with a number of Native Americans, particularly Slow Turtle, the chief medicine man of the Wampanoags, and New Moon at Plimoth Plantation, it appears to be true. We know this town as Cohasset from the Indian "Quonahassit" or "Long Rocky Place." Yet, it has another name not generally known – "The Land of Hobomock." Hobomock, to the Indians, was a dangerously vindictive spirit, equal to Logi of the Norse legends. The early white missionaries compared him with Satan. Hobomock lived under the ledges offshore and in his rage, caused the violently destructive northeast gales in winter. No Indians lived here and all shunned and feared this place.

About 1,500 years ago, there was a family of Cape Cod Indians so mean that they were actually run out of town. Unwelcomed anywhere else, they ended up in Hobomock's land. And, oddly, they stayed within the boundaries of present-day Cohasset. The Indians who summered on World's End and Nantasket Beach and those who summered at Scituate Harbor and near Muschquashicut Pond, refused to have anything to do with the Cohasset Indians. In fact, they created an empty buffer zone half a mile wide around Cohasset which they never crossed. So Cohasset's meanness predates the White Man.

Cohasset has great charm, beauty, and heritage. We should be enjoying it and happily sharing it with others. Yet, we take fiendish delight in being mean and spiteful, something I rarely have encountered in other towns. There is no excuse for Cohasset's meanness. Psychiatrists will have to ponder the reason for it.

My mother's ancestors founded Cohasset. It galls me no end that anyone need be ashamed to admit that they live here.

Chamber chatter

By Paula Knowles
Cohasset Chamber of Commerce

What good reason could there be to get you to leave your cozy home on the night of Nov.16 and trek down to the Community Center to join us at the Chamber of Commerce Auction?

Well, it is a good cause. But you already know that. And there are a million good causes trying to get your attention these days, as well as your money! No, there has to be some more compelling reason, like....how about a Free Dinner? Delicious franks with all the fixin's, hot baked beans, steaming brown bread....just perfect after a day of raking leaves or cleaning gutters or washing windows or scraping the boat or whatever weekend project you were stuck with. Then finish off with hot coffee or tea with dessert, and settle back to listen to Dan Leahy present the first few items.

Will there be anything to interest you or appeal to your pocketbook? How about 10 bags of lawn fertilizer and insecticide or crabgrass killer (Creative Landscape) to make your weekend projects a little easier next year. Or dinner once a week during July for your family from Strawberry Parfait (Joel Rosano). If your family is like mine, you "order in" from Carmine's at least that often anyway; so buy now and pretend it's free next Summer. Or go for dinner at Kimball's or the Chart House, and leave the kids at home. Bid on a show at the Music Circus too, and make an evening of it. After all, who deserves it more than you?

Maybe you're more concerned with the here and now...like Christmas. Don't worry, the old stand buys (little pun, there) will be there: Christmas china, wreaths, decorations and novelties. Last year some of these items went for a song. Or maybe presents under the tree are your main concern. We've got it covered. A beautiful framed and matted reproduction of a Colonial needlepoint circa the late 1600s (Cohasset Colonials) would look perfect wrapped in Currier and Ives paper. Or how about two leaded glass and brass torch lights for the mantle, or a magnificent split leaf philodendron for the greenhouse or sunporch (Peg D'Onofrio).

Why, we even have T-shirts for the kids – both young and old. Those Harborfest T-shirts that everyone loved so much will be up for grabs, as well as a new and rare item made up just for us: "Dobbs Mill Athletic Dept." shirts (Goodwin Graphics) to commemorate this year's movie. Then bid on some great children's clothes (EIEIO Clothing) and books (Buttonwood Books & Toys), and put them all in that ever popular Chamber of Commerce Tote Bag, available only in our "little piece of home" packages and at the auction. Still haven't been tempted? How about door prizes? A great Victor Borge Video from Bob Martin, crystal turtle doves, a Christmas bell, or gift certificates for everything from breakfast at the Log & Line to sports equipment from Good Sport. And you still haven't bid on Herb Jason's donation of a dozen fresh lobsters or Ernie Grassie's baseball cards!

These are a few reasons to join us on the 16th. The other reasons include all the items that I haven't mentioned, as well as the fun and great company the night with us will provide. Whether you come at the last minute, or reserve a table ahead of time, we'll welcome you with open arms. Dress up or come as you are, bid or don't bid. Just come on down. Join us for dinner and let us try to coax you into bidding. Dan loves a good audience, and we love a good challenge.

A SECOND THOUGHT: Dinner served 6:30-7:30 p.m., Auction at 7:45 p.m. Join us at any time during the evening.

Death of Courtney Allen leaves no answers

letters

Last week many families in Cohasset experienced the sudden loss of a friend. Courtney Allen, a nine-year-old Metco student, died after being hit by a motorist on his bicycle in Milton. Courtney had been attending school with us for three years.

All week long parents have been answering the questions of innocent children as to why. During telephone conversations and over cups of coffee, parents have traded stories of what our children were asking and how to answer.

Why did God do this? Why did it happen? Why Courtney? The children dealt with feelings of anger, grief, sadness and fear. For some, the way they look at things, and their lives, are changed forever.

No one had the perfect answer. For some children, no one had an answer good enough. For every person a different answer works. A different belief brings relief, support or comfort. Finding what works for each child is difficult because it is something some adults still Don't cancel your plans because your cap popped!

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner Consumer Reporter

When we moved to Tinytown over 16 years ago, we chose our home for two reasons. It was close to the Tinytown Village; but more important, it was right across the street from Dr. Seadale.

From our house, the dormers on Dr. Seadale's house look like two, giant teeth. A comforting reminder that my dentist was close by.

Unlike most of his patients, I could see Dr. Seadale mowing his lawn, raking his leaves...so I always knew that sometimes when he was "out" he was really "in the yard," or had just pulled "in the driveway." When he was really "out" and was gone to Maine for the weekend, I knew that, too.

We became fast friends. For hours and hours I listened to him lecture on state politics, cancer research, and numerous other topics of which he was very knowledgeable. So, while I was largely uncomfortable, going to the dentist was like going to college. I'm sure I became much smarter over the past 16 years.

Alas. Things have changed. Last year the man I had come to know so well I could write a book about him, retired.

The dentist who bought the practice, Dr. Robert Thompson, is a fine dentist. And I feel a lot of good things about Dr. Thompson, like:

1) He will probably always be there for me, because he is 30.

2) Dr. Thompson is an excellent lecturer on many topics, and while my position (upside down) in his office doesn't permit me to offer conversation other than: "Hmmmmm, Ahhhhhhh, Ummmmmmm," we also are developing a fast friendship.

3) And, there is something very different about having a younger dentist, who is young enough to be your son. (Actually, most of the people who service my body are now younger than me). While he knows more about teeth than I do, he doesn't know everything about life; so I get to advise him on things, here and there.

4) He is very accessible, and I know I can call him with any emergency and he has pledged to never let me down. But, things are different this time. Dr. Thompson is a newlywed, and a couple of weeks ago just as I was preparing to go out for the evening, the cap on Tooth 6 fell off.

While it would not be necessary for me to smile that evening, as I would be in a large group, having a hole there with a post sticking up made me look and feel like Dracula.

So, I thought: Really, T.K., it would be awful of you to bother this nice young dentist a week after his honeymoon, and surely by now someone must have invented something for pasting these things back in.

And sure enough they did; after looking hard, and reading all the outside box labels, I found my product.

Dentemp is a temporary filling mix which can be used to replace fillings, loose caps and crowns. It said. Now, this should be noted. My crown appeared to have simply come off (I was eating a juje fruit at the time). The post was there. When I slipped the tooth back in place it nestled. And, there was no throbbing pain or swelling.

commentary

And so, I proceeded to read the instructions.

Dentemp comes with a little mixing tray, and like a real dentist you have to mix the cement (which is white), squeeze out any excess liquid, and wait for 10 minutes for the cement to reach the right consistency.

While you are waiting for it, like a real dentist you sterilize the tooth (post) area. I dabbed the tooth area with peroxide, and then dried it with my hair dyer.

Then, I stuck the ball of cement in the tooth, put the tooth in place, and bit with some pressure until I felt it was a proper fit.

I did all of this; everything looked fine and I went out into the evening and tentatively smiled. Note. I did not clean off any cement on surrounding teeth because I was terrified Tooth 6 would fall out again.

When I saw Dr. Thompson the following week he said "Well, you did a good job, except you've gotten cement all over your mouth, you didn't try to clean any of it up."

"I dint try hery harth," I said, with an instrument in my mouth. I explained how I had noted the instructions said the temporary cement would last from 1 to 4 days, so I didn't try to get any of the excess cement off, fearing the tooth would probably fall off again before I saw Dr. Thompson.

"I'm not going to try either," Dr. Thompson said. "That cap will be on anywhere from two weeks to 13 years." He explained that when temporary cement is utilized inside a tooth, such as for a crown (or a cap), its lasting power increases to the 26th power.

The cap has now been on for five weeks, and I highly recommend the product. But probably 92 dentists will write to the Mariner next week saying the product stinks and shouldn't be used by nonprofessionals. However, the package said the product was created by a professional dentist; and in any case, I am a professional dental patient.

Autumn Graveyard

By Priscilla Daniels

This is not the scene you had wanted:
A colorless, hot afternoon shriveled to a ripple, and you rocking;
Ghost wings blurred — off in the distance;
On a vanishing sand bank skeleton forms bent, as if digging;
Birds chirping near pallid stonewalls;
Eyes staring toward the horizon.
The neighbor has veiled his skiff in marsh-gauze like an apparition.
Over this cove a salt scrim hangs so low that it mirrors its own solemn image.
Nearby, in a freshly shoveled mound,
a clump of golden lilies trumpets upward as if for the last time.

weddings

Miss Corbett marries Timothy Brooks

Miss Kathryn Ann Corbett of Cohasset married Timothy Austin Brooks of Crawfordville, Ind., Aug. 11 at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset.

The couple was married by the Rev. Clifford Cutler, pastor of St. Stephen's. A reception followed at the Barker Tavern in Scituate.

The bride is the daughter of Eileen and Paul Corbett of Cohasset. The groom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Austin Brooks of Crawfordville, Ind.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white satin gown trimmed with elincon lace and a cathedral train.

Sara Corbett of Cohasset was maid of honor for her sister. James Rooney of Cohasset was best man.

The bridesmaids were: Jaqueline Plante of Cohasset, Kathryn Perle of Michigan, Kathryn Bean of Ashburnham and Laura Brooks, sister of the groom.

The ushers were: Matthew Corbett and Peter Corbett, both of Cohasset and both brothers of the bride; Chris Zimmermann of Seattle, Wash., and Mark Eberman of Washington, DC.

Thomas Patrick Conley of Weymouth served as ring bearer.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Dartmouth College. She is an elementary school teacher who has taught in Burbank, Calif.

The groom is a graduate of Dartmouth College and UCLA Law School. He is employed by Ice-Miller law firm of Indianapolis, Ind.

After a wedding trip to St. Martin, the couple is living in Crawfordville, Ind.

The Mariner welcomes engagement and wedding announcements. Accompanying photos are welcome but will not be returned by mail. Please indicate if the photo is to be returned, and pick it up at the Mariner offices after your announcement has been printed. The address is 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield.

Cohasset bookstore expands

Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset has expanded. Located in Cushing Plaza on Route 3A, the store took over an additional 1,200 square feet formerly occupied by Sea n' Cheese which has moved to a larger location in the complex.

Buttonwood Books and Toys, which is celebrating its second anniversary, now occupies 4,000 square feet. Owner Betsey Detwiler said, "In our first two years of business we have gone from 6,000 book titles to over 35,000 titles. The extra space has given us room to better display all our books, especially those in the children's section. The former Sea n' Cheese space is now devoted solely to toys, including Playmobil, a recently acquired line."

Alvin Schwartz, an author whose scary stories are on sale at Buttonwood Books, looks over the seasonal decorations as he prepares to sign books at the shop in Cushing Plaza Saturday. With Schwartz are: Betsy Detwiler, shop owner, Geoff McWilliams of Cohasset and Peter Zimmermann of Hingham.

Open gym

The Recreation Department will sponsor free, open gym at Cohasset High School during the month of November, on Wednesday evenings, from 7 to 9 p.m. Supervising the open gym will be Matt Salerno and Arnie Reppucci of Cohasset High School.

Open gym is available to girls and boys in junior and senior high school. No pre-registration is necessary, however, a pre-established limit of participants will be allowed in the gym at one time. Participants would wear sneakers on gym floor and no food/drink is allowed.

Open gym will conclude on Wednesday evening, Nov. 27.

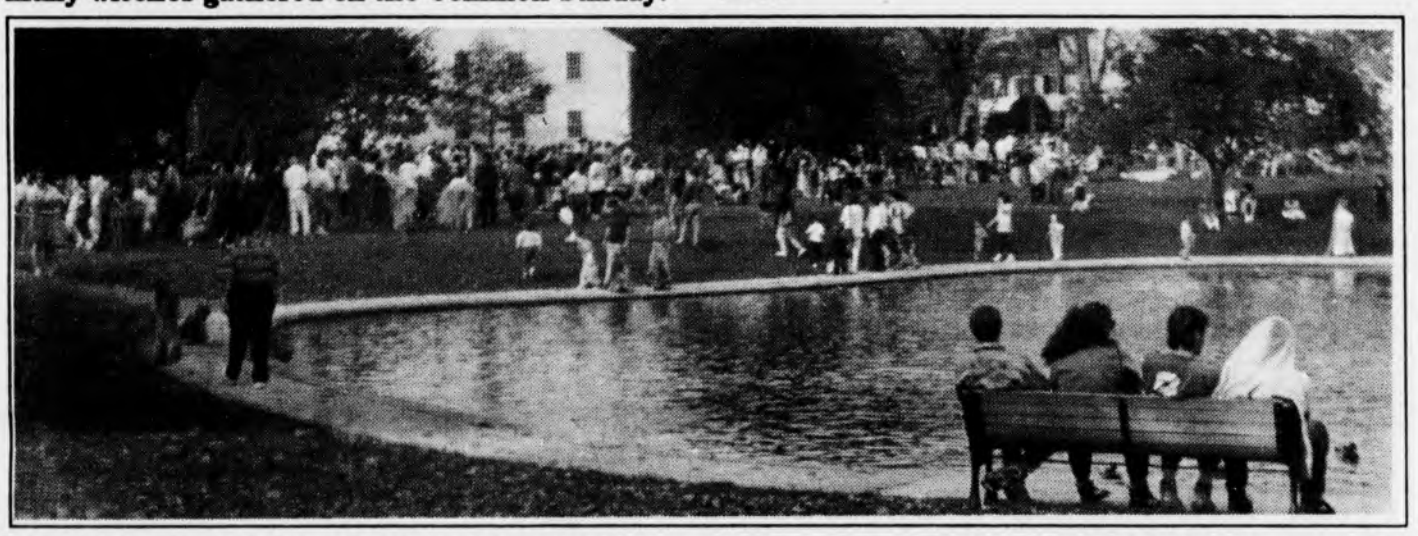
Common oozes with eerie creatures

Angela Rugg, 9, looks down upon the Cohasset Community Center's Halloween festivities from her perch in a tree on the Common Sunday. No, she didn't fly over the gathering. She wished the hundreds of fair-goers well.



Emily Dean, who is six-and-a-half, was one of the many witches gathered on the Common Sunday.

Sarah Hassan, the clown, and her sister, Liz, take a minute after creating special cupcake decorations, one of the many activities for those looking for a treat. Sarah will be six years old in a month. Liz is nine.

The crowd of spectators was outnumbered by the monsters, Dalmatians, and princesses who clustered in the warm afternoon sun at Cohasset Common Sunday for the Halloween fair.

Hundreds of people turned out for the Cohasset Community Center's Halloween Fair on the Common this week.

Scholarship contest

Eastern Edison Company is calling for entries in the 11th annual Thomas Edison/Max McGraw Scholarship program.

This is a nationwide contest sponsored by the Max McGraw Foundation, coordinated by the National Science Supervisors Association.

"Thomas Edison and Max McGraw were important pioneers in the electric industry of the United States," said Eastern Edison president John D. Carney.

"This program recognizes that the inventive genius of Edison and the business entrepreneurship of McGraw continue to exist among today's young people."

Students in public, private and parochial schools can enter. Ten students will be chosen as finalists — five in the junior grades (7 to 9) and five in the senior grades (10 to 12).

There is no formal entry form. Applicants must submit two copies of a proposal on a completed experiment or a project idea which would have practical application in the fields of science and/or engineering.

The proposal must be accompanied by a single letter of recommendation from a teacher of a sponsor.

Finalists and grand award scholars receive their awards upon graduation from high school.

A junior and a senior finalist selected as Thomas Edison/Max McGraw Scholars will receive respectively a $3,000 and a $6,000 scholarship and an all-expense-paid trip to the final ceremonial program.

The four remaining senior division finalists will each receive $1,500; those in the junior division will receive $750 each.

Entries are judged on how the project best exemplifies the creativity and ingenuity demonstrated by the lives and work of Thomas Edison and Max McGraw.

Entries must be mailed no later than Dec. 1. For further details, call Ruth E. Stetson at Eastern Edison at 1-800-242-5810 or (508) 580-1213.

New courses at CCC

The Cohasset Community Center announces three new courses which are now being offered at the Center.

Business Skills for the Homemaker with Instructor Jane Ellis is a refresher or additional skills course which will assist the homemaker in returning to the workplace. Additional skills of speedwriting, word processing, typing and bookkeeping will be covered. This course will be held at the Depot Court building.

Bernice Lofchie, Registered Dietician and Nutritionist will be conducting an "Eat Better and Get Healthy" Weight Loss and Nutrition Course at the Center for an eight week period, starting on Jan. 13. Classes will be held on Mondays from 10 to 11 a.m.

For those interested in adding to their office skills, Denise Sullivan will be teaching a course in Lotus for a five week period beginning Jan. 25. The classes will be held at the new Depot Court unit of the Center on Saturdays from 9 to 11 a.m.

For further information on the above or registration, please call the Center at 383-0088.

Foreign exchange students bid Cohasset adieu

By Lisa B. Eigner and Andrew MacLellan
Mariner staff

After a two-week stay with their Cohasset High School hosts, students from France's Lyceé Blaise Pascal bid New England adieu.

Thanks to Cohasset and Scituate High Schools' combined foreign exchange program, 59 French high schoolers toured their way through Massachusetts and New York.

Of those 59, 12 were housed in Cohasset, where they spent the duration of their Oct. 15 to 30 trip.

While hosted by their Cohasset contemporaries, the French students were privy to some of the more noteworthy Massachusetts sights.

During their first week, the exchange program toured the Boston area, giving the exchange students a glimpse of the Hancock observatory, Beacon Hill, the State House, and Faneuil Hall.

Their second week included a tour of the JFK Library, a trip to the Aquarium, the Museum of Science, Plymouth Plantation and the Mayflower.

The New York portion of their trip, a two-day excursion into the heart of The Big Apple, took the students to the World Trade Center, Battery Park, St. Patrick's Cathedral, Little Italy, Harlem, Chinatown, and Southport.

As discerning critics, the students quickly uncovered the pros and cons of American life.

"I think it's relaxed and not as difficult as France," Cohasset visitor Corentin Daniel said of the American school system.

"There is a better relationship between the professor and the students. They speak more easily.

"They finish school very early and they do their homework late in the day.

"In France, we go back home and do our work right then."

The French school day lasts from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., according to Audry Cour who stayed in Scituate.

"Boston is a nice city, but New York is very rich. But you can see on the same street a limousine and a man who has nothing.

Corentin Daniel
Cohasset visitor

"We only have classes and there is no time for sport in school," she said. "We just work. We have Wednesday afternoon off and the weekends, but there is not a lot of time for activities."

"In France, we don't play sport with the school, we play with a club," Daniel added.

While the school schedule was attractive, a cloistered nightlife and American food ranked as the two things the French students found hardest to adjust to.

American food in general is "disgusting," according to Guillaume Sol, who is staying in Scituate.

"The only thing we have in France that is American food is McDonald's," he said. "I like it, but once a month, that's all.

"(Sandra Doireau) is going to take me out to a French club when we go over," said host Heather Sprague of Scituate, who is in her second year of the exchange program.

"She goes into Paris to the clubs and she's going to take me for a ride on a motorcycle, because I've never been on one before.

"They do different things than we do here. Some of the things she thinks are kind of boring because it's such a different lifestyle over here."

Boring or not, the students were on the go for the greater part of their stay.

Daniel preferred the New York trip to Boston, but remained curious at the disparity between the economic classes in the United States.

"Boston is a nice city, but New York is very rich," he said. "But you can see on the same street a limousine and a man who has nothing.

"On the same street you can see a very rich man and a very poor man."

Despite his acute social conscience, Daniel found time to shop.

"The prices here are the best for compact discs and jeans," he said. "Levis, they're cheap here. In France, they're very expensive."

Daniel is also a fan of American music, especially Phil Collins and Dire Straits.

"I like the foreign music but I don't see any French singers here," he said.

Daniel is leaving with his loot, including a Celtics T-shirt, but he also takes away deeper memories.

"This country is very nice," he said. "The trees and all of the different colors. It's very beautiful.

"It's very different here - the cars, the life.

"In a city in France, I find people are very aggressive. Here all the people are very nice. They are sympatique.

The following Cohasset high school students donated their homes for the benefit of the exchange program: Jessica Sammon, Kathleen O'Sullivan, Jessica Jenkins, Sarah Atherton, Stacy Pierce, Adam Mc'Namara, Kristen Grassey, Katherine Brennock, Kate Barrett, Carole Smith, Sheryl Saef, and the program's coordinator, George Fortin.

Auction to be televised

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce announces that this year their Annual Auction fundraiser, to be held at the Community Center on Nov. 16, will be televised on cable channel 3. Each donor company will be acknowledged on the air, and a limited number of phone in bids will be accepted. The free franks n' beans dinner will begin at 6:30 p.m., and the televised coverage of the auction itself should begin at 7:45 p.m. Admission is free and everyone is invited to attend. For donation info or to reserve a table call chairperson Keith Knowles at 383-6266 or the Chamber at 383-1010.

Young Life celebrates 20 yrs.

Young Life, which has been serving teenagers nationally for over forty years, will celebrate its 20th Anniversary on the South Shore with a fundraising banquet in Cohasset on Monday, Nov. 18.

Young Life is known for its meetings, programs and activities which are supportive, fun and based on Christian principles. Young Life, and Wild Life the Junior High club, put emphasis on relationships. Two full time Young Life staff, Becky and Rich Chamberlain of Hingham, and numerous volunteers spend hundreds of hours every week being involved with teenagers. As a result of years of Young Life ministry, thousands of young people have been positively affected.

The fundraising banquet, which will begin with a reception at 6:30 p.m. and will include dinner, will be held at Kimball's By The Sea in Cohasset. The North River Singers of Pembroke will entertain with music and Greg Leisinger, the New England Young Life Director will speak. The banquet is being chaired by Debbie Flanagan of Cohasset and Sue Bush of Hingham. The committee includes Sarah Pease of Cohasset and Kathy Rogerson of Duxbury. There is no charge to attend the banquet and anyone interested in coming is welcome to call 383-2816 or 749-9412 for tickets.

Petition to add cigarette tax

Residents who are concerned about children becoming addicted to smoking are encouraged to sign a petition now through November 20 to help keep cigarettes out of young people's reach.

The Massachusetts Coalition for a Healthy Future is seeking 4,000 signatures in your community, and 150,000 statewide, to place a question on the 1992 ballot.

The initiative petition, if approved by voters, would add a 25 percent excise tax to the price of cigarettes to make it more difficult for children to buy them. The Massachusetts Coalition for a Healthy Future is led by the American Cancer Society's Massachusetts Division, The Massachusetts Medical Society and Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Massachusetts.

For additional information call Unit Coordinator Lori Westhrin at (508) 746-1023.

DIAMONDS: CARAT, CUT, COLOR & CLARITY...

THIS WEEK, CHAPTER I – CARAT

Weight for weight, there are few things in nature more precious than a diamond. None are more lasting.

However, it may surprise you to learn that a diamond does not begin as a gem of unbounded beauty. Before a diamond sparkles brilliantly before your eyes, it takes many steps and the talents of skilled craftsmen.

It's a fact that diamonds are rare. However, some are rarer than others. Like fine wines, watches, horses and cars, each diamond has a special quality and characteristic that makes it unique and determines its value. In fact, no two diamonds are alike. At Scituate Jewelers, we believe it's important you understand these differences and you can begin by learning the four "C's" of the diamond world—carat, cut, color and clarity.

CARAT

Karat with a K refers to the pure gold content of the setting for your ring. Carat with a C refers to the size of your diamond and is the measure of its weight. Each carat is divided into 100 points. Size and weight alone do not determine the value of a diamond. It is very possible for a small diamond to be worth significantly more than a larger one and that's where the other three C's come into consideration.

Carat	1/5	1/4	1/3	1/2	3/4	1CT	2CTS
Points	20	25	33	50	75	100	200

Arts Boosters celebrate the opening of the 1991-92 season

By Sue McNamara

The Cohasset Arts Boosters Club held its annual organizational meeting recently to plan support for the arts at Cohasset Jr/Sr High School for the academic year. Parents volunteered to assist teachers with each scheduled event and officers were elected: President, Sue McNamara; Vice-President, Martha Equi; Treasurer, Olga Nohe; Secretary, Retta Dwyer.

Following the meeting the Arts Boosters explored new ideas with Cohasset High School teachers of the arts, including Ron Emmons, Colleen Lucas, Bryan Marks, John Packard, Colleen Foley Wheeler, and Jo-Ellen Wood. Teacher Joan Wool discussed plans for a multi-discipline high school course, for 1992-93, that analyzes innovative uses of technology and the arts in business. Drama Workshop Director Ron Emmons appealed for business sponsorship of the State Drama Festival; both the PSO and the Arts Boosters agreed to provide support. Parent Beverly Barrett announced that donations to the Arts Boosters in memory of John Barrett will be used to fund scholarships.

Please mark your calendars with the Cohasset High School arts events, beginning with the Drama Workshop's fall production, "Crimes of the Heart," this Saturday, Nov. 2, at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Nov. 3, at 6 p.m. in the high school auditorium. Teachers and students alike are working hard on their productions, and they provide great entertainment for the whole community. If the kids say, "There's nothing to do in Cohasset," let's go to the theatre, the concerts, the art exhibits. We can support our budding artists and have a good time.

Crucial to the success of the arts is community support, as audiences and as patrons of the arts. This week the Cohasset Arts Boosters Club sends its annual fund-raising letter to all Junior/Senior High School parents and to business patrons requesting financial support to assist Drama Workshop, Literary and Arts Magazine, Junior/Senior Chorus, Show Choir, Barbershop, Jazz Ensemble, and to fund scholarships and the acquisition of essential equipment. Please consider becoming a patron of the arts and send your tax deductible contribution, payable to Cohasset Arts Boosters Club, to Olga Nohe, 10 Surrey Drive, Cohasset, MA 02025. If you wish further information or would like to work with the Arts Boosters, please call Sue McNamara (383-6945).

Student matches wits against the teacher

By Michael Farley
Mariner sports writer

Carol Anderson used to coach Deb Bostwick. Last week, she came to Cohasset with her Marshfield team to outcoach Deb Bostwick. The only problem was that Anderson might have taught her ex-player too well, as the teams squared off in a home and home series which ended in a draw. Whatever the lessons learned, it seems no message was lost in the translation from Coach Bostwick to her girls as the Skippers took to the trenches to fight off Division 2 Marshfield. With its leading scorer in Danielle Shaughnessy battling illness, Cohasset relied on tenacious defense to overcome both its opponent and questionable officiating. Marshfield struck first on a play where three of its players in front of the net played kickball in the circle without a call from the referee. Eventually, the ball bounced in for the 1-0 deficit.

"I was extremely frustrated that there was no call in that situation," said Bostwick.

"Defensively, we played great. Becky made several nice stops, and Kathleen Conroy played unbelievably," added the proud coach. "I just think the refs lost control of the game."

Despite the adversity, the girls maintained their intensity and composure, tying the score at one apiece in the second half. Sophomore Cilla Goff cruised down the wing on a give and go with Danielle Shaughnessy. Goff fed it to Danielle after leading the goalie out of position, and Shaughnessy fired it through into the empty net.

"It was one of those goals that you draw on the chalkboard," exalted the coach.

The same two teams went at it again on Thursday, this time changing fields, which in this case is like going scouting news

The Boy Scouts of Troop 28 of Cohasset started off the fall season by attending a Rotary Club dinner-meeting.

Scoutmaster Howie Motenko highlighted this past year's activities in scouting.

Motenko's goals for the boys are: to succeed and grow, to experience activities the boys normally wouldn't try, to become more active in community service projects and to strengthen leadership skills among the boys.

Ryan Bishop gave a detailed description of the first class camping trip in New Hampshire. "It started off warm ... rainy ... slippery ... icy ... cold!

Chad Whitman spoke about the "Warm-Up Camping Trip." It was a weekend spent preparing and learning the necessary skills for the annual Klondike Derby.

Lodovico Sestito continued with a description of the events of the Klondike Derby that is held at Camp Sayre in the Blue Hills Reservation.

The Scouts placed fourth position among all the troops.

Motenko included giving thanks to the Rotary Club and the Troop Committee for their support "Without them we wouldn't have been able to have accomplished as many activities as we did this past year."

question. Yet the children are learning to respect different people's ways.

Accepting the untimely death of anyone, especially a child, can be incomprehensible. It also makes us pause and reflect how easily life can be changed, how quickly a life taken. As we try to deal with our own grief, our hearts ache for his family.

Courtney was a beautiful child with an engaging smile and a twinkle in his eyes that made you love him. He brought joy to all who knew him and we will always miss him.

To help us all and because we want to remember him, we think of things to do to ease the pain...a memorial, a donation, a remembrance. All wonderful and loving ways to say our goodbyes.

letters

As our children walk out the door to play, to ride their bicycles, to walk, we tell them to be careful, to take care of each other. Look out for one another. Losing Courtney made us step back and, once again, see the importance of teaching our children to be a community that cares for each other, watches out for each other and supports each other. Every person is someone's child, someone's light, someone's love.

As we go about our busy days, if we remember this, maybe it will help.

Cheerleaders of the week

The Cohasset Skippers Varsity Cheerleading Squad was awarded "Cheerleaders of the Week" on Saturday, Oct. 26 during the football half-time.

The squad appeared on Cable Saturday at 8:30 p.m. during the football conference program showing highlights of the football team as well as the cheerleaders of the week.

Coach Ruthann Sargent congratulated the girls for their accomplishments. And also feels that they were awarded this honor for their hard work, drive, cheerleading camp over the summer, and long practices.

The Varsity Squad would like to congratulate the football team on a great victory. 57-0!!!

Paula Graham graduates

Paula Graham of the Cohasset Office of Jack Conway & Company, Inc., has recently graduated from the Floyd Wickman "Sweathog" Course.

The intensive 12-week course focused on all aspects of salesmanship and how to effectively sell and list real estate.

"Paula did an excellent job in becoming the best salesperson she can be," said Mary Ellen Neagle, manager of the Cohasset Office. "We're all very proud of her."

from a red wagon (to a) luxury liner. Sensing that her team might be a little winded on the much larger Marshfield playing surface, Bostwick advised her girls "to anticipate a little more on offense and defense." Finding themselves down 2-0 after the first half, the girls played a step quicker and responded with two unanswered goals for the season ending tie. Cohasset came out and dominated the first seven minutes of the concluding half, led by the stellar play of juniors Bridget Corkery, Karyn Murray, and Sarah Douglas.

Also playing well was the other Murray, Kate, who was filling in at the inner position for the absent Danielle Shaughnessy. Kate capitalized on the opportunity by netting her first goal of the year. Sarah Douglas tallied the Skippers' final goal of the season on a feed from Cilla Goff, who also assisted on Cohasset's first goal. According to her coach, "Cilla made the goals happen today."

The girls finished at 3-4-7, with Shaughnessy leading the team in overall points and playmaker Cilla Goff compiling the most assists. Both will be back next year.

Lobster fleet floats in dire straits

By Lisa B. Eigner and Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Five cars were washed off Atlantic Avenue, eight families were evacuated to a shelter set up in the high school and school was cancelled Thursday when a surprise Nor'easter rocked the coast last week.

Explorer scouts manned the evacuation shelter until Red Cross personnel arrived.

"The power of wind and water is amazing," said Director of Civil Defense and Emergency Service Preparedness Arthur Lehr.

He said most of the families evacuated ended up spending the night with friends.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said the lobster pots usually land on the beaches after a storm.

"This time they haven't landed," Goedecke said. "It turns out they have formed a giant wad. And they are on the bottom in a huge ball. It's a devastating loss for the lobstermen."

Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts pointed about that the shore along Hull is lined with dead lobsters, creating future problems for the shellfish industry.

Three homes were damaged.

Fishermen lost $1.5 million in gear due to the Oct. 30 storm, Lehr told selectmen Monday night.

"We're lucky to have the ledge along the coast," said Selectman Rocco Laugelle. "In Scituate there were 49 homes destroyed completely, 300 badly damaged and 600 homes somewhat damaged. The ledge saved us."

The full extent of storm damage in town is still being tabulated, Lehr said. But he believed the Federal Emergency Management Agency, FEMA, will come through with funds to repair roadways, beaches and other structures badly weakened by the sea.

Lehr opened his emergency center in the fire station Wednesday before getting word an emergency had been declared.

New playing field may be built at Deer Hill

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

A Deer Hill play field may be expanded into regulation size but the town won't come out ahead.

Peter Laugelle, park and tree warden, told selectmen Monday the junior varsity field at the high school will close on Nov. 16 so he can repair extensive damage, reseeding the field and letting it lie fallow in the spring.

In fact, the crunch will come next spring when the soccer field at Milliken must remain closed.

Laugelle said that if the town goes ahead with the plan to upgrade a field at Deer Hill, it will take a year before the area is ready.

He said he discovered a girls team playing on the injured field after he had closed it due to water last week.

"They did more damage in one day," Laugelle said.

Lsugelle wants to see one field closed — to heal — on a rotational basis. Without closing a field, the grass cannot be reseeded.

The key movers in town playing fields showed up at town hall Monday to talk with selectmen about the possibility of shaking a few more dollars out of some old accounts to construct the new playing area at Deer Hill.

New holiday cards benefit young cancer patients and their families

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Marita Carpenter is living out a dream these days — her three children are healthy.

"Each day is such a great gift," she said.

Two years ago her oldest child, Joel, struggled against cancer. The disease took its emotional toll on the entire Carpenter family.

"It's a family disease," Marita explained.

Because she appreciates what she and her family have Marita gives her time as a volunteer to the Families for the Cancer Center at the Boston Floating Hospital for Infants and Children.

Saturday, Nov. 9, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. she plans to sort 2,500 boxes of Christmas cards. She hopes she'll have enough help to get all the work done.

Anyone interested in helping with the work may stop by the Unitarian Parish House on North Main Street.

"People are welcome to stop by for an hour or for the whole time," Marita said. "We can definitely use the help."

The cards themselves were created by children who are cancer patients at the hospital, which is a subsidiary of New England Medical Center.

Joel, who is in grade 2 at the Osgood School, isn't participating too heavily in the Christmas card project.

"He's had enough of the hospital," his mother explained. "And I do enough volunteering for our whole family."

But Joel is looking forward to one part of the drive. He and the rest of the families will have a chance to meet Bruins-star Ray Bourque at a kick-off party Filene's is sponsoring for the cards.

Joel, turns 8 years next month. He is in remission after undergoing treatment for cancer at the Floating Hospital. After surgery and other extensive treatment,

Federal aid down 27%

Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts commented on declining government aid this week, pointing out the town has suffered a large loss over the past five years.

Tebbetts had the figures pulled together from the town cherry sheets showing that in fiscall 1988 there was $1.4 million in state aid. For the current fiscal year, there is $725,497 in aid.

At the same time federal aid was just about phased out.

The cumulative change amounts to a loss of 50 percent.

The figures show: 1988, $1.455 million; 1989, $1.493 million; 1990, $1.145 million; 1991, $1.001 million, and 1992, $725,497.

On Government Island lease

Selectmen agreed in principal Monday to a lease between the town and the Cohasset Lighthouse Keepers Inc.

But the signing is still in the distance as plans for the old lighthouse keepers house must be initialled as part of the project.

Meanwhile there is a movement a foot to place the area on the National Historic Register, a move that would prevent any exterior changes.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle, part of the committee involved in negotiations on the lease, said the proposal does not envision additions to the exterior.

"They didn't ask for that," Laugelle said.

Basketball registration

Registration for boys and girls basketball programs happens from 9 to 11 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 9, at town hall.

Fee for the recreation department program is $20. Checks should be payable to the town of Cohasset. A T-shirt is given to participants. George Ellinger will coordinate the Saturday program. Evaluations happen Nov. 16.

Erbe tours colleges

Samuel Erbe, a department chair at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School, was one of 40 high school science supervisors to attend a Five College Science Colloquium, which included tours of the facilities and laboratories at Amherst, Hampshire, Mount Holyoke, and Smith colleges, and the University of Massachusetts recently.

Erbe observed current work being done in the sciences at the host institutions which comprise the Five Colleges. Physics was featured at Amherst College; environmental science at Hampshire College; chemistry at Mount Holyoke College; geology/coastal and marine sciences at Smith College; and biology at the University of Massachusetts.

Pedestrians win visible rights

The town wants to get tough on traffic violations in the Village. First the selectmen want to have the crosswalks painted green. Then the board wants to see some enforcement of existing laws — like the state law that gives pedestrians on a crosswalk the right of way.

Safety Officer Clifton Jones sent selectmen a memo this week on some ideas he has on ways to make the business area safer.

"This increases the visibility of the pedestrian walkways ten-fold," Jones said.

The selectmen liked his idea of painting the crosswalks flourescent green — but they want cost estimates on the paint before actually asking the highway surveyor Harold Litchfield to proceed with the work.

The crosswalks that may go green include: everything in the area from the Red Lion Inn to the Community Center, the one by the police station on Elm Street, the walkway at Depot Court near the parking lot and another on North Main Street.

Selectman Jane Goedecke pointed out that a No-U Turn sign wasn't actually needed since the move is illegal anyway.

Jones requested a sign saying there was no U-turn allowed between the Red Balloon and the Texaco stattion. He also suggested outlawing left turns at the spot to prevent vehicles from crossing the road to park in front of the hardware store.

The safety officer backed the selectmen's idea of putting a stop sign on Elm Street, in place of the yield sign.

After the storm: for children and their families

By Susan Etkind
Special to the Mariner

We survived it, some of us more easily than others. Many lost possessions—from photo albums to cars and houses. All of us lost some sense of security and safety. This has effected our children to varying degrees.

I am writing to share some thoughts that may be helpful to parents as they help their children. Let me first share some observations about children's perspective of the storm. Then I will describe briefly the changes in children's behavior due to the storm. Finally, I would like to share practical suggestions that may be useful.

THE CHILD'S PERSPECTIVE:

Water everywhere—angry,raging waves right on the streets and in the yards where they played.

Darkness in houses, on the street, trouble locating favorite toys, "teddy" or even Mommy at the other end of the house. Eerie glow of candles and flashlights (with scary thoughts of Halloween in their heads).

Fire engines, ambulances, police cars, sirens, everyone driving frantically to the rescue or just to gawk. "Can we get to our house?" or "Can we get out of our house?"

Cars—underwater, battered by waves—one child's question 24 hours after observing this was "were their children in that car?"

Houses gone or wrecked, toys and broken furniture floating across the marsh—"where is my bed?"

Telephone calls—watching parents making frantic calls about friends and power lines. Recounting all the drama we had seen and hearing sadder stories from friends. (The telling and retelling by adults helps them, but a child just listening is left feeling more and more anxious.)

Separations—one 7-year-old child spent a frightening hour on a school bus as the driver searched for a passable road to her house. What was she thinking? Maybe, "will I get home," "is my house there," "who will take care of me." Another little girl spent the night at her own home with a sitter, while her mom, dad and brother slept across town because the road to their home was flooded.

TYPICAL BEHAVIORAL RESPONSES IN CHILDREN AFTER THIS KIND OF TRAUMA

—Regression: bedwetting again, thumbsucking, clinging to parent.

—Sleep problems: nightmares, afraid to be in their own rooms/beds.

—Whenever our lights went out the children

Lobster fleet floats in dire straits

"We started efforts to be prepared," he told selectmen."Every department — fire, police, highway — did yeoman work."

Eastern Edison did better this time around, according to Lehr. He said there was a while when he couldn't find the Edison truck but in turned out that the truck was out with the fire captain.

Lehr called the National Guard into town to help with the evacuation. The Guardsmen had some difficulty finding the fire station, Lehr said. But once there, the work went smoothly.

"This storm gave us far more trouble than Hurricane Bob."

Joseph Kealey
Police Chief

"This storm gave us far more trouble than Hurricane Bob," said Police Chief Joseph Kealey.

A fire hydrant on Atlantic Avenue was knocked completely off its foundation and literally washed away during the apex of the storm, said Kealey.

About 500 homes were left without water during the height of the storm — but the water department managed to restore service to most customers in a matter of hours.

According to the fire department, a loss of water power near the coast was a dangerous concern to firefighters who were fearful of downed power lines causing fires.

Traffic detours were another significant concern with many of the coastal roads closed off due to flooding.

"Practically all of the major access roads were closed off on Wednesday night. The water was just too deep," said Kealey.

Among the roads shut down were: Atlantic Avenue and Jerusalem Road.

Although flooding was the catalyst for road detours, downed tree limbs and stones washed ashore were factors that contributed to the hazardous conditions.

The roadways were cleared by highway department crews by Thursday morning.

A catamaran bit the dirt near Cohasset Harbor during last week's storm. Damage to the fishing gear was listed at $1.5 million by Civil Defense Director Arthur Lehr. (Alan Chapman staff photo)

"Only one or two houses suffered major water and wind damage," said Lehr.

By 10 p.m. Wednesday evening, however, Eastern Edison crews restored the majority of the town's power, said Lehr.

One building suffered a minor electrical fire.

One home was evacuated after gasoline canisters in the cellar were upset, releasing fumes throughout the house.

According to Fire Chief Daniel Brock, firefighters evacuated one home where gas cans had released hazardous fumes.

After the residents were evacuated to the high school shelter, the fire department cleaned and ventilated the home.

"It could have been much worse," said Kealey, who said that the ripped-up black top of the parking lot at Sandy Beach bore the mark of gale force winds and flooding.

Lehr said the parking lot will have to be replaced since the portion not torn by the storm was undermined by the flooding.

According to officials, although the docks weathered the storm with only minor flooding, a total of three boats broke their moorings.

Harbormaster Irving Gadow issued a warning to boat owners to clear the harbor by Nov. 1, said Lehr.

Gadow spent most of the week securing boats and other marine property. Lehr creditted the harbormaster with doing a great job.

With waves an estimated eight to 10 feet above normal, Sandy Beach also lost its share of telephone poles and wires.

The bathhouse was left with more than a foot of sand. Members of the Sandy Beach Association are meeting this week to work out a repair plan. Paul Corbett of the Sandy Beach Association told selectmen his organization is having a coastal geologist look over the beach damage.

Although the state is permitting emergency repairs along the coast, conservation commission approval is required.

This week the focus changed as repair work began. Even emergency repairs require conservation commission approval. There are special state regulations to deal with the emergency.

Jeffrey Waal of the conservation commission said he understands the state may allow communities to put rocks and beach sand back where they came from.

He said he is still reading the full text of the state orders and will issue a memo to waterfront property owners and town officials soon.

Most emergency repairs must be complete by Jan. 1, he said. Property owners have until Nov. 30 to file with the conservation commission for the emergency work.

Congress seeks funds for damage created by Hurricane Bob

Against the threat of a Presidential veto, the House Appropriation Committee recently approved federal reimbursements to local communities for municipal costs associated with Hurricane Bob.

"Local cities and towns mopped up public damage from the storm in perfectly good faith and have been stiffed with the bill," said U.S. Rep. Gerry E. Studds.

"We made some real progress toward making sure southeastern Massachusetts isn't shortchanged.

The $5.3 billion dire Emergency Supplemental Appropriations bill approved by the committee includes $693 million for the Federal Emergency Management Agency which would eliminate a two-year backlog of FEMA reimbursements for past disasters.

Studds said the disaster money has been stalled because the White House refused to designate the hurricane costs as "emergency spending." Without that designation, the money would have to be offset by budget cuts.

In the wake of the hurricane, Studds questioned whether FEMA had the money to back up its assurances of prompt and full reimbursement to local communities.

"Communities in southeastern Massachusetts cannot absorb the total cost of the cleanup and cannot afford to wait 10 or 20 or 30 months to receive reimbursements from FEMA to which they are clearly entitled," said Studds.

The bill notes that the President has designated more than $1.14 billion in 1991 international assistance funds to meet emergency needs in foreign lands and that since October 1990 there have been 39 presidentially-declared disasters and 68 disasters declared by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Help is available

Temporary housing, grants for family assistance and low-cost loans to cover uninsured property losses are available to victims of last week's northeaster, now that President Bush has declared the storm "a major disaster."

The declaration applies to Plymouth and five other counties. While Norfolk County isn't on the list, town officials believe Cohasset is eligible.

Individuals, business owners and cities and towns will be eligible for financial assistance, according to Ed Lecius, a public information and congressional affairs officer for the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

FEMA will set up a disaster application center "somewhere in Plymouth County," he said.

He said the state emergency management officials have been looking for appropriate sites that are handicapped accessible with plenty of parking.

"We'd like to be open Friday, Saturday and Sunday," Lecius said.

A toll-free number 1-800-462-9029 already has been established. The location and hours of the disaster application center will be announced before the end of the week.

For the hearing and sppech impaired, the number is 1-800-462-7585.

The Red Cross, he said, also may have programs to help, particularly for the lobstermen who have been hard hit. He said the Red Cross toll-free number is 1-800-821-0777.

New playing field may be built at Deer Hill

principal and high school lacrosse coach, told selectmen that with only a small amount of money to grade the field and install a sprinkler system, the new field could be created.

"The work is almost done," Ekberg said. "So far it's been done without a committee or a budget. I don't want to see a new committee — at least I don't want to be on a new committee but what we're asking is the use of some money already allocated for the playing fields."

Ekberg, Jack Worley, recreation director, Larry Shultz, chairman of the Milliken Field Study Committee, and Wayne Sawchuk, president of the Friends of Milliken Field, were all in favor of more playing space for the athletic organizations in town.

(Milliken Field is located behind Cohasset High.)

Sawchuk, as former chairman of the study committee that proposed expanding Milliken/Lillard Field, said he is not yet willing to give up hope on the project after he spent two years working to create the plans. The Friends of Milliken Field have control of about $5,000 given towards the $287,000 project.

There is some other money given to the town by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce for use of Milliken Field. Selectmen plan to ask the Chamber members about diverting the money, raised at a benefit in the course of filming of "The Witches of Eastwick."

Greg Doyon, selectmen's secretary, said there is about $4,000 in the account.

No one is sure whether that would be enough. Since all the work to date has been done by volunteers, there are no cost projections for the project.

Selectmen are ready to begin looking into the possibility.

The park department is willing to handle the seeding.

Highway surveyor Harold Litchfield has been responsible for some of the work to date. He does need to hire a grader to complete the work and needs town funds for the rental.

Sawchuk said he doesn't oppose the Deer Hill project but "I'm reluctant to tunr money over to this project, especially when I haven't even discussed it with the Bank of Boston."

The Bank of Boston was the main donor of the account for Milliken Field. That project failed to win approval of town meeting for the needed $280,000.

The Deer Hill project would not satisfy the needs of town sports organizations, according to the consensus at the meeting.

51st Village Fair preparations being made

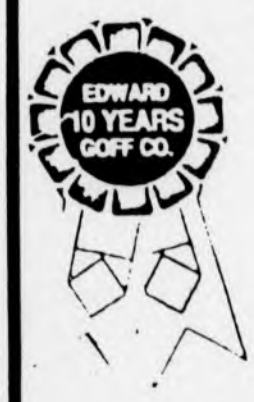
With Cohasset's 51st Village Fair only a month away, volunteers in workshops in individual homes and in the churches which benefit from the event are stepping up their activities and enlisting more helpers to make sure that the booths and tables will be well-stocked Saturday, Dec. 7, for the hundreds of shoppers who count on the Fair for many of their special gifts and holiday decorations.

Bulletins of the four sponsoring churches—St. Anthony's, St. Stephen's, Panagia Greek Orthodox, and Second Congregational—have put out appeals for additional workers and donations of goods and services to this traditional major fund-raising event of the season which annually involves scores of parishioners.

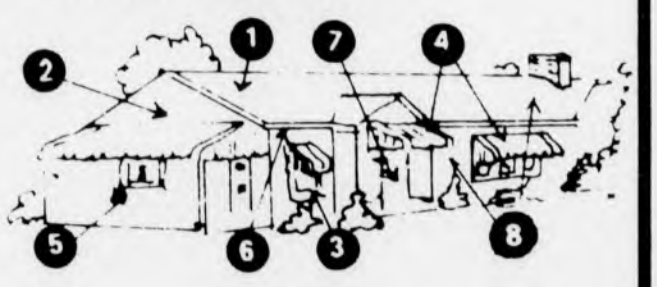
Always early in preparation for the Fair, the wreath committee under Jean Manganaro is already underway, with workshops scheduled for Wednesday mornings from 9:30 to noon, this year in the new rear basement of the Second Congregational Church. Veterans of the process will welcome all newcomers and educate them in the skills of fashioning bows and special ribbons, and the other decorations that will be added to the wreaths in the final week before the Fair when the workshops will be held daily.

The Congregational Church will also be the setting for advance work by the Plant Committee led by Jean Syrmopoulos, which will be presenting boxwood greens, baskets with cuttings, and other table decorations in addition to an assortment of plants.

The Desmond Room at the rear of St. Anthony's Church will be the focus of workshops each Thursday evening at 7:30 scheduled by Nancy O'Hara, heading the Boutique Committee. She is calling especially for skilled knitters and crocheters who can take advantage of a large quantity of donated yarn. Aim of this group is to produce a wealth of "quick and easy" inexpensive gifts to offer for sale.



Among the most ambitious of the groups working toward the Fair are those preparing for the rush of young customers to the Secret Room, a shopping paradise for youngsters who will have a choice of a wide variety of gifts for parents, brothers and sisters and relatives, all priced within the means of limited purses. Kathy Pratt (383-0048) and Linda McCarthy (383-1190) head up this activity and would welcome help in producing the hundreds of items needed. Helping out with this effort, in addition to her Doll Raffle project, is June Simeone, who gathers volunteers at her home on Friday evenings and a CCD class on Monday evenings to fashion Secret Room items.



While fingers fly at the workshop, books and articles for the Bargain Bazaar are being assembled in the basement at the rear of St. Anthony's Rectory on South Main Street. Items may be left there on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Helen Hooper and Betty Enders, long-time partners in the Book Table of the Village Fair, report the donation of an unusually large collection of fine travel books that will grace the tables this year, but would welcome gifts of children's books, which are always popular.

In the rotating leadership of the Village Fair, St. Anthony's Church "has the duty" this year, with Chris and Rose Kierce as Co-chairs of the Central Committee, with Georgine Butman as Secretary and Deanna Mulligan as Treasurer.

Graduation prayer debated

The Cohasset Clergy Association is sponsoring a forum on the role of prayer in public life on Sunday, Nov. 17 from 4 to 5 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Avenue, Cohasset. The Rev. Charles V. Bergstrom, D.D. will present the church and state issues that are involved. Barbara Bliss of the School Committee and Michael Putziger, an attorney on the Cohasset Advisory Committee, will respond. The forum will then be open for discussion and dialogue. The subject is receiving current attention because the Weisman case concerning prayer at high school graduations is being appealed to the Supreme Court late this fall.

The clergy of Cohasset, given the legal opinion of prayer at graduation, chose not to participate last spring in offering a customary prayer. At the same time, the clergy felt the absence of prayer to be a diminishment of the quality of our common life. The Clergy Association decided to present more of the issues and encourage dialogue through a forum which would explore the interaction between faith and public life.

The presenter for the forum, The Rev. Charles Bergstrom, has been close to the issue of school prayer. He warns that prayers at graduation seldom approximate the close communion with God which most faithful experience and desire. He questions, "Is such prayer a watering down of faith? On the other hand, where does the legitimate interaction between faith and public life take place?" These questions and more will be part of the dialogue and discussion on Nov. 17.

Mr. Bergstrom is a retired Lutheran pastor. He was most recently on the staff of the national Lutheran Church as Executive Director, Office for Governmental Affairs in Washington, D.C. There he was also President of the Washington Interreligious Staff Council. He attended the Conference on International Law and Religious Liberty in London in 1985. Currently, he lectures on church and state issues, is a Member of the Board and Chairman of the Executive Committee of People for the American Way, and Member of the Board and Vice-Chairman of the Center for Theology and Public Policy in Washington, D.C.

The Cohasset Clergy Association is comprised of the Rev. Gary A. Ritts of Second Congregational Church, host of the forum; the Rev. Edward T. Atkinson, will serve as a moderator of the forum, from First Parish Unitarian Universalist; the Rev. John Maheras of Nativity-Assumption Greek Orthodox Church; the Rev. John J. Keohane from St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church; the Rev. Stephen S.J. Hall at Beechwood Congregational Church; the Rev. E. Clifford Cutler of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church; and the Rev. Shuma Chakravarty, Assistant Minister of the Vedanta Centre.

around town

• Naturally the main topic that is on everyone's mind this week is the horrible "No-name Storm" that hit the area last week. Many meteorologists were quizzed, and quoted, but only one was quoted often in the local papers, Bob Thompson in the Boston weather service office. Bob is in charge of the National Weather Service's Boston office and if the name sounds very familiar to you, you are correct! He is the son of Bob and Jean Thompson...Mr Thompson was a teacher at Cohasset High School for a number of years, and Mrs. Thompson was Dr. Sceery's wonderful nurse. Two super people who are, we are sure, very pleased and proud of their son Bob and his efforts. Cohasset is too.

• Due to the "No-name Storm," several little trick-or-treaters were disappointed on Halloween. Not those who frequent the Log and Line however, those children had a wonderful day. Judy Kulturides threw a Halloween Party that kids and their moms won't soon forget, complete with all sorts of homemade pastries, candies and surprises for all. Even though the Log was overwhelmed with people running in from the storm, they made sure the kiddos had a super time, and we are here to tell you that it was memorable. A huge thank you to Judy and her gang for making what would have been a blah Halloween into a big one.

• Happy belated birthday greetings to Gertrude Young this week. The big day was Oct. 29, and we won't tell her age. Everyone remembers Mrs. Young and her teaching prowess, here's to many more happy, healthy years.

• Attention all of you commuters...had a nice note from Francine Townsend, telling all about the new commuter boat service in Hull...it will take off from Nantasket Pier (near the Carousel and Jake's restaurant) and dock in Boston at Rowes Wharf, adjacent to the Logan Water Shuttle. There is plenty of close free parking right on the pier, and commuters can avoid all of the construction that is currently in progress along Route 3A in Hingham. The one-way fare is $4.75, but buying tickets in bulk can reduce that to $3.40. They depart Hull at 7:45 and 10:00 a.m., and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. For more information call Nantransit at 925-1421.

• Congratulations go to Peter and Traci Madge on the birth of their daughter, who was born August 8 at Quincy Hospital.

• Another belated birthday greeting this week, this time it goes to George McCullough who was sixty last month. In honor of the occasion George's wife Ann threw a wonderful surprise party for him at Broad Cove. George was roasted by family and friends, and a sumptuous buffet rounded out a memorable evening. Congratulations George.

• Am happy to report that Woody Kaye was spotted around town last week, and he is looking great. Hope you are feeling fine and everything is behind you real soon Woody.

• Hats off to the Girls' Soccer team, after their big win Sunday. We hope that you can continue your winning ways all the way to the finals, but no matter what happens we are proud of all of you and your efforts.

• A standing ovation goes to Chris Keating, son of Gerard and the late Margaret Keating, this week. Chris will be inducted into the Hall of Fame at the University of Maine where he captained the 1978 Black Bear Football team. Chris joined the Buffalo Bills Team in 1979 and played there for six seasons. He finished his football career by playing one season for the Washington Redskins. Chris now lives in New York with his wife Nancy and their three children, but to us he will always be a "Cohassetite" that we are extremely proud of.

• Don't forget the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce's Annual Auction that will be held next week (Nov. 16). There will be a free franks and beans dinner that will begin at 6:30 p.m., and the auction (which will he televised on channel 3 live) will begin at 7:45 p.m. Everyone is invited to attend (no fee). If you need more information or would like to reserve a table, call Keith Knowles at 383-6266 or the Chamber at 383-1010. Support this effort.

• Finally, hats off to the football team and the big win last Sunday. The score was 20-7 and those who travelled to Newton for the game said it was a good one. We salute Ray Jones and his efforts...he scored all three touchdowns.

• That's the news from here...please call with yours.

Studds: health care should be major campaign issue

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Saying the current health system is "an absolute maze" Congressman Gerry E. Studds is urging that national health insurance be a major issue in the presidential campaign of 1992.

"We cannot let another election go by without at least knowing where the candidates stand on national health insurance," Studds said at a forum on health care in Kingston Sunday night.

"Poll after poll shows tremendous support for national health care and I think we have to mobilize to demand changes in this terribly broken system."

The tenth district Democratic Congressman said in his travels throughout the district, which stretches from the South Shore to New Bedford and Cape Cod, there is support for a national health care system that cuts across political ideology.

"It's very rare to have a consensus on a political issue going from right to left," he said. "But that is what I've found in this diverse constituency."

He said in talking to groups ranging from the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, to union workers in New Bedford and small business owners in Plymouth, he has been told, "You've got to get going on national health insurance. Go do something."

Studds said he even switched from the Foreign Affairs Committee to the Energy and Commerce committee in order to help reform the health care system.

Studds has filed a bill calling for a universal health care plan based on the Canadian system, which is financed through taxes.

"I don't for a moment think the Canadian system is perfect," he said. "But if I had to choose between the U.S. system and the Canadian system, I wouldn't hesitate for three seconds."

Studds admitted that increased taxes result from a national health care system, but there would be an elimination of doctor, hospital and insurance bills in favor of a single payer.

"Look at what we are doing now, all the developed countries are doing it better than us," Studds said. "We are getting less for our dollar. And you don't have to tell me about the depth of cynicism in the country with the government. But in that context, of a big new government program financed through taxes, there is a strong consensus for it."

Studds said health care costs Americans $700 billion a year, an average of $2,400 per person.

He said national health insurance would cost less than the current system and everyone would receive adequate health care.

"Even with the current high price tag, there are 37 million Americans with no health insurance," he said. "That is possible in only one other country, South Africa. And that is not good company for America."

Studds said that 20-25 percent of each dollar spent by Americans is for paperwork.

He likened the current U.S. health care system as a patchwork quilt in need of repairs.

In addition to problems with red-tape in the current system, Studds said there are problems such as insurers not covering pre-existing health conditions, doctors practicing "defensive medicine" by ordering expensive tests to cover against possible malpractice suits and poor and uninsured people not receiving proper medical care.

Studds said he supports implementing national health insurance but said it would take a "miracle" to get it enacted in Washington in the current political climate.

"The fact of political life is that we will not get national health insurance without a president who totally supports it and pushes the congress to get it done," Studds said. "It isn't very often a major problem can be addressed through legislation that is immensely popular with the people. We're not there yet, but we're trying to get something before next fall."

Teens prepare for annual work trip

Having traveled in past years to Presque Isle, Maine (1988); Hindman, Kentucky (1989); Orland, Maine (1990) and Iaeger, West Virginia (1991); the Cohasset Youth Group (CYG) is already hard at work preparing for their summer 1992 trip. Several fund raisers are planned. Two currently under way are a "servant for hire," where members of the group offer their services (raking leaves, baby sitting, pet care, etc.) in exchange for a donation to the project; and coming just in time for Thanksgiving is a Homemade Pie Bake-off (pumpkin, apple and pecan). Servants and/or pies can be ordered by calling project coordinator Gary Ritts at 383-0345. Being organized: a recycling service; Coming in January - a Super-Sub sale, just in time for Super Bowl Sunday! Any teenagers or adults even remotely interested in traveling to Appalachia with us next summer should attend the information and application meeting on Sunday, Nov. 17, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church (spaces on the trip are limited - those attending this meeting will receive first priority).

Annual historical meeting set for Nov. 14

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its 1991 Annual Meeting on Thursday, Nov. 14 at Kimball's By the Sea. The annual fall event will begin with a Social Hour at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 6:45. A brief business meeting will be held after dinner, for the election of Officers and Directors for the coming year, and for reports relating to the recent year.

A special program for the evening will feature a movie shot in Cohasset in 1940, titled "The Movie Queen". In that production, local people appeared as actors and actresses in a script portraying the arrival of a well-known Hollywood actress in this small New England village. Scenes in and around the Common and village show Cohasset scenes and townspeople in this unusual and seldom seen movie. In the movie viewers can see the Movie Queen arriving from Hollywood via the Greenbush railroad line, Selectmen greeting the Movie Queen at Town Hall, Cohasset business people at work in shops and offices and local residents coming out of their churches on Sunday morning.

Reservations for the Historical Society's Nov. 14 Annual Meeting are $15 per person and may be sent to the Society at 14 Summer Street, Cohasset 02025.

The big chill.

Fall weather is back.

And what better way to enjoy it than to commute to Boston aboard the T Commuter Boat.

Heated cabins, hot coffee and a 35 minute commune with nature as you commute to work.

So all aboard for the sparkling Autumn mornings and crisp fall evenings that New England is famous for.

There are always problems & other ways of seeing things

There's a not-so-funny joke about a man and his psychiatrist. It seems the man was troubled by a feeling of impending doom — maybe a heavy case of paranoia.

The man ranted and raved about his worries and concerns. But nothing was really wrong with his life. He had his physical health (obviously, his mental health was in jeopardy). He had a job. His family was fine.

"But I'm sure something is going to go wrong for me," the man moaned.

The psychiatrist nodded.

"You can count on it," the counsellor finally said. "Yes, sometime, something will very definitely go wrong."

The truth in that joke is enough to give us all hope for the future.

The week we've just lived through left most of us with problems — the gloomy chill and grey skies alone are enough to prod an average person into the edge of depression.

The storm hit deeply into our feeling of well-being. It robbed people of their security. It left countless people with less than they had before.

Boats, homes, landscapes and automobiles all suffered damage at the hands of the storm-with-no-name.

There were people who experienced the devastation of losing all or most of their worldly goods. There were quite a few residences hit by water damage as cellars filled and streets became canals. Some of those people will find little help in reclaiming the loss. There were flood waters where flood waters had never flowed before and some were caught short, uninsured and unprepared.

But no one was maimed. No one drowned in the floods.

It's time to pause and be grateful for the major tragedy that didn't happen. No one lost a life to the incoming waves.

The town workers, utility crews and volunteers who pulled together to battle the elements did fine work.

We thank them all.

We extend our sympathy and compassion to those who lost their resources and energy in the aftermath of the storm.

Like the man in the unfunny joke, we know the future holds more trouble. For as surely as the sun rises and the tide ebbs, life holds ups and downs.

There will be more coastal violence in the future of our waterfront community. But the waterfront is, indeed, our most precious resource. We take our chances against the elements, realizing there is no way to control nature. There is no way to prevent a storm.

And if there was a way to put a stop to the power of sea, we would certainly destroy its beauty as well.

The storm-with-no-name is gone. The federal government has already sent out workers trying to put a price tag on the rebuilding work. The government will probably kick in a hefty amount to repair the wreckage. Who knows — it could be that this storm might be the kick our local economy needs?

Sometimes there's a good result to a tragedy.

He wasn't looking—so picking him up was easy

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner nature writer

commentary

A crowd was gathered around a little bird in front of Pilgrim Bank last week. He was huddled there with his eyes tightly closed, because it really was too awful to see where he was. I do the same thing during Red Sox games; it's too awful to look.

Everyone had an opinion as to what was wrong:

He probably got blown out of the sky by the strong winds.

I don't know what's wrong with him, but I do know this. If he doesn't fly soon he'll freeze to death (it was 55 degrees).

If he has a broken wing, it's doomsday for him.

Look at his little feet! They look wrong.

The young woman who had discovered the little bird was on her lunch break, and was happy that I was going to take care of the bird. So, this little story is for the young woman, who probably has wondered all week about the fate of the bird, which appeared to be a goldfinch.

He wasn't looking—so picking him up was as easy as anything. But, as soon as I cupped him in my hands, his eyes popped right open and he looked at me intently.

I walked across the street and into the back of Cards 'n Shards, where I tried to sit him on a bush branch. But his little legs wouldn't work; he fell right off. Then I put him on the grass, but when I walked away he just sat there, looking forlorn.

This will require a visit to the medical center (my back porch) I thought to myself, as the bird and I walked into Cards 'n Shards for an ambulance box.

Sue Straley, who is terrified of birds, even this pudgy little cartoon bird, raced to the back of her store to get a box so we'd leave quickly.

When I tried to put the bird in the box, he jumped right out and ran up my arm, where he sat cutely on my shoulder

Poor baby, I thought.

And then the little bird with the broken wings and broken feet flew to the Cards n' Shards skylight, the high one, in the front of the store. Sue Straley's able assistant, Nancy Pottenger, said: "I sure have a lot better things to do than catch a bird," as she brought me a little stool to stand on to catch the bird which was now flying wildly, everywhere.

Nancy Pottenger's little stool wasn't going to help me do anything. So I went over to Cohasset Hardware to see if they had a butterfly net. They said no, they didn't stock butterfly nets in November. You know who probably had a butterfly net? Yep—The Red Balloon.

In any case, an hour later I caught the bird in my hands, inside Cards n' Shards, and let him loose right outside of the store, 'cause Karin Bartow told me his family lived in the area. I'm still wondering how she knew that. The little bird flew to the tippety top of the tree out in front of Hernan's.

At this point Sue came out of her store and said: "So, what are you going to do for tomorrow?"

And then the next day the Nor'easter arrived.

Crazy, crazy Halloween. I had four Halloweeners and I knew every one. And two of them I called and asked to come.

At 6:30 p.m. I called the Duggans and said: "Where are the Halloweeners?" At 7, they were delivered. Kara, 2, was dressed as a dalmation dog, very original with her little spotted pants and her doggy shirt. Alex, 5, was an astronaut—very believable—and becoming so grown up. Around 8:30, Mark St. John (14-15?) stopped by, he was dressed like Charlie Chaplin. And Amy Mitman (24?), was dressed as a beautiful witch. I had thought she went to Arizona, so it was a treat to see her.

Guess who got to eat all the candy again this year?

letters

To the Editor:

The South Shore Art Center would like to thank Bryan Marks and Colleen Wheeler of the C.H.S. Music Department for providing volunteers for their "Art of Giving" sale held on Nov. 1 and 2.

Musical interludes were provided both days by: Mark Connolly (saxophone), Simeon Ketchum and Connor Mangan (trumpet), Fay Menis (flute), Joel Puorro (drums) and Bryan Marks leading Bonnie Krueger, Bethany Maciel and Jason Pearsall on acoustic guitar. Other musicians seen helping at the sales table were: Jessica Jenkins, Rebecca Jenkins and Anne Lindgren.

It was wonderful to see the enthusiasm and cooperation of these talented students. We are all looking forward to hearing them again at the upcoming C.H.S. holiday concert on Dec. 18.

The "Little Piece of Home" packages should all have arrived at their destinations by now. Our thanks to all of the parents who have passed on their offsprings' comments and thanks. Feedback like this keeps the program going year to year...a special thanks to the students who took the time to write us thank-you notes. The parents of Mo Long, Becky Jordan, Nicole Barry, and Melissa Christoffel should feel very good about their babies' futures—any teen today who will write a thank-you note from college is already on the road to success!!

Did You Know That:

Cohasset Music in Cushing Plaza has been displaying Cohasset High School art since it opened a year ago?...that the proceeds of their Minot Light 1-4-3 T-shirts benefit the Gov't Island construction project?...that they also sell Barbara Conte's history of Cohasset coloring book?

...that the Little Harbor Bookstore in the village is selling UNICEF dolls?

...that Buttonwood Books & Toys regularly donates packing, boxes, etc. to the schools?

...that the "balloon store", "sticker store", "paper goods store" in Cushing Plaza has a name? (to be found somewhere in this column).

...that work is now in progress to turn the idea of a Teen Drop-In Center into a reality?

...that Bay State Fitness and Bodybuilding (near Party Etc.) provides a personal trainer to members for no charge?...and that they have donated a full year's membership to the Nov.16th Auction?

After the storm: for children and their families immediately became wild, running, yelling, fighting.

—Often when children need their parents the most they act the most obnoxious (whining, fighting, acting silly). It helps to understand this as a reaction to worries.

—After hurricane Gloria, one 4-year-old child could not be outside if their was a cloud in the sky or any breeze.

—Telling the stories over and over again.

—Silence.

WHAT HELPS

Talk—Children need the chance to talk and to tell their story over and over. Telling the story helps them to master the situation. One little boy worried that he would not get to share his "news" at school. His teacher, however, was well aware that all the children needed time to talk about this storm. You might also get the chance to reassure or to clarify their misconceptions. A 4-year-old was very concerned about his friend "Susie" in Montana. He needed to know she was fine and the storm was not that far west!

Drawing—is a wonderful outlet for children. One group of children stranded together drew obsessively in their coloring books. Now might be a time children could draw pictures of the storm, what they saw, what they imagined, what things looked like after, who helped them. Attached are some coloring pages.

Normalizing Feelings—Everyone gets scared sometimes, big people and little people. We might also feel angry, tired, nervous, sad, overwhelmed, silly, or numb.

Routine—When it looks like the world is falling apart children look for things that might stay the same, such as: going back to school, still having their favorite cereal, still getting a bed time story, going to gymnastics and seeing familiar faces.

Play and Friends—The best distraction is play and "play is the work of children". This may be how they master the storm by playing it out over and over. Play is also a great way to discharge anxiety over what they have heard, experienced, or seen on television.

Explanations—one example might be, "The storm happened because a lot of smaller storms came together with a very strong wind. The storm made the high tide too high. It doesn't happen very much and we might never see another one like it. The wind usually helps us, e.g. sailboats, fly kites, operate wind mills. Now that the storm is over, everyone is pitching in and helping each other."

Helping—Children feel more powerful if they can be active and help. Maybe they could pick up branches or stones, share some toys or bring food to a shelter.

Calm Adults—This may be particularly hard if you have also been traumatized by the storm. If you can find other adults to share your feelings with then you may be more able to help your children adjust and reestablish a sense of security.

In closing I want to make two additional comments.

—Any reactions to the disturbing events of this storm, no matter how abnormal, are normal. In other words, "an abnormal response to an abnormal situation is normal". Only if a child cannot go back to their normal routines after a few weeks and if their fears persist, then parents might consider talking with someone about the situation.

—It is predictable that many children will have a resurgence of worries the next time it rains, the wind blows, or people talk of "high tides". This should be short lived if parents realize what is happening and can provide reassurance and calm continuance of routines.

He wasn't looking—so picking him up was easy

her house eating her ham and bean soup, and her crackers and soda, when he said of her column:

"You're being extremely impolite; it's an affront. But then if you were nice about it no one would notice.

commentary

"The Tinytown columnist has changed the rules; all of a sudden someone is critically paying attention. Maybe that's good, maybe it isn't good.

"Maybe it's not fair. But there's a dialogue happening; sometimes the dialogue may be wrong; sometimes it may goes over the line. But there really should be a dialogue."

A few well-intended people called me to regurgitate the old Dukakis rhetoric about how the state will give us big points for low income housing, and how we really need those points for other stuff.

I'm confused. Is this a new lottery game?

If there truly is a point system, it must exist on paper; if it does exist, why aren't we getting points for the low income people who already live here and/or whose incomes are becoming lower and lower? And I should think we should get substantial extra points for Cohasset Heights.

One official said "One would think Cohasset Heights would wipe out the town's obligations forever!"

Commuter boats sail through rough weather

By Lisa B. Eigner
Mariner staff

With the addition of a third commuter boat service from the South Shore to Boston, rough seas may be ahead for the two veteran boat companies.

Nantransit, the Nantasket-based commuter service and new kid on the block, has only had its sails raised since Oct. 1, but company President Jeffrey Parker isn't worried about the competition.

"We're here to provide additional transportation alternatives to the South Shore," said Parker, "we're not out to create a commuter boat war."

The other two companies—Massachusetts Bay Lines and Boston Harbor Commuter Service— are still combatting recent state budget cuts.

Less than two months ago, Massachusetts Bay Lines lost its MBTA subsidy. It reduced fares as a means of compensation.

The price of a one-way ticket on the Massachusetts has dropped from $4 to $3, and 10-ride coupon books that could previously be bought for $34 can be had for the post budget cut rate of $25.

The subsidized Boston Harbor Commuter Service hasn't lowered its $4 one-way ticket rate and can still afford to sell 10-ride coupon books for $34.

Nantransit was awarded federal funds by Urban Mass Transportation Administration (UMTA) to help underride the capital cost of their boat, Cape Cod Clipper.

Running their service with only one 250-passenger boat, Nantransit is concentrating its efforts around penetrating the market.

"Our focus is designed to favor the frequent user," said Parker.

Nantransit's 10-ride commuter ticket from Nantasket Pier to Boston's Rowes Wharf can be purchased for $34, the same rate as the MBTA-subidized fare from Hingham.

A one-way tickets, however, are on sale for $4.75. Mass. Bay lines offers the least expensive ride to town.

PSO Christmas Tree/Wreath sale underway

Sales order forms are available now for the second annual Cohasset PSO Christmas Tree and Wreath sale. The PSO encourages all residents to buy their fresh-cut, premium balsam Christmas trees and wreaths through this unique fundraiser. Project Director, John Kinchla has asked that residents mail their order forms to the PSO, Box 30, Cohasset, MA 02025 prior to Nov. 30.

Kinchla said, "Last year we netted $2,000 in the one day sale. This year, we expect our customers will recruit their friends and neighbors and the revenues will soar. Sale order forms are being circulated throughout Cohasset. The forms have been attached to the Osgood and Deer Hill School lunch menus and they have appeared as inserts in local newspapers. The forms are also available at the following locations. On Route 3A: Leo's Exxon, The Good Sport, Vercollone's Mobil, Roberts' Market, Dwyer's Cleaners, Victoria's and Aveni Cleaners. At Cushing Plaza: Dunkin' Donuts, Sea and Cheese, and Toys and Party Etc. In Cohasset Village: the Children's Exchange, The Log and Line Restaurant, Cohasset Hardware, Tedeschi's Market, Cohasset News, the Cohasset Community Center, the Carriage House Nursery, the Cohasset Police and Fire Station, the Cohasset Public Library and at all Cohasset Public Schools.

On Nov. 23, there will be sales people at both the Cohasset High School gym and at the Deer Hill School gym from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. A table will be set up to take orders.

The PSO offers a 100 percent money back return on the quality of the tree or wreath purchased. They state that "If upon your inspection on Dec. 8, the quality is less than green, fresh, high density or premium grade, we will refund your money. We offer a superior product at an exceptional price."

Cohasset High School Student Managers Joe Andrade, Brendan Kinchla, Patrick Reynolds and Chris McKenna suggest that to guarantee arrival of your tree or wreath, the sales form be returned with a check payable to the PSO prior to Nov. 30, and that you can pickup your tree and/or wreath on Sunday, Dec. 8 at Cohasset High School on Pond St. from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Home delivery can also be arranged for an additional $10.

All money raised from this event will be used to provide educational services to the students of the Cohasset Public School system.

PSO Tree Sale meetings

Two organizational meetings for the PSO Christmas tree and wreath sale will be held at the Deer Hill School Cafeteria Thursday, Nov. 7 and Thursday, Nov. 21 at 8 p.m.

The agenda for these meetings will include an analysis of last year's successful task list. Interested parents and students are invited to attend.

The Christmas tree and wreath sale will take place at Cohasset High School Sunday, Dec. 8 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Last year's one day sale raised over $2,000 for the PSO.

Early Release Day

Nov. 7 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

SCHOOL	BUSES DEPART
Junior/Senior High School	1 2 p.m.
Deer Hill School	12:40 p.m.
Joseph Osgood School	12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and food service will be available at the junior/senior high school.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff to attend grade level meetings and work on the budget.

Artist-of-the-Month

A meeting to discuss the upcoming project for Artist-of-the-Month at Osgood will be held at the home of Retta Dwyer at 49 Hobart Lane Wednesday, Nov. 13 at 10 a.m. Please call Retta at 383-6629, Linda Gardner at 383-9881 or Kay Londergan at 383-6135 if you are interested and unable to attend. Our featured artist will be Norman Rockwell. We welcome any enthusiastic volunteers, with or without an art background.

Art center takes a folksy tack

The South Shore Art Center's (SSAC) current agenda includes a folk art festival beginning Friday, Nov. 15.

A reception to open the show is scheduled for Friday, Nov. 15, from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

The exhibit will feature 13 folk artists from Cambridge, the South Shore and Cape Cod, including Cohasset resident Jeanne Replogle, the curator of the exhibit, Carol Martin and Suzanne Moyer of Cohasset.

Replogle and Moyer are part of the photo display and article on the town in the current issue of Colonial Homes, a national magazine.

Replogle, will deliver the lecture, "Folk Art Today" Thursday, Nov. 21 at 7:30 p.m.

Heading off the fall season was the second annual "The Art of Giving a Gift of Art Art Sale," held Friday, Nov. 1 and Saturday, Nov. 2.

The two-day event offered holiday shoppers hundreds of creative gift ideas for those hard-to-buy-for friends and relatives.

Seventy-five artists and artisans displayed their unique gifts of art.

Among the diverse collection of knickknacks were found scarves, stone-beaded jewelry, holiday crafts, weaving, hand-knit sweaters, baskets, dried flower arrangements, hand-turned bowls, sterling jewelry, hand carved birds, pottery, jewelry, gift baskets, and hand painted children's clothing.

Four Cohasset natives were among those with creations on display.

Nancy Connolly, Laila Roukounakis, Susan Cameron, and Jack Nash all had tables filled.

SSAC children's classes include:

• "Holiday Treasures" for pre-kindergarten through kindergarten, Tuesdays, Nov. 19 through Nov. 10, from 4 to 5:30 p.m.

Julie Hawkins-Burnham helps students explore a variety of media and make treasures to give as gifts or use to decorate their homes;

• "Cards and Calendars" for grades 1 through 3, Tuesdays, Nov. 19 through Nov. 10, from 4 to 5:30 p.m.

• "Making Glazes and Slips", happens Saturday, Nov. 23, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. as George Dalton instructs students on measuring, mixing and blending various chemical compounds to make an assortment of glossy, matte and transparent high-fire glazes.

Lynn Rizzotto helps students create festive cards and memorable calendars for year-long use;

• "Holiday Crafts from Norway, Mexico and Poland" for grades 4 through 6, Wednesdays, Nov. 20 through Dec. 4 and 11, from 4 to 5:30 p.m.

• Nancy Connolly teaches students the customs of other countries as they create ethnic treasures to keep or give as gifts.

• "Holiday Cookies" for grades 1 through 5, Friday, Dec. 13, from 4 to 5:30 p.m.

Lynn Rizzotto shows students how to create miniature paintings on cookies by using paint brushes, food coloring, trimmings and decorations to produce edible art.

Later in the season, the art center is offering an exhibit on Mary Waring Barnes and Robert Harvey, slated to run Tuesday, Jan. 7 through Saturday, Feb. 8, with the opening reception Thursday, Jan. 9, from 6 to 8 p.m.

The two-artist show will feature a selection of narrative oil paintings by Barnes and mixed media boxes by Harvey.

From Thursday, Feb. 20, through Saturday, March 28, the center will host the 1992 juried photography exhibit.

The juried exhibit features black and white, color and special effects photography.

An opening reception for the exhibit will be held Thursday, Feb. 20, from 6 to 8 p.m.

Special opportunities at the art center include:

• The SSAC Gift Gallery, open Tuesdays through Saturdays, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., showcasing the talents of regional artists and offering out-of-the-ordinary giftware. Shoppers can select pottery, sculpture, jewelry, scarves, desk accessories, wooden pieces, or cards and frameable art;

• Tablescapes III, scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 11 from 1 to 9 p.m.; Wednesday, Feb. 12, from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.; and Thursday, Feb. 13, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. is the SSAC's major winter fundraiser hosting the talents of local and regional artists and businesses who design and decorate table settings.

A champagne reception is scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 11, from 6 to 9 p.m.

The Winter Term of Young Artists courses and workshops begins Tuesday, Jan. 21.

Registration opens Tuesday, Jan. 9. Call 383-9548 to request a brochure.

Classes for adults include:

• "Adult Painting Four-Day Workshop with Charles Sovek", Tuesday through Friday, Jan. 14 to 17, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Winter term of courses and workshops begin Tuesday, Jan 21. Registration opens Thursday, Jan 9.

New holiday cards benefit young cancer patients

he is healthy and "in complete remission," his mother explained.

"Have a Holly Jolly Christmas!"
Art: Frank Perry, 20 & Copy: Audrey Wong, 16

"It's like a dream come true," she said. Now he returns to the hospital once a month for a blood test.

"The last one was last Wednesday. We were heading to the hospital when the storm struck. On Wollaston Beach the waves were coming up to the car," she said.

But they made it to the hospital and the test results "were perfect," Marita said.

This time last year, Joel required quite a bit of medical care. A bone marrow transplant succeeded for Joel in the summer of 1990. His younger sister, Kate, the donor, was down for about a day after the operation. Kate will be four years old in January. She was two when the operation took place.

A group of families of children involved in the cancer center banded together more than a year ago to create some support for the hospital and staff in return for the support they had received.

Last year was the first year the cards were sold by the families. Money from that drive went to provide extras for the cancer clinic which is run by Dr. Lawrence Wolfe. Sales were handled through the families and through small stores that helped out. Many local retailers handled the cards after hearing about the project.

This year the goal is to double the sales. The goal is 14,000 boxes. And there is a good chance for success now that the cards will be distributed by a major chain like Filene's.

While Dr. Wolfe is given discretion to use most of the money for research and the items he feels the clinic needs, a chunk of this year's card money has been committed to beginning a support system for teen-agers with cancer.

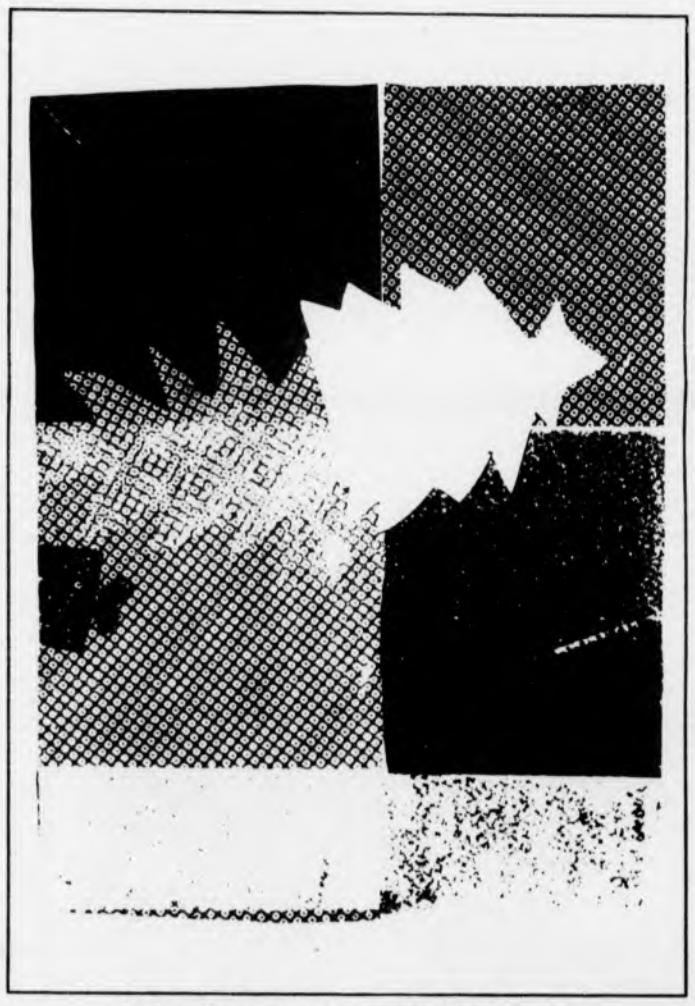
The support begins with a party for the teens this winter at th Lafayette Hotel in Boston.

"It's hard for teen-agers," Marita said. "They need space they don't have to share with a two-year-old. They need to get together in a social atmosphere. They need to talk."

She said the cancer clinic at Floating Hospital moved last week to new space that will have a separate area for teenage patients.

"We want to get a stereo for it," she said. The teen program is being modelled after one underway at a children's hospital in Los Angeles.

"Floating Hospital treats this as a family disease," Marita said.



The Carpenter family has time to recover these days. Marita and her husband Joel Carpenter Sr. live on Heather Drive. Young Joel is doing fine. So are the other two Carpenter children — Kate and Robbie, who turns six in January.

Among the families involved in the project are several from the South Shore area. One of the cards used in this year's package was created by Jennifer Sansonetti, a cancer patient from Scituate.

Another of the families in the support group comes from Marshfield. Marita said Dick and Connie Hayes got involved after losing a granddaughter to a brain tumor.

Organ music at St. Stephen's

St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, will commemorate Veteran's Day on Sunday, Nov. 10 with a Prelude Organ Recital at 5 p.m. and Choral Evensong at 5:30 p.m. The musical setting of the service will be by Stanford. The Psalms will be sung to compositions by Byrd and Vaughan Williams. The St. Stephen's Choir will offer the Anthem, "Cantique de Jean Racine," by Gabriel Faure.

Veteran's Day is an opportunity to give thanks for God's gracious care for and abiding presence with those who have served in the armed forces of this country at home and abroad. It is also a time to pray for current efforts toward peace in the world.

Evensong is a service of praise that expresses the unity of the whole church. The worship is drawn almost entirely from Scripture, telling of God's saving acts and leading to an expression of praise.

For more information, you may call 383-1083.

4-church Cohasset Village fair

The 51st annual edition of the Cohasset Village Fair is a joint benefit event sponsored by four Cohasset churches: Second Congregational, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic, St. Stephen's Episcopal, Panagia Greek Orthodox. In churches and public buildings around Cohasset Common, Saturday, Dec. 7, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Telephone 383-0578. Features all types of hand-crafted holiday gift items, wreaths, decorations, children's clothes and novelties, home-cooked food and candy, Greek specialties, Bargain Bazaar, raffles, "Secret Room" for children shoppers, snack bar, Santa Claus, Village Fair Dinner (advance ticket sales only). Admission free.

Adult workshops at art center

To some, November is a cold month but to the South Shore Art Center, November is another month in which to be creative. And, while students are developing and polishing their skills in Saturday workshops, they can also be creating some holiday gifts.

"Creating with Fimo" is offered to adults Saturday afternoons from 12 to 3 p.m. Nov. 9 and 16. Taught by Judy Rossman, this course shows adults (teenagers included) how to create unique jewelry with the colorful polymer fimo.

"Making Glazes and Slips" is offered to adults Saturday, Nov. 23 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. George Dalton will instruct students on measuring, mixing, and blending various chemical compounds to make an assortment of glossy, matte, and transparent high-fire glazes.

To register for these workshops which are held at 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset, or inquire about the upcoming winter term, please call 383-9548.

Give the gift of creativity

The South Shore Art Center offers five opportunities this November and December with its Young Artist Holiday Workshops.

"Holiday Treasures" lets pre-k and kindergarten students explore a variety of media with which to make a gingerbread house and other seasonal gifts and decorations. Festive cards and calendars are created by first through third graders in the "Cards and Calendars" workshop. Both are offered Nov. 19 through Dec. 10 from 4 to 5:30 p.m.

Fourth through sixth graders learn the customs of other countries as they create ethnic treasures to keep or give as gifts in "Holiday Crafts from Norway, Mexico and Poland," offered Nov. 20 and Dec. 4 and 11 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. "Clay Nativity Scenes" allows first through third graders to create and fire clay nativities that can become a special Christmas treasure to enjoy year after year. This is offered Nov. 21, Dec. 5 and 12 from 4 to 5:30 p.m.

And what's a holiday without cookies? Edible art is what first through fifth graders create in the "Holiday Cookies" workshop Dec. 13 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. To register for the workshops, which are held at 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset, call 383-9548.

House tour offered

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will be holding its House Tour this year on Dec. 5 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tickets are on sale at the Community Center. The price is $15. The proceeds help fund such community efforts as maintenance of the Community Center and Lothrop House and establishment and maintenance of Constitution Park and the High School Court Yard. The club also offers scholarships to Cohasset students each year and supports other projects for the preservation and conservation of our natural resources.

60+ meets for lunch

Cohasset Sixty Plus Club meets Thursday, Nov. 21 at the Unitarian Parish House.

A Social Service nurse will be present at 11:30 a.m. to take blood pressure. A sandwich will be served at noon.

Plans for the Christmas Party and Luncheon will be discussed. Bingo will be played. Bring a prize, $1 donation is asked.

Blackmur at Buttonwood

Former Cohasset resident, L.L. Blackmur, will sign her latest book, The Circle of Mynnia, at Buttonwood Books and Toys on Saturday, Nov. 9 from 3 to 5 p.m. Ms. Blackmur's novel, The Circle of Mynnia, is a romantic mystery that begins in Massachusetts and ends in Africa. L.L. Blackmur also wrote Love Lies Slain.

The Home Center

Tuesday, Nov. 12 at 8 p.m. on "The Home Center" Jerome Manning appears with Gail Bell. Manning is an auctioneer with offices in Boston and Yarmouthport. He will discuss the selling of single family homes by auction. "The Home Center" can be seen on Channel 53 in Hingham, Cohasset, Norwell, Scituate and Hull.

Art Center lecture series

The South Shore Art Center has scheduled a lecture on folk art at the 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset, facility.

"Folk Art Today" will be the topic of the Nov. 21 lecture given by Cohasset artist Jeanne Replogle. Replogle will curate the Art Center's Folk Art Exhibit Nov. 15 through Dec. 21. She is also be featured in the current issue of Colonial Homes, entitled "Christmas in Cohasset."

All lectures are at the Art Center and begin at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $6 per lecture for members: $8 per lecture for non-members. For more information about the Art Center's fall lecture series, call 383-9548.

Community Center news

Cohasset Community Center has announced that the Body Fat Testing course originally scheduled for Nov. 4 has been rescheduled to Friday, Nov. 15 at 10 a.m. Pat Messing, a nutritionist, will test you to find your percentage of bodyfat to weight.

A new Gym Dandy session starts the week of Nov. 12. Gym Dandy is a unique program for pre-school children and their parents. It is based on the simple fact that children learn through play. The tot-sized equipment provides a safe and creative environment where children can develop and enhance their gross motor and social skills while receiving positive reinforcement from their parents. Each class is 45 minutes long. Group activities take place at the beginning and end of each class: the time between allows for individual exploration of the

Let's remember our women veterans

By Mary Jeanette Murray
State Representative

Let's honor all women who have served in the military on Veterans Day, Monday, Nov. 11, in a unique and lasting way. A donation of $25 will sponsor her registration in the Women in Military Service Memorial so that her contributions to our nation's military efforts can become a permanent chapter in our nation's history.

The Women in Military Service Memorial will recognize and honor all women in the nation's military forces, past and present. The site is the entrance way to Arlington National Cemetery. These registrations will become part of a computer register, which will enable anyone to find out about the service of their mother, grandmother, aunt, sister or a friend from their hometown. The names of more than 65,000 women have already been entered in the Register.

I was appointed by Gov. William Weld to be Chairman of the foundation for the state of Massachusetts. Some stories in the register are sad, some are funny, but all of them reflect the pride of being an American service woman. We are learning a great deal of history never previously documented, and this memorial will ensure it will not be forgotten.

This memorial, mandated by Congress in 1986 and signed into law by President Reagan, will be the first national memorial to honor all of the women who have served or are serving the nation.

A minimum donation of $25 is requested with each registration and will be applied to the cost of constructing the Memorial—an estimated $18 million.

For more information about registering someone or about the memorial, write to Women in Military Service Memorial Foundation, Dept. 560, Washington, D.C. 20042-0560 or call 1-800-1-SALUTE.

Cohasset Savings Bank pays dividend

Cohasset Savings Bank recently reported net income of $64,000, or $.06 per share, for the third quarter ended September 30, 1991, the first positive results since the first quarter of 1990.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, the bank showed a loss of $(29,000), or $(.03) per share.

Noting that results of a single quarter should not be taken as an indication that all banking problems are in the past, Donald E. Bates, President, welcomed the reversal in the record of losses in the past 18 months and said that continuing improvement is encouraging.

Factors involved in the improvement over the third quarter of 1990 included continued gains in interest and dividend income, lower interest paid on deposits as rates declined, and a reduction in the provision for loan losses from $500,000 in 1990 to $140,000 in the quarter ended Sept. 30. As a result, net interest income after the provision for loan losses, always a key indicator of a bank's operating results, was $482,000 in the quarter just ended, compared with a loss of $(70,000) for the 1990 third quarter.

Total assets increased to $68,769,000 at Sept. 30, from $65,775,000 at Dec. 31, and stockholders' equity at Sept. 30 was $11,561,000, or 16.8 percent of total assets.

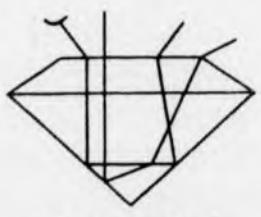
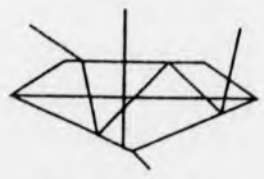
equipment. Children will attend the class appropriate to their developmental stage.

The Center is forming a new For Kids Only class Mondays and Fridays from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. Children ages 2 years, 9 months to 4 years are eligible for this group. Kids who can function comfortably in a playgroup with a parent present will enjoy taking time away from Mom to participate in all the fun we have in store: music, games, crafts, stories, free play and group activities.

New classes in Yoga started Nov. 4. Led by Mary Norton, the Hatha Yoga is an ancient system of exercise performed slowly in coordination with deep and controlled breathing. Develop muscle tone, flexibility, coordination, concentration, balance, breath control and deep relaxation through slow fluid graceful exercises. Classes are eight weeks in duration and are held Mondays, from 6:30 to 8 p.m.



The second session of Tai Chi classes will start Nov. 27. Tai Chi for Beginners is an introduction to the classical system of Chinese exercise which promotes health, balance, relaxation and flexibility through slow, fluid movements. This class is held Wednesdays from 7:45 to 8:45 p.m. Advanced Tai Chi is also held Wednesdays from 6:45 to 7:45 p.m.



For information and registration on any of the courses, call the Center at 383-0088.

DIAMONDS: CARAT, CUT, COLOR & CLARITY...
THIS WEEK, CHAPTER II – CUT
Brilliance is one of a diamond's most admired qualities. The greater the fire, the greater the life, the higher the value. Life and brilliance are created as light rays bounce and reflect in and out of the 58 facets. A perfectly finished diamond results when a master craftsman cuts the facets along established proportions. The slightest change in angle of any of the 58 facets can reduce the brilliance, and thus the value.

In a properly cut diamond, light entering through the table and bezel facets is reflected back through the top.

If the stone is cut too shallow, part of the light leaks out the bottom.

If the stone is cut too deep, much of the light leaks out the sides.

Diamond Proportions

Ideal proportions and angles of a modern American ideal cut (round) diamond.

senior center news

By Kathy Bryanton
Special to the Mariner

The Executive Office of Elder Affairs and the Massachusetts Society of Eye Physicians and Surgeons (MSEPS) are co-sponsoring a statewide Eye Health Screening for Senior Citizens. About 30 hospitals statewide will conduct the free screenings on Saturday, Nov. 16, from 9 a.m. to noon. The closest screening location to Cohasset is at the South Shore Hospital in Weymouth. For additional participating hospitals, call the Senior Center at 383-9112.

The ophthalmologists will screen for glaucoma, cataracts, macular degeneration and other eye diseases common to seniors. The screening will also include vision and blood pressure testing.

Certain age-related visual problems can lead to permanent loss of sight if not detected early. Although an eye screening should not replace a complete periodic medical eye examination, a screening can assist in identifying potential problems.

Nov. 15 - Friday - Deborah Swanson, well know Horticulturist and 4H Agent, has agreed to share her expertise in the caring, repotting, and storing of your favorite plants. Come to the Senior Center on the 15th at 9:30 a.m. and get first hand advice on the care of your plants. There will be a door prize. Call the center now and reserve a space.

Nov. 17 - Sunday - There are still a few seats available if you're interested in attending the all time Musical Comedy, "Nunsense". Cost is $24.99 round trip which includes the play and a brief stop over at Copley Place. Call the center now for reservations.

Nov. 20 - Wednesday - Central Artery Update - Dick Jarvis is coming from Boston, to the First Parish House, 23 North Main Street, to update us about the complexities of building a widened underground Central Artery and a new four lane tunnel to Logan Airport. To provide a much needed increase in highway capacity, State transportation officials have planned a massive undertaking - the Central Artery/Third Harbor Tunnel Project. The project will double Boston's highway capacity at its critical bottleneck with the construction of an underground, widened Central Artery and a new four-lane tunnel beneath Boston Harbor to Logan Airport. The enormity of the project, particularly in such an urban setting, combined with Boston's unique geologic conditions, make the Artery-Tunnel Project one of the world's most challenging and exciting construction jobs. Jarvis will also present a slide presentation. Call the center and make your reservation.

Dec. 6 - Friday - Holly Day at Ashumet Holly Reservation in Sandwich, Massachusetts. Let's all get into the Holiday Spirit and board the bus, sing Christmas Carols on the way to the Cape for a great day at the Ashumet Reservation. The bus leaves the Senior Center at 9 a.m. and will return at approximately 4 p.m. Sounds like a full, fun-filled day. After visiting the Reservation, we will board the bus to have a great luncheon at the famous Daniel Webster Inn, where you'll certainly feel the air of Christmas there as it will be decorated for the holidays; and then on to the Christmas Tree Shop where everyone of all ages enjoys just roaming around and viewing the items for sale in this store. Then, if we're not too tired, we'll have another carol sing-a-long. Call the Center now and make your reservation. The cost is $29.

Dec. 8 - Sunday at 2 p.m. - The Friends of the Council on Aging will again host another "Queen of Back Bay" production this year. This is a one-woman dramatic production by Robin Lane, well known actress, who portrays six of America's first ladies; dignified Jackie Kennedy, strong-willed Eleanor Roosevelt, compulsive Mary Lincoln, regal Julia Tyler, defiant Rachel Jackson, and for the first time on the South Shore, Abigail Adams. One reviewer said of Ms. Lane's production, "Actress Robin Lane brings her first ladies to startling life through the use of costumes and creative performing artistry". Tickets will go on sale soon so call the Center and reserve yours now. The cost of the program is $10. Proceeds will benefit the Vista and Senior Center programming.

Many activities are planned for the months of November and December and we do need your help in assisting with these Holiday functions. Please call now and be on our new list of volunteers.

Tuesday Luncheons

Nov. 12 - Khalil Sharifzadeh, MPH, will be our guest speaker. She comes highly recommended by the Cohasset Board of Health. Sharifzadeh will cover such topics as the proper care and handling of food as they apply to special conditions relating to senior citizens. There will be a question and answer period following her talk.

Nov. 19 - Dorothy Montouri, third grade teacher at the Joseph Osgood School, will be our guests with her class. Those of you who were at the luncheon last year with the third graders, will remember well what a pleasant occasion this was. These children are really enjoyable.

Nov. 26 - Thanksgiving. Let's all get together for our annual "Council on Aging Family Thanksgiving Feast."

Skippers take first round girls soccer victory

By Michael Farley
Mariner sports writer

As New England's latest storm raged along the coast, the Cohasset Skippers' girls soccer team quietly prepared for their opening round tournament matchup against the 13th seeded Marian squad.

With over a week's layoff nestled between Cohasset's last regular season game and its initial tournament contest, it was important that the girls not lose their momentum. Coach Kenan Startzell thought the same.

"We kept a rigid practice schedule during the week, with only one day off," noted Startzell.

The strategy succeeded as the girls, led by freshman midfielder Katie Carroll and forward Erin Murphy, posted a 2-0 shutout against its Catholic school opponent.

The first goal came in the first half as a result of a Marian player committing a handball setting up a penalty shot. Katie Carroll accepted the honors and blasted home the eventual game winner for the Skippers. Cohasset continued its relentless offensive pressure (20 shots for the game) and netted an insurance goal just four minutes later. Senior forward Jen Reidy somehow managed to connect with Murphy on a crossing pass through several Marian defenders. Murphy obliged, making the score 2-0.

When asked to comment on his girls' performance, Startzell said that "it was one of the better games we have played this year. The game was a little easier than what the score indicated. He further added that they "hadn't known a whole lot about the team heading into the game. But I thought as the game progressed that we were the better team."

The defense also contributed superbly to the effort, allowing only five shots on goalie Heather Bass.

Next up was Catholic Central League member Cardinal Spellman. Spellman is the number two seed in the Division 2 South tournament. Cohasset was to play at Cardinal Spellman on Tuesday, and they look to get out to an early lead.

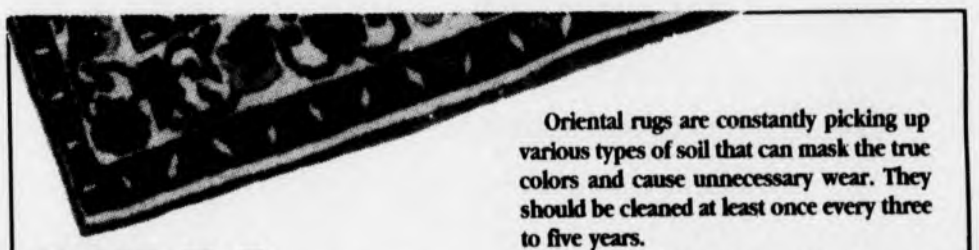
"They'll be tough to come back on if we get down early, but we won't change anything from the last game, or from what we've been doing all year," stated the man at the helm. "We'll continue to go with what has got us here."

Pompeo starts college on outdoor trek

Brian Pompeo, a first year student at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, started his college career with an adventure in the great Maine outdoors on a Colby Outdoor Orientation Trip (COOT).

The son of Arthur M. Pompeo Jr. of Cohasset, Brian spent four days exploring Maine on the Mt. Blue hiking trip. Nearly 100 percent of all new students joined in Colby's unique orientation program this year, a Colby record that the college believes may be the highest level of participation for such programs at any campus in the nation.

The array of trips included excursions to match nearly every interest and skill level, from the hard-core hiking of the Mahoosuc Notch trip which covers 18 miles of the most difficult part of the Appalachian Trail, to a scenic island bike tour. For students not interested in sailing, biking, hiking or fishing their way across various spectacular areas of Maine, Colby offered a few trips designed to be fulfilling in a less physical way. The Salmon Lake Theatre Trip gave those students interested in drama an opportunity to work on their acting amid the tranquil scenes of the Belgrade Lakes. The Habitat House Trip brought a group of students to Portland, Maine, where they devoted their four days to a community construction project for people in need.



COOT was designed 17 years ago to give students an opportunity to explore the breathtaking state in which they will attend college and to get to know a few other students in a relaxed atmosphere. Each trip consists of 10 new students and is led by two returning students and a number of the faculty, staff or alumni.

Boys soccer finishes at .500

Coach Chamberlain vows 'We'll be back'

By Michael Farley
Mariner sports writer

There are two halves to every soccer game. There are also two halves to the soccer season. The Cohasset Skippers had an excellent first half, but would rather cremate the second half and toss the remains into the waters of the Atlantic. After jumping out to an impressive 6-1-1 start, Cohasset tripped through the wires in the second half at 2-7-1, crawling away with an 8-8-1 record for the 1991 campaign. For a team that has qualified for the tournament with the regularity of a morning sunrise, the season did not prove to be as successful as many had hoped, including first year coach Richard Chamberlain.

"It was certainly disappointing in that sense," declared Chamberlain with an undertone of dejection.

"I don't know what else we could have done. We surely had a more talented team than what the record suggests," he added.

Adding salt to the wound towards the end of the season was the fact that Cohasset suffered injuries to a half dozen of its key players. The Skippers lost two starters against Norwell, and two more at Norton. With the Skippers winding up the season against a tough Rockland team, they had hoped to beat an inferior Norton squad the game prior. It was not to be, as injury plagued Cohasset could not overcome its losses and went down in defeat. The first ten to fifteen minutes were an adventure in futility as the Skippers did everything but put the ball in the net. Norton retaliated with what coach Chamberlain labeled "three lousy goals." With ten minutes left in the game, Cohasset mustered two goals to narrow the margin to one, but time ran out on the last ditch effort. Cohasset staggered its way into the season finale against Rockland and just didn't have enough punch to tame the Bulldogs. With the conclusion of the 1991 season, there will be plenty of time for reflection on the part of Coach Chamberlain as he sizes up his first season and looks ahead on ways to improve upon his inaugural year as head coach.

"There are a few elements that I feel the team could work on as a whole. I really think that we need to work on our team speed and size," said Chamberlain. "Hopefully, the boys will get involved with some off-season training."

This would certainly be a benefit against the bigger, stronger teams such as Hanover and Norwell. Chamberlain also pointed out that Rockland will be moving to the Atlantic division next season, which will also help the Skipper cause.

In terms of on the field changes, there will be some holes to fill, but coach Chamberlain remains confident with the future forecast.

"We'll be competitive, and should be in the running for the tournament," he injected. On offense, Cohasset will have the benefit of forward Bill Jordan returning for his senior year. Jordan, who along with departing senior forward Dan DeMichele missed playing time due to a late season injury, will look to lead the charge. Also returning up front will be forwards Chuck Endris on the right and Joe Andrade on the left.

"Next year we'll be experienced up front. I was pleased with the number of goals we scored during the year. We actually scored more than I had anticipated," noted Chamberlain.

The big question next year will be the defense. The Skippers will be losing three out of four defenders, including Joe Gagliano, Brooks Doten, and Mac Campbell. Coach Chamberlain mentioned that "they will be tough to replace. Next year, our defense will depend on a young crop of players, including prospects from the junior varsity. The junior varsity went undefeated this season, so we still have a good feeder program to draw from," he continued.

Junior Ben Chittick went in during the rash of physical misfortune, and "played great" according to his coach. Also returning will be Chris Goodman with another year of seasoning under his belt. A thumb injury contributed to a couple of rough games at the end of the schedule for Chris, but his coach is more than comfortable that he'll have one of the league's better netminders on his side next year. The Skippers hope that next fall will commence the next rise to the tournament level.

Skipper football runs over Trinity Catholic

Growing up, did your parents ever tell you to just leave it alone, don't touch it. The "it" could have been anything. Maybe it was that model airplane that hadn't quite finished drying. A house of cards, perhaps? For the Cohasset High School football team, it's their running game. If you listen, you might be able to hear Coach McDermott and his staff saying to themselves, "Please, don't touch our running game. It's fine just the way it is."

The Skippers ground their way to a resounding 20-7 trouncing of Trinity Catholic this past Sunday to boost their record to 5-3 in Division 6 this season. Not bad for a team that didn't exist last year.

With the offensive line creating holes that would impress even the Patriot Missile, Ray Jones piled up 233 yards on the ground on 26 carries. For those without a calculator, that's over eight yards per carry. Of those total yards, 93 came on his three touchdowns (he had 16 in the first seven games).

Skipper football . . .

The Skipper victory parade began in the first quarter with a march upfield which culminated in a 42 yard romp downfield by Ray Jones for the game's first six points. After failing to convert on the two point conversion, Trinity retaliated with a game tying touchdown and the kick for the 7-6 lead.

The Skippers battened down the hatches in the second half and began to wear out Trinity's defense with an effective running assault. Jones capped off a third quarter drive with a seven yard touchdown and iced it with the conversion for a 14-7 lead. Not wanting to be outdone by the offense, the defensive troops continued to defend their zone, setting up an opportunity for Jones' third tally. It was a 44 yard bolt. The rush failed, but it would prove to be more than enough for the Skippers' fifth victory of its welcome back season.

recreation report

December ski trip

The Recreation Department will accept registrations for the season's first ski trip, scheduled for Sunday, Dec. 15, to Loon Mountain, Lincoln, NH. The cost of this trip is $42 per person and the trip will be limited to the first 45 registered. Bus will leave from Cohasset Town Hall at 5:15 a.m., Sunday, Dec. 15, and return at 7 p.m. that evening to Town Hall.

Special beginner packages are available to first-time skiers, and those who require equipment rentals should indicate this at the time of registration. Rental of equipment is $14 and cash should be brought the day of the trip for rental payment. Those who are interested in taking a ski lesson may do so, and lessons cost $12, and cash for payment should be brought the day of the trip.

To register for this early season special, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Registration confirmation is receipt of payment; however, telephone reservations will hold seats for one week. Checks payable to: Town of Cohasset, are requested for payment. Non-resident youth will be accepted for this trip should space be available.

The trip will be chaperoned by Recreation Department ski chaperones, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Bestick.

Four-week landscape design

The Recreation Department is accepting telephone registrations for a four-week Landscape Design course to be taught by Greg Bilowz, landscape and environmental design architect.

The program is scheduled to begin Wednesday, Nov. 13, at 7:30 p.m., at Cohasset High School to Dec. 11, less Nov. 27, Thanksgiving Eve. The fee is $32 per person and class must be limited in size. To register please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

The course outline follows:

Basic Horticulture Practices including propagation techniques, pruning, soil preparation, fertilization, mulching, edging and how to survey your land.

Seaside Landscaping methods of overcoming the elements and creating wind breaks for delicates.

British Gardens, a slide presentation of Britain's finest gardens, including Bodnant Garden, Hidecote Manor, Knightshayes Court, to name a few.

Class Project, class members to plot a section yard and design an improvement scheme for the site. Participants will need to bring a piece of graph paper, pencil and ruler to this class.

Bilowz holds a B.S. degree in Environmental Design from U. Mass and an M.A. degree from the University of Sheffield, England, and has been actively involved in the field for 14 years, specializing in coastal landscape design.

Open gym

The Recreation Department will sponsor free, open gym at Cohasset High School during the month of November on Wednesday evenings, from 7 to 9 p.m.

Supervising the open gym will be Matt Salarno and Arnie Reppucci of Cohasset High School.

Open gym is available to girls and boys in junior and senior high school. No pre-registration is necessary; however, a pre-established limit of participants will be allowed in the gym at one time.

Participants should wear sneakers on gym floor and no food/drink is allowed.

Open gym will conclude on Wednesday, Nov. 27.

Dog obedience classes

The Recreation department will accept telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate dog training classes to be taught by Laurie Cleveland. Classes at the G.A.R. Hall, Scituate, began Tuesday, Nov. 5.

Basketball clinics and league

Basketball registration for boys and girls, grades one to nine, will be held at town hall Saturday, Nov. 9 from 9 to 11 a.m. It is essential to register then, as evaluations will be held the following week. Further details will be coming home via a flier and also carried in local news media.

Marion Douglas becomes town clerk

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Marion Clark Douglas was unanimously appointed temporary town clerk when selectmen met Tuesday night.

She is now the assistant town clerk. The appointment takes effect Jan. 1. The incumbent town clerk, Frances Marks, told selectmen last month that she would resign at the end of December.

Mrs. Marks is listed in stable condition at New England Medical Center in Boston. She has told town workers that her decision to resign is not the result of her medical condition. She told others at town hall that she had been thinking about resigning for some time.

The action on appointing the temporary clerk was taken with no public discussion about the selection.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby made the motion. There was no debate or opposition.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson sent a letter to the board this week outlining the process of filling the vacancy. According to Henderson the selectmen had the power to appoint a temporary town clerk and the temporary clerk would have the full power of the office.

Henderson said the selectmen could call for an election to replace the clerk at the next town meeting.

Before the appointment was made, Gregory Doyon, selectman's secretary, suggested that this is the time to look into the possibility of restructuring the town clerk's office.

Selectman Diana Kornet suggested the government structure committee could look into that area.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said that since staffing in the office is changing anyway, this is the time to look into other ways.

Gjesteby said the workload is heavy. She pointed out that when an opening occured in the selectmen's office, no one studied the idea of personnel cuts.

"As leaders of the town I think it is appropriate if we suggest a review," Kornet said.

She pointed out that the government structure committee would not need a vote of the selectmen to look into the town clerk's office.

Goedecke said all departments will be severely impacted by finances this coming year.

It's sure — spring ballot holds override

Town officials are preparing for another fiscal battle — the word override had already been uttered.

Last week the long range financial planning committee met and town officials began looking at the numbers.

Selectman Jane Goedecke, who attended the planning meeting, said the projected shortfall for the coming fiscal year is at least $200,000 without factoring in raises or other costs that are sure to rise.

She said that to be realistic the shortfall will probably be $500,000.

The plan is to begin town meeting, adjourn the session without completing the budget and wait for the results of the override question at the annual town election.

"Then we can see where we stand," Goedecke said.

Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts said the trend indicates there may be a decrease in state aid.

The projections under discussion by town officials assume state aid will be level.

Goedecke pointed out that for every one percent raise granted to all town employees, the budget increases by $80,000.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said there may be need for some capital spending next year — there's a possibility there will be a new ambulance needed. Other capital items she mentioned include a school bus and funds for the sewer system upgrade.

She said there was no alternative but to cut personnel if an override is not approved.

Goedecke said the advisory committee agrees "There is little room to maneuver."

"They should call it the short range financial planning committee," quipped Selectman Diana Kornet.

Harbormaster takes comfort in view of Govt. Island shack

By Lisa B. Eigner
Mariner staff

On the job three years this month, Harbormaster Irving Gadow finds overlooking the harbor a much calmer lifestyle than his last job, working drug patrols in the Coast Guard.

Before becoming harbormaster in 1988, Gadow spent 30 years in the Coast Guard working search and rescue missions and law enforcement cases.

Raised on his father's farm on the eastern shore of Maryland, Gadow left the fields and cattle behind when he enlisted in the Coast Guard shortly after his high school graduation.

Gadow didn't speak much about his Coast Guard days.

"I worked drug patrols off the Florida and New Jersey coasts," he said quietly, not partial to boasting about his past experiences.

As harbormaster, Gadow enjoys the serenity of the harbor and the contact with boat owners.

"Cohasset people are wonderful," said Gadow, who said that he'll only leave the position when the job stops being fun.

Motoring through the harbor during the summer months on the harbormaster's 17-foot Boston Whaler is just a fraction of Gadow's responsibilities.

Seven days-a-week Gadow's binoculars are around his neck and he can be seen standing in the window of his hill-top office.

"It's my job to monitor the 500-odd boats that are in the harbor," said Gadow, whose job includes keeping track of the harbor's moorings and general boat positions.

Apart from the harbor, Gadow and wife Janet live a quiet life at their home in Plymouth.

Since his son has grown and moved to Colorado, Gadow's home life consists of spending time with his wife, gardening and home maintenance.

"I live a quiet life," he said, as he reclined in his swivel chair.

But during stormy times like Oct. 30 when Cohasset Harbor was blasted by the winds of a Nor'easter, Gadow

Michael Putziger on banks, police contracts and landfills

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset Advisory Committee member Michael Putziger is serving the second year of a three-year appointed term.

His better-known, better-half Myrna Putziger has been on the town's zoning board of appeals for many years, and has served as its chairman for the past six years.

Both Putzigers are attorneys. Michael, involved in real estate and banking law, is managing partner of the Boston law firm of Roche Carens & Degiacomo. He is a graduate of Boston University Law School, while Myrna graduated from Boston-College Law School.

He says bank mergers and bailouts, will result in "fewer banks. A lot of medium-sized banks will disappear, although the opposite is happening with the general business community."

Michael's firm has done some work in Cohasset, i.e.

Unpaid 1991 taxes

Statements have been mailed to those property owners who still owe their Fiscal 1991 real estate taxes.

Demands were sent from our office June 7, 1991 and our Deputy Collector, John P. Riley, served warrants on those delinquent accounts during the week of July 8.

In some cases theses taxes remain unpaid due to a change in ownership. Any new home owners since January 1, 1990 who fail to receive a notice should contact our office immediately.

The town must receive payment in full, in the form of a bank check, money order or cash, on or before Friday, Nov. 22. Any properties that remain unpaid at that time will be processed for a tax taking and the Town will place a lien on the property. For further information please call the Treasurer-Collector's office at 383-9900, extension 113.

These notices are not to be confused with the new fiscal 1992 Real Estate Tax bills that were mailed Oct. 22.

New coffee shop

Selectmen granted a common victualler's license to Mary Lou's News at 132 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. The shop is part of a chain that operates in Hull and other communities.

Laugelle commended

Selectmen issued a commendation this week to Patrolman Paul Laugelle for ignoring his own safety during the height of the storm Oct. 30 when he rescued three people from a stranded car.

In a letter written by Police Sgt. Robert Jackson to the chief, the sergeant detailed the situation briefly.

"Officer Laugelle's actions were taken without regard for his personal safety and at no small risk," Jackson said in the letter.

Patrolman David Cogill had called the station for assistance at Atlantic Avenue near Sandy Beach about 5 p.m. Oct. 30.

"A large wave had washed a vehicle off the road into Little Harbor," the letter said. There were three people trapped in the car, a man, woman and child.

"Officer Cogill was unable to reach them."

Laugelle used his own four-wheel drive vehicle to drive through more than two-feet of water to reach the car. The three people were taken to safety by Laugelle and a civilian volunteer.

Police Chief Joseph Kealey forwarded the letter to selectmen. The chief did not know the name of the volunteer.

Kathy Walsh, PSO president, accepts a check for $505.85 from Mike Burns, manager of the Mobil Station on Route 3A. The station donated 2 cents a gallon to the PSO's drive for the high school writing lab.

Lessons in Natural Foods
presented by 14 KARROT NATURAL FOODS

Lesson #3 - ECONOMICS

In our last two lessons, we've discussed both the old-fashioned goodness and the health-related benefits found in natural foods. Still, some people are inclined to ask, "But aren't natural foods expensive?" In return, we ask, "compared to what?" When it comes to shopping for clothes, do you buy only the cheapest items available? Probably not. Afterall, we all know that the cheapest products don't always represent the best value.

The truth is that a naturally-prepared meal costs only pennies more per serving than a conventionally-prepared meal.

For 37c, you can make conventional peanut butter and jelly sandwich with white, processed bread artificially enriched with B vitamins; peanut butter that contains sugar, salt and hydrogenated oils; and jelly that has more high-fructose corn syrup than it does fruit.

For 49c, you can make a peanut butter and jelly sandwich with whole wheat bread, naturally rich in B vitamins, minerals and fiber; peanut butter made from organic peanuts (and nothing more); and pure fruit conserves sweetened with just a touch of honey. When it comes to eating right for your good health, natural foods are full of real value. And with our grand opening sale now in progress, its a great time to take advantage of extra savings in every department of the store!

Everett W. Dorr, local hero, dies

Everett W. Dorr, 67, of North Scituate died Nov. 11 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth after a long illness.

A lifelong Scituate resident, he was a direct descendant of the Confederate general, Robert E. Lee.

Mr. Dorr attended Scituate High School where he started his football career and became a three-sport athlete.

He went on to Boston University and played on the Terrier varsity football team during his freshman year.

World War II interrupted his schooling, and he enlisted in the Marine Corps and became a paratrooper.

At the battle of Iwo Jima in the Pacific, he sustained a serious shrapnel wound to his left leg, causing permanent nerve damage. He was awarded the Purple Heart.

After the war, he returned to Boston University and became the placekicker for the football team and set a record for extra points which held for 23 years.

He was inducted into the Boston University Hall of Fame, and the Gridiron Club of Boston presented him the first Nils "Swede" Nelson Award for overcoming adversity.

In 1949, Mr. Dorr became physical education instructor for all grades in Cohasset.

He began his coaching career almost immediately, taking on the assignment for baseball, football and basketball.

And the Cohasset football team won several league titles.

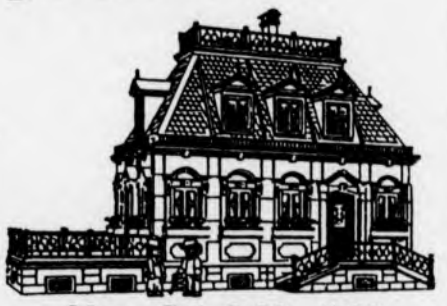
Subsequently he became athletic director and served in that capacity for 25 years, retiring in 1982.

Last month, the Cohasset school department dedicated the high school gymnasium in his honor.

Mr. Dorr leaves his wife, Frances E. (Skinner) Dorr; three sons, Everett W. Dorr Jr. of Appleton, Maine, Daniel M. Dorr of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and David Dorr of Scituate; two sisters, Ruth Andrews of Scituate and Marjorie Peterman of Holyoke, and five grandchildren.

The Rev. Richard Dutton, pastor of the First Baptist Church, will conduct a graveside service at Cudworth Cemetery at 2:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 15, followed by a memorial service in the First Baptist Church, 660 Country Way, at 3:30 p.m.

Visiting hours will be at the Gaffey Funeral Home, 757 Country Way, North Scituate Village, from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 14.



Memorial contributions may be made to the First Baptist Church of Scituate.

Tales from suburbia

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner columnist

Okay, George Bush's protestations notwithstanding, I think those of us in the trenches will admit that we're in the middle of a recession. (My friend Cindy says it's a depression, but that's beside the point.) The president's problem is that he's listening to the wrong people: faceless, nameless (and possibly brainless) economists, who compile statistics based on observations that don't really tell the story. There are indicators that would give a more reliable reading of the economy than all the statistics ever generated by the department of commerce.

During the "boom" years, we would pay other people to do the things that we find really obnoxious. Now, we have to weigh the expense versus how much we really hate the task.

For example, Sunday my husband raked leaves in a cold drizzle. The job had to be done and it had to be done at that time, before the drizzle turned into the forecasted cold rain. In all honesty, the yard probably should've been raked last weekend. If the economy was in better shape, we would've paid a neighborhood kid to perform this chore—last week—rather than hoping that the leaves would blow across the street this week.

By the same token, people tend to be more tolerant of life's annoyances when they're not distracted by finding the money to make the mortgage payment. When two burned out light bulbs can screw up the entire week's budget, we suddenly start identifying with that sniper in the tower with a rifle.

Recently, I had to do an errand at a shopping plaza. There were two parking spaces near the door, but an old Buick Skylark was using both of them! I could feel my blood pressure rise. I wanted to wait in my car for the driver to return. Instead, I left an anonymous note on the windshield (in case the driver was also identifying with that sniper in the tower with a rifle).

Then there are computer phone calls. You know: you're hurrying from the car to the back door, in the rain, with your house-keys in your mouth, the baby slung under your arm, a brown paper bag that's ripping from the weight of a gallon of milk, hoping that you haven't missed a phone call concerning the results of your grandmother's medical tests, and you can hear the phone ringing while you're fumbling to unlock the door.

Instead of merely hanging up on the disembodied electronic voice, you scream into the phone every word that we can't put in the newspaper or say in front of your mother.

Today, in a large appliance-and-electronics store, a salesclerk actually lifted her derriere from her perch behind the cash register and helped me find the last copy of the "Fantasia" video.

Last Friday, at the local super supermarket, an employee cheerfully interrupted his conversation with co-worker to find and open a new case of yogurt so I could use my 3-for-$1 coupon before it expired next week. In times past, I would've throw away the coupon upon finding the shelves empty.

Two weeks ago, while eating out in a restaurant, the waitress and bus-boy practically fell all over themselves to bring extra rolls and butter to the table, and refill glasses as soon as they were empty. The dinner check was delivered to our table promptly. AND the waitress didn't ask the customary mid-meal "Is everything airight?" when we had our mouths full of food.

These workers all realize that there are several dozen people waiting to take their jobs. No one dares to say, "Everything we have is on the shelf," or "If there are none there, we're all out." At the mall, a salesclerk even offered to call other stores to see if they had the item I wanted in the size I needed.

And it also should be noted that it's now possible to FIND a salesclerk in the stores. No one ever seems to be on a break, and everyone can ring up a sale. I haven't heard, "That's not my department," or "This register is closed."

The guy at the gas station even cleaned my windshield, and I wasn't at the "full service" pump.

You can tell a lot about the economy when you notice which parking lots are full.

The malls are quiet, except for the days when the big stores are having a "one day sale." Even then, very few people are walking around with arm loads of packages and bags.

Moral of the story: people are making more holiday presents and decorations and buying only items with reduced prices.

Of course, George Bush doesn't have problems with rude, inattentive salesclerks, waiters, and cashiers. And, he doesn't have to weigh the annoyance of bathing the dog, versus the cost of taking Millie to a professional dog groomer. And, I would guess that his limousine can always find a place to park at the mall. I bet he sends the Secret Service to stand in line for gift boxes.

So, George should just scrap the present bunch of economic advisors and follow around some ordinary suburban people. Or, he could send the secretary of commerce to the mall. No one would recognize him. And, maybe a Buick Skylark would be taking up two parking spaces! That would show him how bad the economy really is!

Irving Gadow

Harbormaster . . .

has his job cut out for him.

"Everything happened so quickly that we had no time to think," said Gadow. He praised area fishermen for their help during the hurricane.

"Many of the town's fishermen spent the night with me at the harbor, standing right beside me and helping to secure boats and lines," he said.

It's for occasions like Hurricane Bob or the late October storm when Gadow takes up residence in the harbormaster's office to be on-hand in case of emergencies.

"During this last storm I spent the night securing all of the floats with extra storm line," said Gadow.

Up-keep of the harbor isn't easy, but with a handyman like Gadow at the helm it's smooth sailing all the way.

Local business supports writing lab

Local businesses in Cohasset are joining in a big way to support Project Writing Lab, sponsored by the PSO.

The recently ended week of fund raising at Verc Mobil, Route 3A and Sohier St., successfully netted $505.85 for the writing lab. The PSO extends thanks to the management at Verc Mobil, and to all the people who patronized the station for the benefit of the schools.

The sales associates at the Hunneman/Coldwell Banker office in Cohasset will be running a garage sale Saturday, Nov. 16, to raise money for the writing lab, and for a video disc for Scituate H.S. The sale will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the home of Margy Charles, 85 Linden Dr., Cohasset. Donations of attic and basement treasures would be greatly appreciated. Pick-up arrangements can be made by calling Hunneman/Coldwell Banker at 383-9202.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce Auction Saturday, Nov. 16, will donate a minimum of 25 percent of their proceeds to benefit Project Writing Lab. The free dinner begins at 6:30 p.m., and the auction starts at about 7:30 p.m., at the Cohasset Community Center. It's a chance to start your Christmas shopping early with some great bargains, and help the schools at the same time.

The Chamber of Commerce auction happens Nov. 16 at the Community Center – Call Keith Knowles at 383-6266 to donate an item.

Holiday gifts for history

By David Wadsworth

The Cohasset Historical Society suggests some special items relating to the town's own history as gifts for the coming holiday season. All items are available through the Society. For the general reader or interested historian, Rev. E. Victor Bigelow's Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset is an absorbing text. First published in 1898, "Narrative History" tells the story of this small coastal New England village from its founding in the latter 17th century to the date of publication of the book.

Covered are such fascinating topics as the first settling of Conahasset, the division of lands, early home and industry, the town's churches and schools, and the long seafaring era of Cohasset's history. The origin of the granite ledges, the glacial sculpturing of the town's topography, its flora and fauna and its pre-historic Indian culture are discussed. The book ends as Cohasset, by then a summer colony for Bostonian families, was on the threshold of becoming a modern suburb. The Bigelow history is the definitive history of the town in its early centuries, written in flowing narrative style by an accomplished author. Following the 1898 volume of "Narrative History" was the second volume of the town's history, volume 2 written in 1956 by Cohasset historian Burtram J. Pratt. "Narrative History," vol. 2 picks up the story where Rev. Bigelow left off, and carries it to the mid-20th century. In the Pratt history the transition of Cohasset into a modern suburban community is portrayed.

During the early 20th century the town still retained vestiges of its rural past and its 19th century outlook. Two great wars, a disastrous economic depression and the recovery from it followed by population growth shaped the modern community as we know it today. The accelerating events of the 20th century are described clearly in Pratt's "Narrative History" volume 2. These two volumes together constitute the history of Cohasset, and are highly appropriate as holiday gifts for young and old alike. Also available through the Cohasset Historical Society is a paperback volume titled Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains. Written by the son of one of Cohasset's most illustrious 19th century shipmasters, "Deep Sea Captains" details brief biographies of more than 50 Master Mariners. First published as an added chapter in the Town Genealogy in 1909, the book preserved, at the very end of Cohasset's maritime era, fascinating glimpses into a way of life now past; a time when Cohassset sailors ventured to all parts of the world on the large merchant sailing vessels owned and sailed by Cohasseters. Such capable Captains as James Collier Jr., Philip Fox, Joseph Smith and John Phillip Turner Percival are featured in a recounting of their careers on the sea. Another history-related book offered through the Society is Barbara Conte's fascinating Coloring Book of Cohasset. Detailing historical scenes and events, this is a coloring book for children and adults alike, written and illustrated by Miss Conte. Historically accurate, it is a concise view of the town's history, both entertaining and informative.

Newly added to the Historical Society's inventory of Cohasset-related items is the Society's own tote bag; of canvas and carrying the Society's seal and slogan. Produced by Goodwin Graphics of Cohasset, the tote bag is an attractive and utilitarian gift for the holiday season.

These and other Historical Society gift items are available through the Society, and can be purchased at its headquarters, the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street and at selected shops in Cohasset. The Society's phone is 383-6930.

Sandy Beach repairs detailed

The trustees of the Sandy Beach Association had a special meeting this week to consider the effects of the Halloween storm on the shore and building at Cohasset's Sandy Beach.

There has been extensive erosion of the beach itself so that considerable frontage now lies below the tide marks. Most of the sand was washed out to sea or has spilled onto the town's parking lot and across Atlantic Avenue onto the Association property abutting Little Harbor. In addition, the beach house has cracks in the block wall, damage to the roof and an overhead door that must be replaced. The interior has a great deal of sand that must be removed, while the soaked paneling and plumbing fixtures must be cleaned and restored. Much of the electrical system was destroyed by salt and sand. The newly-built walkway for the handicapped was broken and damaged but most of it can be salvaged for reassembly in 1992.

With the assistance of Dr. Peter Rosen, Coastal Geologist, the Association is submitting its written plans for restoring its beach property to its pre-storm condition in accordance with the emergency guidelines established by the Commonwealth and the town. The Association expects to work with local authorities in implementing such plans before the appropriate deadlines that have been published. The overall goal is to restore the beach to its natural state while preserving the environment.

Very shortly, the Association will be making the substantial efforts that are most urgent to move gravel and sand back onto the beach and to begin restoring vegetation wherever possible. Tons of small stones and boulders must be moved also and barriers restored. The beach house will be repaired and cleaned so that the walkway and guard tower can be stored inside. In the spring additional work will be done on the beach and on the house depending on how much the winter storms cooperate in restoring what the Halloween storm took away. The costs of this work are a strain on the limited resources of the Association and hopefully friends of the Beach will come forward with tax-deductible special donations before the end of this year.

Tax relief for storm victims

Special relief may be available for taxpayers who suffered losses as a result of Hurricane Bob and the nor'easter that pummeled the Massachusetts coastline last week.

A rarely-used provision of the tax law allows taxpayers, both business and individuals, to accelerate the collection of tax benefits (cash) resulting from these losses.

Normally, a taxpayer can deduct a casualty loss in the year the loss occurs, subject to the limits for deductibility of that year. However, since President Bush has determined that certain Massachusetts counties warrant assistance under the Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, taxpayers in those counties may elect to deduct the loss on the tax return of the year in which the loss occurred or on the return for the immediately preceding year.

This option may maximize the speed of the refund or the amount of the allowed loss.

A taxpayer can immediately file an amended return for 1990 or can wait until all facts are known about 1991 to determine which year will produce a higher tax benefit.

The tax relief is based on the taxpayer having a significant loss resulting from either or both natural disasters, which are not reimbursed by insurance. An individual's casualty losses are subject to a limitation of 10 percent of adjusted gross income but business losses are not subject to that limitation.

While the determination of the deductible loss may require some degree of tax expertise, the fact of a significant loss after one of these events is usually painfully obvious. This little used tax provision can prove to be a welcome relief. One should consult a tax professional to determine eligibility and obtain more information.

Children will find attractions at Village Fair

Activities and attractions with a special appeal for children will again be on the bill-of-fare of Cohasset's Village Fair to be staged by four town churches in buildings around the historic Common and on the Common itself on Saturday, Dec. 7, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Knowing that the Village Fair is as important a holiday event for children as it is for their parents, the Central Committee of the Fair, with Rose Kierce as Chair, has stocked the bill-of-fare with all the familiar favorites. Parishioners of the four sponsoring churches—St. Anthony's, which this year has the leadership role, St. Stephen's, First Congregational and Panagia Greek Orthodox—are all joining in providing events of interest to children.

Established in recent years as high on any youthful agenda, the Secret Room, where children can shop privately for gifts for parents and relatives, is moving this year to larger quarters in the basement nursery school rooms of the Community Center. There, a committee headed by Kathy Pratt and Linda McCarthy, will put on sale hundreds of items priced from 25 cents to not more than $3. With parents barred from the room, the youngsters will be helped in their selection of gifts by members of church youth groups who will also see that the presents are attractively gift-wrapped.

Also in the Community Center, in an area at the rear of the large first-floor auditorium, a group headed by Louis Atathamaiou will conduct Children's Activities, featuring face-painting and crafts.

The Community Center will also be the site of Santa Claus' annual visit to the Fair. Through the invitation of Craig Muir, Santa has agreed to arrive on a fire engine about 10:45 a.m. and park his sleigh in one of the front rooms of the Center. There, in a bower of greens, he will listen to the wish lists of scores of children and pose for Polaroid photos with the tots.

En route to the Town Hall, the children are bound to patronize the Snack Bar, set up in a pavilion on the Common by a group headed by Bob Moody. This year they will be adding pizza slices to the usual menu of hamburgers, hot dogs and hot and cold drinks.

In the Town Hall itself, children will find attractions geared especially to their tastes. First to greet them will be a Grabs box, where for a modest investment, they can reach for hidden treasures.

The Town Hall also will again be the site of the popular Doll Raffle of June Simeone. She has distributed 50 dolls to parishioners of the four churches to be dressed in a wide variety of costumes and these will be raffled off in the two-step process that involves the purchase of a lollipop to discover a possible winning number.

The newly-redecorated Bates Hall of the adjoining Second Congregational Church will also have features of appeal to youngsters as well as to grown-ups. It will be the site of the Bargain Bazaar with its host of attic treasures. A committee headed by Sharon Moody, Annette Sawchuk and Debbie Anderson, has been assembling items for the Bazaar in the basement at the rear of St. Anthony's Rectory on South Main Street. Hours for receiving donations have been changed to Tuesdays and Saturdays from 9:30 to 12, when members of the committee will be present to accept, price and store the donated articles.

The Congregational Church will also be the location of the Book Table operated by Helen Hooper and Betty Enders, and featuring a section of books for children.

around town

• Aylsa and Earle Goodrich celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary last weekend, and what a celebration it was. Their three children, Earle Jr., Mark, and Laurie, threw a dinner party at the Barnside Tavern for over 100 friends and relatives. Those present said it was a real gala, and that they couldn't have been happier to be there...great food, lovely music, everyone festively dressed, sounds like fun! We extend best wishes to you Aylsa and Earle, and may the next 50 be even better than the first.

• We picked up the December Issue of New England Bride and spotted a lovely bride-to-be's engagement photo on the inside cover and in the story about engagement photo tips. The bride was none other than Pam Weisenfluh, and it is a beautiful picture (of them both). The whole article was about making every right move to get the perfect picture, and they were successful. Congratulations on your engagement, Pam, and on a beautiful picture. Kevin Lessard is the handsome bridegroom-to-be.

• The Cohasset Community Center will not be holding its Friday night dance this month, but you can be sure that it will be missed by all of the kids. Be sure to let them know you miss it, it could be the key in getting it back sooner.

• Congratulations go to Paula Graham who recently graduated from the Floyd Wickman "Sweathog" Course. It was a 12-week course on how to sell and list real estate and all aspects of salesmanship. Paula works at the Cohasset office of Jack Conway and Company.

• If you would like to have someone else make your Thanksgiving pies this year, why not consider buying them from the Cohasset Youth Group. It is one of the fund raisers that will help enable the students to go on their summer 1992 trip, and they do wonderful work. These same kids will also babysit, rake, etc., to benefit the project. If you are interested, please give Gary Ritts a call at 383-0345.

• On the subject of fund raisers, you cannot forget the auction that is going to go on this Saturday, put on by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. The auction is going to be televised on Cable Channel 3, and you can call in with a bid...just a few of the many items that will be auctioned are Dobbs Mills T-shirts, Christmas decorations, housewares, clocks, books, gift certificates, car washes, etc. If you want to go, do. Free food, free admission, free laughs, and free fun. Dinner is from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and the auction will start at 7:45 p.m. It will take place at the Community Center.

• Wasn't it nice that L.L. Blackmur came back to her hometown to sign her new book, The Circle of Mynnia? We hear that it is a good one. We haven't heard too much about Cohasset authors since Mrs. Malley's famous book hit the bookstores, and that has been a smashing success. We hope that Ms. Blackmur's is the same.

Brian Pompeo, a first year student at Colby College in Maine, moves into a slot on the men's soccer team. The son of Arthur Pompeo, he is a graduate of Belmont Hill School.

• Charlie DeSantis was in town last week and reports that his son Mike is still working extremely hard to become a pilot. He is in Arizona, where he will be undergoing intensive training for quite a while. In 1993 he will be back in Massachusetts to complete the final leg of his training. Corey DeSantis is loving her college life in California. With her vivacious personality, one can easily picture her there. That's one family where all four of the children will do well, just take a peek at their Mom and Dad.

• Everett Dorr was at the high school a few weeks ago, where he saw the brand new plaque made by his son Chuck put into place at the "Everett Dorr Gymnasium." Needless to say, he was thrilled by the whole thing, and we sure hope that he is feeling better as he reads this. Sure would be nice to have him watch some events in his gym, cheering everyone on just like when he was coaching there.

• Don't forget to purchase your tickets for the Community Garden Club House Tour, which will take place on Dec. 5 this year. Tickets are on sale at the Community Center.

• That's the news from here. Sure hope that you will take the time to fill me in on your latest.

Putziger . . .

the Figueredo title dispute (harbor) and some other areas, although Michael was never involved. Myrna is involved with civil and commercial law and is responsible for "many additions to the Boston skyline," according to Michael.

The Putzigers live on upper King Street with their dog Zeke, a 6-year-old chocolate lab.

Michael's parents were U.S. citizens, but he was born and raised in Montreal, Canada.

With regard to the advisory committee, which unanimously voted against the police contract for fiscal reasons, Michael said he wouldn't be surprised if the selectmen resubmitted the contract to annual town meeting.

Nevertheless, he said, "Selectmen must be aware of the town's limited ability to increase funds. Town meeting may want to give raises, but it may not have the ability to fund the raises (override ballot)."

He agrees that Prop. 2-1/2 has added an interesting facet to town government, namely that the group giving approval doesn't have control over the revenue-raising process. For obvious reasons, Michael says, "This doesn't work. I'm not smart enough to know how to rework the system, but there has to be a link between town meeting and the electorate with regard to raising money. What we're ending up with is tension in town meeting."

While he doesn't find the quintessential of the police contract (0-4-4) over three years unreasonable, he said "Alternatively, a 4 percent increase isn't reasonable with respect to the town's limited revenue raising process" (2-1/2 percent).

Under the restraint of Prop. 2-1/2, the town is automatically able to raise $250,000 annually without anyone's consent. "A 4 percent raise, for all unions, would result in a total increase of $280,000—$300,000 over the Prop. 2-1/2 limitations," Michael explained.

He added that he wasn't even considering noncontractual increases which take place without negotiations—such as pensions and decreases in state aid.

He feels regaining control of town government finances will require a cohesive effort, and "It's not fair to criticize the selectmen" (for all of the town's problems) as "The unions demonstrate great strength. And we're currently living with the consequences of agreements made when we were living in more affluent times. We're living in a different environment."

"Selectmen must be aware of the town's limited ability to increase funds. Town meeting may want to give raises, but it may not have the ability to fund the raises (override ballot)."

With regard to the advisory committee's public/fire subcommittee, he said the town must become aware of the choices it has.

"Last year the advisory committee met with the fire chief to ask what steps could be taken to reduce costs in that department. He (the chief) did not have a single suggestion. However, there are obvious choices. We have a one-million-dollar fire department, and the costs of running this department are radically higher than towns of similar demographics. This fact alone seems to point to other options."

Additionally, he said the issue of management's ability to determine minimum manning levels in all departments is of premium importance to the advisory committee.

"At town meeting (the fall special) I said I had no problems with police manning. But, I do feel the police and fire chiefs, in concert with the selectmen, should determine minimum manning. At every advisory educational session we attend we are cautioned to remove minimum manning levels from collective bargaining contracts."

Michael is advisory committee liaison to the board of health, landfill, debt service, selectmen, the executive secretary, reserve fund and advisory.

He gives praises to the citizen committee known as S.A.F.E.

"I feel their objectives are laudatory," but he has real doubts that they (S.A.F.E.) can be effective.

"The state statute allows limited control of landfills in an industrial zone. Obviously, the statute exists because towns don't want to have landfills. While a landfill is in the review process, some reasonable limits can be obtained." But he doubts the landfill expansion can be completely stopped.

"S.A.F.E.'s structure article (passed by special town meeting) is a very interesting approach to attempt control, it's an imaginative approach....(but) it's a very close call" with regard to the article getting attorney general approval.

When Michael and Myrna are not solving the town's problems, they go cruising or skiing in Maine, with Zeke.

editorial

Baby Bells . . . Big Brothers in infancy

With more than 450 years of testing, Machiavelli's assertion has been proved: Knowledge is power..

If the basis for knowledge is correct information, than the controllers of information are the supremely powerful.

Last July Federal Judge Harold Greene reluctantly allowed the seven Regional Bell Operating Systems (RBOC), sometimes called the "Baby Bells," into the electronic publishing/information delivery business. Prior to the breakup of AT&T in 1984 (ironically presided over by the same judge), the phone company as a monopoly was barred from entering this field.

The Baby Bells won this hesitant decision despite the fact that they are de facto regional monopolies. There is no local competition and they own the phone lines.

The Mariner Newspapers join with a wide range of dissenting organizations, to call attention to this decision as poorly conceived and logically flawed. The National Newspaper Association, The National Association of Broadcasters, The Consumer Federation of America, The International Communications Association of America, along with many others, have all registered objections to this monopolistic endeavor.

A good analogy to the situation would be the ownership of the Postal Service by one large publishing house. The publisher could ensure that its publications are delivered with priority handling, while the competition's mailings received third-class treatment.

The Baby Bells own the phone lines. To allow them control over the data transmitted as originator, editor and deliverer is Orwellian in its implications.

Let's cite Judge Greene's concerns: "The most probable consequences of...entry by the regional companies into the sensitive information services market will be the elimination of competition from that market and the concentration of the sources of information of the American people in just a few dominant, collaborative conglomerates, with the captive local telephone monopolies as their base."

While this situation definitely has a commercial aspect, the social/political implications are much more frightening. As John Stuart Mill noted, "The free market of ideas," is the only guarantor of truth. To deprive others (either senders or receivers of information), equal access to the conduits (phone lines), is to invite the closing of the free market of ideas and open the door to Big Brother.

The recent cases involving the computer information networks (Prodigy and Compu-Serv), point out the dangers of new technologies moving faster than our ability to control them. In both cases illegal and immoral uses were being made of these services bulletin boards. Here we have two good systems being exploited by uncontrolled miscreants.

All is not lost. The judge provided that the Baby Bells cannot enter this market until all appeals have been heard. These include both Senate and House of Representative bills.

Presently the Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance is considering House Resolution (H.R.) 3515 that provides redress to phone company competitors. Essentially the resolution would prohibit the Baby Bells from starting operations without providing equal access to the phone lines for competitors and the separation of information gathering systems (with safeguards), from the parent delivery systems.

This legislation makes sense. After all, the original intent of the breakup of AT&T was the elimination of monopoly control. It would be unwise and unsafe for our way of life, to de jure allow monopolistic controls over both content and distribution of information.

Bank president clarifies position

To the Editor:

Although we were naturally pleased that Cohasset Savings Bank was back "in the black" for the third quarter this year, and to have this reported in the Nov. 7 issue of the Mariner, we really didn't deserve the good news of your headline which said "Cohasset Savings Bank Pays Dividend".

The fact is that the Bank showed net income of $64,000, or $.06 per share, on its outstanding stock for the quarter ended September 30, 1991, but has not yet resumed payment of a dividend. Quarterly dividend payments to stockholders were suspended last May in the light of the continuing recession and, while we certainly hope that circumstances will warrant resumption of the dividend soon, the directors believe there should be a more sustained evidence of improvement before doing so.

Perhaps either by printing this letter or a correction, you can mollify any stockholder who may be expecting a check.

If you have any questions, please feel free to call me.

Thank you for all past courtesies.

Partnership credited for school help

To the Editor:

Students achieve with the help of the whole community, and the community benefits from a new generation invested with values and skills. At a recent Academic Awards ceremony at Cohasset High School, Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher, School Committee members, and parents honored 74 students who had achieved High Honors (A's) or Honors (B's) for all four terms of the previous academic year. Both Ms. Gallagher and the Committee commended the parents for their commitment to education, for turning off the TV and creating an environment conducive to study.

This partnership extends to the broader community as well. The Chamber of Commerce sponsors school forums, provides career speakers, internships, and jobs, sends care packages to college students. Each year the Rotary funds scholarships. Individual members of each group support sports teams and the arts. Senior citizens support the schools, while third graders enliven their lunches and young students "adopt" a pen pal. The Town Recreation Department, the Community Center and the Art Center organize a wide variety of programs for students. The Town Drug and Alcohol Committee promotes the Safe Homes program and more parents join each year. The Social Service League sponsors timely forums on drug and alcohol abuse and violence towards women.

In Cohasset, we are most fortunate that such a partnership exists, and, as a community, we must do all we can to foster it. The future demands it, and the present is enhanced by it.

Writing lab gains supporters

To the Editor:

On behalf of the PSO and all the people in town who are concerned with the CHS Project Writing Lab and quality education in general, I would like to thank the small businesses in Cohasset who have shown their support for our cause.

Thanks to Verc Mobil, who donated 2¢ per gallon sold for an entire week (raised $505.85) for the writing lab.

Thanks to Hunneman/Coldwell Banker who is running a garage sale Nov. 16 for the writing lab.

Thanks to the entire Chamber of Commerce, whose auction Nov. 16 will benefit the writing lab in a very big way.

Thanks to all the local businesses who donated items for the PSO Monte Carlo auction, which benefits a large curriculum enrichment program in all our schools.

As PSO president, I am encouraged to see the support that small business is giving to our town during these very tough economic times. We are working together to help Cohasset be the best. Living in the Cohasset community, sharing the same aspirations for our children and concern for our neighbors, every person can make a difference. Perhaps during this holiday season we can show our support of one another by making an extra effort to patronize our local businesses. You will save time, save gas and be a good neighbor at the same time!

Kathryn Walsh

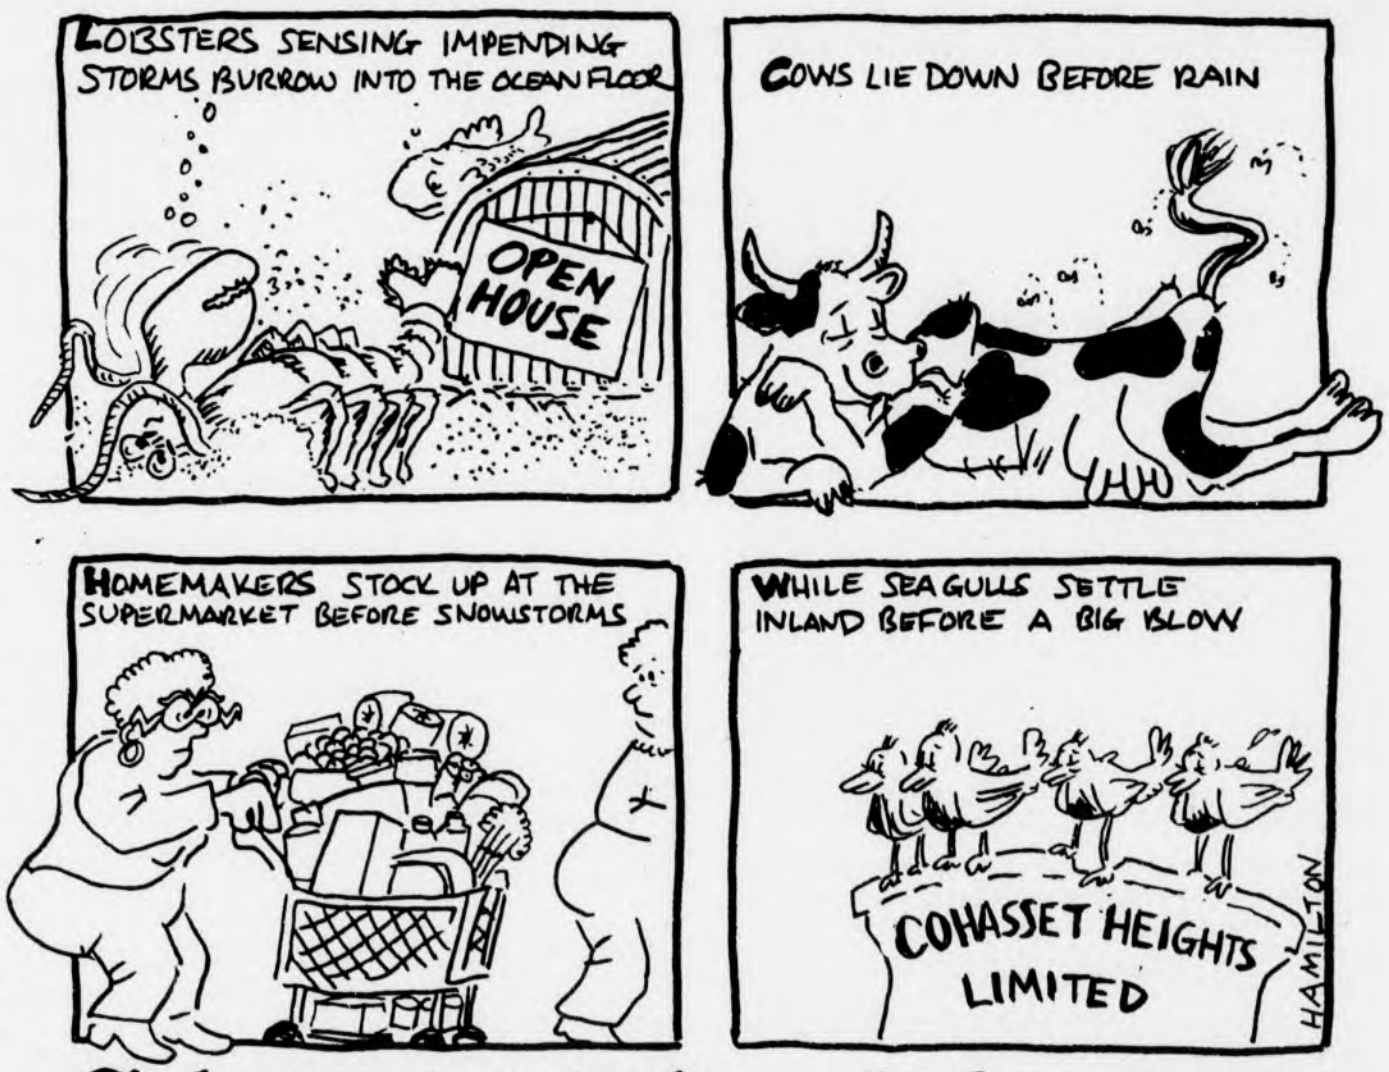
Chamber Chatter

By Paula Knowles
Cohasset Chamber of Commerce

The auction is almost here, which means three things: one, that you won't have to hear or read (or, for me, write) anymore about it after next week; two, that you can finally come down and join us at the free franks 'n beans dinner and have some fun at the auction itself; and three, that the High School Writing Lab is going to get a sizeable donation from the Chamber soon after the auction. How sizeable? Well, that depends on all of you.

The Chamber Board of Directors, at a meeting held last Thursday, voted to donate a percentage of the proceeds from the auction to the Writing Lab. The more we make, the more the Lab makes. It's as simple as that. So I'll leave you with that, for this week. And I'll fill the rest of the column with a few of the items that will be up for bid this Saturday night at the Community Center. Free dinner 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Auction 7:45 p.m. Join us. Some of the items: Children's books, toys, clothes, big wheel and tricycle; gift certificates for breakfasts, lunches and dinners, as well as hair cuts, auto repair, gasoline, cleaning, tailoring, and cable TV; paint, glassware, decorator items, Christmas items, photo albums, and clocks; trips to Newport, Nantucket and the Marriott Long Wharf; ceramics, porcelain, lead crystal and good old-fashioned wood; books on birds, plants, gardens, and cooking, plus the best seller Scarlett; furniture, art, sheet music and posters from the Music Circus.



And some very special items also: an underground tank inspection from Web Engineering; $300 towards a homeowner's policy from Lamb Insurance; $100 worth of tax preparation from Vincent Nardo & Co.; a chimney inspection from August West Chimney Co.; and $100 off on business stationery from Cards & Shards. Over 150 items in all, plus more than 35 door prizes. And Cohasset Music has donated something to go with Ernie Grassey's baseball cards – a life-sized stand-up poster of Wade Boggs at bat. This one you have to see to believe. Wah Lum Kung Fu has donated lessons in Kung Fu and Tai Chi, and Bay State fitness donated a year's membership to their great gym – terrific Christmas presents for your teen or young adult (or mother or father, for that matter).

You can decorate your home, improve your mind, tone up your body, restyle your hair, satisfy your hunger, tempt your palate, and start your Christmas shopping all in one night with us at the auction. Oh, and you can repaint all the woodwork in your house with interior white latex paint from Hancock Paint. Something to keep you busy when the snow arrives.

Now, for the last time (really, I promise!), if you need any further information, call the Chamber at 383-1010, or Keith Knowles at 383-6266, anytime between now and 6 p.m. Saturday night. You may reserve tables by calling the same numbers (although reservations are not mandatory), and yes, Virginia, the dinner really is free.

See you all on the 16th.

A SECOND THOUGHT: Cable ch.3 will carry the auction live, and during the evening we will be announcing the times that some of the service items will be auctioned off. So if you are interested in, say, the tank inspection, but can't spend the whole evening with us, tune in to find out what time you should run down to bid.

Time to bail out of bad decisions

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner political columnist

Town officials have a difficult job.

Last year's voters put them in office.

Next year's voters may send them on their way.

Their warrant is to a future generation of voters - none of whom can vote in the present, which is why the future hangs by a thread.

Before we continue here it must be pointed out that one person's definition of "truly needy" may be another person's middle-class entitlement.

I.e., the Massachusetts Area Planning Council has numerous interesting recommendations for implementing the new National Affordable Housing Act of 1990 for people who are hardly indigent. Accordingly, much of the strategy makes sense for Tinytown.

Participants in the HUD-regulated program would qualify for federal housing and CDBG (Community Development Block Grant) funds.

However, CDBG funds require that a town have a whole set of demographics which the town simply doesn't have, and so a tiny town should involve itself in the program for the good of its own citizens, thereby contributing to regional solutions, but not try to save the world.

The MAPC suggests we: 1) Preserve affordable housing; 2) Protect people from displacement (a biggie for Tinytown); 3) Adapt existing buildings to suit household changes; 4) Produce new housing – (identify public lands – Selectman Martha Gjesteby's suggestion – and "give" it to groups like Habitat).

Number 2, above, is vitally important, because it sounds like it may offer some needed relief to the long-suffering middle class.

What does the middle class do?

It educates its children without grants or loans; it may not give large sums to charity, but more important, it never takes one cent from it. It disciplines its children to stay off the public welfare rolls. It has a high "bounce-back" ability. It may be unemployed, but it is highly probable it will work again and it wants to work again.

I think we agree that the middle class is a valuable, endangered species.

Now. Last week certain town officials held a long-range financial planning meeting and I'll bet they never discussed the disappearing middle class (i.e., the town's ability to pay), the sewer commission's need of the Bates building, or anything else pertinent to long-range planning.

It was reported that school committeeman Ralph Ridder talked about an override, and said something like if unemployment was only 9 percent or whatever it is, then what about the other 91 percent who are not unemployed and why couldn't they pay for an override?

It's not that simple.

First of all, many unemployed people are no longer recorded on the rolls. After a year, they become lost.

Second, many formerly unemployed people may have found jobs, but at a significantly lower salary.

Third. People who are employed are earning less. In the private arena salaries have been cut. Similarly, retail stores may still be in business, but their reported earnings are down.

Everything may look the same, but there are vast economic differences. Every car dealer in the area is in trouble. Every day a Massachusetts bank fails. The job market continues to falter.

Parents of school children are paying major sports user fees; school buildings and fields are in a deplorable condition and new playing fields are needed.

The dump is losing money, yet citizens report seeing many unstickered cars and trucks at the landfill.

No one knows what's happening to ambulance receipts, and/or if selectmen are checking on billings and receipts.

Because of a change in state and federal revenues and regulations, the sewer commissioners have alerted the town fathers to possible major upcoming sewer expenses, and/or a need to expand the present sewer plant to at least accommodate the hillside.

Because of tragic new economic traffic reports, sewer commissioners see a need to protect and preserve their access to the town sewer plant, which they access through the Bates building and its property.

One selectman's reaction was amazing: "It may not be possible to accommodate the sewer commission", she said, reaffirming her desire to "give" the Bates building to Habitat for $1...even if the sewer commissioners need it.

But the sewer commission must be accommodated and the sewer district must be protected. It is a priority. The town has only one sewer plant, one option. Habitat has many options.

To deaf ears, Selectman Gjesteby has continually suggested the town offer unencumbered public land to the Habitat organization, for the purpose of building low income housing.

It is not too late for selectmen to make one correct decision for the town and its future before 1991 concludes.

After two years of denying what the advisory committee and others have known for some time, Selectmen Chairman Ned Tebbetts noted that the town of Cohasset's ratio of firefighters per 10,000 residents is higher than Chelsea's, and/or for any of the 23 cities and towns recently listed in a Boston Globe article.

Advisory Chairman Nan Roth said her calculations show there are 32.87 firefighters for every 10,000 citizens. Tebbetts' figures may be more precise.

"We're the highest, even among smaller (tiny) towns," Tebbetts said.

My friend was at the intersection of Nichols and Jerusalem Road when she was hit by the Atlantic Ocean. Luckily, she managed to get out of her car, which then floated away.

"Why did you abandon your car?" the insurance company asked her, testily.

"Because the water was up to my chest," she said.

My friend thinks she is trapped in an "I Love Lucy" script. I think it was written by Ann Rice.

Water workers praised

To the Editor:

A loud and hearty "Thank you and well done" to the men of the Cohasset Water Department who braved 60-mile-per-hour winds and 20-foot waves breaking over the Jerusalem Road Causeway area while they repaired a broken water main this past Wednesday evening during the storm.

It took a lot of "guts and grit" to withstand these tremendous unleashed forces of nature and it's most reassuring to know that everything was done to bring restoration of water services and the added protection against fire.

Gratefully,
Austin O'Toole

"Ladies First" fund-raiser

The Friends of the Cohasset Council on Aging will present "Ladies First" Sunday, Dec. 8 at 2 p.m. at Cohasset High School, as a fund-raiser to benefit the Council and its programs and services to senior citizens through the Cohasset Senior Center.

In the one-woman show, versatile actress Robin Lane recreates the lives of six of America's first ladies. Dignified Jackie Kennedy, strong-willed Eleanor Roosevelt, compulsive Mary Lincoln, regal Julia Tyler, defiant Rachel Jackson, and, for the first time on the South Shore, Abigail Adams, are equally presented in a unique view of history.

Lane brings her first ladies to life through the use of costumes and props, and a poetically-written script.

A tax deductible donation of $10 per ticket is requested. Tickets are available through the Senior Center, 383-9115, at the performance, or by calling Karin Bartow, 383-0572 or Marge Murphy, 383-6191. Transportation to the show will be available by the Senior Shuttle bus.

Support for spouses

If your spouse is the primary wage-earner, the loss of the job is a crisis for the whole family. How can you be supportive without being intrusive? How do you deal with your own feelings and fears? Are you ready to jump into the work force? What about the children?

Come and meet with others experiencing similar stresses and learn from each other.

Where: Social Service League of Cohasset, St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave., Cohasset

LWV Book Fair

The Little Harbor Bookstore, in Cohasset Village, will host a Book Fair Wednesday, Nov. 20, to benefit the Hingham League of Women Voters.

Store owner, Joan Call is a league member. She has agreed to donate a percentage of book sales that night to the group in its first annual fund-raising event. From 7 to 9 p.m., both league members and the general public are invited to browse, chat and share refreshments. In an informal setting, Call will offer a few words about recent topical publications sure to be of interest. The store's complete inventory of adult and children's books will be included in the fair. Bring your Christmas list for holiday gift ideas.

The Little Harbor Bookstore is located at 39A South Main Street.

For more information, call 749-8432 or the bookstore at 333-2321.

Underground inspection

An underground tank inspection donated by Web Engineering Associates is one of the items up for sale at the 4th Annual Chamber of Commerce Auction, to be held Sat., Nov. 16, at the Community Center.

"Items such as these that are used by a fairly narrow range of businesses are often the best buys of the night," said auction chairman Keith Knowles. "We urge anyone with a need for such services to come down and bid on them. It is not unusual for a high ticket service item to go for half its actual value on the night of the auction," he stated. Some of the other special interest items up for grabs include a complete chimney inspection by August West Chimney Sweeps; $100 of business stationery from Cards & Shards; gift certificates for service and repair at 4 area garages and auto body shops; cut and style packages from area hair salons; passes for the Nantransit Ferry; and travel packages to Nantucket, Newport, and the Long Wharf Marriott. Also available this year will be a selection of children's bikes, books, toys and clothing. For those who would like to bid on an item, but can't make it to the auction, the Chamber has arranged to have the auction televised on cable channel 3, and a limited number of phone bids will be accepted.

"This is our first venture into the world of TV bidding, and we are not quite sure how we will handle it;" said Knowles, "but as long as our viewers have patience and hang in there with us, we are sure that we'll be able to satisfy everyone."

Dinner will be served from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., with the auction to get underway at approximately 7:45 p.m. Admission is free.

Gymnastic Boys Night Out

The Cohasset Community Center will be conducting another Boys Night Out Friday, Nov. 22 from 6 to 8 p.m. Boys ages 5-10 years of age are invited to attend. Cost for the Boys Night Out is $12.

The boys will join in on bowling, obstacle courses, gymnastics and pizza with various prizes for contests. Participation is limited so sign up today to make sure you have a spot. Call the Cohasset Center today at 383-0088. No drop ins.

Alzheimer's research

Psychologist Ginette Lafleche, Ph.D., will speak on "Current Alzheimer's Research and the THA Controversy" on Wednesday, Nov. 20, at 7:30 p.m., at the Hersey House, 229 North Street, Hingham. The program, which is free and open to the public, is sponsored by the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore Inc., Hingham.

Dr. Lafleche is a research fellow in the Department of Psychiatry at Massachusetts General Hospital, Division of Aging, and Harvard Medical School. She received her doctorate in psychology from the University of Ottawa and has been engaged in Alzheimer's research both in Canada and in the United States.

THA has received much attention recently as a drug that has helped some but not all Alzheimer's sufferers. Dr. Lafleche will summarize the findings on THA and assess the progress being made in defining the causes of Alzheimer's disease.

For further information call 749-5417.

Borysenko speaks at JHS

New York Times bestselling author Dr. Joan Borysenko will speak at Hingham Junior High School, 1103 Main Street, Hingham, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 20 at 7 p.m. Borysenko is the author of Minding the Body, Mending the Mind" (Bantam), and "Guilt is the Teacher, Love is the Lesson (Warner Books).

Tickets are available for a $5 donation in person or by mail from the Hingham Visiting Nurse, 10 Downer Avenue, Hingham. The phone number is 749-1160.

A Scituate resident, Borysenko is the co-founder and former director of the Mind/Body Clinic at New England Deaconess Hospital, Boston, and a pioneer of the medical synthesis known as psychoneuroimmunology. She is a licensed clinical psychologist, and president of Mind/Body Health Sciences, Inc., a consulting company to individuals, organizations and hospitals.

Borysenko will speak on the mind/body connection and the effects of stress on the body's immune system. She will offer suggestions and techniques for inducing the "relaxation response," and will discuss meditation, living with pain and serious illness, and coping with the stresses and strains of everyday life.

Borysenko's lecture will be funded in part by the Hingham Visiting Nurse Memorial Fund. HVNA Executive Director, Tish Clark, said, "The Hingham Visiting Nurse has received many generous donations in memory of former patients and loved ones who have died. We wanted to be able to use some of these funds to offer an evening lecture to the general public that would be interesting and informative. Dr. Borysenko is a fascinating speaker with a good message. We're hoping to have a big turnout for her talk on Nov. 20."

The Hingham Visiting Nurse is an independent community-based non-profit organization serving the home health care needs of the people of Hingham, Hull, and surrounding South Shore towns.

Established in 1920, the Hingham Visiting Nurse provides skilled nursing care, physical, occupational, and speech therapists, homemakers, home health aides, nutritional counseling, medical social workers, respite care, durable medical equipment, maternal and child health care, community education programs, the New Friends program, regular cholesterol screenings, and the services of their new oncology team. They also offer a Continuing Education program for nurses, social workers, health care workers, and interested members of the general public.

The services are covered by Blue Cross, HMOs, private health insurance companies, Medicare, Medicaid, and other third party payors. Patients may also pay for services themselves, but it has long been the tradition of the Hingham Visiting Nurse to care for those in need, regardless of their ability to pay.

The agency is subsidized by donations from more than a thousand individuals, organizations and businesses on the South Shore. Donations are tax deductible and are gratefully accepted at any time.

Phantom tickets available

The recreation department is accepting reservations for tickets to the Wednesday, Aug. 12, 1992 performance of "Phantom of the Opera." The fee for this event is $45 per person and includes bus transportation to/from the Wang Center, and Front Balcony tickets for the performance.

This opportunity is provided via cooperation between the Towns of Scituate and Cohasset Recreation Departments. Sales for the 'Phantom' are available now, as tickets make an ideal Christmas gift and commitments must be confirmed early in order to secure Front Balcony Seating. The bus for this trip will leave from Scituate Town Hall at 6:15 p.m., Wednesday, Aug. 12, 1992.

Boosters Basketball

Anyone in grades one to nine, not yet registered for Recreation/Boosters Basketball, wanting to play, should contact the recreation office immediately. Evaluations will be held on Saturday, Nov. 16, and teams will be formed.

Ski lessons

Blue Hills Ski Lesson registration will be held at the recreation department's office, on Thursday, Nov. 21 from 2:30 to 4 p.m. and again that evening from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. The fee for the five weeks of lessons, meeting each Thursday, and transportation is $75 per child. Rental of equipment is available and costs $40 for the five lessons. Ski lessons are for all ability levels and open to children and youth aged seven and over.

Before you replace your storm damaged carpet, read on...

Q What if my carpet gets flooded:

A When carpet must be restored as a result of rising waters, a backed-up sewer line or some other disaster where, for hygienic reasons, it is necessary to apply a biocide, bactericide, fungicide or some other material to prevent growth of micro-organism; THE STAIN WARRANTY IS VOIDED.

Where a pipe has burst, washing machine overflow or flooding from some other clean water source, it is necessary only to dry the carpet BOTH FRONT AND BACK by a professional cleaner with the proper equipment. Cleaning the carpet after it has dried may be advisable if detergent was involved but this procedure WILL NOT void the stain warranty, provided it is attended to immediately. It may, however, void the wear warranty if delamination results.

Is God OBSOLETE?

"Have we outgrown the desire to know God?"

Certainly, we have outgrown the desire for blind faith, but what about a living Christianity that regenerates and heals on the basis of understanding.

Clam flats closing explored

The health and history of South Shore clam flats will be the topic of "Crisis in the Clam Flats, Crisis on our Shores," an evening of presentation and discussion, Thursday, Nov. 14, 7:30 - 8:45 p.m. Held at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell, the program is free to the public.

Sponsored by The Massachusetts Bay Marine Studies Consortium, North and South Rivers Watershed Association, and the South Shore Natural Science Center, the evening will feature discussions of the health of clams in the area, the history and pre-history of shellfishing on the South Shore, and affordable solutions that towns can implement to reopen shellfishing flats to citizens.

"This forum addresses an issue that is of great importance to citizens of the coastal South Shore," said Barbara Easterday, Executive Director of the South Shore Natural Science Center. "These shellfish beds, which in the past attracted hundreds of recreational clammers a year, will remain closed this season due to excessive pollution. We must do all that we can now or risk losing this recreational treasure forever."

Presenters at the forum are: Mary Sue Potts, Ph.D. candidate, University of New Hampshire, specializing in shellfish biology. Potts will focus on the diseases of shellfish caused by toxins and hazardous waste in the area.

Anthropologist Barbara Luedtke, Ph.D., University of Massachusetts, Boston, an expert on the prehistoric and Native American use of shellfish, will discuss the South Shore's abundance of shellfish and its central role in the lives of local people for millennia.

Dolly Snow Bicknell, daughter of the late Marshfield author/historian Edward Rowe Snow, will share her experiences through photos and memorabilia of life on the clam flats with her father, who spent countless hours clamming on the South Shore coast.

Massachusetts Division of Marine Fisheries scientist Wayne Castonguay will discuss DMF regulations and propose some affordable solutions to improve the South Shore coastal environment. Castonguay will also discuss his experience as a member of the Town of Ipswich Shellfish Advisory Board and the similar experience of shellfishery closures on the North Shore.

Damon Reed, President of the North and South Rivers Watershed Association, will serve as moderator.

A related program for children ages 3 through 12 will be held during the forum. There is no charge for either the adult or children's program; however, children must be preregistered by calling (617) 659-2559.

The Nov. 14 forum is the first community outreach program of "The Mass Bay Classroom," planned by The Massachusetts Bay Marine Studies Consortium, a non-profit association of colleges, universities and marine research centers. The Mass Bay Classroom is designed to increase awareness of marine environmental issues facing local communities and is funded by the M.I.T. Sea Grant Program and the Alice Willard Dorr Foundation.

South Shore Natural Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, off Rt. 123, one mile from the Route 3/Route 53 interchange (Exit 13). Please call the Science Center at (617) 659-2559 for more information.

Nursing home residents get night out

letters

To the Editor:

On Oct.29, residents of Ripley Road Nursing Home of Cohasset enjoyed an evening out at the "Harvest Moon Ball" held at the V.F.W. Hall in Quincy. A total of nine residents attended and they were: Amy Bates, Irene Doyle, Catherine Gavin, Isabel Gleason, Theresa Guyette, Isabelle Magnussen, Vera McMonagle, Sarah Nelson and Priscilla Thompson.

The ball was held from 3 to 7 p.m. with live entertainment and a catered meal. The ladies enjoyed the music and dancing, especially when they were asked by the servicemen from the Weymouth naval base, who volunteered their time. About 20 or so other nursing homes attended from the Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth areas, so it was a full house.

I would like to extend a grateful thank you to Herb Gleason for accompanying his wife, my mother Marge Murphy, and Catherine Migliaccio for their help and presence. I would also like to thank staff members Jennifer Young, Elizabeth O'Brien, Anna Lucia, and Mrs. Harrold, our administrator, for all their help and support. The night was a great success, a lot of fun and was enjoyed by all.

Rotary scholarship applications available

Applications for the 1992-1993 Rotary Foundation Ambassadorial Scholarships to be awarded worldwide are now available from the local Rotary Club.

The scholarships, which are designed to further international understanding and good will, provide for one academic year's study abroad in one of the 172 countries and geographical regions where Rotary clubs are located.

More than 1,300 scholarships will be available worldwide. The value of the scholarship varies, but can be worth as much as $18,000, plus travel expenses.

Rotary International District 7950 is offering scholarships for graduates. Applicants for graduate scholarships must be between the ages of 18 and 30. In addition, one scholar will be chosen for a 21-month program of language training and academic study in Japan.

Scholars receive round-trip transportation and funding of up to $18,000 or its equivalent for tuition and fees, room, board, necessary educational supplies, limited educational travel and contingence expenses.

During their studies abroad, Rotary Foundation Ambassadorial Scholars act as "ambassadors of good will." Through appearances before Rotary clubs and districts, schools, civic organizations, and other forums, the scholars represent their homelands through international "Service Above Self."

Interested persons should contact the local Rotary club for application materials and deadline information. No clubs may accept completed applications after June 15, 1992.

Community Garden Club news

Mrs. John J. Hickey, president of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, was a speaker at the recent Presidents' Conference of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts which was held at the Marriott Hotel, Burlington, Oct. 31.

Mrs. Hickey spoke on the many award-winning Civic Development Projects in which the garden club is involved and the fund-raising to support them. These projects include: landscaping and maintenance of the Cohasset Community Center; the Cohasset High School Courtyard; Constitution Park; the Nature Study Trails adjoining Osgood and Deerfield Schools; and the Lothrop House. The club also awarded $4,500 in scholarships to members of the 1991 high school graduating class.

Mrs. Hickey also spoke about the plans for the Christmas House Tour, "Holiday Images of Cohasset", which is to be held on Thursday, Dec. 5, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tickets may be purchased from Peg Smart 383-6438 or Judy Volungus at the Community Center. Donations are $15.

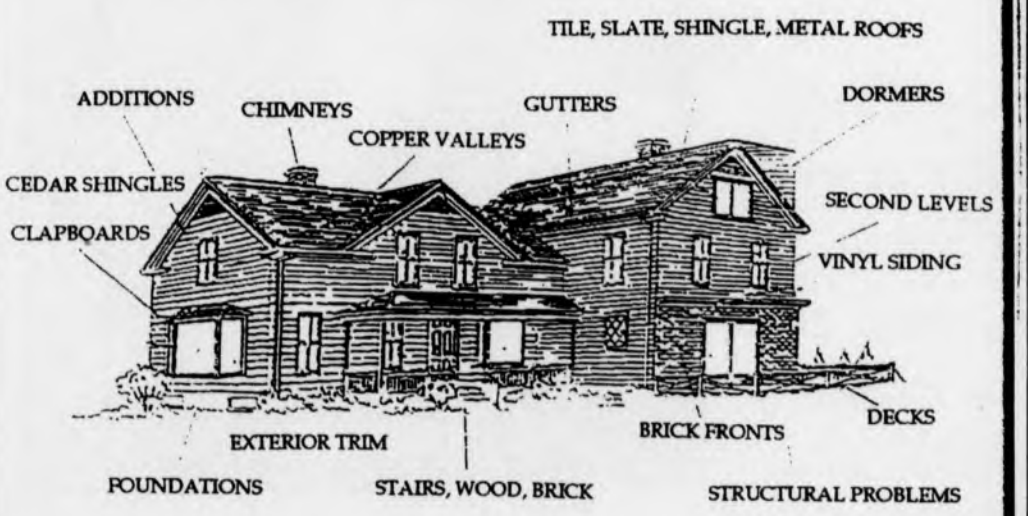
An added feature this year is that the carrillion will be playing Christmas carols on the day of the tour.

Amateur gardeners of Cohasset

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet Tuesday, Nov. 19 at 1 p.m. at the home of Rita Drake with Ginni Nast assisting as co-hostess.

Members will participate in the program - "Recycled Vases/Arrangements."

Company Theatre opens with 'Oliver'



The Company Theatre is entering into its thirteenth season with a bang. Directors Zoe Bradford and Jordie Saucerman were recently informed that they have won New England Theatre Conference's award for Best Community Theatre in New England for the second consecutive year for the Boston tour of "Into the Woods." The group was also chosen to be the featured talent in a national commercial for Pizzeria Uno. In exchange for a donation to The Company, 40 members of casts past and present had roles as waiters, waitresses, bartender, customers and extras. The spot will air sometime soon. Meanwhile rehearsals and set building are ongoing at their new production house in Rockland for the November production of "Oliver!"

"Oliver!" features 50 actors from Boston and the South Shore. The title role will be played by 8-year-old C.S. Marshall of Hingham. Other leading roles in the production are Todd Merritt as The Artful Dodger, Christopher Hagberg of Dorchester as Fagin, Kerry Dowling of Quincy as Nancy and Doug Marsden of Quincy as Bill Sikes. The production will be musically directed by Michael Joseph of Weymouth and choreographed by Sally Ashton-Forrest of Weymouth.

Performances are at Rockland High School on Nov. 22 and 23 at 8 p.m., Nov. 24 at 2 p.m., Nov. 29 at 8 p.m., Nov. 30 at 2 and 8 p.m. and Dec. 1 at 7 p.m. Tickets are $10 in advance, $8 for groups of 10 or more or $12 at the door. For information on how you can raise money for your organization through selling tickets, call our ticket information line at 337-1423.

One week later, still no Magic

By Mike Hardman
Mariner staff

A week ago, we learned that AIDS doesn't believe in hero worship.

If the disease knew boundaries, there's no way Los Angeles Laker Earvin "Magic" Johnson would have been stricken by this dreaded disease.

Magic has the AIDS virus.

We've had seven days now to get used to it. Seven days of listening to the news reports or reading the columns in the newspapers. We've heard from Magic's friends and family and even Magic in a dramatic news conference and on the Arsenio Hall Show Friday night.

He said to keep believing in him and how he is going to live with the disease to make sure his message gets out so others don't get inflicted by AIDS.

Magic has told us that he contracted the disease through heterosexual sex. Many of us believed that only homosexuals contracted the AIDS virus. We couldn't have been more wrong. This killer doesn't pick and choose who it is going to make suffer. It's a plague and some reports have it wiping out as much as five percent of the world's population. People die from the complications every day through a variety of ways. But there's one thing common in all the deaths. AIDS punishes those that it inflicts for long periods of time. Anyone who has watched a person die from AIDS can tell you the pain the AIDS patients suffer.

We're in the midst of a plague that threats our existence.

We know it has invaded the body of a person who was respected from coast to coast for his basketball ability and his personality. Magic Johnson is a throwback to when our heroes stepped out of a comic book and onto our athletic fields.

Our grandfathers had Lou Gehrig and Red Grange to admire and to strive to be like. Our fathers had Joe DiMaggio, Tom Harmon and Joe Louis. We had Magic Johnson, the basketball player, up until a week ago when AIDS took him out of the game.

We will no longer admire his athletic ability, those pin-point passes and clutch plays to pull out wins for the Lakers. Even though he was a villain to our beloved Celtics, there was still plenty of room to cheer for Magic. We praised him. If the Celtics couldn't win, then it was okay for Magic to be on the winning side. He would have made a great Celtic, even though his playing style was pure Hollywood.

It would have been easy to stand up in the Boston Garden and cheer on Magic in a green uniform. With his personality, Magic would have owned Boston. And with his business sense, there would have been Magic stories on every street corner.

Magic, the basketball player, gave us a role model for both black and white future hope-to-be professionals. We would be just like Magic, a success on the basketball court and rich in the board room. We would have been smart in basketball and in business.

But we wouldn't have gotten AIDS.

The dream of being Magic, the basketball player, ended a week ago. Now, he's Earvin Johnson, another AIDS patient.

But like we listened to Magic, the basketball player, we have to now listen to Earvin Johnson, the AIDS patient.

He's already told us to be careful.

"Use your thinking cap up here," said Earvin Johnson on the Arsenio Hall Show, while pointing to his head, "and use your cap down there," pointing below his waist.

In the coming weeks, Earvin Johnson wants to tell us more about AIDS and what we can do to fight this dreaded disease.

Hopefully, we'll listen to him. Magic Johnson got our attention on the basketball court and now we have to give Earvin Johnson our attention in a different court, one where loss and victories really matter.

Lecture on folk art

The South Shore Art Center has scheduled a lecture on folk art at the 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset, facility.

"Folk Art Today" will be the topic of the Nov. 21 lecture given by Cohasset artist Jeanne Replogle. Replogle will curate the center's folk art exhibit Nov. 15 through Dec. 21. She is also featured in the current issue of Colonial Homes, entitled "Christmas in Cohasset."

The lecture will begin at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $6 for members, $8 for non-members. For more information, call 383-9548.

Conservation memo to all along the coast

"Although the recent coastal storm spared Cohasset to a much greater degree than some neighboring towns, many properties in town were affected, from the deposit of rocks, sand and other storm-related debris upon property to the destruction of porches and decks," the conservation commission said recently in a letter to property owners.

"You may have read in the Nov. 3 edition of the Boston Sunday Globe that the State Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) has issued emergency regulations and guidelines for repair work required as a result of this storm. We wish to bring these provisions to your attention so that any work you need to undertake is handled in the proper manner," according to Merle Brown, conservation chairman.

"The following is a summary of the Emergency DEP regulations. Each case of damage and subsequent repair is unique and different portions of the regulations may apply. Copies of these regulations are available for review in the Conservation Commission office and the selectmen's office at Town Hall. Additionally, the commission can discuss these requirements with anyone who is unsure of the proper course of action.

• Any property that was damaged by flood waters is within the jurisdiction of DEP and the Conservation Commission under these emergency rules. (This does not change existing jurisdiction.)

• In general, clean-up and repair of damage amounting to less than 50 percent of pre-storm property value, requires no formal filing with the commission or DEP. However, written notice must be given to the commission and the regional office of DEP before any work is begun. Additionally, this written notice must be received by the commission by Nov. 30, 1991 and the repair work must be completed before Jan. 1, 1992. The notification must describe in detail the work that is to be performed and must confirm that the work is limited to that necessary to restore conditions existing on Oct. 29, 1991. Please note that these rules only cover repair work necessitated by damage caused by the coastal storm of Oct. 30 through Nov. 1. Damage caused by Hurricane Bob, any new work or modifications not in existence before the storm must go through normal commission procedures prior to beginning work.

In some cases the commission may determine that the repair would require alteration of a resource area. In those cases, a formal filing of a Request for Determination of Applicability or a Notice of Intent will be required.

• Where property damage exceeds 50 percent of pre-storm value OR if damage to a septic system or water supply is involved, the owner can take temporary measures to prevent further loss, but cannot rebuild or repair without obtaining an Emergency Certification from the Commission. The Board of Health will also need to be notified for septic system and water supply repairs. Emergency certificates must be issued by Dec. 31, 1991 and work completed by Feb. 29, 1992 or normal procedures will apply.

• If property damage exceeds 50 percent of pre-storm value and the intent is to completely rebuild, the commission shall have the case-by-case discretion to allow work to proceed under emergency certification or normal approval procedures.

"In summary, for anything that you plan to do, please let the commission know immediately. All of our members are available to explain the state's emergency regulations and to work with you in getting things back to normal as quickly as possible."

Remember the four important dates:

Nov. 30, 1991: Notification to the Commission and DEP for clean-up and repair (Item 2 above)

Dec. 31, 1991: Clean-up and repair work must be completed

Dec. 31, 1991: Last day to issue Emergency Certifications (Item 3 above)

Feb. 29, 1992: Work performed under emergency certification must be completed

National magazine gives South Shore Art Center space

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

A folk art exhibit mentioned in Colonial Homes, a national magazine with a focused market, opens this weekend at the art center.

The exhbit is one of two local events cashing in on the publicity Cohasset received in the holiday issue. Both events got a mention in the magazine.

South Shore Art Center at 119 Ripley Road put together the special exhibit using a folk art theme. Two of the women whose homes were splashed over the 22-page tribute to a colonial fishing village are among the artists participating.

Jeanne Replogle is curating the art center's exhibit which runs from Thursday, Nov. 14, through Dec. 21.

Replogle will be displaying some of her artistically painted furniture as part of the art center exhibit.

One of the paintings to be displayed at the art center is Replogle's "Christmas at Sugar Bush Farm." The scene in Replogle's primitive style shows an old-fashioned winter scene with a snowman, skaters and bedecked buildings. Jeanne and her husband, David, are sitting on a bench watching the skaters.

Replogle hasn't always been a folk artist. She was a fine arts major at Northwestern University who concentrated on serious and realistic art for years.

While there was a photo of the Replogle's Rice Island home and two of the artist at work inside her home, most of the space on the four photo pages entitled "Fanciful folk art" concentrated on the art work itself.

A good choice. The work is bright and cheerful. It demands attention from anyone serious about artistry.

Suzanne Moyer, whose home attracted four pages of attention in Colonial Homes, will also be displaying her folk art paintings. The Moyer home is a 1727 colonial farmhouse decorated today with Suzanne's ecletic style. She works as an interior designer.

Other artists whose paintings will be shown are: Bobbi Coletti of Hingham, whose baskets are well-known; Linda Cuff of Scituate; Carol Martin of Cohasset; Marcie Hanlon of Duxbury; Richard Telford of Plymouth and Marie Fox of Cambridge.

Furniture on display is by Replogle, Hanlon as well as: Betsey Borden of Duxbury and John Young of Kingston.

Joy Ladd Guy will exhibit baskets.

Ray Freden of Marshfield will show carved and painted birds.

Art carvings by Timothy Jumper of Hingham and folk art sculpture by Katie Flynn Randall of Duxbury will round out the show.

The other event, mentioned in the article on Cohasset, is the bi-annual house tour sponsored by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset. This year the tour — which is an art show in itself — is scheduled for 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Dec. 5.

Food displayed on the pages of the glossy magazine were created by Garden Club members to add to the spirit of the season.

Incidentally, the local shoot happened last February.

Joan Nolan appointed development director

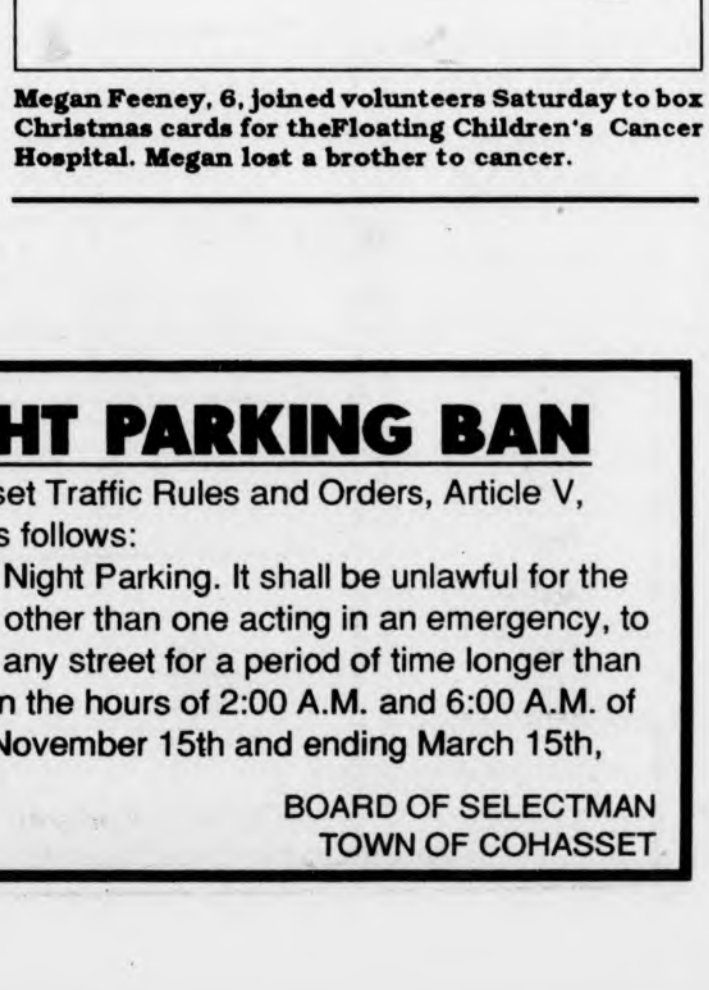
John A. Pistel, Headmaster of Derby Academy, has appointed Joan M. Nolan, Ph.D., of Duxbury, as Development Director of the Hingham school.

A graduate of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Ms. Nolan earned a Master of Education at Syracuse University, and a Ph.D in Educational Research from Boston College.

A former elementary school teacher, Nolan has been Development Associate at John Jay College of Criminal Justice, research evaluation consultant, and from 1986 until the present, has been Annual Fund Director at the New England Medical Center. A member of the National Association for Hospital Development, she also serves on the Executive Board of Directors of the New England Association for Hospital Development.

In her new role at Derby, Nolan will oversee the public relations and support activities of the Academy's Development Office.

Women's Expo Nov. 17



The General Federation of Women's Clubs of Massachusetts - EVENING DIVISION MEMBERSHIP - presents Women's Expo 1991. The Expo is being held on Sunday, Nov. 17, at the Sons of Italy Hall, 81 Market Street (Rte. 139) Rockland, from 1 to 5 p.m.

This day long event will offer something for everyone - Crafts, Aerobics Demonstration, Health & Nutrition Information, Live Entertainment, Door Prizes and will feature a Fashion Show of Custom Designed Clothes.

The $12 donation will benefit the Kennedy-Donovan Centers for Handicapped Children. It is open to the public, the hall is wheelchair accessible and the tickets will be available at the door or in advance. Evening Division Membership is comprised of Women's Clubs throughout the state of Massachusetts. They are united by a dedication to community improvement through volunteer service.

Collectively, the clubs have supported projects for the benefit of the Kennedy-Donovan Centers for the past 10 years.

ALL NIGHT PARKING BAN

The Town of Cohasset Traffic Rules and Orders, Article V, Section 7, provide as follows:

"SECTION 7. No All Night Parking. It shall be unlawful for the driver of any vehicle other than one acting in an emergency, to park said vehicle on any street for a period of time longer than one (1) hour between the hours of 2:00 A.M. and 6:00 A.M. of any day, beginning November 15th and ending March 15th, inclusive.

BOARD OF SELECTMAN
TOWN OF COHASSET

Jon Bryan takes to the street to limit terms

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Jon Bryan — the Congressional challenger — is heading up a petition referendum to limit anyone's ability to serve from this state in the Congress.

The kicker is: the limitation won't touch any office holder until 2002.

So if Bryan does manage to oust U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Cohasset, he might find his term in Washington, D.C., limited by the proposal.

The idea doesn't worry Bryan. He said he thinks there should be political turnover.

The concept calls for a two-term limit for the governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general, auditor. Those terms run for four years.

It calls for four-term limit on state legislators and governor's councillors. Those terms are two years.

It calls for U.S. senators to be limited to two six-year terms and U.S. representatives to be limited to four two-year terms.

Last week he blitzed the South Shore area, collecting signatures for the Limits petition drive. On Friday, the Cape Cod Republican stood in from of the Cohasset Post Office and talked about the drive while another worker in the effort sought signatures from anyone going after their mail.

"We've had good success," Bryan said referring to the number of signatures collected to date.

The group needs 70,286 signatures of registered voters by Nov. 20, the date the names must be filed with local town and city clerks for certification.

To get the question on the ballot, the issue must be raised and Constitutional Conventions in June and again in 1993. And at those conventions, the idea must win at least 25 percent of the vote to reach the state-wide ballot in 1994.

"We are finding that three-quarters of the people will sign," Bryan said. "Sometimes that goes as high as nine out of ten." He added that until the certification process begins, the group doesn't know whether all the signatures will stand up. The are shooting for a much higher number than the 70,000.

"President Bush called the Congress America's royalty," Bryan said. "And that's what it's become. What we need is a citizen legislature."

In the past Studds also talked about term limitation. The last time he was on record favoring the idea was in 1980, according to Bryan.

When Studds ran for office the first time, he talked about 12 years being enough. His position has changed. The term limitation petition would prevent an office holder remaining in government for more than two consecutive terms. But it would not be retroactive and so if the voters in 1994 passed the amendement, office holders would have the ability to continue in their position for another eight years.

Aside from his stop in Cohasset, Bryan spent time collecting signatures in Kingston, Marshfield, Hingham and Hull last week. This week he is planning more collection work in Norwell, Hanover and other local communities.

There are 40,000 copies of the petition being circulated at this time. The organizing group expects a third of the names will be struck as unreadable or incorrect. Signatures must be exact duplications of voting records.

Call 1 (800) 34-CHANGE or (508) 752-0720 for more information about the drive.

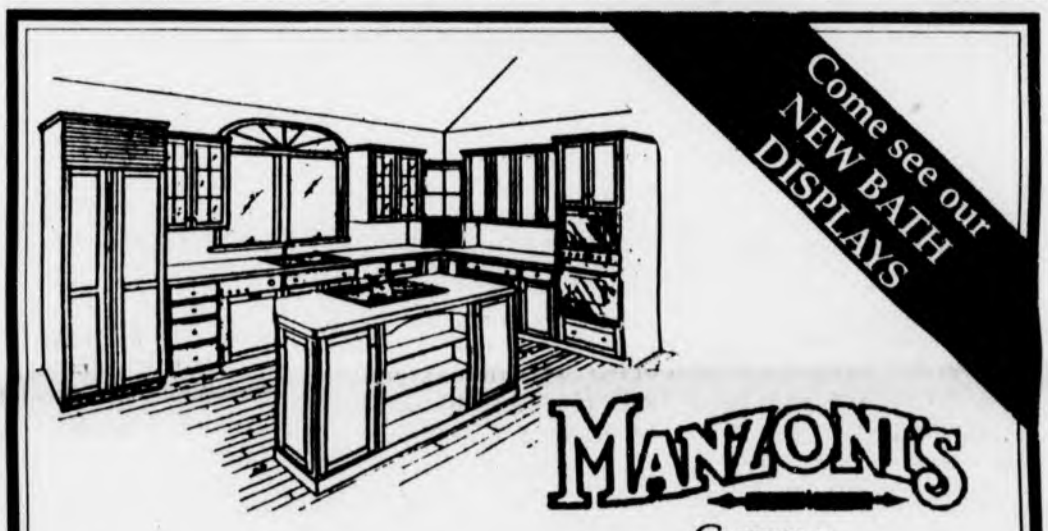
Police candidates interviewed

Seven police candidates were interviewed by selectmen Tuesday. The group of laid off police officers from Brockton and Middleboro are tied in a dead heat for the one opening on the town's police force.

The position begins Jan. 1 but the selectmen's decision will be announced in the next two weeks.

All candidates have four years police experience.

The candidates are: Peter J. Andrade of Middleboro; Michael V. Damiano of Brockton; Steven H. Pierce of Brockton; Andrew H. Cesarini of Brockton; John W. Crowley of Brockton; Thomas O. DaSilva of Hingham and Steven M. Loud of Brockton.



Six were on the Brockton force from 1987 until 31 officers were laid off last April. Andrade was laid off by Middleboro police.

Andrade lives outside the 15-mile limit and would be required to move if hired. The rest would not need to relocate, according to state law.

The law gives a police officer six months to move. Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he does not think six months is enough time to sell a home.

Re-capping the storm with no name

While regulations slow any action

Storm damage creates interest in home moving

By Lisa B. Eigner
Mariner staff

Post-storm clean-up isn't easy for anyone, least of all homeowners going through it for the first time, said Don Gordon, owner of the Hingham-based building moving and shoring company James J. Gordon Inc.

Although his company hasn't seen much action yet, Gordon has already received at least 50 phone calls from homeowners hit hard by the storm.

When a home is blown off its foundation or sustained any type of major structural damage, it is Gordon's third-generation business that's called in first.

Unable to start working on homes until permits are issued by town officials, Gordon is waiting for property owners to get the okay from the building inspector and conservation commission.

"To put a home back in service, the homeowner has to follow a certain procedure," said Gordon.

"Even people wanting to do simple clean-up to their homes have to let a conservation agent look at it first."

According to Gordon, the smart people are those who got right into their yards the day after the storm and cleaned up.

"The longer people wait to clean-up debris and do structural repair work, stricter regulations are going to become," said Gordon.

"Before rebuilding, a structural engineer's survey plan must be filed with the building inspector, meeting all town codes and building bylaws," said Gordon.

Right now the regulations are relatively loose, but after Dec. 31 they will tighten up, said Gordon.

After Dec. 31, the state has ruled that emergency repairs must be complete. Daniel Greenbaum, commissioner of the Department of Environmental Protection issued special regulations in the aftermath of the storm.

Because the damage sustained by each building is different, each case must go before the building inspector and the conservation commission to receive the go-ahead to do repairs.

Since Gordon's company has yet to receive permits authorizing repair work, his company has not accepted any jobs.

"People have to be educated on the procedures required by the conservation commission," said Gordon.

"There are some people who've gone through this process before, so they know what to expect, and there are others who are as green as grass who think that their house can be pulled up right away."

Insurance companies aren't giving homeowners enough compensation to allow people to improve their homes and avoid getting hit hard again, said Gordon.

"It's a lose, lose, lose deal," said Gordon, who sees a bad economy forcing people to live in their summer waterfront homes year-round.

"People are converting their summer homes into a permanent residence and they're getting slammed at times like these," he said.

Before rebuilding can begin homeowners must have the proper permits, said Gordon, who predicts a flood of work for his company once permits are issued.

Many houses were badly damaged in the storm Oct. 30, like this Scituate building that now needs repair. (Andrew MacLellan photo)

Lydia Long autographs her latest book

L.L. Blackmur signed copies of her latest book — a mystery — at Buttonwood Books and Toys last weekend.

The author is actually Lydia Long, who once worked for the Mariner Newspapers. Long still uses her maiden name but she said she's saving it for something she may write outside of the field of mysteries.

Long's new book is the "Circle of Mynnia", published by St. Martin's.

It is her second book. The first, "Love Lies Slain", another mystery, was published two years ago.

Long and her husband, who is also a writer, live in Thompson, Conn., with their 16-month-old daughter, Leland.

Long has worked at The New York Times as well as working as a free lance magazine writer in the past 10 years. She spent about five years living in California.

She describes her first book as an old-style mystery. The new book is something she considers more of a spoof of the genre.

Incidentally Blackmur is not the author's married name. It's her mother's mother's maiden name.

"There were Blackmurs around Cohasset for a long time," she said in between signing copies of her book. She said she opted to use her initials rather than her first name to keep readers guessing about her gender.

"But they ran a picture of me in the jacket of the first book," Long said.

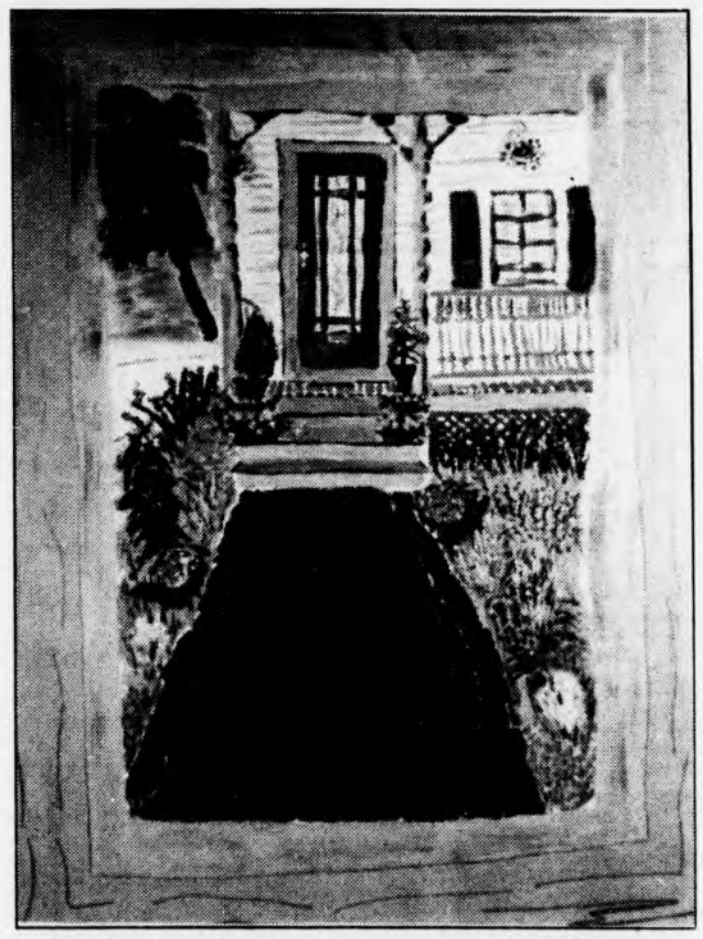
Adult workshops at art center

To some, November is a cold month but to the South Shore Art Center, November is another month in which to be creative. And, while students are developing and polishing their skills in Saturday workshops, they can also be creating some holiday gifts.

"Creating with Fimo" is offered to adults Saturday afternoons from 12 to 3 p.m. Nov. 16. Taught by Judy Rossman, this course shows adults (teenagers included) how to create unique jewelry with the colorful polymer fimo.



"Making Glazes and Slips" is offered to adults Saturday, Nov. 23 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. George Dalton will instruct students on measuring, mixing, and blending various chemical compounds to make an assortment of glossy, matte, and transparent high-fire glazes.

To register for these workshops which are held at 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset, or inquire about the upcoming winter term, please call 383-9548.

Give the gift of creativity

The South Shore Art Center offers five opportunities this November and December with its Young Artist Holiday Workshops.

"Holiday Treasures" lets pre-k and kindergarten students explore a variety of media with which to make a gingerbread house and other seasonal gifts and decorations. Festive cards and calendars are created by first through third graders in the "Cards and Calendars" workshop. Both are offered Nov. 19 through Dec. 10 from 4 to 5:30 p.m.

Art at the South Shore Art Center by Colleen Lucas.

Fourth through sixth graders learn the customs of other countries as they create ethnic treasures to keep or give as gifts in "Holiday Crafts from Norway, Mexico and Poland," offered Nov. 20 and Dec. 4 and 11 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. "Clay Nativity Scenes" allows first through third graders to create and fire clay nativities that can become a special Christmas treasure to enjoy year after year. This is offered Nov. 21, Dec. 5 and 12 from 4 to 5:30 p.m.

And what's a holiday without cookies? Edible art is what first through fifth graders create in the "Holiday Cookies" workshop Dec. 13 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. To register for the workshops, which are held at 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset, call 383-9548.

Power rowers from CHS

Nine Cohasset High School students rowed the "John Warren II" to victory and a race record in the Oct. 26 Weir River Row. Cohasset set a new course record in the Surfboat Class by completing the 5.2 mile race in 63:36 minutes. They finished 19:13 ahead of their competition.

The power rowers included Jason Curtin, Mike Equi, Celia Candia, Doug Schultz, Jason DeMoulen, Adam McNamara, John Kiesel, John Maciel, and Erin McAllister, as coxswain.

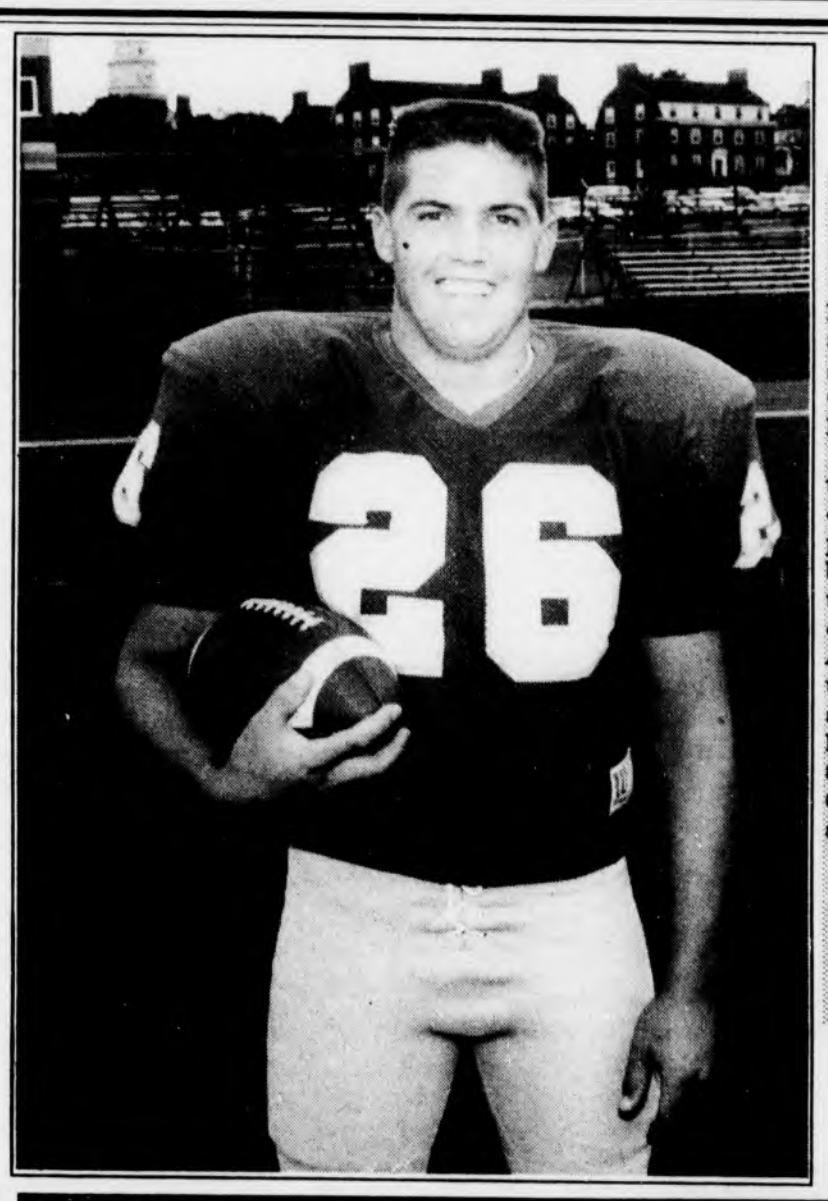
Also from Cohasset, Jack Hubbard finished the course in 49:49 in the Sliding-Seat Shell category.

A popular New England rowing event sponsored by the Hull Life Saving Museum, this year's competition consisted of 28 boats and 92 rowers.

The "John Warren II," restored last year by Alternative School students, is on permanent loan to Cohasset High School from the Museum. The rowing program is an integral part of the Alternative School group curriculum, and other students participate as well.

Cheerleading tryouts

The Cohasset High School cheerleading tryouts for basketball will be conducted Wednesday, Nov. 20 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.



Girls in 7th to 12th grade are invited to try out for the Varsity Squad. Cheerleaders will be posted on Thursday in the lobby of the high school.

It could be possible that a Junior Varsity Squad may be added.

For more information about cheering, call Ruthann Sargent at 545-3058 or get in touch with Captains Lisa Kondrat, Rebecca Hackenburg or Heather Brennock.

High School Varsity Gymnastic tryouts

Varsity Gymnastic tryouts will be held Monday Dec. 2 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Any students in grade 7 through grade 12 are eligible to try out. The Varsity Squad will be posted on Tuesday Dec. 3 in the upper lobby. For more information call Ruthann Sargent at 545-3058.

Peter Sandblom, a senior at Colby College in Maine, is on the 1991 football team at the college. He plays defensive back on the team which is coached by Tom Austin. Peter is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sandblom of Cohasset. He is a history major.

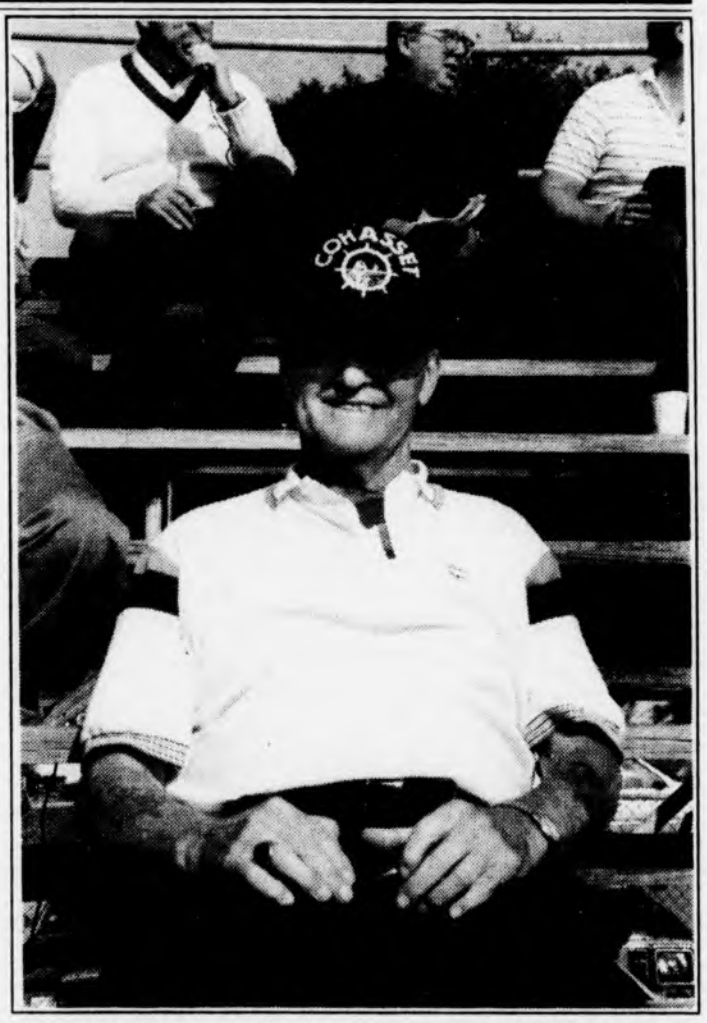
Swimmers makes successful return

The Swogjan Synchronized Master Team of Norwell recently returned from Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, where they competed in the 1991 U.S. Masters National Championship. The following is the results of the group.

In the Masters 25-29 Age Group Figures, Katharine Turner came in 9th with a score of 28.017, Michelle Bouche came in 11th with a score of 26.639, and Jodi Rennert came in 12th with a score of 26.535. In the Masters 30-34 Age Group Figures, Sue Cullison came in 11th with a score of 25.010. In the Masters 35-39 Age Group Figures, Ariel Stiles came in 10th with a score of 26.614. In the 55-59 Age Group Figures, Elizabeth McMullan came in 2nd with a score of 27.147, Amy Hicks came in 8th with a score of 25.230, and Meryl Cole came in 11th with a score of 24.819.

Out of 152 swimmers who swam Figures, the results overall are as follows: Katharine Turner came in 62 overall, Elizabeth McMullan came in 72 overall, Michelle Bouche came in 78 overall, Ariel Stiles came in 79 overall, Jodi Rennert came in 83 overall, Amy Hicks came in 109 overall, Sue Cullison came in 111 overall and Meryl Cole came in 120 overall. After reviewing the scores when we returned home, each swimmer improved her score over the last year score.

In the routine competition the results are as follows: Solos – Elizabeth McMullan came in 3rd with a score of 79.227, and Amy Hicks came in 5th with a score of 76.950. Elizabeth and Amy swam in the 55-59 Solo Competition. In the 25-29 Solo Competition, Katharine Turner came in 5th with a score of 92.817. In the 35-39 Solo Competition, Ariel Stiles came in 4th with a score of 84.014.



In the Duet Competition Age 20-29, Michelle Bouche and Jodi Rennert came in 5th with a combined score of 84.427. In the Duet Competition Age 30-39, Sue Cullison and Ariel Stiles came in 7th with a combined score of 76.292.

In the Trio Competition Age 50-59, Elizabeth McMullan, Meryl Cole, and Amy Hicks came in 4th with a combined score of 75.732. In the Trio Competition Age 20-29, Sue Cullison, Jodi Rennert, and Katharine Turner came in 2nd with a combined score of 79.281.

In the Team Routine Competition, the entire team of Elizabeth McMullan, Amy Hicks, Meryl Cole, Sue Cullison, Ariel Stiles, Michelle Bouche, Jodi Rennert, and Katharine Turner came in 2nd with a combined score of 81.571.

At the end of the meet each team is allotted points for swimmers placement in each event. Out of 29 teams who participated in the competition the Swogjan Swim Club placed 9th.

We Uncover Buried Treasures Every Day.

Oriental rugs are constantly picking up various types of soil that can mask the true colors and cause unnecessary wear. They should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.

At Grillo Oriental Rug Cleaning, an individualized treatment is selected specifically for each rug. We give rugs safer, more beneficial care that results in a longer life for your valued possession.

For more information, or to have your rug picked up, call 1-800-649-7707.

church news

Mormon conference begins

Latter-day Saints of Southeastern Mass. and the Newport, R.I. areas will convene this weekend (Nov. 16, 17) for Stake Conference, a semi-annual meeting sponsored by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints under the direction of President Robert S. Wood.

The Saturday session will begin at 7 p.m. at the LDS chapel, 76 Main St., Foxboro. The Sunday session will begin at 10 a.m. at the LDS chapel, 379 Gardner Street, Hingham.

Thurston called as counselor

William Thurston of Loring Hill Road, Hingham, has been called to serve as a Counselor (assistant) to Bishop Dan Garrison in the Hingham Ward of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, located at 379 Gardner Street, Hingham. A priesthood holder, he serves without pay each Sunday and as time permits throughout the week. He and his family come from California. His wife, Betty, serves in the Stake Relief Society (women's organization). In his professional life Thurston is associated with the Damon Corp. of Needham.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 91P2439E1

Estate of NORMAN K. DRESSER late of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that DAVID K. DRESSER of WEYMOUTH in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on December 18, 1991.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the first day of November, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-one.

The Halloween Storm and the weather of the past weekend have combined to make life difficult and miserable for thousands along the South Shore coastal area.

But you can make life a little easier for them by letting them know what services you can provide to help them out.

Call our advertising department today and place your ad for tomorrow.

Cohasset Mariner

Vol. XIV, No.7 | Thursday, November 21, 1991 | 1-800-649-6661 | 50 cents

Buy Cohasset works for the town

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The board of selectmen think it makes sense for town government to work with town businesses.

The local Chamber of Commerce approached the board about instituting a local business preference in purchasing policy. Selectmen endorsed the policy for the boards and departments under their control and encouraged other departments to do the same.

Under the policy, town departments and boards will purchase goods and services from locally based businesses when costs are equal or less than non-Cohasset businesses. Nothing in the local preference policy will bypass bid requirements under the state Uniform Procurement Act or town bylaws.

"All things being equal, the advantage will go to Cohasset businesses," chamber representative Keith Knowles said. "We're not asking for anything other than a fair shake. We're not asking for a handout."

Knowles told selectmen the local preference will be restricted to businesses headquartered in Cohasset or with a branch located in Cohasset. Cohasset residents with businesses located in other communities do not qualify for the preference.

Knowles said the Chamber would develop a directory of local businesses for the convenience of the town.

The preference is available to businesses, professionals or tradespeople regardless of membership in the Chamber. The chamber will place notices concerning upcoming town purchases in their newsletter. Non-members can request inclusion in the directory and on the mailing list, Knowles said.

Currently the chamber has 75 members and 200 businesses on its mailing list.

In voting in favor of the policy, Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he believed all department heads already try to support local businesses whenever possible.

"I'm sure they'll all cooperate," he said.

Knowles said the Chamber planned to present the policy to the school committee for adoption as well.

The house at 498 Jerusalem Road was demolished last week by the new owners who own the home next door. See story on page 4.

Roger Whitley came for the trains

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

"I came to Cohasset (in 1955) because it had good train transportation," said Roger Whitley, vice chairman of the advisory committee.

Whitley, who describes himself as "the oldest member of the advisory committee," says the convenient commuter train was a dream. "I could hear the train in North Scituate, so I knew how fast to drive to the station" (downtown).

"There were bridge games on the train, and of course in the 50s most Cohasset residents were one-car families, so a lot of wives dropped their husbands off at the station."

He remembers leaving off his shirts at Cohasset Cleaners, in a store front near Liquors Unlimited. "Arlene Stockbridge worked at the cleaners (owned by Sherb Merrill, a former stockbroker). I used to drop off my shirts in the morning, and then pick them up at the police station (then located in the Independence Building) on late evening commutes. The desk officer was Charlie Stockbridge, Arlene's husband."

So what did you do when the train left forever? I ask.

"Train service ended in 1957 and I couldn't believe it: The day before service stopped I just thought it would never happen. The day after it stopped I still couldn't believe it."

Whitley served in World War II with the infantry. He became an architect, worked for a major Boston firm, married, moved to Cohasset and became the father of Sarah and Alison.

And then something really sad happened. In 1967 Roger's first wife died, and he became a single parent. While friends and neighbors helped out, he had no immediate family in the area, and raising two youngsters who missed their mother was difficult for Roger and the girls.

"And then my whole life changed," he said.

"A Hingham woman called me for some architectural plans. She was fixing up her apartment and needed some ideas. She was a very interesting woman, having served in the Peace Corps in Malaysia; and I discovered she was going to be my daughter Sarah's teacher that year at Deer Hill School" (1968-'69).

In the fall of 1969 Roger married Kitty, and Kitty adopted his children.

And in 1975 Roger called his architectural firm and resigned from the partnership. "I remember it well. I decided to quit in the middle of Boston's Atlantic Avenue traffic. I gave my partners 90 days notice and I've been a self-employed architect ever since."

And then his whole life changed again.

Sarah and Alison were young adults, Roger had always been curious about Kitty's Peace Corps experience, and while being involved in his church and numerous civic groups, he decided he wanted and needed a more personal challenge.

"In the fall of 1983 Kitty was going off to school, I was reading the depressing newspapers and I remember asking Kitty what one person could do to help. She told me to join the Peace Corps. "Eight months later Kitty and I were living in the South Pacific, 900 miles from New Zealand in the Southern Hemisphere."

David Nyhan, a syndicated columnist with the Boston Globe, wrote a column about the Whitley's preparations for living on the islands of Fiji (1984-'86). They rented their home, stored their possessions, said goodbye to their then young adult children, and were curious about the lists of items the Peace Corps recommended

DEP holds to storm dates

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

Late Monday morning Conservation Commission Secretary Patricia Walsh was sitting in the middle of a room piled high with papers, answering the phone, and trying to accommodate questions from coastal property owners.

Walsh said while she has mailed hundreds of letters to coastal property owners, out-of-state owners will take some additional time, as identifying them requires research through the assessors' books.

Conservation Commission Chair Merle Brown said he doubts the state will relax its regulation dates for anyone. "The state is concerned that if it gives people until spring, they'll overdo restoration of beach areas."

Brown said during normal times "We're understaffed," and as a result of the last two storms "We're now very understaffed. We have one secretary who works 25 hours a week. We don't have a computer, the secretary has to write everything out by hand.

Additionally, Brown said the conservation commission could use a conservation agent/inspector, particularly during the aftermath of a storm.

Last Monday Walsh said while she's had a lot of phone calls regarding forthcoming damage reports (which must be filed concurrently with the local conservation commission and the DEP by November 30 this year), the conservation commission had only seven letters from property owners.

Accordingly, Walsh said commissioners are concerned that many residents might not report damage, which could conceivably effect the town's loss figures.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jordan of 47 Lothrop Lane have already received detailed instructions from the conservation commission with regard to restoration work on the beach adjacent to their property. Additionally, they were informed, as are all coastal property owners, that in order to qualify under the DEP emergency regulations all work must be completed by Dec. 31 this year.

The Estate of Margaret G. Hendrie of 66 Margin Street reported fence damage and replacement. However, Monday morning one of the estate trustees (from out-of-state) said a more extensive damage report would follow. Walsh stressed that the assessment of damage need not include financial estimates - only a listing of real property damaged.

Holiday Images

Plans are underway for the bi-annual house tour sponsored by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset. This year the tour — which is an art show in itself — is scheduled for 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Dec. 5. The theme will be Holiday Images. The last time the tour took place the scenes of seasonal traditions attracted the attention of an editor at Colonial Homes magazine, which recently featured Cohasset and members of the Community Garden Club.

Foods featured at 51st village fair

Taste buds, from sweet to spicy, will again find satisfaction in the offerings of Cohasset's 51st Village Fair to be presented in buildings around the Common on Saturday, Dec. 7 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. with proceeds going to the four sponsoring churches.

Home-cooked delicacies from the kitchens of some of the town's most proficient cooks will vie with some professionally prepared items to capture the attention of the hundreds of shoppers who each year look forward to the fair as a major listing on their holiday agenda.

Perhaps most visible of the food vending stations will be the outdoor pavilion of the snack bar on the Common, ready to catch shoppers and youngsters en route from other attractions in the Community Center and the Town Hall. A crew of amateur short-order cooks headed up by Bob Moody, will be dishing out hot dogs and hamburgers, with steaming hot or chilled drinks and other snacks.

Indoors, the Community Center will house the ever-popular Chowder Bar, this year to be staffed by a group headed by John Vivian and Gordon Hislop. This feature will be set up in the spacious rear room of the Community Center where lunch time diners can take their chowder or grilled cheese sandwiches, and beverages to tables. Added to the menu this year will be pizza slices, hot from the oven.

The Town Hall will be the focus of the Bake and Candy Table, to which the talented cooks and bakers of the four congregations will have contributed their productions. Grace Donahue heads up the soliciting and sales of these delicacies and will be joined by ladies of the Panagia Greek Church who will again be offering traditional Greek pastries. Also in the Town Hall, Ham Tewksbury will again be selling the selected cheeses which he brings to the Fair.

A final taste treat will be the annual Village Fair Dinner to be held in Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church on Sunday, Dec. 7. Rose Kierce, Chairperson of the Fair for the leadership St. Anthony's Church this year, has taken on the assignment of presenting the dinner, and has promised a gourmet Italian repast. Tickets are $15 each, for this normally sellout event have been distributed to representatives of the four churches and may be purchased in advance from them.

Central Committee representatives are John and Gail Brooks for St. Stephen's Episcopal Church; Jean Syrmopoulos for Panagia Greek Orthodox Church; Sharon Moody and Debbie Anderson for the Second Congregational Church; and Georgine Butman and Deanna Mulligan for St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church, who are also serving as secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Police officer hired

Selectmen filled a vacancy on the police force by hiring a former Brockton Police Department officer.

Thomas DaSilva of Hingham will join the town's police force. Da Silva is the second officer laid off in Brockton to be hired in Cohasset. He joins former colleague Lisa Matos who was hired in September.

He was chosen over six other candidates for the position.

"The other six candidates were all very well qualified," selectmen Chairman Ned Tebbetts said. Police Chief Joseph Kealey recommended hiring DaSilva.

Da Silva has had four years of prior experience and holds a degree in law enforcement.

Bread Shop gets tables

After moving into more spacious quarters on Main Street, Bread Shop proprietor Barbara Stier found her customers wanted more. Specifically, they wanted to be able to sample her wares at leisure.

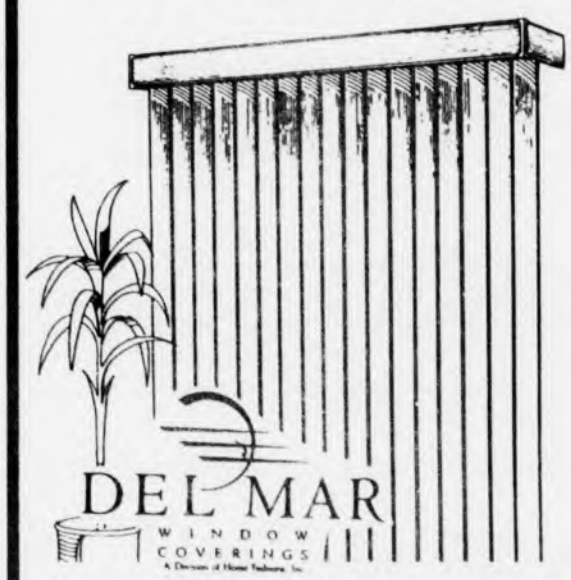
Stier asked selectmen for permission to install two or three tables in the shop. She plans to serve coffee and muffins, soups and sandwiches.

Selectmen granted the request contingent on approval by the sewer commission.

Stier's application stated that throwaway containers would be used.

Members sought

Looking for a way to get involved in your community? Several town committees offer the opportunity you seek.



Vacancies exist on the harbor study committee, the arts lottery council and the cultural exchange committee.

Grand old house remembered

The yard at 500 Jerusalem Road expanded last week when the house next door was bulldozed to the ground.

The yard of R. Gary and Anne Vanderweil is worth more this week. The Vanderweil home was structurally similar to the one demolished until the last owner, James Read, began a series of renovation projects in recent years that somewhat modernized the old house.

The Vanderweils paid $887,500 for the Jerusalem Road property, about $100,000 less than the assessed value. They were not immediately available for comment — but another paper said the house was destroyed because the Vanderweils considered it an eyesore.

Cynthia and George Peters, former owners of the house at 498 Jerusalem Road, were "astonished" at the demolition. The couple owned the home from 1981 to 1989.

"Our family was saddened to watch the systematic demolition of that grand old house on the hill and further disturbed as the rebuilt, oversized shell was toppled to the ground," Mrs. Peters told the Mariner.

The house had been built in 1872 by Edwin Pope as a twin cottage to the one at #500, according to Mrs. Peters.

"Through the years it was enlarged, embellished and gracefully changed by other owners. Two fires on the third floor threatened to destroy the home," she said.

Both times the owners rebuilt.

The home had 21 rooms, 7 baths, two Count Rumford fireplaces, an outsized foyer, dining and living rooms.

Mrs. Peters said the architectural features were unusual including some "wonderful moldings and panelling," crystal chandeliers and converted gas light fixtures.

"The wrap-around porches afforded commanding views from Boston to Cape Anne," Mrs. Peters said.

Two years ago the Reads bulldozed in the swimming pool that had been installed by the Peters family.

Other changes in structure followed the demolition of the pool.

"But why," Mrs. Peters asked. "The answers are not forthcoming. Great ghastly silence, some photographs, many memories and profound astonishment remain."

The Purrrrrrfect Cat Contest

Grab your camera and get ready for a chance to win some great prizes. Here's the scoop. Between now and December 6, Noble's Camera Shops are accepting photographs of – can you picture this? – your cat (or your neighbor's cat!) posed alongside any one of The Cat's Meow Village* scenes. The challenge is to see how clever and imaginative you can be showing your favorite feline next to an actual antique store, bank, church, or any one of the many scenes from The Cat's Meow Village series. Photos will be judged in various 'cat'egories, such as "Most Creative," "Most Like a Real Village Setting," and "Best Looking Cat."

The celebrity judging and awards ceremony for the photo contest will take place at 11:00 a.m., on December 7, 1991, at the Noble's Cohasset store on Rte. 3A.

services. The first 10 contest entrants will receive a single-use Kodak camera.

So, get snapping. And bring those warm, lovely feline photos into the Noble's Camera Shop closest to you – we're just around the block. All photos will be displayed at the Noble's Cohasset store. Remember, the deadline for entries is December 6, 1991. Don't wait 'til the tail end to enter!

Complete contest details are available at each store. No need to read the fine print, you'll find no special clawses.

The Cat's Meow Village is a series of hand-crafted wood collectibles. Each design features a tiny cat peering out of a window or sitting at a doorstep. If you would like to see a Cat's Meow design for yourself, stop by the Noble's Cohasset store.*

Calling all cats with talent

Best of all, as part of the awards program, we'll be having a cat talent contest. If your favorite kitten or cat has talent – bring 'em in (with their purrrmission, of course). 'Cat'egories include: "Loudest Meowing," "Longest Purring," and "Most Unusual Talent."

Great prizes for the 'new cats on the block'

This type of contest really lens itself to some terrific prizes. You and your cat could walk away with a 35mm Kodak S900 Tele camera outfit (value $100.00), Noble's gift certificates, a membership to The Cat's Meow Village Collector's Club, one of the designs from the latest Cat's Meow series, and free cat grooming be taken. "One necktie, five pairs of eyeglasses, 14 pairs of undershorts, a no-stick frying pan, a slotted spoon."

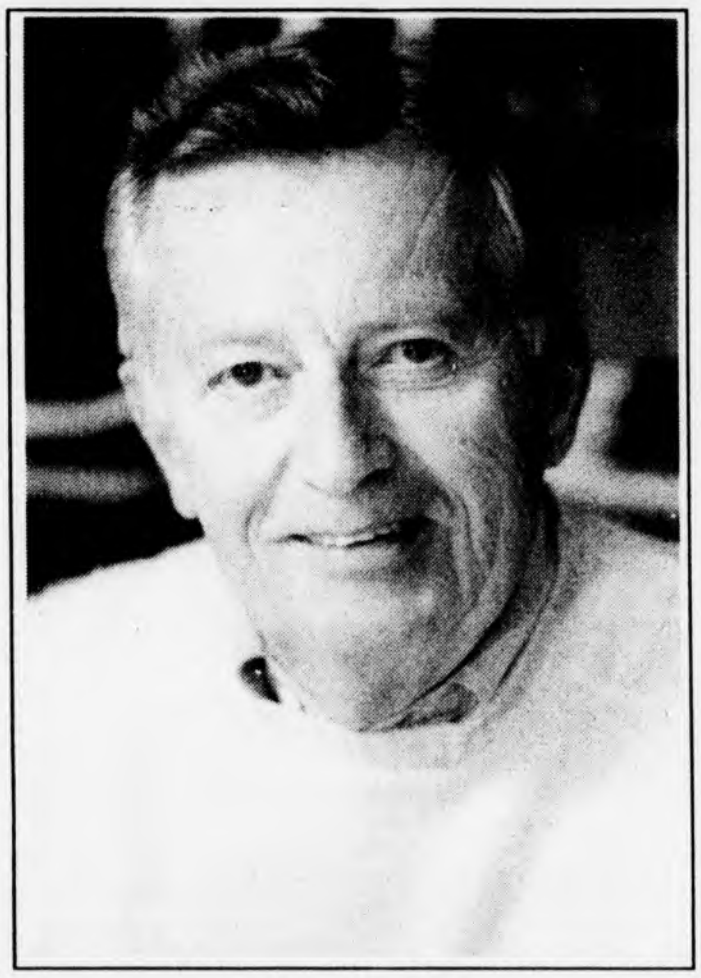
Roger's experience with the Peace Corps was everything he hoped it would be. "I had never seen more brilliant sunsets, the sunsets were always yellow and orange, because the air was so clean. The stars were so close to you at night, because there was no sky glow from electricity."



Fiji, which had been an English colony, was an independent country during the Whitleys' tenure. Kitty's job was training the locals to teach kindergarten. Roger did drawings of buildings and trained Fijians to estimate costs.

Also, he taught the young men how to build simple smokeless cooking stoves, and how to market the stoves to other villagers. "One of the more difficult concepts to teach was that of getting a money deposit for the stove, because these people didn't need money. But it cost $30 to build the stove, the profit being $20. If you couldn't sell the stove, the real loss was $30. In any case, this was a very important subject, because the older women were developing serious eye diseases from cooking over open fires."

Their larger experience was living in a communal society "Where no one has anything, but where everyone will share what they do have."

Additionally, Roger assisted the youth worker on the island, and became involved in cooperative fishing and cooperative farming projects with people who "had eaten their last missionary as little as 110 years ago. The Fijians are Melanesians (originating in East Africa), not Polynesians. In Fiji's capital city there's a museum which displays wooden plates and special flesh-eating forks with four hooked prongs for picking at the flesh."

Fiji, originally named Cannibal Islands, was at peace during the Whitley years. But in 1987, a year after they left, a military coup took over the islands. Under English rule, Indians from India had been brought in to work the plantations. The Indians were very successful in Fiji, multiplying and becoming wealthier than the Fijians, which caused frictions.

Roger Whitley

Asked how his Peace Corps experience has affected him, Roger said "When Kitty and I got back from Fiji and unpacked our household in storage, we said - why do we need 12 mixing bowls! We really began to dislike our possessions. My biggest puzzlement today is why someone would destroy a kitchen in good working order simply to have a new one" (Roger laughs here, because this is of course his business).

With regard to his role on the advisory committee, he said his philosophy of budgets and committees is the "politics of the possible. In a recession, everyone works harder, and there are more controls on money." He has all the respect in the world for the town's design review board, an appointed board of which he was an associate member for 14 years. "They reviewed Tedeschi Plaza plans and Bob Stansell (former chairman) met with their architect and made interesting suggestions for the successful redesign of the plaza."

Whitley noted that Design Review, on an advisory basis only, has become involved with plans for developments of multi-family structures in single family areas, such as 100 Pond Street and Wheelwright Farm.

"Cohasset's lucky to have had the numbers and caliber of volunteers that it has."

Yes, it has, Roger Whitley - involved church member, Habitat worker, Peace Corps volunteer, veteran, advisory committee member.

And thank you!

Students help with PSO Sale

Energetic entrepreneurs from among Cohasset students of all ages are "pitching in" with this year's PSO Holiday Tree and Wreath Sale. The project was conceived by a high school student as a way of raising money for special programs within the Cohasset school system. It has evolved into enrichment opportunity for children of all grades and skill levels. Thus far, Cohasset's younger generations have competed favorably in matching their older counterparts' work ethics.

Cohasset High School art students, under the direction of teacher, Colleen Lucas, "kicked off" the project by painting three 4' by 8' signs advertising the sale. High school students Tyrone Morgan, Mike Reynolds, Tim Herzog, Joe Andrade and John Kinchla have fastened the signs against the wind and rain outside the Osgood, Deer Hill and high school.

Meanwhile, Cohasset junior high schoolers, Dan Christoffel, Brendan Kinchla, James Hills and Nick Hawk, with the assistance of business teacher Loreen White have developed a spreadsheet/data base program to track the orders for trees and wreaths. Greg Schultz, Ken Leahy, Chris McKenna and Pat Reynolds are recruiting the manpower for the transportation and distribution of the anticipated 300 trees and 400 wreaths the students expect to sell through their 100 percent guaranteed money back mail order operation.

Not to be outdone though, Cohasset's elementary school students, Ben Peterson, Kelly and Tim Straughn, Alison and Dan Kinchla and Danny and Maura Duffy have helped fold and mail 700 sales order forms to their classmates.

Residents wishing to participate in the sale can pick up a sales order form at any of the schools or at the Cohasset Police Department, library and most stores in the village and along Route 3A.

Please return your form with a check payable to the Cohasset PSO by Nov. 27. (Due to the anticipated size of our order we must place our order with the grower earlier than Nov. 27 to guarantee on-time delivery). The tree/wreath pick-up date is Sunday, Dec. 8 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Please bring your own rope on that

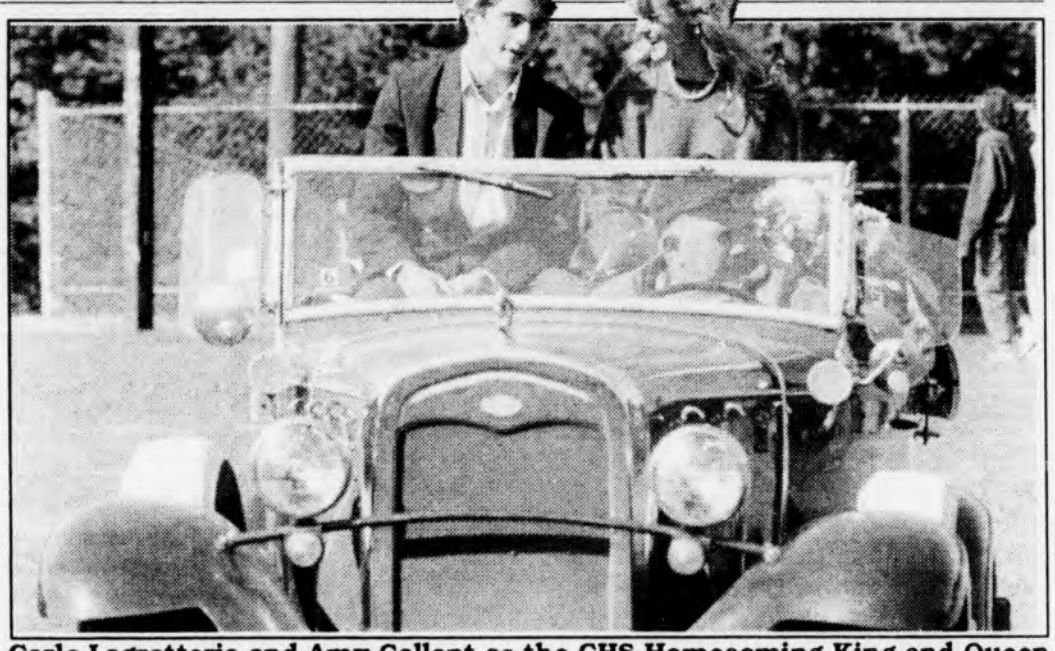
• It occurs to us that it is time to mention a celebrity right in our home town...Jim McCarthy, one of the voices on the "Sports Huddle." Jim, Eddie Andleman and Mark Whitcomb have been talking sports for 22 years, and although they recently switched radio stations to WEEI, their listening audience remains steady and faithful. That's quite a feat, to be on every Sunday night for that many years and still have an audience that adores you. The sports world can be fickle but they still maintain. Congratulations to you, Jim, and may your successful "Sports Huddle" continue for as long as sports do!

• Speaking of the sporting world, ours lost a true champion last week with the passing of Evie Dorr. He was Cohasset sports for so many years, and he touched many lives (generations, in fact). All those that were involved in his tribute last month should be pleased and proud that he knew how much people respected him and cared. Evie and his family were touched by the overwhelming crowd that turned out, and love beamed from everywhere and everyone. Let's all remember that, and remember him as a kind, fair, caring man that loved everything and everyone. We'll miss you Evie, and we send our love to Fran and your family in their struggle to carry on without you.



• Cohasset High School has a grand offering this Thanksgiving. They are making pies and chocolate cookie dough for the holiday. Here's hoping that lots of people took advantage of this offer. If so, there might be more special orders for the next holiday.

• Jen Reidy called last week, asking that everyone be reminded to reserve this Friday (Nov. 22) for the Senior Class Variety show. It will be in the Cohasset High Auditorium at 8 p.m. and tickets will be available at the door for $5. Jen promises there will be many stars. We love to imagine all the fun that will be going on. Be sure to be there; it will be your own talent show!

• We hope that as Linda Campbell is reading this she is home and feeling much better! Linda has been a patient in South Shore Hospital...

• Another Cohasset legend is in South Shore Hospital as this goes to press—Diana Karcher. Everyone knows Diana, who is very involved with programs and projects in the town, as well as being Dr. Roger Pompeo's receptionist. She took a mean fall off a ladder last week, and wound up in the hospital with several injuries. Here's to your being home real soon, and right back in the center of things again. And, hurry you are missed by all of us.

• We congratulate Joe Gagliano, a student at CHS, who won the Voice of Democracy broadcast competition recently. Joe will record his script at WRPS in Rockland for entry into the district contest, which will be determined Dec. 6. Joe wrote and taped a broadcast stating his views on the subject "Meeting America's Challenge." Here's hoping he wins, it means a 5-day trip to Washington D.C. and other prizes. Fourteen national winners will get a total of $75,000 in scholarships. The contest was sponsored by VFW Post 9146 and hosted by the Cohasset Rotary Club, so it is a real town affair. Tom O'Neill, CHS teacher and debating coach, helped Joe.

Carlo Lagrotteria and Amy Gallant as the CHS Homecoming King and Queen tour Milliken Field. The football season has ended for CHS. (File photo)

• It's another case of ask a busy person...Jack Conway that is! Jack has been selected the next president of the Scituate Chamber of Commerce, and knowing him, he will be a dynamic addition to it. Great for the Scituate economy too; watch for it to come flying to the forefront.

• Kristin Pozatek, daughter of Zig and Ellie Pozatek, has sure made a name for herself at the Holderness School. She is a field hockey player and she scored a goal and an assist in last Saturday's 2-0 win over Kimball Union Academy. That win lifted Holderness' season record to 11-1-1, and clinched for them a seventh consecutive New Hampshire Lakes Region championship. Krissy is a senior at Holderness and has become in her third varsity season the team leader in combined goals and assists, with 9 goals and 12 assists. "Krissy has been the engineer of this season's successful team," says coach Martha Elkins. She's fast, dodges well, and can score those demoralizing goals from outside the circle. At every game this fall, Krissy has simply dominated the field." Wow, Krissy, way to go, everyone is proud of you and your efforts.

• Glad to report that Mary Campbell is home from the hospital this week, and will be in fine shape to enjoy a great big turkey dinner.

• Speaking of turkey, Thanksgiving is approaching, and it is a great time for news...share yours with us!

DIAMONDS: CARAT, CUT, COLOR & CLARITY...
THIS WEEK, CHAPTER IV - CLARITY

CLARITY

Internal flaws in a diamond are described as clarity. Essentially they are the fingerprints of a diamond and no two are alike. If an expert cannot see internal inclusions with a 10-power loupe, a diamond can be described as flawless. These are extremely rare and very expensive.

Whether or not they are visible to the unaided eye, the number and type of flaws are key factors in determining the price you pay for your diamond. While these flaws may not detract from the beauty of the diamond, even minor flaws affect the price and it is important to discuss them with your jeweler.

suffered damage to the stone wall, and damage to the filling, grading and seeding areas of the lawn.

A letter was received from Dr. Barbara L. O'Pray regarding her family's property at 329 Jerusalem Road. It was noted that with permission from the DEP beach materials on the property were returned to the beach. O'Pray said replacement of the deck would take place in Spring 1992, but Conservations Commissioner Jeff Waal said the deck would have to be completed on or before Feb. 29 in order to receive emergency certification.

Stephen B. Roy, acting on behalf of the Cohasset Realty Trust, 443 Jerusalem Road, said repairs to that property would include repair/rebuild portions of the porch and the retaining wall.

Samuel W. Wakeman of 255 Atlantic Avenue itemized two pages of extensive repairs to his properties at that location.

Susan H. McVeigh of 55 Atlantic Avenue also filed.

date to tie your tree to your car. Delivery can also be arranged. You select your tree from among the many premium traditional balsam fir trees ordered in your specified size range. We can accommodate "most" special requests for fresh-cut Frazier fir, Douglas fir, Scotch pine, white or blue spruce of any size. Every penny raised in this sale after tree cost and transportation have been deducted goes to the PSO. Average markup on each tree is approximately $20 over the wholesale cost. That portion is also tax deductible. Mail your form today and come early on Dec. 8 for the best selection. One hundred percent money-back guarantee if not completely satisfied.

Recycling update from the transfer facility

The homeowner's help is critical in making Cohasset's recycling effort cost effective, thereby saving much-needed tax dollars.

All users of the Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF) are asked to please observe the following:

Plastic: Rinse all containers, especially milk and detergent jugs. The recycling vendor finds that detergent residue harms the grinding mechanism. Also, please remove all lids and caps. Only type 1 and 2 plastic.

Newspaper: Only newspapers go into the bin, either tied in bundles or placed in brown paper bags. No plastic, junk mail, cereal boxes or any other paperboard.

Corrugated Cardboard: Flattened corrugated increases the tonnage in the compactor, thereby lessening transportation costs. Your effort to flatten corrugated boxes is greatly appreciated.

Glass: Now that winter weather is here, RTF employees need your help to keep their outdoor glass-crushing time to a minimum. The few seconds you take to remove all lids, corks and metallic wraps helps keep their fingers from freezing. Labels are OK.

Tin Cans: All aluminum and tin cans go into the can container (coffee, soup, pet food, etc.) No paint cans or aerosols.

Metal: Small metal items go into bins between newspapers and tin cans. Large metal items go into large areas set aside on the road behind the white tire trailer.

Clothing: Clean, usable clothing and bedding is greatly appreciated by the Salvation Army. Please do not leave clothing in the "Take It or Leave It" shed, but place in one of the red Salvation Army containers.

Wreaths for sale

The upcoming PSO/Metco Christmas Wreath sale will be selling undecorated green wreaths to benefit the Metco program in the Cohasset schools. The organizers of this sale would like to encourage anyone who would like a beautifully decorated wreath with a lovely ribbon bow to patronize the wreath sale at the Cohasset Village Fair, Saturday, Dec. 7.

What's needed is a place to dance

Last week the Cohasset Community Center cancelled its monthly dance for the junior high school kids.

Well, it wasn't exactly called a dance for junior high school kids. But that's what it turned out to be.

We understand there were some strict rules aimed at keeping the kids from wandering in and out of the building. Apparently the kids didn't get the point.

It's considered cool to leave a dance if the music isn't up to grade. Kids wander in packs because they are teen-agers and that's what teen-agers do.

Apparently the dances at the Community Center cause too many problems.

Adolescence isn't a great time — ask any parent of an emerging teen-ager. But we as a community need to help our children live through those years. We aren't criticizing the Community Center for deciding the group is too difficult to handle.

We sympathize. We understand. We commiserate.

But we think some other group should come forward to help fill the gap. That's the point of this piece. We hope that by focusing on the need, some group will volunteer.

In many communities, teen dances are used as fundraisers.

Kids will pay $5 for the evening's amusement. For that all they expect is loud music of the contemporary sort. Maybe the town's drug and alcohol committee can figure out a way to run successful and safe dances for teens.

Perhaps the dances need to happen in an isolated part of town — somewhere the kids won't be able to get into any trouble. Perhaps the PTO could run dances to benefit the writing lab.

Visit the South Shore Art Center

By the way, the current exhibit at the South Shore Art Center is a thrill to see. The bright colors and irreverent artwork is a delight. The current show includes the painting of folk artists Jeanne Replogle and Suzanne Moyer — both women were given some attention in the holiday issue of Colonial Homes magazine as part of a 22-page photo spread on Cohasset.

Copies of the magazine can still be purchased at the Art Center and at local magazine outlets like the Colonial Pharmacy and Cohasset News.

The artwork on display at the Art Center includes some fairly traditional pieces. It also includes some art that can only be classified as whimsical.

The opening reception happened last Friday and brought crowds of art lovers out for the evening.

The consensus was: The show is a success.

The show remains open during gallery hours until Dec. 21.

We're sure the Community Garden Club House Tour, also mentioned in the magazine, will win succeed on a grand scale. The one-day Holiday Images house tour happens Thursday, Dec. 5.

My friend let out a blood-curdling scream

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner Political Columnist

I had left my car window open. That evening we took my car to dinner. The ladies got in the back, the gentlemen in the front.

Our cat, Solo Songbird, had been taking a nap in the sunny back car window. When the engine started, Solo flew over her shoulder and towards the open window as my friend let out a blood-curdling scream!

Weeks later, she says she is still shaking.

Please note: this woman is a friend of a lady whose insurance company wondered why she had abandoned her car in last week's column (answer: she was up to her neck in water).

Lil and Jim Curley are expecting in April, and MJM (Mary Jeanette Murray) couldn't be happier. Normally, pregnancies are not discussed in the Mariner but since MJM has already told everybody, Lil said it would be o.k. to tell all of Tinytown.

MJM would like a granddaughter, since she already has a ton of grandsons.

Lil and Jim have pretty much solved the name problem if it's a girl (Curley Sue Curley is not one of the names they have selected).

However, Lil and Jim have not yet agreed on a boy's name. It seems Nate has been used up. Suggestions are welcome.

Now it begins.

In their Tuesday, Nov. 12 film, Tinytown selectpersons kicked off their official education program of Tinytowners which they are calling "Strictly Business," but which I have entitled "Other People's Money."

Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts noted that the town has serious financial problems. Whoa!

Selectman Jane Goedecke reported that the town will need a $500,000 override in the spring; but a few others on the board felt it would be much closer to a million dollars. Last spring former advisory committee member Arne Gjesteby predicted the 1992 override needs would reach one million dollars if nothing were done. And nothing has been done.

So now, selectpersons are going to do the right thing and re-organize a few departments. For example, for years the town clerk's office has been dripping with fat. Everybody knew it, but nothing was said until Selectman Diana Kornet suggested a serious (?) study of the town clerk's department by the government structure committee.

Mainly, the selectmen would like to raise taxes next spring. At a time when even George Bush has learned that this is a very different kind of recession/depression because of the large middle class debt which accompanies it, the selectmen still believe they'll get an "override."

Reducing the town clerk's hours by five or 10 is really meaningless when you're facing close to a million dollar deficit. Although this is a very safe thing to do, because of course Franny Marks and/or Acting Town Clerk Marion Douglas will get the job done anyway. It's always safe to reduce clerical union hours. The clerical union is loyal; members take pride in a job well done. Reduce Polly Litchfield's hours and she'll continue to do all of the work.

It's time for selectmen to develop some exciting new interview questions. The police interviews are becoming boring and predictable. The only reason I watched the last series is because I heard through Tinytown hall that the top police candidate was pregnant. Which wasn't true.

However, I had remembered that Becky was going to deliver last week, so I flipped over to "Full House" where sure enough, exciting things were happening.

As selectmen bored the police candidates to death on Nov. 12, Becky delivered twin boys on "Full House" while Uncle Jessie had an appendectomy, and Michelle had a birthday party. Normally, the selectmen do not meet on Tuesday evenings, and if they did nobody would watch them because there is a lot of interesting programming on Tuesdays.

Laura Doherty has been looking for her eyeglass case for months and then a few weeks ago she found it in England, in Heather Doherty's room. Heather's doing a semester abroad.

Selectmen who wish to keep their personal finances private should not use the town's xerox machine to make copies of their W-2s and then forget to reclaim the originals.

It finally happened. Selectman Martha Gjesteby swore on television on Nov. 12. She said "hell." Selectman Rocco Laugelle was horrified.

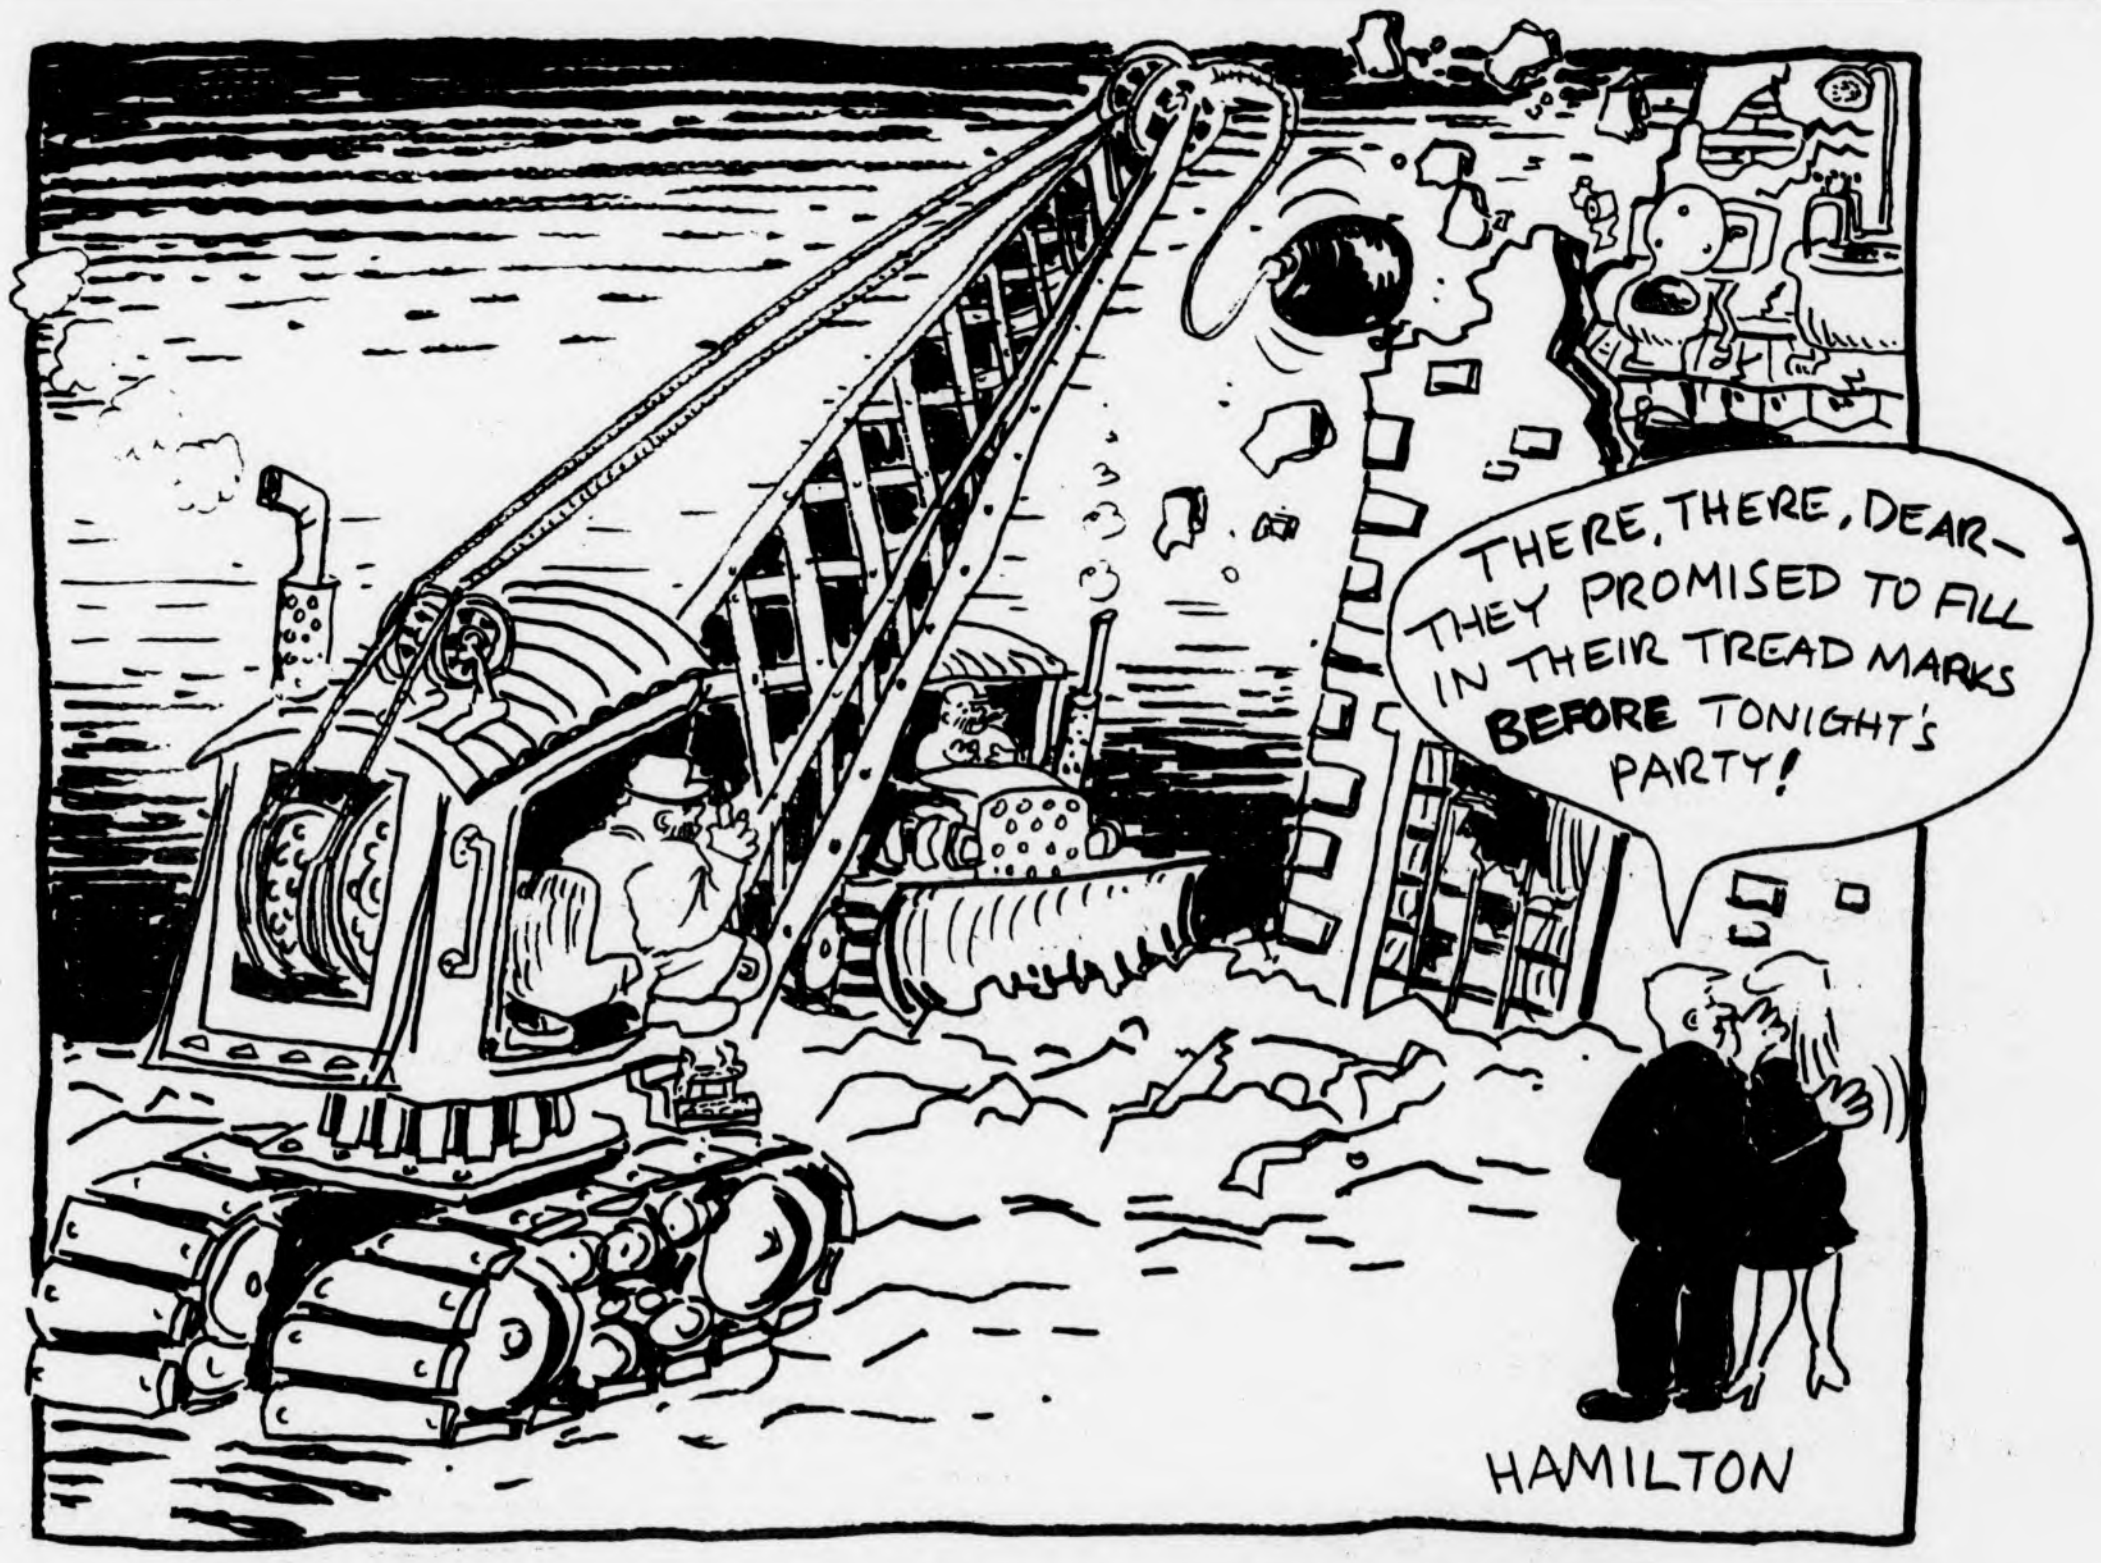
More good reasons to not give the Bates building to anybody:



1.) The fire and police departments need a place for storage. The town has been leasing a storage trailer for the fire department for months, now. It seems when we renovated the building we didn't plan for additional storage and/or in any case we don't have enough.

2.) In past years, the town's civil defense director used the Bates building for emergency activities. He's now using the police station; but some people feel he'd be better off with his own operation at Bates.

3.) The fire station is too far for sewer workers to go to use the powder room. State and/or federal laws require that facilities be much closer. And, people in the know tell me that sewer workers are prone to needing toilet facilities and often take unplanned "swims" at the plant.

Someone should ask the school department for detailed documentation on teacher retirements (over the last two or three years) and how that translates into savings.

Hurricane Bob and the No Name Nor'easter weren't the only recent destructive forces at work on Cohasset's 'Gold Coast.'

From the State House

By Sen. Robert L. Hedlund
Special to the Mariner

Last week the Commerce and Labor Committee on which I serve, reported to the Senate the so-called Bump-Pines Workers Compensation Reform Bill.

After an unprecedented 13-hour executive session lasting until the early morning hours, the Commerce and Labor Committee rejected, mostly along party lines, the Weld Administration's alternative to the Bump-Pines Bill. The Committee then passed the Bump-Pines Bill after rejecting many amendments that would have provided cost savings to the premiums paid by business.

The Workers Compensation issue has received a great deal of attention on Beacon Hill. Reforming the system is presently one of the top priorities of Governor Weld and also will be the most significant issue which the Commerce and Labor Committee will address.

The present attention is well deserved due to the enormous burden that the system places on Massachusetts Employers. The state needs to provide true reduction of the costs of this system.

The two proposals being considered are the Governor's plan and the Bump-Pines Bill. The Bump-Pines inadequately addresses the issue while the Governor's alternative plan would more effectively correct the system.

It is my opinion that the out-of-control workers compensation premiums are the number one impediment to economic recovery in Massachusetts. Current surveys show that workers compensation rates are the main concern of business in Massachusetts.

In the face of these facts, I am disappointed with the committee's actions. The Bump-Pines legislation will merely "stem the rate of increase" in premiums while the Administration's alternative would result in an actual reduction in premiums.

Some of the factors which create a disparity in savings between the Administration's bill and the Bump-Pines Bill are as follows:

- Bump-Pines would give physicians a fee increase of 35 percent; the Administration's bill would tighten eligibility requirements, requiring the workplace injury to be the major contributing cause of the disability.
- Bump-Pines would require an increase in employer assessments to pay for impartial physician testimony that would be added onto the existing system. The Department of Industrial Accidents estimates this to be in excess of $6 million.
- Bump-Pines would create at least four new bureaucracies and would make procedures more complex and time consuming.
- Bump-Pines would penalize employers harshly for innocent recordkeeping errors.

The Administration bill focuses on patterns of abuse.

In short, it is my feeling as a small businessman and as a legislator that the Bump-Pines Bill passed by Commerce and Labor has the potential to make some of the same mistakes the 1985 reform bill made - a bigger Department of Industrial Accidents with higher costs and longer delays for employees, employers and insurance companies.

I plan to offer amendments that would add the cost cutting measures included in the Administration's bill to the Bump-Pines Bill on the floor of the Senate.

If you would like further information on this issue or a summary of the two bills I have referred to, contact my office at 722-1646.

CRIME PACKAGE

The Governor has released his proposal for reinstating capital punishment in Massachusetts. His package also includes elements which could curtail our civil liberties. I will oppose these sections of the Governor's crime package.

I do not believe that it is the proper role of the state to be executing its citizens, and further, I am not convinced that the death penalty provides a deterrent to violent crimes.

Additionally, we must be concerned with changes in this package that would usurp our individual freedoms under the guise of enhancing police powers.

Chamber chatter

By Paula Knowles
Cohasset Chamber of Commerce

As you all should know by now, our annual fundraiser, whose actual name I have promised to neither speak nor write again for at least six months, was held last Saturday night at the Community Center.

Thanks to all those businesses and individuals who donated so unselfishly and bid so generously, the Chamber will not only go on for another year, but add to its agenda. What we will add for this year is a donation of approximately $1,500 to the H.S. Writing Lab fund. It is our hope to be able to donate to some worthy and meaningful project every year after this letter

To the Editor:

We greatly appreciated the very thoughtful Cohasset Mariner editorial which reviewed Boy Scout Troop 28's accomplishments upon the occasion of its Diamond Jubilee observance. Thanks, too, for the recognition you gave to the Troop's many volunteers who served throughout its 75 years.

The 75th anniversary celebration was most enjoyable for all in attendance, from the youngest Tenderfoot to the oldest Eagle Scout. It also gave us the opportunity to announce that former Scouts, Cohasset businesses and residents had contributed an additional $2,000 to our Pape Memorial Scholarship Fund in connection with our anniversary. Ten percent of the endowment is awarded annually to graduating Scouts/Explorers at the Cohasset High School's Senior Awards Night.

We also note that it has been only through such support from local media, businesses, community service organizations, and Cohasset residents that Scouting has flourished for 75 years in Cohasset. In particular, we would like to thank the Cohasset Rotary Club which has sponsored our Troop for the past 35 years. Rotary has been there for our Scouts with financial and material assistance, hosting an annual dinner at the Rotary, and leadership support. We gratefully acknowledge their assistance over the years.

With our sincere thanks to the Cohasset Community,

Geoffrey E. Nothnagle, Sr.,
Chairperson on behalf of the Troop Committee event.

What will make this possible in the coming years is the success or failure of our "Shop Locally" program. To put it bluntly, our capitalistic way of life is based on the process of "one hand washes the other." What does this mean to you? That's easy. If you shop with us, we stay in business, and can then donate not only money, but goods and time to the town. Example: the Chamber members are continually asked why we no longer have the "White Christmas" weekend or put up lights on the common.

Well, instead of getting into the economics or political why's of the matter, the business owners in the Village area have gotten together and agreed to a one night event—Nov. 29, the day after Thanksgiving—to kick off the Christmas season. Lighted windows, decorated shops, carollers, a Christmas Tree on the Common, hayrides, hot cider, and 5% of sales donated to the PSO, and much more. Stop in to any of the stores, shops and restaurants downtown for a full schedule of events.

And while you're there, ask yourself how long it has been since you really LOOKED at the merchandise and services offered...the redecorated Cards & Shards and their great line of children's clothes; the new/old menu at the Red Lion, the prints at Kit 'n Kaboodle, the garden and household items at Cohasset Hardware, or the decorator accessories at Flemings? When was the last time you checked with Goodale Insurance at renewal time to see if Bob could give you a better price or more personal service? When was the last time you tried to match some of the faces with the names you read about all the time?

When was the last time that you read about a committee meeting or charitable group in town that did NOT contain the name of a Cohasset businessperson? How many times do you see the names Bill Baird, Chris Ford, Wayne Sawbuck, Keith Knowles, Jeff Waal? When was the last time you watched a town board meeting on Channel 3 and did NOT hear the name "Bob Davenport"? Did some of you wonder why you never see his face? Well, it is because he is behind the camera that is bringing you the live program. During the day, all of these people are hard working Cohasset business people. But at night and on the weekends they are some of the people who help keep your town alive and growing.

On Monday night the selectmen should have discussed a new policy that was suggested by the Chamber and hashed out by Greg Doyen, Keith Knowles and Bill Higgins. An extension of our "Shop Locally" campaign, this program would make it a policy of the town to always notify Cohasset businesses when goods or supplies are to be purchased or work is going out to bid. We hope you will support this idea and let your selectmen know of your support IN WRITING. Your area businesses want to be competitive, want to stay in Cohasset, want to continue to take part in the life of our Town. Please let our town officials know that you support our efforts.

In other words . . .

As foreign exchange students begin to make their way into South Shore towns for the academic year, it's a good time to reflect on the importance of foreign language studies. All too often this vital area of education is neglected in favor other important subjects like science and math.

When we recall the Genesis story of Babel we see that the harshest punishment meted out after Noah's great flood, was the confusion of languages.

Think about it. On the scale of punishment, just short of global destruction comes non-communication.

Linguist George Steiner has disclosed that there are between five and six-thousand living languages spoken on earth. At one time there may have been as many as 40,000. Still, the five or six-thousand are not to be sneezed at, especially when you factor in dialects. For example, there are over two-thousand recognized dialects in German alone.

While English has become the lingua franca of the modern world, it is a form of cultural and intellectual arrogance to expect others to speak our language. English will continue to grow around the world. Not only because America is still the dominant world culture, but because of the strength and vibrancy of the language itself. With more than 600,000 words English is the most expressive of languages...ever.

On the other hand, as a living entity the language is constantly refreshed and revitalized by both evolving English/Americanisms and foreign importations.

The importance of foreign language study cannot be overestimated for a literate individual and society. By understanding another language we approach understanding and empathy for another culture.

Good translators are always aware of Wittgenstein's dictum, "Tell me how a word means, not what it means." When you speak or read a foreign language you know how another culture perceives reality.

Anyone who has had the pleasure of conversing in a foreign language knows the immediate advantages of same. You are perceived as sympathetic by your listener and the possibility of true dialogue is enhanced.

Those of us who expect the "others" to learn our language are perceived (and rightfully so), as insensitive and demeaning.

While English has nouns for precipitation like rain, sleet, hail and snow and appropriate adjectival modifiers, the Inuit have many words for snow in all the contexts that they live it. These words define a reality of snow that our culture never experiences. They speak of snow as cold, wet, dry, sharp, soft, good for building, good for walking, hard for walking, etc. Their words describe the "moods" of snow...yes moods!

We are told of the economic value of learning foreign languages. Those of us who speak Japanese or Arabic have a commercial foot up on the rest.

But this is not the only value of language study. The ultimate value is the ability to enter another cultural reality...another dimension of humaness.

—Richard Small

Sarabeth Harris honored

The South Shore Psychiatric Clinical Nurse Specialist Group, by a vote of its members at the Sept. 30 meeting, changed its name to the Sarabeth Harris Psychiatric Clinical Nurse Specialist Group, in honor and in memory of Ms. Harris who established the group in 1988. She died in May of 1991.

Ms. Harris was originally from Florida. She came north and studied at Boston University where she earned a Bachelor of Science in Nursing. She returned to her hometown Miami and earned a graduate degree in Family Nurse Practice from the University of Miami. After practicing in the field of geriatrics, she returned to Boston and studied for a Masters Degree in Psychiatric Nursing at Boston College, graduating in 1982. She later completed the Harvard Community Health Plan Fellowship in Psychiatric Nursing. Ms. Harris practiced extensively in the field of psychiatric nursing and was most recently at the Atlantic Counseling Center in Scituate. At the time of her death, Ms. Harris resided in Sharon, Massachusetts with her husband, Jeremiah Dickinson and their daughter Emily Dickinson Harris.

The Sarabeth Harris Psychiatric Clinical Nurse Specialist Group is open to all Psychiatric Nurse Clinical Specialists in practice in the South Shore area. It is a collaborative group which meets semi-monthly at 7 Depot Center, Cohasset, Suite 5. Meetings are a forum to address the various, relevant issues of practice. The next meeting will be held on Monday, Nov. 25 at 7:30 p.m. Subsequent meetings will be on the fourth Monday of every other month.

Bill Ketchum to manage new store

Coastal Power Tool Supply has announced that Cohasset resident Bill Ketchum will manage their new store on Rt. 3 A in Cohasset.

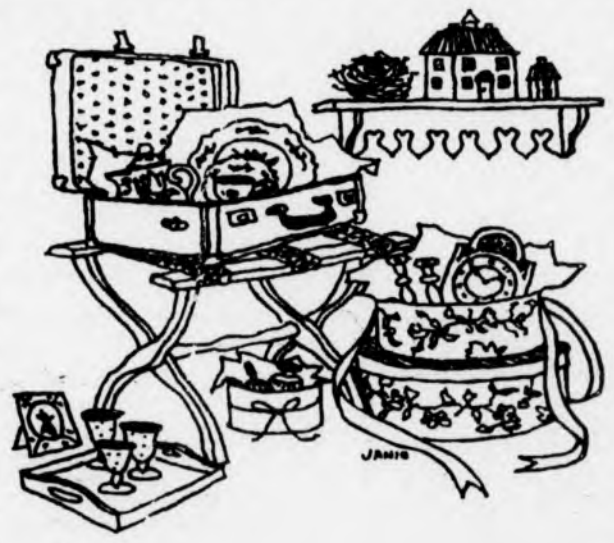
Bill comes to Coastal Power Tool from the Hingham Lumber Co. where he sold retail construction products for over ten years. Ketchum will oversee the new store located next to Sestito's Flower Shop and behind the new Marylou's News Coffee Shop on Rt. 3A. The store will be stocking a complete line of power tools as well as being a tool repair service center.

Coastal Power Tool is affiliated with Scott Powers Machinery of Quincy. Powers' family business has repaired and serviced electric tools for the past thirty years. Makita, Hitachi, Bosch, Porter-Cable and Milwaukee are some of the tools carried at Coastal Tool Supply.

Bill Ketchum is a 1974 graduate of American International College. He and his wife, Debi, are members of the Beechwood Congregational Church. Bill has a son, Ben, and coaches in the Cohasset Youth Baseball Program in the summer and Seahawks Youth Hockey in the winter. Additional information about the new Coastal Tool Supply can be found at 383-2007.

O'Neill selected as local hero

Sally Ann O'Neill has been selected as a local hero by the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association.



She will be honored at a reception at the Pillar House in Newton December 5. The Pillar House was one of the first restaurants in the country to offer totally smoke-free dining.

Formerly a pediatric nurse, Ms. O'Neill now owns Little Harbor Studio, which custom-designs "ecology" homes which are free of products — including plastics, certain paints and stains, preservatives — that can trigger allergic responses or negative reactions in sensitive individuals.

Many typical homes are filled with potential irritants that can set off dizziness, nausea, shortness of breath, and severe allergies in some people.

The local hero program of the Lung Association honors people who are committed to protecting our environment and whose efforts promote lung health.

Nominations for local heroes can be sent to the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association, "The Healthy Lung People," at 25 Spring St., Walpole, MA 02081.

Benefit for writing lab

The P.S.O. announces that the Thursday, Dec. 12 performance of the Cohasset Drama Club's production, "The Homecoming" will be a fundraiser for the Cohasset High School writing lab.

This is an opportunity to support the members of the drama club, help finance the writing lab for the high school students and provide a memorable holiday treat without having to leave Cohasset.

"The Homecoming" is the perfect family play and will appeal to every family member. This is the original play from which "Spencer's Mountain" and "Little House on the Prairie" were adapted.

For tickets, selling for $7 each, $5 for ages under 12 and over 65, please call Donna O'Donnell, 383-6113 or Helene Thornton, 383-2341. Send a check, made payable to Cohasset P.S.O. to Donna O'Donnell, 196 Fairoaks Lane, Cohasset 02025. Seating is limited. Order early to avoid disappointment.

Snowflake Fair

The Beechwood Congregational Church, Church Street, Cohasset, will hold its Snowflake Fair on Saturday, Dec. 7 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Fried bread dough will be served in the morning as well as donuts, along with coffee or tea. The lunch menu will be clam or corn chowder, hot dogs, cold drinks, and holiday cupcakes for dessert.

The aroma of fresh pine wreaths will fill the church hall which will be on display and for sale. Also, a variety of Christmas arrangements and poinsettias will be available to choose from.

Shop at one of the many tables, fancy work, white elephant, food, plant, Christmas ornaments, or candy.

Once again the famous "Beech Glass Candy" will be on display and for sale. Decorated in small glass jars, this candy makes a nice gift to give at Christmas time.

Santa's chimney will be filled with grabs for the children.

For kids only

The Cohasset Community Center has openings in our "For Kids Only" playgroup which starts on Dec. 2. The group meets on Monday and Friday from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. for a period of 10 weeks. The course is appropriate for ages two years, nine months to four-years-old. If your child can function comfortably in a playgroup without you present, he/she will enjoy taking time away from Mom to participate in all the fun, music, games, crafts, stories, free play and group activities available for this age group.

Please call the Center for registration at 383-0088.

College costs talk

The Cohasset Community Center is sponsoring an important one night workshop for parents of college bound students. Bonnie Hepburn, a Certified Financial Planner with Moneysense Financial Planning in Westford, will show you how to lower the cost of college, nursing or technical school and save thousands of dollars. No matter how high or low your income, no matter what the cost of the school, you can make it financially possible for your child to attend any college or university in the country. Topics include: maximizing your eligibility for federal and state financial aid, making the equity in your house work for you instead of against you, and selecting investments that help fund an education rather than increasing cost. This workshop will be held on Thursday evening, Nov. 21, 7 to 9 p.m. The cost is $15 for members of the Cohasset Community Center and $25 for the public. Please call Judy Volungis at 383-0088 to reserve a space in the workshop.

Silent auction vacation

You'd love to take the family on a February ski vacation or your spouse for a ski weekend but the economy has put a damper on your plans. Well, don't shelve the idea just yet...make a bid on several vacation options in the South Shore Art Center's Silent Auction.

A five-night ski vacation near Loon Mountain, February 14-19, can be yours with the right bid. This Lincoln, NH home sleeps eight and includes two queen beds, a four-person bunkroom, two baths, television, VCR, stereo and a fireplace with plenty of wood! A minibus takes you to Loon Mountain, just five minutes away.

If a ski weekend is more to your liking, make a bid for one at Waterville Valley. Or, if you'd rather take to the sea than the slopes, how about a day sail for six people aboard a 30-foot Bolero? Captain and crew will be provided.

Bids for all three options will be accepted at the Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset, through 4 p.m. on Dec. 20. Bids are also being accepted for a one-day cruise of the Cape and Islands for eight people aboard the 65-foot motor yacht, "Fine Print." This cruise, which includes two crew members, has a retail value of $1,800 and a minimum bid of $1,000.

Winners will be announced Dec. 21. The Silent Auction is a fundraiser for the Art Center, a non-profit organization serving all of the South Shore. For more information, call 383-9548.

Art at Bound Brook

The Barn at Bound Brook in Cohasset will present works of ten South Shore area artists at an opening reception to meet the artists on Friday, Nov. 22 from 6 to 8 p.m.

Hung in a festive holiday setting, several pieces from each artist will feature a range of subjects in various media:

Virginia Avery, Marshfield Hill watercolorist known for her florals and garden scenes.

Serena Brundige, and husband John Green are presenting her pastels and oils and his sculptures.

Ralph Contrado of Hull, a designer/illustrator is exhibiting small seascapes in oil.

Becky Haletky of Rockland works in both watercolors and acrylics. Her subjects vary from Boston to Nantucket and England to Greece.

Art Center hosts business

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, will host the South Shore Chamber of Commerce's Business-After-Hours on Dec. 11 from 5 to 6:30 p.m.

In addition to being an advantageous opportunity to network, this particular business-after-hours will also enable business people to view three exhibits showing at the Art Center. The Folk Art Exhibition, showcasing the talents of 13 local and regional folk artists, the SSAC Gallery Artist Exhibition, and the SSAC's Faculty Feature, Helen-Babis Licare of Cohasset, will all be on display.

And, since it is the season to be shopping, the Art Center's Gift Gallery offers creative choices for the boss, the secretary, and co-workers with its diverse selection of pottery, jewelry, scarves, desk accessories, wooden giftware, sculpture, frameable art, Christmas ornaments, cards, and more.

Where else can you accomplish business, personal, and holiday shopping goals all in one evening? Call the Chamber at 479-1111 for reservations $8 Chamber members; $13 non-members.

Artist signs Nov. 23

Award winning children's book author and illustrator, Jan Brett, will introduce and sign her latest book, Berlioz The Bear, Saturday, Nov. 23 from 10 a.m. to noon at Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset.

Jan's inspiration for Berlioz The Bear, came from her husband, Joe Hearne, who is a bass player in the Boston Symphony. Children will be delighted with the adventures of Berlioz, the bass-playing bear, as he tries to get to a concert gala on time. Berlioz The Bear, will be a worthy addition to any reader's prized collection of Brett books.

Brett has received many inspirations from her travels. In Berlioz The Bear, in addition to a wonderful setting, her characters are dressed in gorgeous Bavarian costumes. "From cave paintings, to Norwegian sleighs, to Japanese gardens, I study the traditions of the many countries I visit, and use them as a starting point for my children's books," says Brett.

Brett's other written and illustrated books include, The Wild Christmas Reindeer, Annie and the Wild Animals, and Fritz and the Beautiful Horses. Books illustrated by Jan Brett include, The Owl and the Pussycat, The Twelve Days of Christmas, The Mitten, Beauty and the Beast, and Goldilocks and the Three Bears.

Brett grew up in Hingham. She attended Colby-Sawyer College in New Hampshire and the Boston Museum School. Jan and her husband, Joseph Hearne, live in Norwell.

Ladies First performed at Cohasset High School

Boston actress Robin Lane will perform "Ladies First," a one-woman show which dramatizes the lives of some of America's first ladies, December 8, 2 p.m. at Cohasset High School, 143 Pond Street. Tickets are $10 and may be reserved by calling 383-6191. Proceeds will benefit Cohasset Council on Aging.

In recognition of the White House Bicentennial, Robin Lane, a descendant of Abigail Adams, will add her illustrious ancestor to the group of first ladies she portrays in "Ladies First."

John and Abigail Adams were the first president and first lady to occupy the White House. When the first family moved into their new home, it was still unfinished and poorly staffed.

"Not a single room has been finished, and the damp plaster walls chill any room without a fire," says Robin Lane as Abigail. To which she adds, "Forgive me for not being properly attired to greet guests; the first lady has been hanging laundry in the East Room."

Abigail Adams was a highly intelligent woman, who was supportive of her husband, yet quite independent. She's the only woman in American history to be the wife of one president — John Adams, and the mother of another — John Quincy Adams.

In addition to Abigail Adams, "Ladies First" portrays Rachel Jackson, Julia Tyler, Mary Lincoln, Eleanor Roosevelt, and Jacqueline Kennedy. In her entertaining but accurate portrayals, Ms. Lane presents the first wives as they really were: thoughtful, caring human beings whose lives were profoundly affected by their husbands' calling.

As well as having pure entertainment value, "Ladies First," which has been presented in theatres and on college campuses throughout the United States may be seen as living history. While preparing the production, Robin Lane painstakingly researched the lives of the first ladies. She spent hours at the Roosevelt Library in Hyde Park, New York, and at the Kennedy Library in Boston looking at films and listening to recordings to authenticate the mannerisms and vocal inflections of Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Kennedy. She also conferred with historians at the Lincoln home in Springfield, Illinois and the Jackson home in Hermitage, Tennessee.

One reviewer said of "Ladies First," "Actress Robin Lane brings her first ladies to startling life through the use of costumes, props, a poetically-written script, a vivid imagination and creative performing artistry."

Ski lessons

The recreation department will conduct Blue Hill ski lesson registration Thursday, Nov. 21 at the recreation office, Cohasset town hall, between the hours of 2:30 and 4 p.m. and from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Registration forms must be signed by a parent or guardian for participation in this five-week program. Beginner through advanced level instruction is available for children and youth ages seven and over. Lessons are scheduled to begin on Thursday, Jan. 9, and meet until Thursday, Feb. 6. The bus will leave each week from town hall parking lot at 3:30 p.m. and return from Blue Hills at about 6:45 p.m.

The fee for ski lessons and transportation is $75, and checks should be made payable to: Town of Cohasset. Those participants who require equipment rentals may rent at Blue Hills, and the cost for the rental package is $40 per person. The rental fee can be included in the check for the program fee. This is the 16th year that ski lessons at Blue Hills have been offered.

Drama Workshops

The recreation department will accept telephone registrations for Drama Workshops for children and youth age 5 to 17. Instructing the drama programs will be Darcy Pratt of the Cohasset Dramatic Club. The first session is scheduled to begin on Saturday, Dec. 7, at Cohasset High School from 9 to 10:30 a.m. for ages 5 to 9, and 10:30 to noon for ages 10 and over.

The fee for the 7-week session is $54 per child, and a $10 family discount for subsequent children is available. Checks should be payable to "Town of Cohasset." Drama Workshops are designed to orientate children and youth to the many aspects of the theatre and play production and to teach and reenforce the various skills and techniques essential to stage acting.

Participants with or without prior acting experience are encouraged to register. To register, please call the Cohasset recreation department office at 383-6791.

December Ski Trip

The recreation department will accept registrations for the season's first ski trip, scheduled for Sunday, Dec. 15, to Loon Mountain, Lincoln, NH. The cost of this trip is $42 per person, and the trip will be limited to the first 45 registered. Bus will leave from Cohasset town hall at 5:15 a.m. Sunday, Dec. 15, and return at approximately 7 p.m. that evening to town hall. Special beginner packages are available to first-time skiers, and those who require equipment rentals should indicate this at registration. Rental of equipment is $14, and cash should be brought the day of the trip for rental payment. Ski lessons cost $12, and cash should be brought on the trip.

Registration confirmation is receipt of payment. Telephone reservations will hold seats for one week. Checks payable to: Town of Cohasset are requested for payment. Non-resident youth will be accepted for this trip should space be available. The trip will be chaperoned by recreation department ski chaperones, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Bestick.

Recreation Booster's Basketball

Anyone in grades one to nine not yet registered for Booster's basketball should contact the recreation office immediately.

Volleyball

Anyone interested in playing volleyball may call the Cohasset Recreation office at 383-6791.

Open gym - CHS

The recreation department will sponsor free, open gym at Cohasset High School during the month of November on Wednesday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m.

Supervising the Open Gym will be Matt Salarno and Arnie Reppucci of Cohasset High School.

Open Gym is available to girls and boys in junior and senior high school. No pre-registration is necessary; however, a pre-established limit of participants will be allowed in the gym at one time. Participants should wear sneakers on the gym floor, and no food/drink is allowed. Open Gym will conclude Wednesday, Nov. 27.

Leo's Exxon Tiger Cubs improve against Hawks

By John Kinchla

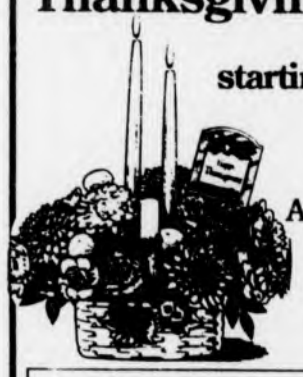
Veteran left winger, 9th grader, Anthony Wigmore skated well, sparked the offense and blocked some big Hawk shots; Guy Scarpaci scored the lone Tiger Cub goal on a solo charge along the right wing, in a game that had the early benchmarks of a close contest. The Tiger Cubs were defeated but they keep looking better each week.

The visiting Hawks' first goal was a "classic" right-to-left pass play across the crease. Cohasset was flatfooted with three Hawk players within six feet of goalie Kevin McKenna. Cohasset defenders were effectively boxed out.

The Tiger Cubs made their usual share of mistakes in this game. Passes that should have been shot into the opponents' end were intercepted at the blue line. Weak clearing passes within the Cohasset zone failed to escape past the blue line.

On a positive note, though, Cohasset defensemen Kevin Smith, Nevin Bunstien, Greg Schultz, Matt O'Connor and Jared Graves made many diving defensive plays. Center Dave Hansen also blocked shots from his position. Goalie Kevin McKenna played cat-like in the goal.

After 20 minutes of play, Cohasset began to get their offense going. Dave Noble angled a shot on net but missed. Matt O'Connor then stopped two Hawk drives with bone-crunching checks along the boards.



The Hawks, however, eventually sprang free and submarined a push pass under McKenna. At the 25-minute mark, the Tigers looked fatigued. Tom Kittle came alive though, and strided with the puck into the Hawk end. Jared Graves played as if chased by demons, clearing the puck time and time again.

At the 30-minute mark, goalie Jeff Tosi entered the game for Kevin McKenna and the Hawks tested him immediately. They scored on a deflected slap shot, while Tosi stopped another attempt from point blank range.

The Cubs lit up the scoreboard with Scarpaci's goal at the 34-minute mark. While seconds later Kevin Smith checked the Hawks' big man #9 from in front of Tosi, and Joe Magner chipped in with another check that freed Dave Hansen who tried another poke stuff on the Hawk net.

Cohasset could not clear the puck and the Hawks scored again. Brendan Kinchla missed several nice opportunities attempting to steer away from the Hawk defensemen and Brian Riley got the goal. The Cohasset big "little" men are playing with lots of heart. This Friday the team plays the Weymouth Selects at 6:10 p.m. The team practices again on Sunday at 1 p.m. at the Cohasset High tennis courts.

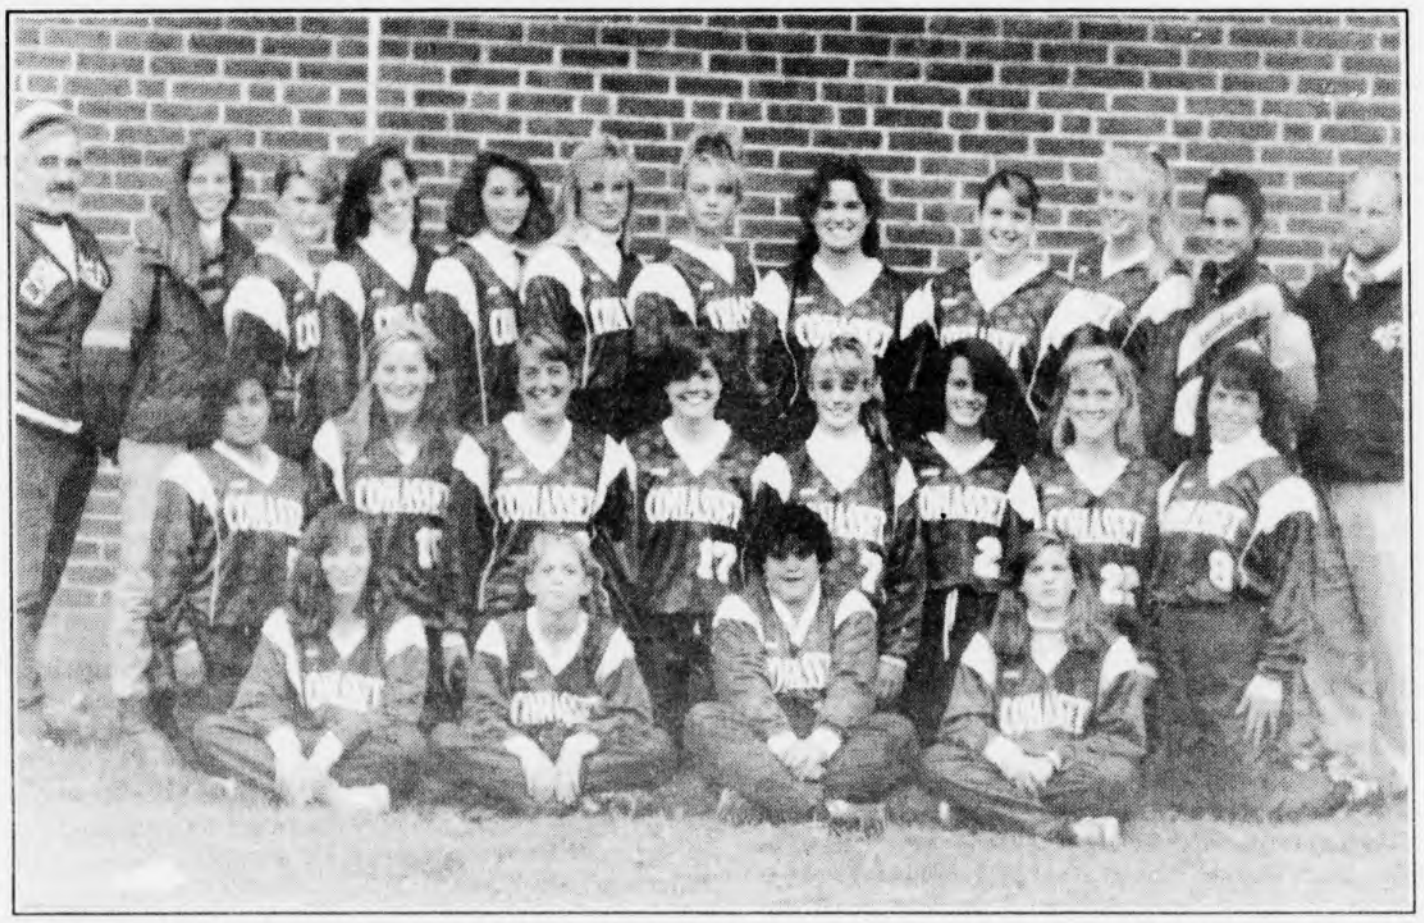
Varsity girls' soccer team has their most successful season

By Jack O'Brien



The Cohasset High School Girls' Varsity Soccer team completed its most successful season Nov. 7 when it lost in the South Sectional semi-final game to third-seeded Holliston High school by a score of 2-1. The game was extremely physical, and, except for a scramble in front of the Cohasset goal with 17 minutes to play, it was difficult to see a difference between the two teams. This was the same Holliston team that, two days earlier, had "routed" Abington, the South Shore League champion, by a score of 6-0. the game started out with both teams carefully measuring each other's abilities and skills. Midway through the first half, on what at first appeared to be an outstanding defensive play, Cohasset was called for a penalty on their own 20-yard line. On a set play the Holliston midfielder placed a perfect "indirect kick" just under the cross bar for a 1-0 lead. About ten minutes later Holliston was called for a penalty at their 25-yard line and Cohasset senior stopper Heidi Lincoln, a South Shore League All-Star, scored her first goal of the season on the ensuing "direct kick." The score was tied at 1-1, and remained so until late in the second half. With 17 minutes left in the game Holliston was awarded a "corner kick." Although it appeared that Cohasset was going to clear the ball, a "scramble" took place on the goalie's rebound and the ball was kicked in for the winning goal. Cohasset did not let up and, as the final whistle blew, they were still attacking the Holliston net. This was an extremely well-played game by two outstanding teams. Holliston went on to defeat top-seeded Dover-Sherborn for the South Sectional title.

Cohasset finished the season with a 14-5-2 record. They were second in the South Shore League, and had three league all-stars, seniors Jen Reidy and Heidi Lincoln, and junior Allison Ludlow. Reidy was also one of the league's leading scorers, and senior goalie Heather Bass was among the league's best goalkeepers. All of this was a tribute to their coach, Kennan Startzel. Although the team had many accomplishments during the season their 3-0 win over second-seeded Cardinal Spellman in the South Sectional Quarterfinals was the "high" point. Employing an all -ut "team effort" they ran the Cardinals off their own field.

This Cohasset team was made up of outstanding players from all four high school grades. The starting lineup included five seniors, two juniors, one sophomore, and three freshmen. They did not lose to arch-rivals Rockland, Hanover, or Norwell for the first time in anyone's memory. Unfortunately they were not able to overcome the stigma of Abington. A "sage" has told me, however, that next year Abington will be "ripe for the picking."

The seven seniors, Jen Reidy, Heidi Lincoln, Heather Bass, Linda Hague, Lisa Coates, Amy Gallant, and Stephanie Eno, along with senior team manager Ann Margaret Grew, are to be congratulated for their career contributions to the development and success of this team. Well done girls, and best wishes to you all!

And to the remaining juniors, sophomores, freshmen, junior varsity, and Junior High School players, let's not dwell on these accomplishments. Let's get ready to "flatten" Norwell, Hanover, East Bridgewater, Carver, Rockland, Norton, and especially Abington in 1992. Coach Startzell assures us that you'll have more "Nausets and Stoughtons," and less "King Phillips" for your non-league games next season! I think he mentioned Duxbury and Whitman-Hanson!

Glasnost comes to South Shore youth hockey

By David McKee
Mariner staff

A little bit of glasnost was evident on hockey rinks throughout eastern Massachusetts the past few weeks as a team of 10- and 11-year-olds from the Soviet Union completed a 19-day exhibition series against teams from the South Shore and Cape Cod.

Last Sunday, the team played in their final game against the Hingham Squirt A's before heading home to the city of Kiev in the Ukraine Republic.

However, the wear and tear of staying with several different host families and playing dozens of games in a short time showed as the team was shut out by a 3-0 score.

As the Kiev players left the ice at the Rockland Arena, they were visibly distraught about ending their trip on a losing note.

"Sometime the game is nice and sometime is not," said Dimitri Korchac, 15, a Kiev native who travelled with and helped coach the team.

Korchac was the only person making the trip from Kiev who could speak English.

"Talk slow, please," he requested. He said he had been speaking English for only several months.

"Most of the time, we play a good game," he said. "But the players very tired. They play 20, 25 games and live in three different towns."

However, Korchac was eager to talk about how much the team enjoyed its first trip to America.

"American families very nice to us," he said. "They treat us well and make us comfortable."

As for seeing America for the first time, Korchac said America was "very big with many stores." He also said the team was having a great time.

The team from Kiev arrived in Massachusetts Nov. 1.

They are not the first team from the Soviet Union to travel to Massachusetts to play hockey exhibitions. The exchanges have been going on for the past five years.

But this was the first time for the Kiev players and for the town of Hingham.

The Kiev players stayed with the families of players on the South Shore Dynamo Select Squirt team for the first part of the trip in early November.

They also stayed with families from the Cape Cod Select Squirt team and ended their trip by living with Hingham players' families.

Last Tuesday the Kiev players boarded a bus at the South Shore Country Club that was bound for New York's JFK airport.

Charles Hayes, 10, a player on the Hingham Squirt B team, hosted Kiev player Andre Beddilo for the last part of the trip.

"Andre is nice," Hayes said. "We get along great. He likes to have fun by pulling jokes. He'll do stuff like pull your hat down, or come up and trip you from behind."

As for playing against the players from Kiev, Hayes said, "They are really good players. You can tell they know hockey."

The Kiev players won most of the games they played as they showed superior skating and passing ability.

Hingham's Paul Paget, who coaches the Mite hockey team, hosted Kiev player Eugene Vitvitsky.

"These kids are just like any other 10- or 11-year olds," he said. "They like to have fun, and they get along great with the other kids even with the language barrier."

However Paget noticed a dangerous growing trend that could spread to the U.S.S.R.

"The Kiev kids all love Nintendo," he said. "They saw it and just went crazy. I think given a choice, many would rather play Nintendo than hockey."

In addition to playing hockey, the Kiev players visited Boston and other nearby historical areas.

On Monday the players watched the Boston Bruins practice.

Joe Griffin, president of Hingham Youth Hockey, said the trip has been a smashing success for all involved and he will try to arrange for another exchange program.

"This has turned out better than we ever expected," he said. "The adults these kids stayed with all grew up during the Cold War era and never expected to have a child from the Soviet Union stay in their home.

"But this trip has opened a lot of eyes, and we've really learned a lot about each other. We found out that kids are kids no matter where they are from."

Collective bargaining continues for teachers

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The school committee zipped through most of the agenda at last week's meeting, but an executive session kept them from making an early evening of it.

The committee discussed a new evaluation tool for professional staff and continued collective bargaining negotiations with the teacher's union during the executive session.

Superintendent Stephen Hart declined to comment on the ongoing negotiations other than to say that steady progress is being made.

"There are a lot of financial considerations," he added.

Hart would not predict when the negotiations might be completed.

"Obviously, we would like to have a contract soon," he said. " We're working with the teachers' negotiating team."

The school committee accepted the resignation of Jean O'Malley. O'Malley plans to retire after the Christmas vacation. She has taught art in the elementary grades for 25 years.

Hart awarded the Certificate of Academic Excellence to Carole Smith. The award is given annually by the Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents to the top-ranking student in the senior class.

Carole is the daughter of Peter and Mary Ellen Smith of Fisher Road.

In other business, the committee appointed:

• Barbara Marcus to a part-time position as occupational therapist for the entire school system.

• Paula Knowles as coach of the girls' junior varsity basketball team. It will be her first year as coach.

• Laureen White as coach of the varsity girls' basketball team. White is returning to Cohasset after teaching elsewhere.

• Ron Ford as coach of the boys' junior varsity basketball team. Ford is in his first year as a part-time physical education teacher at the high school.

senior center news

By Kathy Brayanton
Director, Senior Center

The skyrocketing cost of Medicare supplemental health insurance (Medigap Insurance) is bankrupting the state's elderly. Over the last decade, Medex Insurance premiums (the largest medigap insurance plan) have increased by 300 percent. Last year's 67 percent Medex increase alone wiped out ten years of modest Social Security cost-of-living increases received by seniors. In 1990 alone, 62,000 seniors either dropped or down-graded their Medex coverage due to high premiums.

The House of Representatives will soon be considering House Bill 5530, an amendment to House Bill 6100, which seeks to subsidize Medigap Insurance for low income senior citizens. House 5530 has been unanimously approved by the Insurance Committee and is currently before the House Ways and Means Committee.

The Lambert Amendment to House 6100 would establish a $68 million trust fund to subsidize Medigap premiums for seniors with incomes under 250 percent of the poverty level. Funding from this subsidy would come from the "Free Care Pool", not general state revenues. The actual cost to the pool would be lower than $68 million because thousands of seniors who currently use the Free Care Pool would, instead enable 158,000 low income seniors to purchase health insurance by providing annual subsidies ranging from $400 to $750 on a sliding fee scale.

For further detailed information, call the Council on Aging on Fridays and ask for Pat Ryan, SHINE Coordinator. She will be happy to assist you.

The C.O.A. has received an invitation from the Cohasset High School Music Department, to attend its annual Holiday Concert, to be held Wednesday, Dec. 18, in the High School Auditorium, at 7:30 p.m. We would like to see a good number of our Seniors attend this program as it is always so well done by the students under the expert direction of Bryan Marks, choral director and Colleen Wheeler, band director. The senior shuttle will be available to all those seniors who might need transportation.

CHRISTMAS CONCERT BY SOUTH SHORE MEN OF HARMONY

Will be held at Hingham High School, Saturday, Dec. 7, at 2 p.m. This concert is free to our Senior Citizens and tickets are available at the COA Office. The Senior Shuttle will be available for all those interested. Call and make your reservation now at 383-9112.

FRIENDS OF THE COUNCIL ON AGING FUND RAISER

On Sunday, Dec. 8, at Cohasset High School, the Friends of the COA are bringing another Robin Lane, "Queen of Back Bay," production to Cohasset. In "Ladies First," a one-woman dramatic production, Lane portrays six of America's first ladies - Dignified Jackie Kennedy, strong-willed Eleanor Roosevelt, compulsive Mary Lincoln, regal Julia Tyler, defiant Rachel Jackson, and for the first time on the South Shore, Abigail Adams, are equally presented in the kaleidoscopic view of history.

One reviewer said of "Ladies First," Actress Robin Lane brings her first ladies to startling life through the use of costumes and props, a poetically-written script, a vivid imagination and creative performing artistry."

Tickets are on sale now, the cost is $10, and proceeds will go towards supporting the Vista and Senior Center programming. Call and make your reservation now at 383-9112. You'll be glad you did. Donit forget Sunday, Dec. 7, 2:00 p.m., at Cohasset High School.

SANTA'S KITCHEN - PROJECT BREAD

Come to the Senior Center and help decorate wooden spoons to be brought to Downtown Crossing, Saturday, Dec. 7, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. For every spoon you create, a generous friend will donate $10 to Project Bread - to help feed hungry children and families in Massachusetts this holiday season. You may decorate any type of spoon your own special way at home if you prefer and bring them to Dorothy to be included. During the month of December the spoons go to Filenes' Basement stores where customers may bring them home to decorate their trees. Call the center now at 383-9112 and let us know if you will join Dorothy's classes on Tuesday, Nov. 26, from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

MORE DATES TO REMEMBER

Town declared disaster in storm aftermath

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Selectmen officially declared "a major disaster" occurred in town as a result of the October's no-name nor'easter. The action permits the town to exceed appropriations for repairing roads, bridges and seawalls.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon remains optimistic about reimbursement from federal disaster relief funds, but he isn't waiting by the mailbox. Cohasset has yet to receive promised reimbursement funds for cleanup and repairs resulting from Hurricane Bob.

Selectmen agreed to press forward with the work even if funds must come from town sources. Town officials fear more extensive damage from winter storms if the repairs to the seawall and surrounding areas is not made.

"I think it would be foolhardy to go through the winter without making the repairs," selectman Diana Kornet said.

"We would never agree to a scenario where we just didn't do the work," Selectman Jane Goedecke added.

The declaration authorizes highway superintendent Harold Litchfield to spend up to $100,000 to remove sand from the marshes and beach parking lot, reset stones in the seawall and begin road repairs. Litchfield must work against a Dec. 31 state deadline for completing emergency work in the environmentally sensitive areas.

Doyon estimates total repair bill may exceed $200,000.

If notification is sent to the state Department of Environmental Protection prior to Nov. 30, the town should be able to repair storm damage without going through the usual hearing process.

Other work, such as repair of the riprap at the end of Forest Avenue, must go out to bid. The board worried that the work could not be completed before the deadline expires.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson told the board the town would benefit even if federal reimbursement does not come through. The state's emergency environmental regulations permit the town to bypass costly engineering studies required under regular conservation commission hearings.

Paul Corbett told selectmen the Sandy Beach Association has already begun to remove debris and replace sand on the beach. He promised to coordinate efforts with Litchfield.

Corbett also said the association hoped to erect a snow fence parallel to the stone wall to reduce problems caused drifting and blowing sand.

"Maybe we can keep it on our own side of the fence," he joked.

Old Colony Chapter D.A.R.

The November meeting of the Old Colony Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution was a joint meeting with the Colonel Thomas Lothrop Chapter of Cohasset and was held at the Parish House of the Unitarian Church of Cohasset.

The meeting, which was preceded by a tea served by members of the Col. Lothrop Chapter, was attended by the state regent. Mrs. James Lucas and several state officers.

The National D.A.R. was organized on Oct. 11, 1890 for historic, educational, and patriotic purposes and Mrs. Lucas spoke of the challenges facing the D.A.R. in its second century of service.

David Wadsworth, the main speaker, gave an interesting and informative talk on the history of the Lothrop family who settled on the South Shore before Cohasset had separated from Hingham as a township, and when that section of Hingham was known by the Indian name of Quinahasset. The Col. Thomas Lothrop Chapter honors the memory of the Lothrop family for their valuable contributions to the town of Cohasset.

Child care available

First Parish Nursery School at 24 River Street in Norwell Center is offering child care on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday afternoons from 12:30 to 3 p.m. at a cost of $3 per hour.

A child may also come in an hour earlier at 11:30 a.m. with lunch and also stay for the lunch bunch hour. This program is open to any child 2 years, 9 months to 7 years of age who is toilet trained.

The Cohasset Chapter of the Daughter of the American Revolution, DAR, celebrated its 95th anniversary Nov. 13 with a special presentation at First Parish Church. Club members from left are: seated, Rebecca Bates-McArthur, treasurer; Mimi Lucas, state DAR regent; Claire Tinory, Cohasset chapter regent; Barbara Dillon, secretary; standing, Vi Tuthill, Kit Bursk, Martha Douglas and Ann Pompeo.

CHS talent show

Cohasset High School Class of 1992 will present a Senior Class Show Friday, Nov. 22 at the Cohasset High School Auditorium. The show will begin at 8 p.m. The charge at the door will be $5 per person. The show is filled with many different acts. Such as, comedy scenes, monologues (comedy), vocals, (solo groups), lip sync numbers and dance numbers. The directors are John Kisiel, Carole Smith, and Ali Welz. The producer is Ron Emmons and the choreographer is Sharon Weber.

Art display

Currently on view at CHS is a traveling Art Forum Exhibition

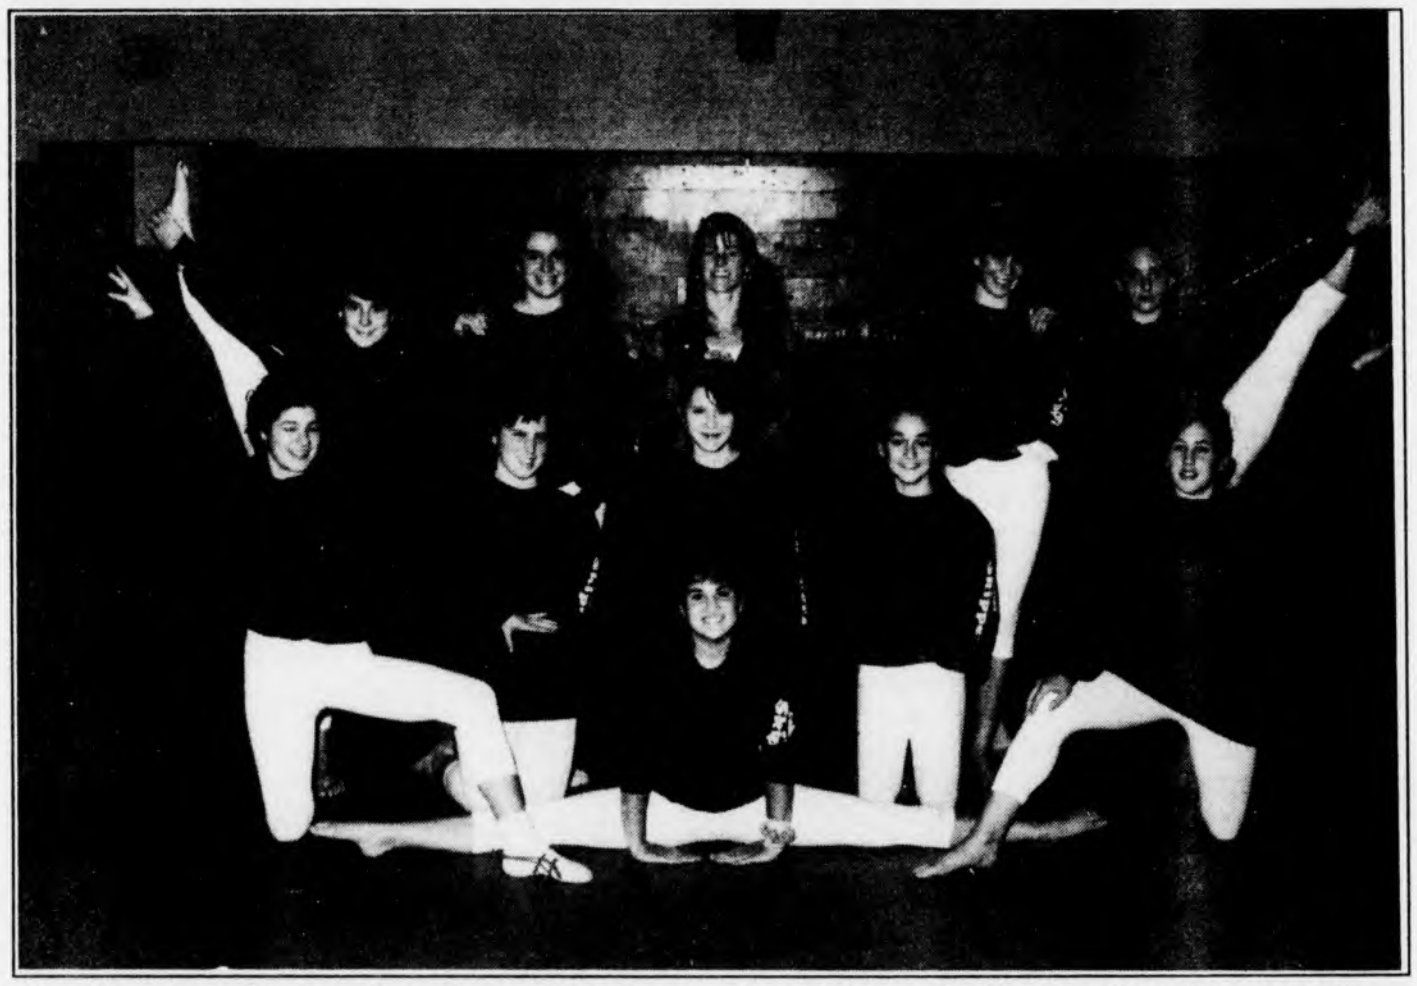
A group of student art work from Scituate, Duxbury, Silver Lake, Cohasset and Norwell will be on display at these schools throughout the year.

The art teachers are members of Art Forum, a group that meets monthly to discuss art, life and learning:

They are Stacy Hendrickson of Scituate; Alice Ohannessian of Duxbury; Barbara Bluhm and Marie Peters of Silver Lake; Dorothy Bazan of Norwell and Colleen Lucas of Cohasset.

Freedom and consequence

Thursday, Nov. 21, a multi-media presentation called Code Blue will be shown at the high school.



The objectives of this program are to explore the ways teenagers can gain freedom and independence and to understand the responsibility and consequences that accompany the freedom to choose. The program deals with many aspects of responsibility in teenage life from the decision to think or not, to the decision of what music to listen to, this program also deals with the common problem of lack of communication between a parent and a child. Following the presentation there will be discussion revolving around the issues focused on in the program.

Grade 7 team news

STARS OF THE MONTH

The following grade seven students have been chosen "Stars of the Month" for October in recognition of their outstanding academic and/or athletic achievement:

Robert Buckley, Catherine Campbell, Lauren Cassino, Jennifer Cellucci, Emily Collins, Kathleen Fitzsimmons, Emily Henderson, Josephine Hurley, Ely Kahn, Leah Kissiel, Jon-Paul Locks, Cara McKenney, David Noble, Liz Bestick, Andrea Freeman, Andrea Grew, Rebecca Jenkins, Brett Leahy, Liz Mahoney, Matt Rossi and Jessie Sandell

The CHS gymnastics team is ready to with balance and precision under the direction of Coach Ruthann Sargent.

Trim a tree for wildlife

Naturalist Barbara Devine will show children ages 5 and older how to create garlands of cranberries and popcorn and peanut butter pine cones, Friday, Dec. 6, 3:30 - 4:30 p.m., or Saturday, Dec. 7, 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. Science Center members/$5. Non-members/$7. Tempt birds, squirrels, and other animals to your yard. Give local wildlife a holiday treat while you learn the food needs and habits of wild animals.

Recycled birdfeeders

Naturalist Dick Eaton will teach children ages 8 and older to make recycled birdfeeders, Saturday, Dec. 7, 10 a.m. - noon. Science Center members/$6. Non-members/$8. Search your trash for milk cartons, plastic water bottles, or onion bags. These are some of the recycled items that make great birdfeeders. Bring a few to class and make wonderful holiday gifts for family and friends (the birds will be happy, too). All other supplies provided. Take home a starter bag of bird seed for your feeder.

Natural history programs

Join Science Center naturalists for "drop-in" natural history programs, Saturdays, 10 - 10:30 a.m. and Sundays, 1-1:30 p.m. Science Center members/free. Non-members/$2. The whole family will enjoy nature walks, stories, or crafts. Face painting follows each program. Call (617) 659-2559 each weekend for the program topic. Preregistration is not required.

Is Your Child Caught In A Failure Chain℠?

Your child may need help with weak study skills or poor reading or math skills. Some daydream or talk too much in class, and some are unmotivated or lack confidence, despite good IQs.

Improve school skills while there's still time. Our certified teachers help students overcome frustration and failure. A few hours a week can help gain the Educational Edge and see how much fun learning really is.

Individual testing and tutoring in Reading, Study Skills, Writing, Phonics, Spelling, Math, SSAT and SAT prep. Also, Subject Tutoring.

Students score high at Cohasset High School

Eight students at Cohasset High School have been recognized by the College Board for exceptional achievement on the college-level Advanced Placement (AP) Examinations they took through May 1991. Only about 10 percent of the 359,000 students who took AP Examinations last May performed at a sufficiently high level to merit such recognition.

The College Board recognizes three levels of achievement - the AP Scholar with Distinction, the AP Scholar with Honor, and the AP Scholar.

At Cohasset High School two students qualified for the AP Scholar with Distinction Award by earning grades of 3 or above on five or more AP Exams with an average exam grade of at least 3.50. These students are: Michael Cisneros and Douglas Moe.

Two students qualified for the AP Scholar with Honor Award by earning grades of 3 or above on four or more AP examinations, with an average exam grade of at least 3.25. These students are: Kristin Martin and Andrew Ross.

Four students qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP Examinations with grades of 3 or higher. The AP Scholars are: Jennifer Plante, Sophie Redfield, Caleb Slotnick and Tara Volungis.

AP Examinations, which students take in May after completing challenging college-level courses, are graded on a 5-point scale (5 is the highest). Most of the nation's colleges and universities award credit and/or placement for grades of 3 or higher, and more than 1,200 institutions award a year of credit to students with a sufficient number of qualifying grades. There are 29 AP Examinations in 16 disciplines, each with multiple-choice and free-response (essay or problem-solving) questions.

The College Board is a national, nonprofit membership association of more than 2,800 schools and agencies in higher and secondary education committed to promoting educational opportunity and improving academic standards. The Board sponsors programs in guidance, assessment, admissions, placement, financial aid, and credit by examination to assist in the school-to-college transition of some four million students each year.

Privatization of the water department?

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset Water Commissioners know that the water that leaves the water plant at the King Street reservoir is an excellent product.

A new ruling (published June 7) by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is going to ensure both public and private water buyers that the product that leaves plants is the same product coming out of their taps.

As a result of the need to comply with new environmental mandates, and to meet them as efficiently and inexpensively as possible, water commissioners voted Nov. 20 to invite a group called Professional Services Group (PSG) to their Dec. 11 meeting to

Storm costs may include parking

A letter of complaint from an irate Hull resident turned the selectmen's meeting a tad tumultuous when selectman Rocco Laugelle rose to her defense and criticized his fellow selectmen for not following suit.

According to selectmen chairman Ned Tebbetts, the woman wrote a long letter detailing problems she incurred while trying to assess damage to her home on Summit Avenue in Hull during the October 30 storm.

She freely admits she parked her car illegally on Forest Avenue. During the half-hour the car was left on the street, it was ticketed and towed. She complains that the towing company refused to give her a receipt although she paid in cash. She was also distressed when the police officers who issued the ticket refused to discuss the matter with her.

The Hull resident wants her parking ticket voided. As yet, the town has taken no action.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle demanded the town void the ticket.

"It's the least we can do to help the lady out with her expenses," he insisted. Although there is no question the car was parked illegally, Laugelle found her circumstances extenuating and felt the officers should have gotten out and spoken with her about the ticket.

"This was a little different," he said. "It was an extreme emergency on her part."

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon told Laugelle it was the policy of the police department not to discuss parking tickets. He also said although her letter is dated Nov. 6, it was not received until Nov. 19.

Although selectman Jane Goedecke agreed the towing company should have issued a receipt on the spot, she was not prepared to criticize the conduct of police officers when they were not present to give their side of the incident.

Hiring a new fire chief is hot issue

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Selectman Martha Gjesteby wanted a sense of what the board was looking for in a new fire chief and how much they were willing to pay to get it. What she got was a heated discussion.

Gjesteby raised the issue to prepare for the interviews of the top four candidates scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 26. Town officials screened 65 resumes and finished with a field of 15 semifinalists. The contract of the current fire chief, Daniel Brock, expires at the end of December.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon said a couple of the top candidates are from northern New England. Not all of the candidates are currently working as fire chiefs, but all of them are experienced.

Gjesteby asked the board whether they wished to set a ceiling on the salary they would pay.

"This is a different fiscal climate that we've had," she said.

According to Gjesteby, Brock receives a base salary of $49,045 plus health and life insurance and pension contributions.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said she preferred to leave salary considerations open to negotiation, with the understanding that the benefit package would be the same offered to all employees.

"We may have to discuss relocation costs," she added.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle strenuously objected.

"No. Not in a million years would I go for that," he said. Laugelle said the future chief should pay his own relocation expenses.

Cohasset's week

Green for safety

Selectmen authorized a request for transfer of $600 from the reserve fund for traffic safety improvements in Cohasset village.

Some of the money will be used to install a stop sign and a speed limit sign and paint a stop line on Elm Street. The bulk of the money will be used to add fluorescent green paint to five pedestrian crosswalks.

The crosswalks getting the psychedelic zebra treatment are located at the intersection of Depot Court and Main Street, at the hardware store, in front of Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, between Brown's and the art center and between Brown's and the community center.

Selectmen made their approval contingent on a clarification that the crosswalks would be painted in the same fashion as the crosswalks in Hingham's center.

Pearl Harbor remembered

Members of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars plan to mark the fiftieth anniversary of Pearl Harbor with a ceremony at Memorial Park.

The ceremony is slated to begin at 9 a.m.

Anti-drug fest

This year residents won't have a chance to experience post-holiday letdown. The drug free weekend sponsored by the drug and alcohol abuse committee promises to be an upbeat winter festival.

Plans for the weekend of Jan. 31-Feb. 2 include basketball games against Carver high school, an ice sculpture contest, teen and adult semi-formal dances and a high school volleyball tournament.

Insurance news

In a year when little financial news has been good news, selectmen got a rare treat this week. Sam Wakeman, chairman of the insurance advisory committee, told them Cohasset's property and liability insurance policies were renewed on a "virtually level-funded basis. So far."

Wakeman said the town just received the auto insurance renewals and he was still reviewing documents.

Janet Lamp and her decorator Kathleen Fox get ready for the Cohasset Community Garden Club's Holiday Images House Tour which is scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 5. (John Stobierski staff photo)

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon added that the town is in the third year of a three-year policy. The town will have to put the insurance coverage out to bid next summer.

Sandy Beach work underway

The Sandy Beach Association began restoring its property this week as closely as possible to its pre-Halloween storm condition. Following submission to the state and the town of an emergency plan to restore the beach and the beach house, work has begun under contract with Rosano-Davis. This removal of debris and moving stone and sand back onto the beach is being coordinated with the town Highway Department. The town has declared an emergency status in hopes of receiving money from the federal government for its part of this work. The cost of work on Sandy Beach itself and the beach house is borne entirely by the Association.

Already some generous donations have been received from friends of Sandy Beach and it is hoped that more will arrive before the end of this year. (Sandy Beach Association, 130 Linden Drive, Cohasset, MA 02025).

Fire chief . . .

Selectman Diana Kornet tried to make the benefit more palatable to Laugelle by saying the candidates might be more willing to accept a lower salary if they can get some help with the one-time expense of moving.

When pressed on the subject of what kind of a chief they wanted, most stressed willingness to cooperate with other town departments and regional initiatives.

Goedecke said she wanted a candidate who saw himself as part of a management team in a small town with little or no growth.

"I want one that meets the needs of the town in a variety ways in a declining economy and possibly with a shrinking budget," she stressed.

The conversation raised red flags for Laugelle.

"I'd hate to be a fire chief going to interview here," he said. "I'd be liable to get up and walk out. How long he's going to last, I don't know."

Laugelle contended the demands for service and the lack of willingness to pay for them were impossible and would lead to rapid turnover in the position.

Selectmen chairman Ned Tebbetts challenged Laugelle. Tebbetts said it was possible to attain the goals of increased service at less cost by using new methods and techniques not previously tried in Cohasset.

Resident Bob Davenport said the chief could not make the kind of changes selectmen sought.. He claimed the department could not cut any more from its budget unless selectmen changed staffing requirements mandated by the firefighters' contract.

"There's no other place [to save money] unless you rid of some people," Davenport said. "And you can't do that unless you change the contract."

Laugelle accused the town of treating the police department much better than the fire department.

"They both protect life and property," he noted.

Tebbetts claimed the police department kept its budget under better control.

Davenport disagreed. In a three year period he had reviewed, the police department consistently outspent the fire department in overtime usage. He also suggested differences in equipment costs and number of employees should be taken into account.

Presentation on Straits Pond study Dec. 9

People from Hull, Hingham, Cohasset and other communities, as well as anyone interested in an innovative environmental education project with a practical community application, are invited to attend a special community information session on Monday, Dec. 9. With support from the Massachusetts Environmental Trust, the Hull Environmental High School and the Hull Community Schools Program have undertaken this exciting new project which should be of particular benefit to residents living around Straits Pond and of interest to many others, and we'd like to know if you would like to know more about it or become involved. The goal of the project is to involve community people in a scientific study of the Straits Pond area to determine the causes and possible solutions to the pollution and the midge problem in that area. Teams of high school students have begun taking periodic water samples and are beginning to research some of the background on the problems. Teachers at Hull Environmental High School are working with Project Coordinator Linda Beres to integrate project activities with the curriculum in math, science, social studies, and English classes. A small advisory board composed of scientists will be helping to guide the project and at certain points we will be bringing in experts to inform and train students, teachers, and other interested people.

"We are currently looking for adults and students who might be interested in participating in or following the study. You could participate either as an observer or as an active participant in any aspect of the project; either on a one time basis or more often, as an adult leader of a small youth group or working with a group of other adults, or on your own. Some of the tasks that need to be done include taking water samples, taking soil samples, researching the social, political, and economic history of the area, surveying area residents and local government officials, recording the vegetation and natural wild life located there, conducting a sanitary survey, researching recent physical data (rainfall, temperature, etc.), and mapping all of the findings," according to Pam Cooney.

On Monday, Dec. 9, at 7 p.m. at the Hull Environmental Field Lab on George Washington Boulevard, there will be a community orientation to the project to which all members of the public are invited. Call Linda Beres at 925-5693 or Pam Cooney at 925-3078 for more information.

Debbie Cook talks about her jobs & her accidents

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

She lost her eyebrows and eyelashes in a commercial oven accident a few months before her wedding.

"I had gauze wrapped all over my face. My mother would enter the bridal shop and tell the owner, 'My daughter's had a terrible accident,' and make preparations for me to sneak in the back door. To this day, I don't remember anything about my wedding dress. I suppose it was ok," said Debbie Cook, new member of the advisory committee.

Debbie brings to the advisory committee a wealth of different employment experience, her infectious enthusiasm and humor, and an MBA from Northeastern. "It took me seven years going part time to get my MBA."

Debbie is mother of 11 year-old Whitney and 14 year-old Trevor, and is married to Tom Cook, an engineer with Stone and Webster. Spooner is the family dog.

Born in Evanston, Illinois, she graduated from Greenwich, Connecticut High School and the University of Vermont, where she earned a B.A. in Sociology, and met Tom in her junior year.

"In my first job after college I worked for the richest man in Vermont. I was his property manager/land planner. And after I left his employ he went to jail for land fraud," Debbie said.

"It was really a good experience; I had to deal with animals dying at the top of a mountain and interfering with the water supply down below, skunks mating under houses."

She drew maps, did a little corporate spying, land planning and property analyses, and put 37,000 miles on her trusty VW that year.

In addition to her other duties, Debbie served as 21-year-old house mother to a bunch of 30 and over "post hippie drop-outs." Debbie agreed her life at that time was not unlike a Doris Day sit com, with Debbie running around trying to keep the group off drugs, and their dogs out of the commercial kitchen.

And then there was the oven accident.

It was in the commercial kitchen that a blast blew her 20 feet across the room and took her eyebrows and eyelashes with her, scalding her face.

"Luckily, everything healed naturally. I never needed plastic surgery."

After Debbie and Tom married, they moved to Houston, Texas, where Debbie landed a job in the drafting department and then was quickly promoted to the mayor's office, where she became his top aide and, in fact, had the highest paid job in the city.

She served as the mayor's right hand man, speaking, writing and dealing with neighborhood civic clubs and community services.

"This is the kind of problem I might solve: ten miles north of Houston there was an enclave of black people so poor they had no running water. So, the fire department would drop water in 50 gallon tanks located beside each home. My job was to get the fire truck to lift the water hose, and not drag it on the ground and carry dirt along with it. And of course the goal and the plan was to provide the enclave with city services."

Alternatively, civic clubs in the Houston area were the property holders, "and they had control over land use and deed restrictions," Debbie said. The only resistance she felt was from the black community groups who didn't particularly enjoy working with a white woman.

Tom was transferred back to Boston, and while the Houston Mayor was going to contact Boston Mayor Kevin White about Debbie, she became pregnant with Trevor.

Although "being home" for Debbie wasn't like being home for a lot of people. Over the years she worked as a consultant for the bus service in Hingham, as executive director of the Hull Redevelopment Authority, sold insurance, and was an account representative for Mariner Newspapers.

"I've had more jobs than there are years," Debbie laughs. "Some jobs were as short as one hour, two days, six weeks."

New in town, she quickly became involved in the Babysitting Co-op which had a membership of 60 women. The Junior League and the League of Women Voters were two long-term organizations she belonged to, and she served as president of The League of Women Voters.

And, over a seven year period she managed to complete an MBA program at Northeastern University.

She says she has learned one important thing. "You can't be all things to all people all at once. You can have it all, but at different times in your life."

While career plans are presently on hold, she'd love to become involved in town management in the future.

While Debbie's a new member of the advisory committee, she's no stranger to town, its politics or its budget busters. She'll be looking at revenue and how funds are invested. Both the state and the town of Cohasset have unfunded pension systems, a big expense area because of all the retiring baby boomers.

"Nondiscretionary costs are going to have to be funded differently, or we're going to have to look into system changes," Cook said.

As an advisor, she is liaison to the school committee, the historical commission, fair housing and the personnel committee.

She is in favor of national health insurance, because she says payers are already subsidizing non-payers; and she is against proposed legislation which would limit elective terms.

"The electorate must become more responsible," she said.

More budget reductions ahead

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Selectmen hashed over the budget planning session coordinated by the advisory committee and the long range planning committee. Preliminary budget figures are due Dec. 20.

The advisory committee has requested preparation of three separate budgets: a level-funded budget, a budget reflecting a 10 percent reduction and a budget with a 15 percent reduction.

"That could cause a great deal of conversation and consternation in some parts of town government," executive secretary Greg Doyon noted.

Selectmen immediately proved his point.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said a 10 percent cut overall would result in a $1.5 million cut from the current level of spending.

"That is far more than anyone so far has projected we would need," she said. "Before we ask all departments to go through an exercise that even in the worst case scenario is not necessary, I think it would be appropriate to ask the advisory committee for clarification."

The selectmen's share of a 10 percent budget cut would amount to about $300,000, she added.

Goedecke said although she believes it is important to let voters know what will happen, overstating the case is unwise."

"It's not a good idea to tell them things that won't happen," she warned. "It makes them angry."

Selectmen Chairman Ned Tebbetts said the uncertainty about state aid and insurance costs could make it important to plan for major cutbacks. And selectman Martha Gjesteby added that salary raises were still being negotiated with employee unions.

Preparing a budget level funding non-union salaries while negotiations continue with union employees is also dangerous, selectman Rocco Laugelle said.

"What is it going to do?" he asked. "It's just going to push them into a union."

Laugelle urged the board not to penalize non-union workers in their zeal to balance the budget. Currently all but about 30 of the town's 230 employees are unionized.

In other business, selectmen:

- Accepted the resignation of William Parmenter from the Conservation Commission "with deep regret."
- Appointed Allison Moskow to a vacancy on the Arts Lottery committee.
- Approved payment of fees for legal representation in tax assessment disputes.

Andrew Kinch

Thanksgiving means sharing

For a week, Mrs. Atkinson's third grade class has been busy making turkey recipe card holders as favors, costumes and props. They have been rehearsing music and their lines for the Thanksgiving skit.

On Tuesday, Nov. 19 they were ready to join the senior citizens for lunch. Before luncheon was served, Jack MacInnis, the Elementary Music Teacher, led them in song. They sang four Thanksgiving songs and "premiered" the newly adapted Joseph Osgood School Song.

During lunch they sat, costumed as Pilgrim or Native American, among the seniors and employed their social skills; making conversation, asking questions or sharing stories.

After lunch the children performed their skit... "The First Thanksgiving." Through simple dialogue and well designed props, they re-told the story of those brave and adventurous Pilgrims who settled our land. They demonstrated the Pilgrims' reasons for giving thanks...and added their own as happy, healthy, privileged students of Cohasset.

Margaret Olney performs in 'The Nutcracker'

More than 250 young dancers from the Metropolitan Boston area and the adjoining states will perform in such roles as toy soldiers, baby mice, reindeer, lambs, polichinelles and party children in Boston Ballet's annual holiday favorite "The Nutcracker," to be performed at The Wang Center for the Performing Arts, Nov. 29 through Jan. 5. This year, children will be performing the newly-added roles of dolls and candy canes.

Traditionally, children have been a vital part of celebrating the holiday season in New England with the magic of "The Nutcracker." Featuring the familiar Tchaikovsky score, fairytale scenery by Helen Senn and Herbert Pond and stunning costumes by British designer David Walker, "The Nutcracker" is yuletide entertainment for the whole family.

Performing in a full-length ballet exposes children to aspects of ballet life they don't experience in a regular ballet class. The children learn about the hard work, rigors and enjoyment that goes into every facet of a live ballet performance.

A resident of Cohasset, Margaret Olney is performing in "The Nutcracker" as a Russian doll. Margaret is eight-years-old and attends the Joseph Osgood School in Cohasset. She has been attending the Children's Ballet Workshop in Hingham for the past five years and is also currently enrolled in the Boston Ballet School.

Boston Ballet is supported in part by the National Arts Stabilization Fund in conjunction with the Greater Boston Arts Fund, the National Endowment for the Arts and Humanities, and the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Tickets for "The Nutcracker" are available by calling Ticketmaster at 931-2000, or in person at The Wang Center Box Office, 270 Tremont Street, Boston.

Water department salute

A surprise retirement party was held for Betty Maree, Saturday, Nov. 9, at the American Legion. The party was given by her daughter, Ann Maree-Wheeler.

Betty has served 36 years with the Town of Cohasset, four with the School Department, and 32 with the Water Department. In a special tribute to her, with Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, presented her with a citation from the House of Representatives.

Several of the current and past Water Commissioners were there to honor her and present her with an engraved clock to acknowledge her years of service. Betty is retiring Dec. 31, and she will be dearly missed. We, at the Water Department, wish her many happy and healthy years of well deserved enjoyment.

• We begin by congratulating Robert P. Magner this week. Bob has been with Cohasset Savings Bank for 25 years, and the bank held a cocktail party in his honor last week at the Barker Tavern. All of Bob's family was on hand for the festive occasion, looking wonderful and beaming with pride. It was a grand celebration. Here's to the next 25 years, Bob.

• Nov. 14 was a big day for Michelle Bonomi and her husband Joseph P. Bonomi III. That was the day that Joseph Paul Bonomi IV was born at South Shore Hospital, just in time to be part of the Thanksgiving festivities. We send congratulations to all of the Bonomi family; enjoy that baby.

• The Community Garden Club of Cohasset presents "Holiday Images of Cohasset," a house tour, Dec. 5, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tickets for $15 can be purchased at the Community Center or call Peg Smart, 383-6438.

As you know, the club landscapes and maintains Lothrop House, Constitution Park, the Community Center, the High School courtyard and nature trails between Osgood and Deerhill schools. In addition to this, they also provide great scholarships to graduating seniors.

• Glad to report that Linda Campbell is home from the hospital, and that she is feeling much better. Keep up the good work, Linda.

• And, Diana Karcher has a lot to be thankful for this week. She too is home and on the mend. For heavens sake, stay away from ladders, Diana. You are much too valuable to everyone to be taking spills.

• Peter Sandblom is playing his last season of football this year. He is a senior at Colby College in Maine. Pete was always one to take advantage of his football abilities, and the other teams learned to dread his prowess long ago. Here's to you, Peter, best of luck with the rest of your senior year at Colby, and to a great life.

• The Cohasset Drug-Free Weekend Committee, under the direction of Ned Tebbetts, Ralph Kidder and Karen Hettstrom, is hard at work making their January plans. On the last weekend of January there will be all sorts of activities with the theme of avoiding alcohol and other health damaging drugs. The weekend is being planned to appeal to all age groups, and they are getting a lot of events together...be sure to watch for more news on this, it's certainly important to all of us.

• We applaud Sea 'N' Cheese this week. They celebrated their ninth anniversary last weekend in grand style. Rick Peters, owner, should be proud that all of his efforts have paid off in such a grand way. Remember when it was a tiny little space? Just goes to show what happens when you get a reputation of selling great items.

• Be sure to get your tickets for the "Nutcracker" ballet. You will see one of Cohasset's finest dancers when you do. Cameron Nicole Hynes will be part of the cast. She is 13 and we'll bet that she is thrilled at the prospect. The ballet opens on Dec. 5 at the Wang Center. We'll bet there are lots of rehearsals in the meantime.

• Reserve Dec. 5 from 8 to 9 p.m., and put your television on Channel 3. Wigmore Pierson will present Pierson to Person and will deal with current political events on Beacon Hill. State Representatives Janet O'Brien of Hanover, Frank Hynes of Scituate, Cohasset's Mary Jeanette Murray, and State Sen. Robert Hedlund will be on hand to discuss events with Wig. Thursday, Dec. 12 from 8 to 8:30 p.m., Scituate optometrist Dr. Logan Eaton will be interviewed, and from 8:30 to 9 p.m., Bradford W. Ketchum, editor of The Walking Magazine, will be on the air with Wig. There will be no shows on Dec. 19 or Dec. 26 due to the holiday season.

• Lee Andrews has been seriously ill for several weeks. He is now recovering at the New England Medical Center after open heart surgery. We hope Lee will soon be home and we wish him a speedy recovery.

• Cohasset welcomes its newest police officer, Thomas DaSilva. We hope that you enjoy our town and its residents. Brockton's loss is our gain.

• If you missed the open house for John A. Lanata Jr (it was to be held on Wednesday, Nov. 27 from 8 p.m. to midnight at the American Legion Hall) Memorial Scholarship Fund but would like to make a donation, send it to the John A. Lanata Memorial Scholarship Fund, Miles Standish Federal Credit Union, P.O. Box 9102, Marshfield, MA 02050-9905.

• Congratulations go to Sally Ann O'Neill who will be honored by the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association for her work in designing "ecology homes" for people with allergies. There will be a reception for Sally at the Pillar House in Newton on Dec. 5. The Lung Association's "local hero" is ours too.

• Finally, Happy Thanksgiving to all of you. May your day and your turkey dinner be the best one yet and your house filled with happiness and good cheer. Ours will be. Clark and I will be celebrating our 28th wedding anniversary. Here's to the best years of my life...

• Please call me with your news. We'd love to hear all about it.

How much do you need to save for 20 years of retirement?

If you are a typical American, you may be heading for financial difficulty during your retirement. Despite the fact that the average life expectancy is increasing, Americans are saving less. The personal saving rate in the United States is less than 4%, among the lowest in the industrialized world. Will your savings permit you to live from 15 to 20 years in retirement without depleting your assets?

Have you considered the effects of inflation, taxes, and health care costs on your savings? Today the average annual cost of nursing home care is $30,000. What will it be when you retire?

The primary responsibility to save for retirement lies with you; if you want to be financially secure during your retirement years you must prepare today. You must make your retirement assets work harder.

To find out more about how you can prepare today for a comfortable retirement tomorrow, call your Financial Consultant or attend the seminar listed below. For free reservations, call the number below.

Would you please pass the furmety, Governor

"Would you please pass the furmety, Governor.

"You boiled it just right in the pipkin, Mary.

"I'll have a little more aqua vita, Susanna.

It's possible the conversation went a bit like this that first Thanksgiving Day in Plymouth 370 years ago.

About 150 people sat at the three-day harvest. 90 Indian men and 50 Pilgrims.

And if you happen to be the cook and you think you're going to work hard on Thursday, at the first Thanksgiving only four women did the cooking.

They roasted wildfowl, turkeys and deer in English fashion. They boiled cod and sea bass in Indian tradition.

They cooked breads and fruit tarts in a skillet over an open fire.

For dessert they make furmety by beating wet wheat in a sack with a washbeetle, boiling it overnight, soaking it on a fire, boiling it in cream in a pipkin, then topping it with sugar.

The guests were not worried about their cholesterol level or the fat content in the food.

They ate to their hearts' content then washed it all down with beer called aqua vita.

They scooped food from wooden bowls with their hands. There were knives, a few spoons, but no forks.

Huge napkins were very important.

It was a whole year after the Pilgrims first put their tattered boots on Plymouth Rock before the first Thanksgiving.

Their tiny overcrowded Mayflower had tossed like a toy boat upon the fierce Atlantic waves for two months.

Their trip had been stormy and long. Their arrival was dismal and discouraging. The first winter saw more than half their number starve or freeze to death. Their first harvest was a disaster.

But the second year, with the help of the Indians, their fields bore fruit.

Instead of saying—"It's about time, God"—they thanked Him for His blessing.

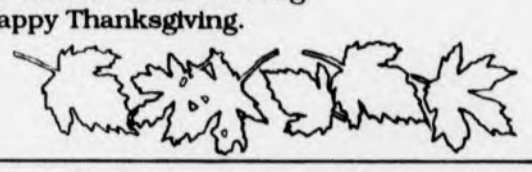
It is now three and one half centuries later.

We'll go a-hunting in a well-stocked supermarket and spear our frozen turkey with icy fingers.

Instead of checking our meat for arrowheads, we'll read the labels for the fat and MSG content.

Instead of cooking herbs and roots for days, we might pop a pouch of peas in boiling water.

Instead of skillet baked bread, we might brown and serve some rolls.



Instead of beating wet wheat for furmety, we might heat up a pre-baked apple pie.

But the warmth of Thanksgiving is still the same.

We ask nothing more from it than a high school football game in the morning, a turkey dinner at two and the warmth of a our family around us all day.

Wouldn't this be a perfect Thanksgiving Day 1992. The Bulldogs beat the Wildcats in THE upset of the season in the morning., a perfect turkey dinner with a loving family in the afternoon and a feeling of contentment with life in the evening.

Happy Thanksgiving.

Let's generate support for VISN

The new Vision Interfaith Satellite Network (VISN) is unique. It is the only religious TV network serving more than 50 national faith groups — Protestant, Catholic, Jew, Greek Orthodox — with no on-air fundraising, no proselytizing, and no maligning of other religious traditions.

And, VISN is excellent TV, featuring great music, documentaries, local response to global problems, children's programming, worship, comedy and much more.

VISN with its interfaith emphasis will provide a platform for tolerance and respect for others' religious views at the same time offering decent, constructive programming for the entire family.

In just three years VISN is now reaching over 10 million subscribers demonstrating the need for a strong, high-quality faith and values network which appeals to a broad spectrum of the American public.

Locally, VISN will be available on the South Shore (on "basic cable") 24 hours a day but only when enough people in the community band together to demonstrate to the cable managers a strong interest in having VISN. Mere wishing won't bring it to pass; the voices of local clergy and civic leaders and you and I will help.

PSO thanks community for support

To the Editor:

We would like to thank the many Cohasset residents who made the recent PSO Monte Carlo Goes West night a great success. Record profits from the event will provide funding for enrichment programs for the Osgood, the Deer Hill and the Jr./Sr. High Schools. More important than profits was the sense of enthusiasm and community spirit shown by all participants — and there were many.

The evening of charitable gambling and auction fever would not have been possible without the generous efforts of Barbara Henderson, Ann Whiteley, Ruth Wilcox, Marcia Kreycik, Helene Thornton, Jane Kyricos, Kay Londergan, Retta Dwyer, Kathy Gray, Donna O'Donnell, Darilyn Evans, Ronnie McMorris, Marita Carpenter, Dick Bugley, Beth Christoffel and all the decorators, chefs and amateur dealers who donated their time and skill.

Special thanks to Colleen Lucas' art classes at the high school for creating giant decorative paper cacti and stars, to CHS tenth graders, Dave Leahy, Chris Goodman, Mike Riley and Chris Stevens, for putting up lights; to Dr. John Packard, for supplying a sound system; to Deanna Mulligan, for copying and printing; to Karyn Gray and Megan Waal for staffing the coat room and to Mr. Neal Fraser and Mary Larson for loaning us their wooden cows.

The PSO is grateful to all who contributed items for auction: Annick and Francois Nivaud, Wayne Robbins, the Good Sport, Dennis Lamp, Talbots, Linda Keller, the South Shore Music Circus, the Cohasset Community Center, Stan and Kathy Walsh, the Chart House, John and Sue McNamara, Bob Riley, Georgine Butman, Richard Henderson, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Laura Atherton, Helene Thornton, Beth Christoffel, Kathy Gray, the South Shore Art Center, Debbie Cook, Frank and Chris Camacho, Appleseeds, Peter and Jane Goedecke, Lappen Auto Parts, Kimball's by the Sea, Charlotte's, Cheryl Bugley, the Red Lion Inn, the Jean Abbot Studio, South Shore Sports Center, Navona Restaurant, Peter and Anne Sexton, Ted Carroll, Bob Morgan, Barbara Henderson, Frank Smith of Flemings, Mike O'Connell.

Door prizes were generously donated by: Goodwin Graphics, Sea 'n Cheese, Robert's Food Mart and Mary Jeanette Murray. Cactus and floor plants were loaned to the PSO by Reed's Country Way Nursery.

On behalf of the Cohasset students, who will benefit from the curriculum enrichment programs you have made possible, the Parent School Organization thanks our many generous neighbors for their assistance and participation.

Holiday mood prevails

With Thanksgiving just around the corner, the festive swing of things worked its way onto the selectmen's agenda.

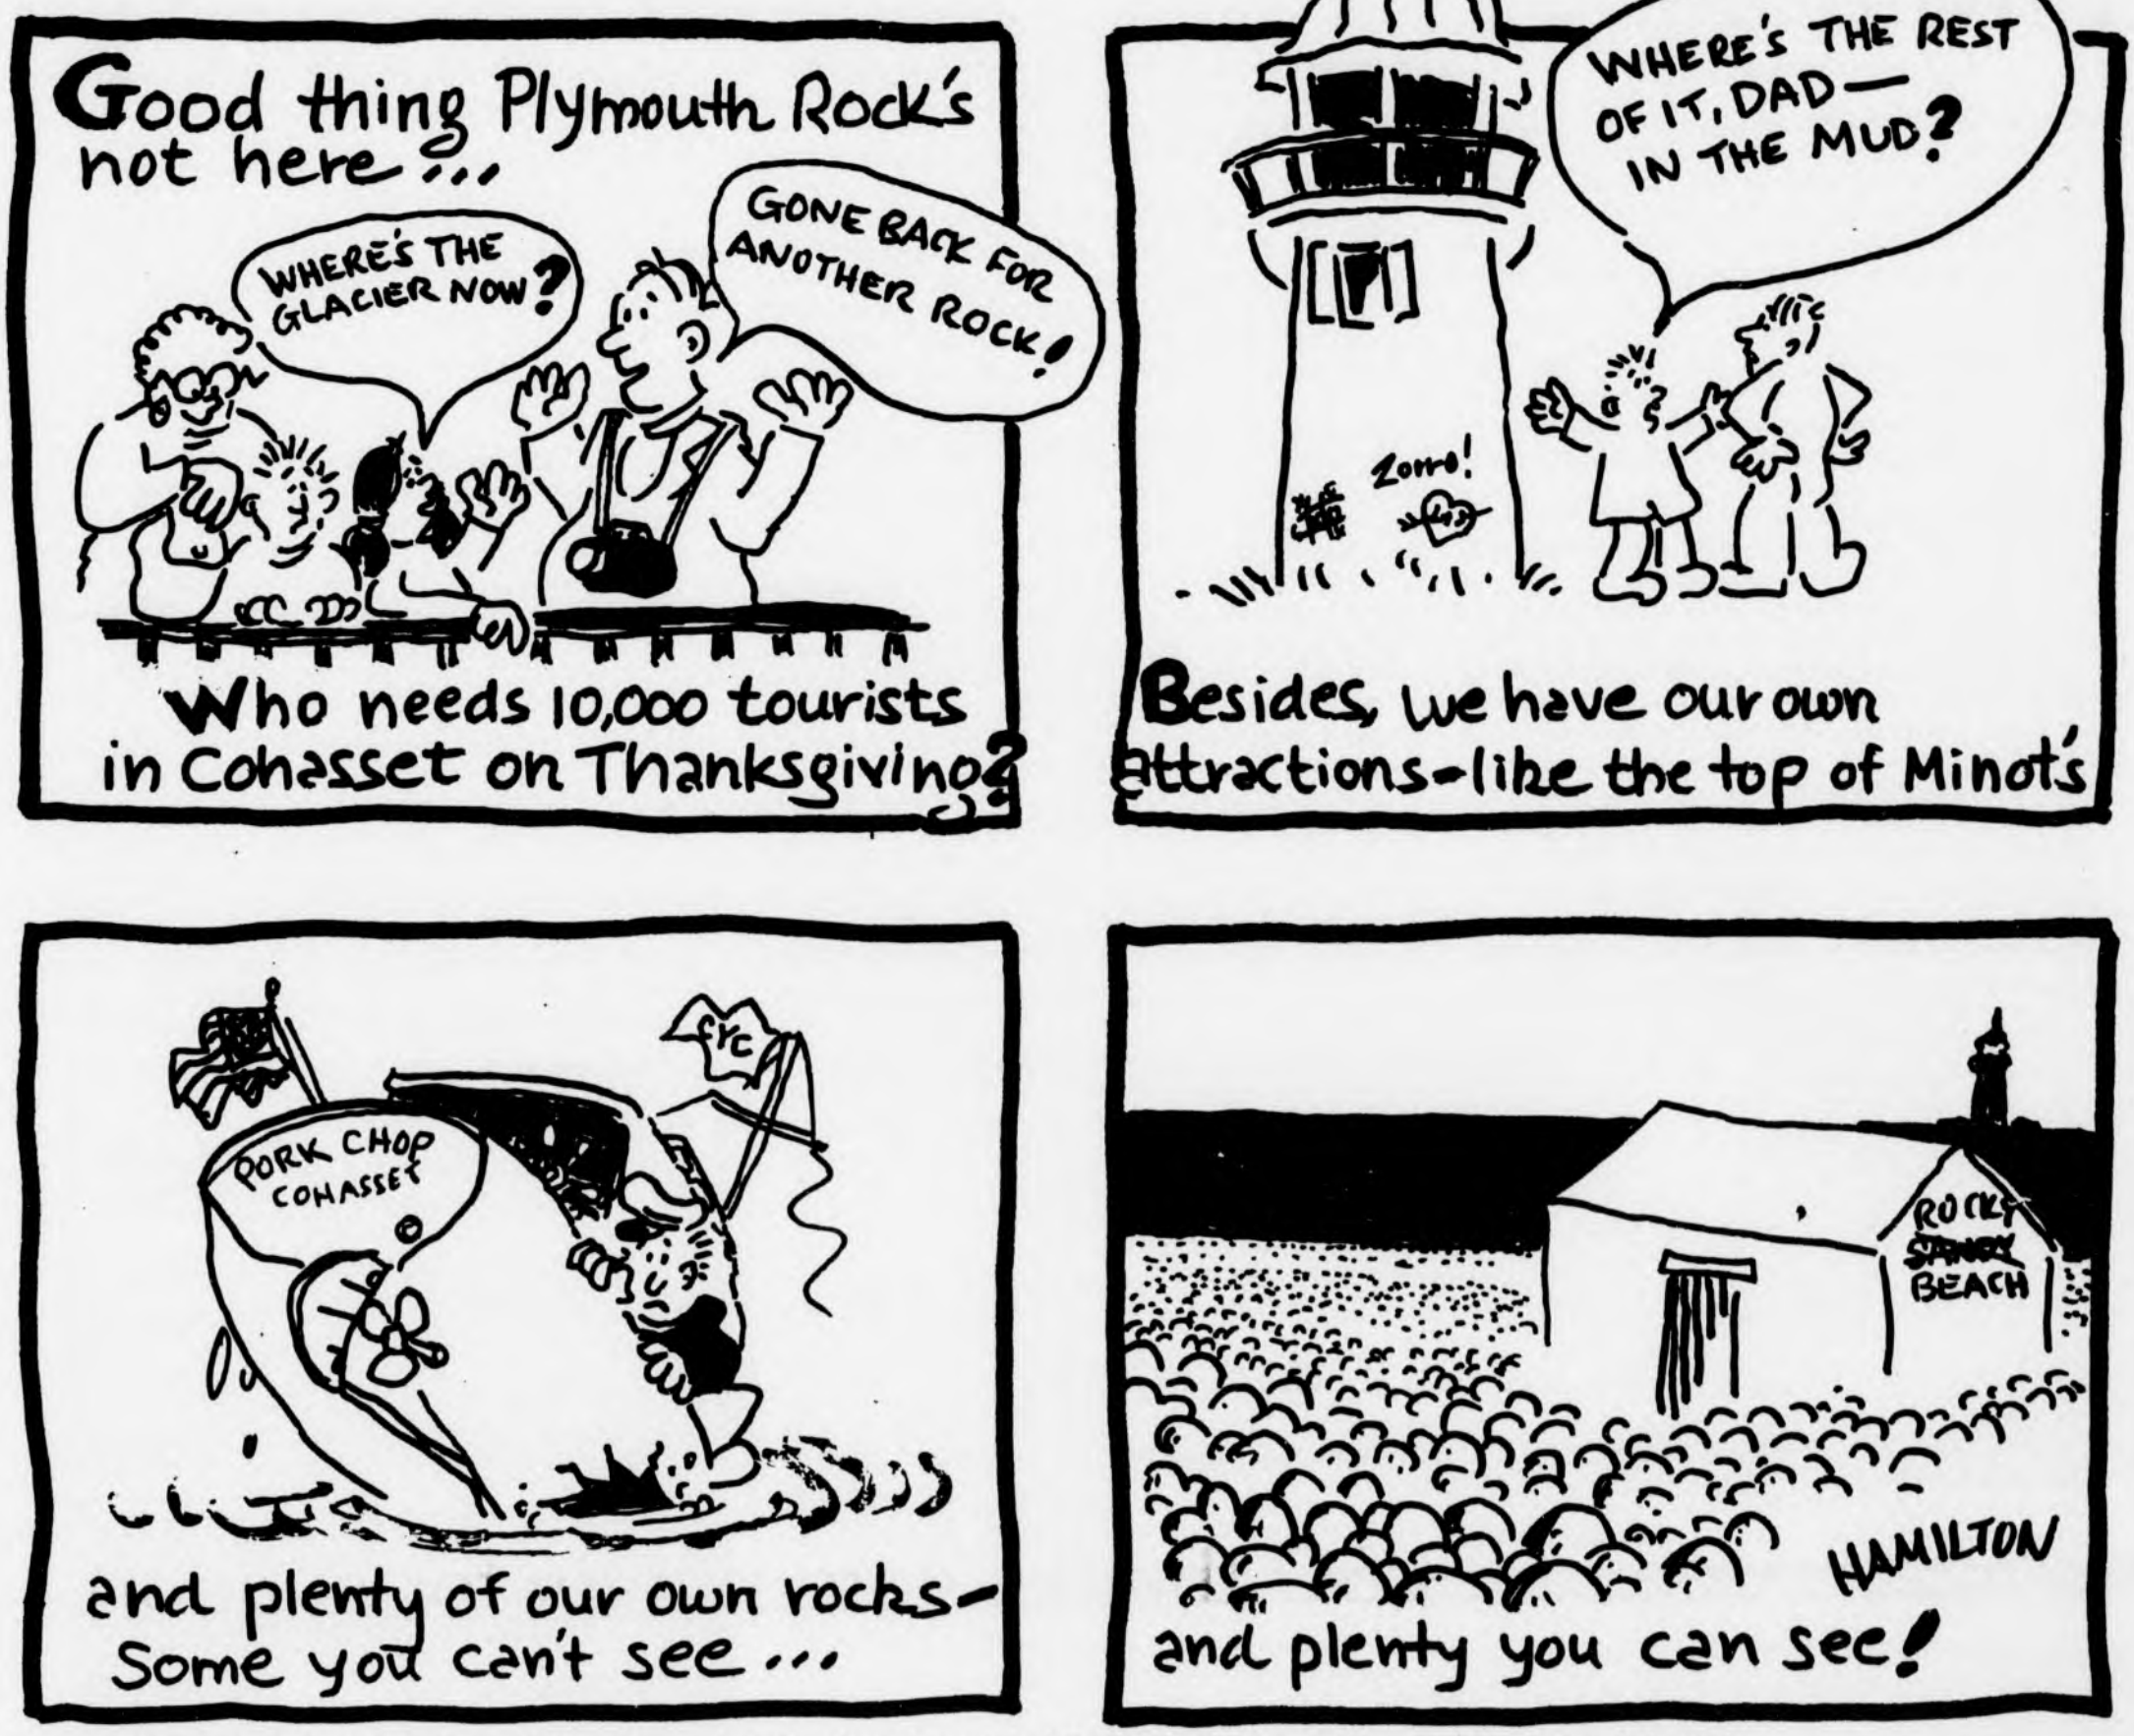
Procrastinators get a break again this year. Selectmen unanimously granted requests from four liquor stores to open on the Sundays immediately before Christmas Day and New Year's Day. This is the second year the state has permitted holiday Sunday openings by local option.

The stores may not open before noon and must close no later than 11 p.m.

The stores requesting the special Sunday hours are Liquors Unlimited, Cohasset Plaza Liquors, Curtis Liquors, Roberts Food Mart and Sea 'N Cheese.

Bob Martin of the Chamber of Commerce told selectmen the organization wants to light the evergreen at the base of the stairs leading to St. Stephens. The church and the chamber are already in concert. Martin sought approval for use of a town electrical outlet for the project.

"I think we have near unanimity," Martin told selectmen.



The chamber plans to kick off the Christmas season Friday, Nov. 29

Resident Bob Davenport also offered to donate a blue spruce about 25 feet in height to the town. Selectmen thanked him but deferred acceptance for a week while they try to work out the logistics of anchoring and decorating the massive evergreen.

Davenport told selectmen he has to remove the tree anyway. He said his offer was contingent on its being erected on the common for the enjoyment of all the townspeople.

He suggested the tree be trimmed with decorations made by the children of the town.

"That could be a problem," selectman Diana Kornet said, obviously thinking of the tree's height, "since the average school child is less than five feet tall."

Some geologists believe that Plymouth Rock was picked up in Cohasset and deposited in Plymouth as the glacier headed south.

The Thanksgiving my Aunt Jess poisoned everybody

By Tanna Kasperowicz (nee Burns)
Mariner columnist

I have this problem. I jiggle my leg.

It drives my friends and my family crazy.

But it 1956 it did more than drive people crazy. It caused such a stir that the Burns family never ever had Thanksgiving dinner together again. Oh sure, over the years small groups of them showed up, here and there, but never again did the entire Burns family ever again meet at our house as they did for that last time in 1956.

My mother had assembled a lovely table.

I had polished the family silver that morning; my mother made her special baked oyster dish; the turkey had been cooking all night long – its lovely aroma was everywhere.

Just a little aside here, about the turkey cooking all night long. The Burns family began cooking their turkeys all night long the Thanksgiving after my Aunt Jess poisoned the whole family. I was so little then I didn't eat turkey. Probably they just gave me a pea. So, I wasn't poisoned.

What my Aunt Jess did was make cooked stuffing, which she put in the cold turkey carcass and then stored the whole ball of wax in the refrigerator until she cooked the turkey the next morning. Well, this causes salmonella poisoning.

My Aunt Jess was the Post Mistress in Selinsgrove at the time, and there was a big article in the local paper about the family's being poisoned by the local Post Mistress, and warnings to everyone to not ever do what she did. Every year the local paper would do those pre-Thanksgiving articles about how to prepare turkey and other foodstuffs, and for many, many years they referred to that year Miss Jessie Burns, the local Post Mistress, poisoned her family.

This made my Aunt Jess really mad. "They make me sound like Lizzie Borden," she said.

Finally, one year the family had enough and my grandfather Hob Burns called the editor of the paper and asked him to please not run the Jessie Burns poison turkey article that year. And I think that did the trick.

Back to Thanksgiving 1956. I remember that my Aunt Barb didn't bring her mushroom dish that year, nor did my mother put any mushrooms in the stuffing. This was because my mother and my aunt Barb almost killed themselves and Doris and Mimi Sears in the late spring of '56.

Once again, I escaped, as I wasn't eating mushrooms that year.

It was a lovely September day, the story goes, and my Aunt Barb and my mother decided to go and pick delicious mushrooms in some secret woodland place a farmer had told my Aunt Barb about. It never occurred to them they knew nothing about picking mushrooms. They just knew how to eat them.

They came back with lots of mushrooms, called their friends, fried the Black Angel mushrooms in butter, and an hour later they and their friends were all in Geisinger Hospital having their stomachs pumped.

Mushrooms did make their way back to the Burns' tables, but not for many, many years.

My grandfather Hob Burns, Aunt Jean, Uncle Jay, Aunt Margie, Uncle Jim, Aunt Barb, Aunt "Lizzie Borden" Jess, Sister Jayme, and mother and father were all seated at the table when someone said:

"Tanna, stop jiggling the table!"

At which point my grandfather said:

"Leave the child alone."

And after so many years I forget the details, but I ended up crying in my room, and dinner was ruined.

Years later I was incredulous that my jiggling my leg could have caused all of that. My Aunt Jean said no, she didn't think it had anything to do with my jiggling my leg, and that my leg was just an excuse for them to fight.

And, so...looking back over the years, I have a lot of things for which to be thankful.

I am happy that my Aunt Jess didn't poison the entire Burns family, or I wouldn't have ever known my mother and father, who are now in their seventies. Although it would have been interesting to be raised by my Aunt Sis and Uncle Jim.

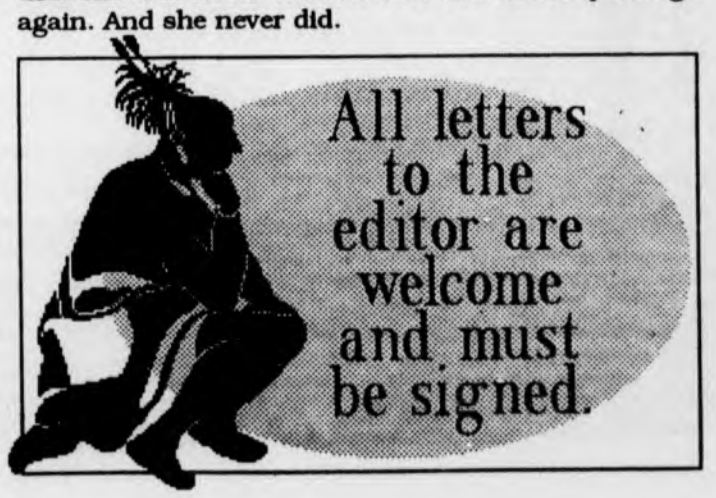
And I'm thankful my Aunt Barb and my mother didn't poison themselves and their friends when I was 12.

And I'm thankful the good Lord didn't give me any gigantic problems to bear, although knowing why he didn't is a little depressing. i.e., he saw how poorly I handled the small problems.

And, I'm thankful the Class of '91 will be home for Thanksgiving because I've missed their wonderful noises.

Thanksgiving is a benchmark.

It's where family and friends meet to greet and eat and tell stories of Thanksgivings past.



And every so often new people show up at Thanksgiving.

And some people never come again.

Now.

I'll never forget the year my Aunt Hat was coming to Thanksgiving dinner at our house and the Sunbury Police called and said for my Uncle Gil to come and remove her from the Sunbury Bridge.

The Sunbury Bridge was very narrow. It was scary to drive across. It was even scarier if you were 84 and had cataracts. What had happened was my Aunt Hat got scared in the middle of the bridge and just stopped. It took hours for the police to untangle the traffic. Aunt Hat was sent a letter from the Sunbury City Council that she was never to drive over the Sunbury Bridge again. And she never did.

selected after the passage of Proposition 2-1/2 when limited funds could be raised to meet service demands.

At the water commissioner's recent meeting Chairman Ron Goodwin said he had spoken to Ted Guild about the sewer commissioners contract with PSG and was interested in meeting with PSG for several reasons:

- New environmental laws.
- The expertise which PSG can offer – "We don't always have the expertise to fix the pumps."
- The unknown costs which could be associated with the new environmental laws which will be instituted in July 1992.

Water Commissioner Bill Montuori noted there could be additional employee savings if PSG were involved in both the sewer and water operations.

Commissioner Jim Sheerin, who was liaison to the town's department of public works study, said while he had mixed emotions about PSG, he felt good about the manner in which PSG said it would utilize the town's water plant employees. According to Sheerin, for a period of two years the water plant employees would work for the town, after which they would work for PSG.

In a phone call last week, Sewer Commissioner Guild said, "PSG really cleaned up our act. We still have a problem with rain, but if there's no rain, we're on flow."

In almost all respects, Guild said, "They're vastly superior. They do it cheaper and better. At one point we employed 3.5 people; they employ 1.5 people but are adept at staffing for emergencies.

"They've seen everything and they've done it twice," Guild said.

In other business last week, water commissioners discussed the purchase of two new hand-held data collectors which would eliminate manual computation of bills. Water Secretary Betty Marie will retire at the end of December, and commissioners feel the purchase of a data collector would save them a half time employee (not including benefits) and a $7,865 a year computer maintenance bill.

It was noted that water liens this year are $92,000, as opposed to $61,000 last year.

A representative from Todd Lane will be invited to attend the commissioners' Dec. 11 meeting, to discuss commissioners' plans for remedying the water pressure problems on that street.

Senator seeks storm help

(A copy of the following letter was sent to the Mariner for publication.)

Dear Gov. Weld:

I would like to take this opportunity to respectfully request your consideration of attempts to make available some additional money for the coastal towns along the North and South Shore and the Cape and Islands.

These towns need additional money due to storm related expenses, such as road and seawall repair and overtime expenses related to clean-up.

The Federal government pays 75% of these expenses and the Commonwealth pays 12.5%. Previously, the towns paid the difference, however, due to local aid cuts, the $5 to $10 Million Dollar cost to the towns will be a considerable hardship.

Your anticipated courtesy and cooperation in this matter would be greatly appreciated. If I can be of further information to you, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Storm . . .

"I frankly did not think it was a matter to be discussed at out meeting," she added.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby also counseled patience and a thorough review.

"Sometimes someone who is distraught sees things differently," she suggested.

Selectmen Chairman Ned Tebbetts took a harder line. He suggested the delay of three weeks in raising the complaint undermines her case as did the fact she was clearly parked illegally.

He did say she had a legitimate complaint against the towing company and said he would not condone rude treatment by town employees.

Doyon was asked to continue investigating the complaints raised her her letter. Selectmen also noted the woman sent copies of her letter to Boston Globe columnist Mike Barnicle, a Hull newspaper and the Cohasset Mariner.

The letter wasn't the only bit of storm business. Selectmen officially charged Doyon with responsibility for pursuing reimbursement of storm repairs from the federal emergency management agency handling reimbursement claims.

Doyon said FEMA has yet to send a check for reimbursement promised in the wake of Hurricane Bob.

"The money has been promised, but there is no appropriation yet," he said.

Doyon also told selectmen he did not anticipate receiving any reimbursement assistance from the state disaster relief agency.

According to Doyon, the representative from MEMA made no promises of reimbursement after Hurricane Bob and he expects more of the same in conjunctions with the northeaster.

Although she admitted she didn't know where the money would come from, Gjesteby wasn't ready to throw in the towel.

"I don't think we should completely give up hope yet," she said.

Meanwhile, Doyon said he had officially notified the conservation commission about the town's emergency repair work plans. The conservation commission has strict deadlines for completion of emergency repair work.

Doyon also said Norfolk County has been in town to determine the exact boundary lines for Sandy Beach so repairs to the sea walls can begin.

Accused murderer sent to Taunton

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Patricia Ann Carnes — a 45-year-old woman described by a court psychologist as mentally ill — remains under evaluation at Taunton State Hospital.

She stands accused of bludgeoning her mother to death Friday afternoon, Nov. 22. The forensic psychologist, Paul Lavoie, testfied Monday in Hingham District Court that it is questionable whether she would be able to assist an attorney in her own defense.

"She does seem to know the charges against her," Lavoie said. "I have serious doubt whether she understands the gravity."

Her mother, Marion (Faria) Carnes, 75, will be buried Wednesday, Nov. 27, in Woodside Cemetery in Cohasset.

For years the elderly woman had cared for her daughter as the pair lived in a simple house at 55 North Street. Mrs. Carnes lived in Cohasset before moving to Hingham 45 years ago.

The incident came to light at 3:02 p.m. Friday when, according to the Hingham police log, a "hysterical woman" called police to report that she had "injured her mother and herself."

Four police cruisers were dispatched to the scene. Soon the state police C-PAC unit was notified

At 3:16 p.m. Patrolman John Ingrassia was enroute to South Shore Hospital, Weymouth, in fire Rescue 1, "with one suspect in custody."

Detective Joseph Mayer said Mrs. Carnes was found in the living room on the couch. He said the police removed two carpenter's hammers, which are believed to have been used as the murder weapons.

Police say there was a great deal of blood in the room — some was the blood of Patricia Carnes. She had slashed both her wrists and cut open her neck.

At 6:40 p.m. Friday, the victim's only son, David Carnes of Wethersfield, Conn., was notified.

At 8:25 p.m. Friday the medical examiner's van arrived to remove the body to the Southern Mortuary in Boston where an autopsy was to be performed.

The results of the autopsy show the cause of death was "massive trauma to the head caused by a blunt instrument," according to Detective Mayer. Dr. Peter Kessler performed the autopsy.

Monday morning Patricia Carnes was taken from the police station to Hingham District Court for arraignment on the murder charge.

Judge Geraldine Lombardo began the proceeding by requesting the accused woman be examined by a court-appointed psychologist to determine whether she was competent to understand the proceedings.

Several hours later, the arraignment proceeded. An innocent plea was entered in behalf of the accused. She stood in the prisoner's dock without saying a word during the proceedings.

Her brother and a half dozen friends and relatives sat in the courtroom, silently watching the proceedings. No comments were made about the situation.

The court psychologist testified he interviewed Detective Mayer, state police Trooper Leonard Coppenrath, David Carnes, brother of the accused, and Walter Feria, a cousin of the accused, before interviewing Patricia Carnes herself.

He said he told her the interview would not be confidential. He testified she had difficulty paying attention during the interview despite the fact that he tried to go slowly and explain things.

He said she had a nursing degree from the Laboure School but "had not worked because of mental illness in 15 years."

He said she was seen as mentally ill by South Shore Mental Health Center which had been involved with her since she was 22 or 23.

In 1970 she was committed to Medfield State Hospital. He said she took an anti-psychotic drug called Troloxyin.

He said she had made "good adjustment to living with her mental illness" for years. When he interviewed her, she showed signs of being delusional.

He said she told him she was the Queen of Ireland, that she was a secretary to former President Lyndon Johnson, that she held two Ph.D.s in nursing and sociology.

He said the delusions were typical for a psychotic. He said her thought process was disordered.

He said it was difficult to carry on a conversation with her and that he believed it would be difficult to decide if she were competent to stand trial.

He said she seemed to understand the nature of the charges against her but did not understand the role of the judge or prosecutor.

He said while he was talking with her she put her head down on a desk, trying to compose her thoughts. He termed her "confused."

"Indeed she is a mentally ill person," Lavoie said.

He suggested she be sent to a hospital for further evaulation partly because "she did make an attempt on her life" and partly due to the need for medical attention for the cut on her neck.

He suggested Taunton State Hospital where he already knew a bed would be waiting. The normal period of evaluation is 20 days but extentions can bring the time up to 40 days. At that point the defendant will be brought back to court so officials can discuss the possibility of a trial. The defendant must be declared competent before a trial can be scheduled.

"Phantom" tickets

The Recreation Department is currently accepting reservations for tickets to the Wednesday, Aug. 12, performance of "Phantom of the Opera." The fee for this event is $45 per person and includes bus transportation to the Wang Center, and Front Balcony tickets for the performance.

Sales for the "Phantom" are available now. Commitments must be confirmed early in order to secure Front Balcony seating.

The Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for drama workshops for children and youth five to 17 years. Instructing the drama programs will be Darcy Pratt of the Cohasset Dramatic Club. Pratt has taught children's drama workshops and is active in local theatre productions. Pratt conducted the Recreation Department's drama workshops last season. Workshops meet for seven week session and the first session is scheduled to begin on Saturday, Dec. 7, at Cohasset High School from 9 to 10:30 a.m. for ages 5 to 9, 10:30 a.m. to noon, ages 10 and over.

The fee for the session is $54 per child and a $10 family discount for subsequent children is available. Checks should be payable to "Town of Cohasset." Drama workshops are designed to orient children to the many aspects of the theater and play production and to teach and reenforce the various skills and techniques essential to acting.

Participants with or without acting experience are encouraged to register. To register, please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791..

December ski trip

The Recreation Department will accept registrations for the season's first ski trip, scheduled for Sunday, Dec. 15, to Loon Mountain, Lincoln, NH. The cost of this trip is $42 per person and the trip will be limited to the first 45 registered. Bus will leave from Cohasset Town Hall at 5:15 a.m., Sunday, Dec. 15, and return about 7 p.m. that evening, to Town Hall. Special beginner packages are available to first time skiers and those who require equipment rentals should indicate this at the time of registration. Rental of equipment is $14 and cash should be brought the day of the trip for rental payment. Those who are interested in taking a ski lesson may do so. Lessons cost $12 and cash payment should be brought the day of the trip.

To register please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Registration confirmation is receipt of payment, however, telephone reservations will hold seats for one week. Checks, payable to: Town of Cohasset, are requested for payment. Non-residents will be accepted for this trip should space be available.

The trip will be chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Earle Bestick.

Discover the unexpected

The South Shore Art Center's Gift Gallery offers a host of creative, can't-be-found-anywhere-else gifts.

Showcasing the talents of regional and local artists, the SSAC Gift Gallery features woodware by renowned wood artisan Robert St. Pierre of Duxbury; Russian sandalwood jewelry by Russian artist Vladimer Levestam; Hull artisan Irene Rybicki's decoupage primitive bangles sold only here and through the Metropolitan Art Museum in New York; original Christmas cards by Tom Rebek, a well-known Boston watercolorist and member of the prestigious Copley Society; a diverse selection of pottery designed and created by Judy Rossman, George Dalton, Lois Atherton, Sheilagh Flynn and Roz; and an assortment of glass and pottery ornaments created by Serena Brundige and Nancy Connolly.

Want to show your boss your creative side? Skip the tie this year and present him with an elegant letter opener made of exotic wood such as African paduak, ebony, Brazilian satin wood or wenge. Run out of ideas for your great-aunt? Choose a hand-dyed silk frame for a cherished photo. What do you give friends to show they're really special? How about a "Peeps" three-dimensional figure pen or earrings? Or a sterling silver bracelet? Or exotic wooden desk accessories?

The possibilities go as far as you can imagine at the SSAC Gift Gallery. Be creative this season and discover the unexpected; shop the SSAC Gift Gallery Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Call 383-9548 for more information.

Charles Sovek teaches

Nationally known artist Charles Sovek will be holding a four-day painting workshop for adults at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset, Jan. 14 to 17. Recipient of several awards, including the coveted Martha Rathbone McDowell Award which he won twice, Sovek's paintings are in over 400 private and corporate collections including GTE, Pfizer Chemical and General Electric.

Sovek has been painting, teaching and writing about art for over 30 years. He is a contributing editor to The Artist's Magazine and author of three art books, Painting Indoors, Catching Light in Your Paintings and the recently published, Oil Painting: Develop your Natural Ability.

Equally adept at both oil and watercolor, Sovek's popular, instructive workshops stress the theme of "light" and catching light in one's paintings. His four-day workshop at the Art Center, will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Tuesday-Friday, January 14-17. The fee is $150 for members, $175 for non-members and early registration is strongly suggested due to the workshop's popularity. For more information and to register, call 383-9548.

Noble's holds cat photo contest and talent event

If you're allergic to cats, steer clear of Noble's Camera Shops Cohasset store on December 7.

That's the day Noble's Camera Shops will be crawling with cats of all kinds, from "Best Looking" cats, to cats with the "Most Unusual Talent."

"We're calling all amateur photographers and all amateur cats with talent to enter our first-ever photo and talent contest," states Dorothy Noble, comptroller and co-owner of Noble's Camera Shops with her husband, Warren. "There will be lots of great prizes and fun for cat-lovers of all ages."

To enter the photo event, contestants must take a picture of a cat posed alongside any one of The Cat's Meow Village scenes. The Cat's Meow Village is a series of hand-crafted wood collectibles, each featuring a cat peering out of a window or sitting at a doorstep, perhaps of an antique store, church or home. The challenge is to be as clever and imaginative as possible. 'Cat'egories include "Most Creative," "Most Like a Real Village Setting," and "Best Looking Cat." All photographs can be dropped off at any Noble's store, but they will be displayed at the Cohasset location only.

The judging and awards ceremony for the photo contest will take place at 11 a.m., Dec. 7 at the Noble's Cohasset store in the Tedeschi Plaza on Rte. 3A. As part of the awards program, a cat talent contest will also be held, beginning at 11:30 a.m. All kittens or cats are welcome to come into the store at that time to showcase their talent before the judges. 'Cat'egories include "Loudest Meowing," "Longest Purring," and "Most Unusual Talent."

Prizes for the contest include a 35mm Kodak S900 Tele camera outfit (value $100), Noble's gift certificates, a membership to The Cat's Meow Village Collector's Club, one of the designs from the latest Cat's Meow series, and free cat grooming services from Hingham Pet Shop. The first 10 photo contest entrants will receive a single-use Kodak camera.

"We developed this event around the huge success of our Cat's Meow Village product line," said Kimberly Noble-Hubbard, general manager of the Noble's Cohasset store. "Our customers love to collect the different Cat's Meow Village scenes, and are actually on a waiting list for them.

The contest deadline is Dec. 6. Complete contest details are available at each of the following Noble's Camera Shops stores: Rte. 3A, Tedeschi Plaza, Cohasset, (383-9354; Lincoln Street (Rte. 3A), Lincoln Plaza, Hingham, 749-0700; and 65 South Street, Hingham Square, Hingham, 749-0588.

coa connection

By Kathy Bryanton
Senior Center

Thursday afternoon, Nov. 21, Gale Civale, a member of the Cohasset High School faculty, and several of her students, met with the Seniors to decorate spoons for Project Bread. All present enjoyed being creative together and sharing individual creative ideas. For each decorative spoon brought to Downtown Crossing, $10 is donated to feed the hungry. Those students who participated in this worthwhile project were Danielle Nohe, Nicole Peterson, Kate Murray, Karyn Murray, Chloe Chittick, A.J. Sless, and Tara Gallagher. We appreciate their time and help and look forward to getting together again for other similar activities.

DATES TO REMEMBER

Dec. 3 — Our regular Tuesday luncheon. Jack and June Hubbard, who have traveled extensively, and who have been our guests previously, will be our guests and will present slides of their experiences in traveling.

Dec. 5, Thursday — The Cohasset Council on Aging Board Training will be at the South Shore Elder Services in Braintree. This meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m.

Dec. 6, Friday — Holly Day at Ashumet Holly Reservation in Sandwich. There are still a few reservations left. Call 383-9112 and reserve a space on the bus now.

Dec. 7, Saturday — South Shore Men of Harmony have extended an invitation to all of our seniors to attend their annual Holiday Concert. This will take place at Hingham High School on the 7th at 2 p.m. For free tickets, come to the COA Office or call 383-9112. There will be transportation available.

Dec. 8, Sunday — Friends of the COA are having their annual Fund Raiser. Come to Cohasset High School on Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m. and see one of the finest programs ever. Robin Lane, well known entertainer will present "Ladies First," whereby she will portray the wives of several presidents. Call the COA office for tickets now. Price of admission is $10 and a van will be available.

SHINE NEWS — by Pat Ryan — SHINE is a state funded program designed to ensure that Massachusetts elders have access to accurate information regarding their Health Insurance options.

Health Insurance for seniors is a confusing issue. Changes in policies and products make it difficult to decide on the type and extent of coverage to purchase.

For the last three years, the Council on Aging has had three trained SHINE counselors available to answer your questions, review your present coverage and assist you in processing claims. Eleanor Smith is available on Tuesdays before the luncheons from 10 a.m. to noon. Helen Cody is available on Wednesdays from 10 a.m. to noon, and Joe Buckley is available every Thursday morning from 10 a.m. to noon.

Appointments can be made by calling the Council on Aging. These counselors make home visits and many questions can be answered over the phone. So if you are currently confused about your present coverage, do not hesitate to give a SHINE counselor a call at 383-9112. They are happy to assist you.

Spring soccer registration

Registration for the 1992 Spring Soccer Season will be held Wednesday, Dec. 4, at the Deer Hill School from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

All interested players, both boys and girls, ages under 8 (born before 1/1/85) through under 19 (born after 8/1/72), are urged to register. Registration forms may be obtained at the Main Office of either the Junior/Senior High School or the Deer Hill School for those planning to register by mail.

The Cohasset Soccer Club must inform the Coastal League by January, 1992 relative to the number of teams to be entered in the various age groups. Please note: only those players that are registered as of Dec. 4 are guaranteed a spot on a team and after Dec. 20, there will be a late registration fee of an additional $10 per player. Additionally, the total number of Cohasset teams will be restricted due to the lack of playing fields.

The fee will be: $30 for the first child, $25 for the second child, $20 for the third child and no charge for any additional family member.

Make checks payable to the Cohasset Soccer Club.

Reminder: registrations are accepted on a first come, first serve basis. Mail-in registrations will not be recorded before Dec. 4.

Hanukkah begins with great food

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Jewish cooks will barely have finished basting the turkey and baking the pies before it's time to grate potatoes and heat the oil. This year Hanukkah celebrations begin at sundown Dec. 1. and continue for eight nights.

Hanukkah may be the best-known Jewish holiday, mostly because of its proximity to Christmas. Both holidays seem to share some elements: both feature candles in the window, gaily wrapped packages, a focus on the family and celebration of an historical event.

Hanukkah commemorates the historical victory of the Jews over the Syrian army in 165 B.C.E. It represents the triumph of faith over might.

The Syrians had attempted to force the Jews to worship Zeus and had erected a statue of the Greek god in the Temple. After a three year war, the Jews reclaimed the Temple and threw out the idols. Hanukkah celbrates the rededication of the Temple, not the victory itself.Some say the Jews would not have rebelled against the Syrians had they been allowed to worship as they wished. The fight was not for political equality but for religious freedom.

The miracle of Hanukkah — and the reason for its unusual length and central celebration — stems from the legend that there was only enough holy oil to burn in the Temple's perpetual lamp for one day. The oil lasted for the eight days it took to prepare more holy oil.

The holiday is commonly referred to as the Festival of Lights. Jews will light one candle for each night of Hanukkah. They use a special candle holder with spaces for nine candles — one for each night and the shammash, or servant, candle used to light all the others. The candle holder is supposed to be displayed where it can be seen by passersby.

Hanukkah is a festival, a joyous celebration. To that end, Jews give gifts, play games and visit with friends.

The game traditionally associated with Hanukkah is a betting game played with the dreidl, a four-sided top. Each side bears a Hebrew letter. Depending on which side the top falls on, players must put something into the pot or take something out. The game is traditionally played for pennies or peanuts.

In Fiddler on the Roof, Tevye sang about the importance of tradition. This holiday is no exception to the rule. It also features a traditional food to be eaten on Hanukkah — the potato pancake, or latke.

It's not the potato that makes latkes Hanukkah fare — it's the oil in which they are cooked. Potatoes came to be associated with the holiday because they were the staple of Eastern European diets in wintertime. In fact, in Israel celebrants cook and eat doughnuts rather than pancakes.

No one knows when the custom of giving gifts began, although it has grown in importance in recent years. Most older Jews remember only the custom of giving money— Hanukkah gelt — to children and only on one night. The custom of gelt continues in the form of foil-wrapped chocolate coins.

Congregation Sha'Aray Shalom in Hingham wants to make a difference at Hanukkah-time. Instead of exchanging gifts in religious school, the children are being asked to bring health and personal items for donation to a local shelter. Children will be bringing such things as soap, shampoo, toothpaste and toothbrushes to the collection baskets in the Temple lobby between Tuesday, Dec. 3 and Thursday, Dec. 19. The collection is in addition to the regular food drive and charitable giving the children conduct all year.

SHELLEY'S POTATO LATKES

4 large potatoes
1 large onion
1 egg
1 heaping tablespoon flour salt & pepper to taste
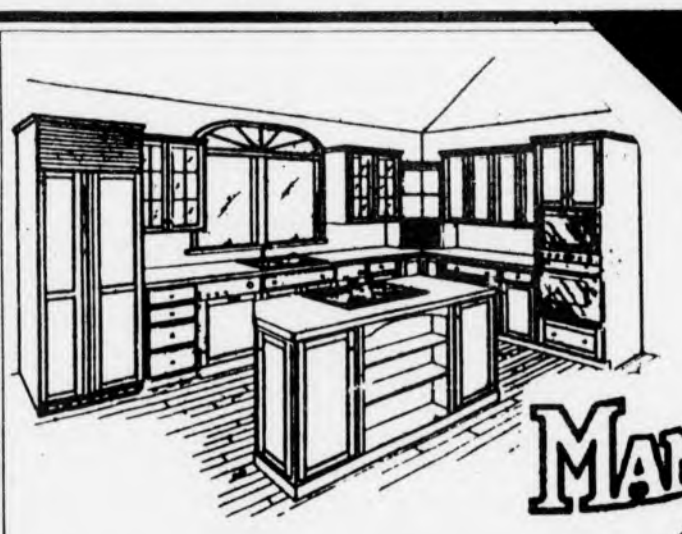
oil for frying

Grate onion. Grate potato and drain well. Combine potato and onion with remaining ingredients.

Heat enough oil in frying pan to just cover pancakes. Drop mixture by tablespoonfuls into hot oil. Brown on one side, then turn and brown the other side.

Drain on brown paper or paper towels. Serve with applesauce or sour cream.



Hint: grate onion first to keep potato white while preparing pancakes.

GAYLE'S DOUGHNUTS

1 teaspoon baking powder dash of salt, cinnamon, nutmeg

THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 176738-T3
NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To all persons interested in the estate of Mary C. Bremer late of Cohasset, in said County, deceased.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the seventh to tenth accounts, of Rhodes G. Lockwood and Weld S. Henshaw, Trustees under the will of said deceased, being the eighteenth to twenty-first accounts of the trusts, for the benefit of Stephanie B. Neal and for the benefit of Barbara B. Kinne have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said account(s), you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the eighteenth day of December, 1991, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said account(s). If you desire to object to any item of said account(s), you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

WITNESS, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this fifteenth day of November, 1991.

C.A. No. 91-1480

Hingham Institution for Savings, Plaintiff VS. James R. Crough and Nancy H. Crough, Defendant.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain mortgage given by James R. Crough and Nancy H. Crough a/k/a Nancy C. Crough to the Hingham Institution for Savings, a Massachusetts banking corporation, dated September 22, 1975, recorded with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 5174, Page 593, of which mortgage the undersigned are the present holders, for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing, the same will be sold at Public Auction at TEN O'CLOCK in the forenoon (10:00 a.m.) on Wednesday, December 18, 1991, on the premises below described being known as 720 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts, to wit:

The land, with the buildings thereon, situated in Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts, shown as Lots A and B2 on a plan entitled "Plan of Land in Cohasset, Mass." dated June 14, 1967 by Edwin A. Young, Surveyor, recorded with Norfolk Registry of Deeds in Plan Book 223, page 664, and together bounded and described as follows:

NORTHERLY by Lot B1 on said plan by two courses measuring, respectively, two hundred forty-one and 26/100 (241.26) feet and one hundred fifty-five and 97/100 (155.97) feet;

EASTERY by Lot B1 on said plan, one hundred twenty-eight and 23/100 (128.23) feet;

SOUTHERLY by Lot B1 on said plan, one hundred fifty-five and 97/100 (155.97) feet;

SOUTHEASTERLY by Lot B1 on said plan, seventy-nine and 78/100 (79.78) feet; and SOUTHERLY AND WESTERLY by land shown on said plan as now or formerly of James P. and Anne E. Cifrino by four courses measuring, respectively, one hundred thirty-two and 24/100 (132.24) feet, fifty-eight and 90/100 (58.90) feet, one hundred and 52/100 (100.52) feet and fifty-four and 26/100 (54.26) feet.

Said two lots together contain 60,858 square feet more or less according to said plan.

Said premises are conveyed subject to and with the benefit of rights, easements and restrictions of records, insofar as any or all of the same are now in force and applicable.

Being the same premises conveyed to the mortgagors by deed of David B. Merrick et al dated September 1, 1970 recorded with Norfolk Deeds in Book 4685, page 733.

The within described property is known as 720 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, Massachusetts, 02025.

The above premises will be sold subject to and with the benefit of all outstanding tax titles, municipal and or other public taxes, assessments or liens, if any.

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS ($10,000.00) will be required to be paid in cash or by certified check by the purchaser at the time and place of sale, as earnest money. The balance is to be paid in cash or by certified check within twenty (20) days thereafter, to be deposited in escrow with Robert H. Gaughen, Jr., Esq., at 528 Broad Street, East Weymouth, Massachusetts 02189, pending approval of said sale by the Court. Other terms, if any, are to be announced at the sale.

obituaries

Mary Fleming

Mary Evelyn Fleming, 96, former owner of the Edward M. Fleming Marine Hardware and Gift Store, died Nov. 24 at her home after a brief illness.

A lifelong resident of Cohasset, she retired from the store eight years ago after running the store for 51 years.

She was a founding member of the South Shore Music Circus board of directors and a life member of the Cohasset Historical Society. She was active in the Red Cross during World War II.

She leaves a brother, John J. Fleming.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Tuesday in St. Anthony's Church by the Rev. John J. Keohane, church pastor.

Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Donations may be made to the Pine Street Inn, 444 Harrison Ave., Boston, 02118 or to the Guild of Catholic Charities, 686 North Main St., Brockton, 02401

Marion Carnes

A funeral Mass for Marion E. (Faria) Carnes was to be celebrated Wednesday, Nov. 27, at 10 a.m. in St. Paul's Church.

Burial was to be in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Mrs. Carnes, 75, died Friday at her home on North Street. She retired from work two years ago after working 26 years for the Hingham school system. She was manager of the cafeteria at Central Junior High.

Born in Cohasset, she had lived in Hingham 45 years.

Wife of the late Thomas P. Carnes, she leaves a son, David Carnes of Wethersfield, Conn.; a daughter, Patricia Ann Carnes; two sisters, Anna Lawrence of Cohasset and Christine Devereaux of Winchester, and two grandchildren.

Donations may be made to the American Cancer Society, 247 Commonwealth Ave., Boston, 02115.

Red Cross benefit

The Third Annual Holiday Party Benefit sponsored by the South Area Red Cross will be held on Tuesday, Dec. 4 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy, 27 Glendale Road.

South Area Council Chairman Helen Shea remarked, "There's a wonderful way to welcome in the Holiday Season with good friends and at the same time help your community."

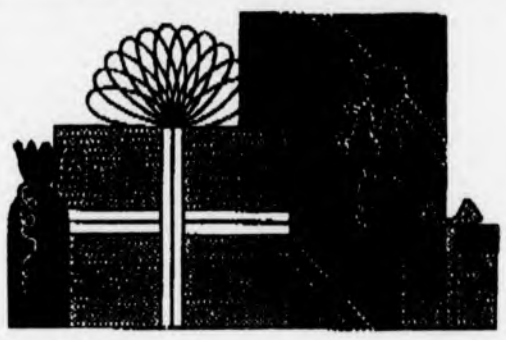
All proceeds from ticket sales help the South Area Red Cross to continue providing 21 communities with services such as aid to disaster victims, service to military and their families, and increasing communities social services.

Tickets are available at $10 per person and can be obtained by calling Red Cross at 331-6999.

Art competition underway

The following students are representing CHS in an art competition at the Wang Center in Boston. The theme of the contest is "Heroes and Anti-Heroes" and winners will be honored at a ceremony on Dec. 10.

The CHS artists are: Scott Moe, Jon Ford, Simone Carlisle, Raymond Jones, Amy Silvia, Courtney Schultz, John Kisiel, Nicole Haefner, Earle Bestick, Kate Barrett, Amy Young, Meredith Hansen, Sindie St. Eloi and Renee Prisble.



Free holiday concerts set

The "South Shore Men of Harmony", Massachusetts championship barbershop chorus, will once again present free concerts during the holiday season. One will be for the elderly and the other for developmentally delayed children.

The Senior Citizen "Christmas Concert" will take place at Hingham High School Saturday, Dec. 7 at 2 p.m. Complimentary tickets may be purchased by calling Al Lundgren at 749-3171. All seniors are welcome.

The children's concert will once again take place at St. Coletta's Hall, Cardinal Cushing School, 400 Washington Street (Route 53) Hanover Thursday, Dec. 12 at 7 p.m. This will be the fifth year in a row that the chorus has enjoyed singing for and with the children and staff.

As regionalization emerges as an issue

Argument over new chief's appointment is 4-1

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The top candidate for the fire chief's job — a deputy chief from Sanford, Maine, —will be interviewed Monday, Dec. 9, by selectmen as part of the board's regular meeting at town hall.

Meanwhile the word "regionalization" has cropped up in discussion of the fire department's operation.

Rumors that Scituate might be interested in taking on responsibility for the Cohasset operation were quashed by selectmen Monday. At the same time, Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts said he is trying to set up a meeting with Scituate officials to talk about some sort of regionalization.

"If it were to happen, it's still a long way off," Tebbetts commented after the meeting.

Tebbetts said he isn't limiting the regionalization talk to Scituate and pointed out that officials from five area towns have been talking for some time as the issue of an advanced life support ambulance was under consideration. The towns involved in the ongoing discussion have agreed to contract with South Shore Hospital for an ALS ambulance service that begins next year. Selectman Diana Kornet has been the liason to that group but Monday she denied that there was a proposal to have the Scituate fire chief take control of the Cohasset department for a fee.

"As I have pointed out before, state aid was $1.5 million four years ago. It's less than half that now. Something has to be done," Tebbetts said.

He pointed out that all the towns in the area are faced with the same problem of how to deliver services in the face of a budget crunch.

He said the Scituate Town Administrator Richard Agnew had talked with Greg Doyon, the executive secretary, about regionalization in the fire department.

Tebbetts said he asked Agnew to set up a meeting with Scituate's Selectmen Chairman Richard Blake, himself, and the two executive officials, Agnew and Doyon. He said the meeting had not yet been scheduled.

The issue of regionalization was not part of the selectmen's agenda. Bob Davenport of Sohier Street brought up the issue as selectmen argued among themselves over the procedures for selecting a new chief.

Last week the board interviewed four candidates for fire chief. The current chief, Daniel Brock, has a contract that expires at the end of the month. The board voted last summer to let his contract lapse.

The top candidate after the first set of interviews was John Nadeau, 34, deputy chief in Sanford, Maine.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle argued at length with the Cohasset likes to gamble - nearly $1.03 million bet on state lottery

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

A recent senate report on the lottery reveals some interesting facts about life in Massachusetts.

The state has the highest per capita spending on the lottery in the nation — a whopping $265.68 per year for every man, woman and child in the Commonwealth.

That tops the national average of $94.53 by about 270 percent.

"Just imagine if people took 1/3 or 1/5 or the money they spend on the lottery and gave it to their city or town — we would never have heard of an override," Andrew Parker, senior fiscal analyst and a principal researcher on the report, said in a telephone interview.

And, according to the report, 'Lottery Revenue Growth: Prospects for the Future,' the state is dependent on citizens keeping up that high level of spending to balance the books.

Local residents did their part. In FY'90, $1.025 million was wagered in Cohasset. Figures for FY'91, which ended July 1, were not readily available.

It's impossible to know how much of that figure is due to actual wagering by Hingham residents — and how much by those who live in neighboring towns that are just passing through.

Nearly $4 million was wagered in Hanover and $5.5 million in Abington. And Brockton takes top local honors with about $44 million wagered in FY'90, according to the report.

A large part of lottery money (about 65 percent) goes back to the cities and towns in the form of local aid.

Bill Kite explains technology

By Joan Kovach
For the PSO

"I distrust technology. I avoided it for a long time." Bill Kite, Chairman of Cohasset High School's Department of English is speaking. He looks every bit the part of a high school English teacher—tweed jacket, shirt and tie, glasses and short graying hair. Bill is talking with much excitement and some awe, perhaps even disbelief of the fast moving technological changes in the area of teaching and the role of a writing lab in the instruction of English composition. His desk is littered with many things, among them a series of articles on the efficacy of educational writing lab programs and a series of revised and updated writing lab proposals. He has that distracted professional look. He continues.

"But now that I've seen the benefits this kind of program brings to the teaching and learning of writing...Even now with our limited capacities, students are in here (the current writing lab) using the few machines we have every day."

Kite is also excited about the faculty's interest in and mastery of computer work. "To a large extent, we've become completely computer literate in three years." He reports that teachers have, with their own or borrowed machines at home, taught themselves to use them and transitioned from chalk and talk instructors to those using creative computer strategies when possible.

Kite goes on to explain how the writing lab works, and proudly gives a tour of a small room recently wired so a varied collection of computers, (some purchased by the department, some handed down from other areas in the school, and some acquired through the Stop and Shop program) are available for the creating and printing of student work. He explains that the faculty are seeing students write more because they can generate a clean copy every time, and printed work makes ideas look better. Students feel better about their work and are doing more of it. Students are encouraged to print their first drafts so they can see the evolution of their work. "They are learning that writing, even a large project, really is done in pieces and the pieces can be moved around for different effects."

Cohasset's week

Early release day

Dec. 5 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

SCHOOL	BUSES DEPART
Junior/Senior High	12 p.m.
Deer Hill School	12:40 p.m.
Joseph Osgood School	12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the Elementary schools and food service will be available at the Junior/Senior High School.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff to hold parent conferences and secondary staff development programs.

Conservation opening

Residents interested in being appointed to the conservation commission should send an application to the selectmen. Conservation commissioner William H. Parmenter resigned from the commission recently. Mr. Parmenter died Dec. 1 after a brief illness. Information about the arrangements appear elsewhere in this issue.

Storm repairs at $100,000

The town is spending about $100,000 on storm related repairs. If the money is not reimbursed by state or federal governments, it will appear as a deficit against next year's taxes.

The $100,000 spending involves emergency repairs to roads, riprap, seawalls and the beaches, according to Greg Doyon, selectmen's secretary.

The work is already underway.

Vendor control sought

Members of the Art Center/Harborfest Steering Committee want selectmen to work with them in an attempt to control vendors and events at the next festical planned for the weekend of June 24.

James Lagrotteria asked selectmen not to accept the applications of anyone who tries to circumvent the screening process. He said he understood all the licenses would come from selectmen.

Plans for the next festival are already in the works. The South Shore Art Center will have its 37th annual festival from June 23 to 29. The Harborfest, run in connection with the art center, is a weekend of events. Lanci Valentine and Chamber President Robert Martin appeared at the selectmen's meeting this week to talk about plans. The Harborfest committee also includes the Rev. Gary Ritts, Keith Knowles and Don Harold. Next year the Harborfest planners expect to add a golf tournament to the list of activities.

June Simeone displays a few of the dolls that she and her husband, Lou, will raffle off at the Cohasset Village Fair, Saturday, Dec. 7, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The dolls have been dressed by volunteers from the four churches taking part in the fair.

Bench on Elm Street

Charlotte Leland wants the town to take two granite steps at the side of Elm Street and create a seating area. Selectmen are looking into the idea.

General Investment Joins Park Development

General Investment and Development Co. (GID), developer of the Hall Estate, has entered into an agreement with the Hull Council for Business and Cultural Development for the development of the Weir River Estuary Park in Hull on the Hull/Hingham line.

GID and the Hull Council have reached agreement for the long term development and support of the Weir River Estuary Park. The Council has been planning and developing the Park for a year with the objective being an active educational attraction for the region, an educational resource and training center for the area schools, and a restored and protected sensitive environmental zone for Hull, Hingham and Cohasset. GID agrees that the development of the Park could result in a dramatic improvement to the entrance of Hull while conserving an important estuary that leads into Boston Harbor. The company has also been a long time friend and supporter of the Hull Public Schools and the recent initiatives to establish modern theme schools and curriculums. The Park has dedicated part of its program to the Hull schools and the schools have responded with several educational, training and scientific efforts at the Park's Olympic Field Station.

Robert Karp, Vice President of GID said "This is the kind of initiative needed for this part of Hull. The Park can not only provide a better entrance way but will likely be an attraction for many visitors to the region. General Investment is committed for the long run in Hull as with all communities we do business in. Our support of the Weir River Estuary Park reflects that commitment."

GID has agreed to fund certain development costs during 1991-1992, fund other implementation costs during 1992 through 1994, and provide seed funds for the endowment necessary to operate the Park in the future. The total contribution by GID could be up to $160,000. GID has expressed willingness to dedicate portions of the Hall Estate property to the Park assemblage, and remain involved in the entire park development process with design control rights.

The Council will continue its highly successful fund-raising for the balance of the development costs, contract with State and town on property acquisition and control, and apply for an expanded endowment for the long term operations of the Park. In fact, the Council has begun work to form of identify park development and operating entities to assume the management requirements of the final Park facility and program.

Hull Council President Francine Townsend said "This project was first suggested by the town's Planning Board and Conservation Commission. The Council picked-up on the interest in the land conservation and found a new facility for the school's expansion into theme and environmental curriculum. Our own staff has done an amazing job in fund-raising to date and the addition of GID is a major success. GID represents a significant funding source with a vested interest and will be here to support our efforts."

The town has approved the park plans and conservation intent many times in the past. Town meeting resolutions, Planning Board, Conservation Commission, and Board of Selectmen votes in support of the Park have taken place during the past four years. GID's agreement will allow the Council to take local control of the Park development and operations while fulfilling GID's Hall Estate trail plans previously approved by the town.

In a recent letter to Commissioner Peter Webber of The Department of Environmental Management, Town Manager Joe Murphy stated "The town has given its complete support to this project. The Park and our capped landfill will convert the entrance to our town to an attractive amenity."

The Park's other program element planned by the Council is also of great interest to GID. Tourism and regional visitors can provide an economic shot in the arm for Hull and the region. The Council has an expressed mission statement supporting economic revitalization for the community it serves. GID is heavily invested in its Hall Estate condominium project and finds two hurdles to completion of the project. First, greater economic viability of the community will attract future buyers, decrease taxes and improve services and schools. Second, the Hall Estate neighborhood needed physical improvement. The area is now becoming a capped and protected landfill, a park entrance with a visitors center and canoe livery, and an educational facility.

One significant hurdle remains. The State has expressed an interest in the Park's efforts by the possible acquisition of a key parcel held by a private entity. The site is a failed real estate project on George Washington Blvd. and owned by Olympic International Bank of Boston. It is important as the primary entrance to the Park and the obvious location for the visitors center. The bank has cooperated in the Council's plans despite offers for commercial development because of the bank's interest in maintaining its relationship with the town and expanding its own Community Reinvestment Act efforts. In fact, the bank has already invested $50,000 in the project. GID is most interested in the Park working as a whole and not having the Olympic bank site will hurt the effort. The State will be acting soon on the acquisition request.

Police work to purchase modern weapons

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The Cohasset Police Association is beginning a fundraising drive to buy new guns, according to Sgt. Brian Noonan, who is heading up the special committee working on the project.

Twice funds requested by Police Chief Joseph Kealey for the change have been deleted from the budget. The only community in the area still using the older revolvers is Hull.

The town's 17-person police force is armed with 12-year-old guns that operate manually.

The new guns would be Beretta semi-automatics, made by Smith and Wesson.

"If you have an armed robbery, they're either using an ouzi or a semi-automatic," Sgt. Noonan said.

"Everybody has them."

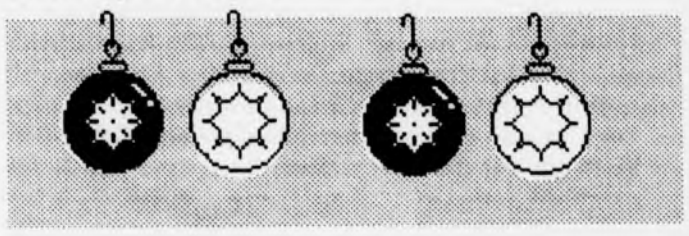
Noonan said he and his committee studied the choice of weapons for the past six months. There are several semi-automatics in use by area police department's. The choice of the Cohasset police is a 15-round semi-automatic that is a double-action weapon.

A single-action weapon requires less pressure after the first round is fired. It remains cocked until a safety is moved, which provides less safety.

The officers will train on the weapons on their own time under the direction of one of the officers, Sgt. Noonan said.

"We feel strongly enough about this," he said.

He expects it will take about $8,000 to purchase the new weapons, holsters and related equipment.



The force will probably be using the new semi-automatics by February or March since the training process must be completed before the weapons are issued.

Already the association has received $2,500 toward the new guns. Anyone who wants to contribute to the fund should get in touch with Sgt. Noonan at 383-1055.

Painting presented

This fall, Mary Lou Clark, local artist and instructor at Quincy College, was commissioned to do a portrait of the U.S.S. Constitution for the commanding officer who is transferring.

When Clark attended the Change of Command Ceremony for the officers of the U.S.S. Clark (the Frigate named after her father, Admiral Jocko Clark) which was held aboard the Constitution she met Lt. Lennie LaPorta, the Executive Officer of the Constitution. Lt. LaPorta asked her to do a painting of the Constitution as a gift from the men — officers and crew — to Commander Cashman, the Commanding Officer who would be moving on. Clark decided to use a painting of the ship by Aylward as a start because it is one of the few examples of the ship in full sail. From this she added a panorama of the skyline of Boston in the distance as a reminder to the Commander of his Boston years. The final oil painting was presented to Commander Cashman after the Change of Command Ceremony in October.

Dan Cotton led "Expedition Midnight Sun"

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

A lot of people summer and winter in Cohasset, but Jean and Dan Cotton may be the only two people in the history of the town who actually change houses.

Jean and Dan Cotton arrived in Cohasset in 1946 with two young children in tow - Elizabeth and Mary Jane. They loved the house on "upper King Street" - which connects North Main Street and Route 3A. Dan calls the King Street house "my house" as opposed to "Jean's house" which is located at the tip of Rice Island.

The King Street house is vintage 1731; its original owner was Josiah Burr. Jean's Rice Island home was built by the Gammons family. Called "The Camp" and "Ma Gammons' Tea House," Dan says the three-room stone cottage was designed by Ed Nichols, who was David Wadsworth's grandfather. Dan thinks the stone mason was a man named Sylvester.

The Cotton's folks were New Hampshire bred and born. Jean and Dan met at Kimball Union Academy (Established 1813) in Meredith, New Hampshire. Dan said he was reasonably shy (then) and "The first time I ever spoke to her I asked her to the junior prom."

In 1935 Dan graduated from Dartmouth College with a degree in Sociology. "You had to have money to get in," he said, noting that he was in college during the depression.

Immediately after graduating from college "I went to work for Swift and Company in Boston, unloading beef cars for $20 a week. I ate like a horse and lost 25 pounds - I couldn't keep up."

He married Jean in 1937 and stayed at Swift and Company for 17 years. Dan says he was promoted to truck driver, branch superintendent and then general product sales. "Swift and Company made soap, glue - adhesives is the polite name for it.

"During the Depression things were pretty thin. If you had a job it was really something. The emphasis in those days was on security. I kept hearing about Swift's wonderful retirement plan - almost like the Japanese companies of today.

"This thing they call the recession today - it's absolutely nothing. I'm talking about the days when guys were selling apples on the street corners, it was no joke. And there was no social security, no unemployment. You were on your own. There were soup kitchens everywhere. You could buy a bowl of soup for 1.5 cents. In those days you often had to make something to sell."

Although jobs were hard to find, Dan was an excellent salesman and around 1956 he gave his notice to Swift and joined up with F.P. Bartlett in Cambridge (which later sold out to National Starch).

"Bartlett was a little outfit owned by six fellows. Four were chemists, and two were in outside sales. So, there were six chiefs and I was the Indian, the third salesman. I went on straight commission in that job and I found it very satisfactory. I liked commission sales."

Dan said Bartlett was into very specialized products. "Before I sold the product (adhesive), I had to go out and find out what the customer wanted and then the company chemists created the product.

"We made the window boxes on cake boxes, cellophane bags before polyethylene, and our biggest customer was Continental Can, which had 80 percent of the world's business. And here we were, just a little factory behind M.I.T."

"When National Starch bought Bartlett in 1958, he began to lose interest, saying he just wasn't a big company man. "They fired me. I didn't like them and they didn't like me. I didn't march good." He then returned home to reshingle the roof.

And this turned out to be a really good thing, because he ran into Ed Bursk, a Cohasset resident and editor of the Harvard Business Review who lived on Sheldon Road and who wanted to establish "The Admiral Richard E. Byrd Polar Center" in Boston and he wanted Dan to help him.

Although ultimately Dan would be the Executive Director of the Polar Center and would organize and conduct tours of the Canadian Arctic and North Pole in 1969 and 1970 - his first tour being Expedition Midnight Sun - he says initially he went to work as a "scrounger," trying to put a spectacular trip around the world together.

"The trip cost $10,000 a person, so our market was Company CEOs. And our plane would only hold 50 people with equipment, but 60 people went. As scrounger, my job was to find a plane for our 'Eisenhower' Air Force Pilot to fly, and get big companies to give us things for free. I was pretty successful. I got refrigerator suits (snowsuits for men) at half price. I got free blankets from the Carolinas, Hanes long underwear, plenty of booze from Hebulin. I was even able to get a Sperry-made $25,000 gyro compass; and General Electric said it would service our plane all over the world.

"The trip was very successful. It took 28 days and there were no major problems. The expedition had an audience with the Pope, took a side trip to Copenhagen, picked up Russian pilots and went to Moscow, and met with Prince Phillip in London."

Then, Dan said, "We had all this money left over and we put the Polar Center together, and named me executive director – pretty good, huh?"

Dan's job as executive director of the Polar Center (no longer in existence) was to continue to raise funds. But after holding court on the top of the windowless New England Aquarium for a year and a half, plans for the center dissolved and "I became a consultant...which meant I was out of work."

After a number of small consulting jobs, Dan went to work for a real estate firm in Boston called Julian Studley. "I was 59 and they took me on straight commission, no draw, no expenses. I cost them nothing - why not take me?" Dan successfully sold commercial real estate until "I made my last deal one day and folded my tent."

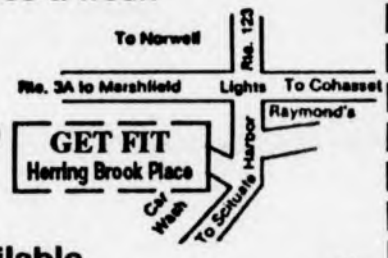
And throughout all those many years he was involved in town government up to his eyebrows. Dan only recently resigned from the planning board, where he was an elected member for 10 years. He served on "the next to the last town hall study group," served one term on the school committee, and was chairman of the advisory committee.

Dan is a great storyteller, and all really good local storytellers have at least one Gilbert Tower story. And Dan does.

Daniel Cotton, former planning board member, relaxes at his King Street home.

"The owner of a duplex next to the First Parish Church wanted the church to sell or give him 18 inches of land in order for him to build a small sidewalk for one of his renters. His home was built practically on top of the lot line.

"We (the church) debated whether we should, whether we shouldn't for so long that the man finally just went right ahead and built the sidewalk. He probably thought we didn't care," Dan said.



"Well, then the members of the church had something new to discuss - what to do about this encroachment on church property. One day Gilbert showed up at the church, went over to the sidewalk, ran a line down the sidewalk and chopped 18 inches of bricks out of the sidewalk. And that took care of the entire issue."

around town

• We congratulate Erin O'Leary who is in her junior year at Notre Dame Academy. Erin received the 1991 Best Director Award at the All-School Drama Festival. She and the cast and the crew of the Junior Class did an outstanding job in presenting "Strawberry Jam." The Drama Festival is an annual event allowing each class to present a production for judging and further competition among the area schools. We hope that as the competitions continue you and your fellow workers keep wowing 'em, Erin; be sure to let us know how you do.

• Another Cohasset resident is walking around town as proud as a peacock, and with good reason. Louis Joseph Molinari recently passed the Bar, and on his first attempt. Louis is a graduate of Suffolk undergraduate and Suffolk Law School and is now practicing law. Congratulations to you, Louis.

• Leo Fiori has taken another step to help our town, this time in the form of recycling. You can now recycle your used oil at Leo's EXXON gas station on Chief Justice Cushing Highway, up to five gallons at a time. Great news, since it has always been hard to dispose of. Plus there is another benefit. You get to chat with Leo, who knows more news "around town" than anyone else does. Thanks for caring, Leo.

• We know that most everyone visits Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cushing Plaza (most children beg to go there, as it is heaven for them with all of the books and toys that are there). On Dec. 14 there will be a special treat; Cohasset's own Donna Green will be there to sign her book entitled We Wish You A Merry Christmas, and it is a book that we should all have for our little ones. Go in and meet Donna; she is so talented and so sweet and we all love her. And, will you be impressed with her work if you don't already know it. Great Christmas gift.

• On the subject of gifts, don't forget the annual Church Fair, to be held on the Common on Dec. 7. There will be something for everyone, and the kiddos love to do their Christmas shopping there. Santa will be there of course, as well as many items that people look for year after year. Also, remember the Snowflake Fair, held at the Beechwood Congregational Church...if you don't go for anything else, get there in time to eat the chowder. Its fame is known all over town. And, their "Beach Glass Candy," which is outstanding to eat and to look at. Have fun and support our churches.

• Happy belated birthday greetings to our son-in-law, John Litchfield. One of the best guys around, here's to a happy, healthy year and many more. We love you.

• We hope that Linda Campbell is back at home and feeling all better as she had to make another trip to South Shore Hospital.

• We must congratulate Jo and Herm Fichtner on the birth of their grandson, who was born Nov. 19 in Naples, Italy. That's where their son, Michael, is stationed, and you can bet that the whole family cannot wait for that tour of duty to be over. The Fichtners are a busy group. Lisa is planning her wedding to Jeff Pratt. Jo is working long hours at Jordan Marsh in Braintree. They may be busy but they are all very happy. We are certain that a trip to Italy will be part of their agenda soon.

• Here's a name out of the past that many of you will remember, Norman Jason. Norman called last week, and he reports that he is doing well. He and his wife, Linda, have five daughters and one son (who is an assistant coach at Wheaton College in soccer). Norman is Assistant Headmaster at Winchendon Academy, and the director of admissions. It was great to hear from Norman, and to know his whereabouts.

Micha Burns and Cameron Hynes of the Children's Ballet Workshop rehearse for the performance of the Nutcracker they will perform this weekend at Memorial Hall in Plymouth as a part of the Plymouth Philharmonic's program. Call (508) 746-3377 for ticket information.

• We congratulate Mr. and Mrs. David Game this week. Mrs. Game is the former Sally Sisson, and they were wed on Nov. 16 in San Francisco, California. Hope your first holiday season is a happy one. We'll be sure to send pictures of the snow so you will know what you are missing in the warmth and sunshine.

• Finally, isn't it grand to have the clock back at Wayne Robbins' Garage? Although not exactly like the old one, it's as close as anyone could want and we love it. It will help another generation to make it home on time. That was one thing we always checked to help us get in before our curfew. Thanks, Wayne, it looks great.

• That's the news from here. Please let us know about your family news. Holiday time brings plenty of it, so share with us.

Whispers and Shadows

Seasonal Metamorphosis

By Ali Welz

Steely, cold sand in countless layers and patterns slope silently to the icy, threatening sea.

Winds create their own swirling, gray chaos.

Perpetual waves flow, crash, foam, and ebb; their grey-green pounding a deliberate reminder of their presence.

Numberless stones are scattered and rescattered about.

The icy, sea-hands grope upward, reaching for them and retreat again.

A lone gull struggles, glides, and soars here.

Almost anonymous in the endless, ashen skies.

The white strip practically glows in the intense sunlight,

Almost too bright to bear, yet incredibly comfortable.

The powdery sand's heat warms my damp back.

My hand draws slow circles into the grains.

As I slowly lift my head to look at the water, I squint into the nearly painful noon-time sun.

Lazy, aqua, waves, caress the shimmering shore.

Friendly palms sway to the lingering, inaudible rhythms of the hot breeze.

The whole scene in a perfect, lethargic synchronicity.

Winter

By Johanna Horn

Snow falls peacefully to the frozen ground.
The world seems so quiet, without a soul around.
I walk silently on the crisp, cool ice,
And decide that winter surely is nice.
The ice has covered the immense pond,
The snow has covered the rolling hills
The treetops glisten with transparent crystals.
Silent, no sound.

Untitled

By Kathy Smith

Snowflakes drifting, falling,
Settling on the ground.
The snow covers the woods like a quieting
Blanket,
I hear only one sound.
It's the hush of the snow fluttering
Onto the white ground.
The white ground envelops my boots.
The cold, wet feeling seeps in,
A single snowflake spills onto my red mitten,
It's there for a second,
In the blink of an eye,
It is gone.
Much like the safe blanket of winter.

Christmas Now

By Alissa Sexton

A Christmas with no snow
The shoppers bustling home with their treasures,
Their hurried feet crunching leaves.
Crunch, Crunch
They struggle through the thick carpet of leaves.
I remember a Christmas where the trees were decorated with Magical crystalline snowflakes,
But they are all dismal and bare, now.

Moonbeams and Padlocks

By Michael Cisneros

How confusing.
To understand the ecstasy, yet
To be so inclined to throw it away.
To fall in love with a person when the person's not the person that was the person that you fell in love with.
How confusing.
To be so happy with the left and to be so happy with the right yet want to stay in the middle
To be willing to give it up for something Unknown.
How confusing.
When pseudo-friends try to upset your delicate Balance.
When you guess fastball and they throw curveball and you still have a ball, when and until they call.
How confusing.
To have the power to make people happy yet desperately want to make them sad yet not since you don't want them to be sad.
How confusing.
To have never had so much, yet never felt so alone.

Snowflakes

Await them in your mind
See them with your eyes
Catch them with your tongue
Love them with your heart
Watch them disappear

The Wind

By Harry Curtin

I pray for the rain to come and wash away my tears.
I need the wind to come
it will refresh me, and blow away my pain.
I want the sun to shine
to help me see a brighter day.
I need for the snow to come, so
I can share my warmth with you.

Babooshka

By Melissa E. Christoffel

Beneath the maple tree guarding the garden entrance sat a hunched-back elderly woman on a worn park bench. With her cane and bright, mismatched clothes, Babooshka (grandmother), as the children call her, looked as if she had just stepped from the pages of an Ukrainian fairy tale. Day in and day out, she sat there. Often, she and her cronies could be heard lamenting the food shortages and the miners' strikes which entrapped the city of Donetsk. More rarely, she sat alone as if contemplating the recent changes in her world.

At first, we exchanged simple greetings. Increasingly, as my knowledge of and confidence in speaking her language increased, we talked about current events and told stories of our families and lives.

On one of her contemplative, alone days, she watched me with an intense gaze as I pushed a young friend on the swing. After about a quarter of an hour of scrutiny, she motioned for me to join her. When I sat down, she reached for my hand and in the scratchy voice that betrayed her age, asked me, "How are you girl?" For several minutes, we chatted about her grandchildren, American Lit and my future plans to work in my country's foreign service. Presently, she became silent.

She searched my face as if trying to determine whether I could be trusted. Taking a deep breath and glancing furtively around us, she hesitantly asked, "What is your opinion of Stalin?"

The Soviets, assuming an American's knowledge to be more accurate than their own, often asked my opinion of their government and its policy. In most circumstances, I presented the evidence as I know it. But, as I looked into her eyes, I realized that my usual response would be grossly inappropriate.

Born before the great October Revolution, this woman witnessed her father tried and summarily executed outside the door of her family's cottage. When later informed that he had been an enemy of the state, she had had no choice but to believe the authorities. The recent revelations of 'new facts' are slowly destroying her past. Forced to reevaluate her life in view of these 'new facts,' she fears that she has lived a lie. She is no longer confident in her knowledge of which events actually occurred and which she remembers merely because they were drilled into her mind. Her life is filled with vacancies.

Her shame for having believed in the Stalin regime increases daily, as she learns more and more about the times during which she has lived. Exaggerated, sometimes absurd, tales only deepen her self contempt. Unable to distinguish current lies from those of the past, she innocently repeats her past mistakes, thus compounding the confusion.

In me, she seemed to be seeking someone who could understand, someone to confirm her existence, even when the "new facts" point to her generation as instruments in their country's ultimate destruction. She needed someone, anyone, to forgive her for what she had believed.

So I smiled and responded to the question—not with the facts I usually offered in classroom discussions, but with the words...

"Stalin made many mistakes and many people were hurt as a result, but the Soviet people cannot be blamed for his actions, nor for believing his words."

She squeezed my hand.

The Pond

By Kristin Niessink

The pond had a thin cover of ice,
Not thick enough to skate on.
My blades were sharp, too sharp,
Sharp enough to crack the ice.
I let my voice ring through the air
As a child tried to slowly climb onto the ice.
thin ice,
too thin,
sharp blades,
too sharp.
We will have to wait another day
For winter to work its magic.

In Fall

By Emily D'Urso

In the season of fall,
the leaves turn brown, red, orange and yellow,
Birds fly south for the winter;
the sun shines with less brilliant light.
At sunset, the red and orange leaves shine with renewed brightness, except when the wind rolls round,
taking advantage of the leaves' lightness,
tossing them to the ground.
All the leaves left at dawn, glisten and glitter with dew, although they show no brown, look strong and new.

Chemistry for Poets

By M. J. Smith

I took chemistry for poets, upon your advice,
and found it enlightening.
We learned of the basic elements of which a poem may be synthesized, and of the daring bards who've discovered new compounds, always at great personal risk.
In the laboratory, we recreated
Shakespeare's breakthrough sonnet work, and Dickinson's delicate biochemical work.
Best of all,
it satisfied the science requirement.

The Snow Storm

By Chip Moore

It started with a flake or two.
Then it snowed the whole day through.
The scenery was white like a dove;
It made people fall in love.
All the kids rushed out to play,
For there was no school today.
They went sledding down the hill,
But soon became sick with a chill.
The snow was packed just right,
So we had a giant fight.
Our mothers soon called us home.
They did not like that white foam.

Jungle Gym

By John Brister

Jungle Gym, old Jungle Gym
Like a dying dinosaur you stand
The weeds congregate beneath your swaying mass on the sacred land
Packed hard like stone by a thousand stumbling feet
No longer do the children at your playsite meet
No longer do they play and swing
Or live in a world of spies and kings
Your structure was the framework of our thriving imagination
Now a lonely skeleton creaks in the winds of dilapidation
Jungle Gym, tired Jungle Gym
Though your faint green paint is peeling
Deep within me burns an old and hidden feeling
Let me play, Let me dream!
Don't stop me with your broken beams
Let me live again in the days before decay
Before the last few threads of carefree innocence fray
Your swings' coarse ropes have endured countless rains
Let not the bright hopes wash down the stormpipe drain
Jungle Gym, dear Jungle Gym
Time has turned your sound body rotten
But your glorious memory shall never be forgotten.

The Freedom of Flight

By Tracy Hyde

Sitting high on my rock I gaze out unto the beckoning ocean

From my perch I can see the etched beauty of the coastline that others do not see.

Although it is winter, I still must answer the call of those waves licking the sandy pebbles.

The lulling waves break with the grace of a dancer.

On this winter's day I am not the only worshiper of the solemnity of the shores.

Others roam the beach as they collect shining stones and glittering shells.

The gulls joyously play in the surf, while others peacefully bob on top of the water and later engage in the Freedom of Flight.

I watch them diligently and share their experience as I soar through the sky along side them.

What Is Life?

By Brendan Murphy

Some say life is a delightful romp
Filled with much fanfare and pomp.
They declare that life is grand,
Like a stroll on the beach across the sand.
Others, apart from the rest,
Believe life is a glorious quest.
In their search for knowledge and power,
They fail to see death looms closer by the hour.
Many see life as a torture rack
Or a contraption used to break one's back.
Eagerly such people await
The coming of their final fate.
I say it is folly to define life,
It is like carving a stone with a paring knife.

Remember Pearl Harbor

Exactly 50 years ago Saturday, Dec. 7, Pearl Harbor was bombed by the Japanese, bringing America into World War II.

The Cohasset American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars Posts has put together a simple memorial ceremony to remind us all of the occasion.

Saturday at 10 a.m. at the War Memorial near the Harbor (located next to Kimball's By the Sea) there will be a ceremony to commemorate Pearl Harbor. The ceremony will take about a half hour.

Steven Wigmore Commander of the George Mealy American Legion Post will speak, as will the Rev. John Keohane. Brian Conant will play taps. A firing squad will fire a volley in salute to the dead. The Gold Star Mothers will lay wreaths in honor of the war dead. Young women will toss flowers into the harbor in memory of those who died at sea. The flower girls, as they are called, come from volunteers. Any girls interested should contact Brenda Innis, President of the Legion Auxiliary, at 925-1267 before the event.

The Sons of the American Legion will also participate, according to Thomas Wigmore, commander of the Sons.

Those of us somewhat over 50 will remember the day. They know where they were when they heard the news. They know how their lives changed as a result of the day. They remember men — and women — who didn't come back from the war. They remember what World War II was like.

Some of us who are under 50 grew up thinking that World War II was fought with chorus lines and big bands. We got the romantic version of the war from the movie studios of the 1950s.

Maybe Hollywood was able to rewrite the war story because the returning soldiers of the WWII era turned out to be the parents of the baby boom instead of stressed out trauma victims.

Maybe everyone — including the returning veterans — just wanted to get back to "normal" life.

Many of the veterans who returned from World War II have since passed away. Those who served are getting along in years. The commemoration of the 50th anniversary of Pearl Harbor gives us a suitable occasion to stop and think about the sacrifices made by so many of our citizens.

Burtram Pratt, in his book "A Narrative History of the town of Cohasset, Volume II", managed to record much of the time period.

We would like to see other rememberances written down and invite men and women who lived in Cohasset back in the 1940s to get in touch with the Cohasset Mariner to help document the events of the war as they affected our town. We are looking for amusing anecdotes, sad stories, human drama.

Pratt's history notes that there was one Cohasset serviceman at Pearl Harbor on that day 50 years ago. The book says G. Donald Carpenter, a young volunteer, was stationed there.

By the time the war ended there were 475 Cohasset men and women who served in the military, according to official records. The names of the men and women appear on the Honor Roll near Cohasset Common, at the foot of the hill leading to St. Stephen's.

In 1947, streets and squares were named for the men who lost their lives in the war. The Cohasset men who died in World War II include: Robert E. Jason, William B. Long Jr., Howard Gleason, Perry Higginson, David H. Parker, Everett E. Studley, Norman Mackintosh Todd.

May they rest in peace.

commentary

For months Pembroke historians looked for a time capsule. They looked everywhere to discover what the past had left the future. Finally they found it - full of water and moldy paper.

* * *

In response to last week's poison column, a member of the Garden Club (GC) called to reflect on the time the club hired a poison mushroom expert (?) to walk in the woods with a bunch of them, and identify poisonous mushrooms. The GC lady said: "Everything we saw was poisonous. The only mushroom we saw that wasn't poison was one I had stepped on and squashed."

* * *

Two weeks ago the whole world had a hair over its you-know-what about the Vanderweils knocking down a neighbor's home they had purchased on Jerusalem Road. Well, this is the rest of the story.

A former neighbor had bastardized the home. Maybe he had at one point planned to make it into condominiums. In any case, it was stripped of all if its antiquary features. And the "grand old house" everyone affectionately remembered over the last two weeks was not the tinderbox the Vanderweils knocked down.

An alternative to hiring our own fire chief would be to give the high sign to Scituate and let their fire chief run our fire department. It's no longer a secret that Scituate is interested in doing just that; for some time six plus towns have been talking about creating a greater fire district, which could deliver better quality service, i.e., all six towns own ladder trucks ($400,000 each) and seldom need them. A fire district could retain considerably fewer ladder trucks, and of course Gov. William Weld is supposedly giving out big points to towns who regionalize.

Other pluses are better deployment of manpower, probably better training, some upward mobility and greater responsibilities for firefighters (individual station hierarchy), job security. If our new fire district needed only three ladder trucks as opposed to six, the district would save $1.2 million. Ultimately, the fire district would have only one chief. And so forth with ambulance service, billing. I hope the Tinytown selectpersons don't drop the ball on this. And certainly hope Chairman Ned Tebbetts is keeping his entire board informed of his activities.

My friend found her mother's diary, written in 1929-30 when she was 16 going on 17 waiting for life to start (when somebody fine who touches your mind will suddenly touch your heart). "She was completely boy crazy!" my friend said. "In a few months alone the names of 22 boys were mentioned. She seemed to be in love with them all, some for just a day."

Just a thought. Since when does Tinytown have to get permission from the Historic District Commission (HDC) to use the Town Common at Christmas? I thought all of the people "owned" (in a sense of being able to use) the Common?

Unfortunately, Selectman Martha Gjesteby did not contact me before going into executive session over health insurance in the Nov. 25 film.

If the selectmen discussed what larger percentage of the health insurance premium members should pay, Selectman Gjesteby would not be in conflict in discussing that particular issue because Selectman Gjesteby personally pays 100 percent of the cost of her insurance. It does not benefit her if the other members of the group pay more, or less. She still pays all. And the basic premise of the conflict law is that if there is no benefit, there is no conflict.

However, if the discussion were about another aspect of group insurance, Selectman Gjesteby "could" be in conflict of interest. Had Selectman Gjesteby asked for my legal advice, I would have advised her to stay out of the meeting; because on the general issue of health insurance she has divided loyalties - the municipality and herself. Further, most discussions diverge, not always keeping to the issue at hand.

A letter from a reader says in part:

"To balance the bumper sticker philosophers who oppose overrides under virtually all circumstances, as well as those who suffer from a very real recession anxiety and want to curtail even worthy expenditures "just one more year," I would expect town officials to demonstrate leadership and social conscience in advocating for appropriate levels of public safety services to those who have not been burglarized, of educational services to those who do not have children in the public schools, of maintenance of the town's physical plant to those who would defer an expense regardless of the consequence."

I'm going to respond to the above by a using a quote from a commentary written by Peter Kasperowicz in The Massachusetts Daily Collegian at UMass Amherst:

"You have one dollar and I demand two dollars from you. No matter how much I demand two dollars from you, you don't have it. No matter how much I deserve two dollars from you, you don't have it."

To the reader I would like to say that of all the taxes we pay, local taxes are the most worth it, because we can see them working. Should an override fail next spring, its failure will have little and nothing to do with the worthiness of the questions before the town. It will fail because:

"No matter how much you deserve two dollars from me, I don't have it."

Recreation thanks historical sources

(Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to the Mariner for publication.)

David H. Wadsworth, Curator
Cohasset Historical Society
Dear David:

The recreation commission extends their most sincere gratitude to you, for your effort, time and expertise conducting the Museum tour Saturday, Oct. 12.

Cohasset is indeed very fortunate to have an individual of your talent and interest, overseeing our museums and heritage. Too often, historical facts and artifacts become obscure over passing time, as both expertise and interest are necessary towards the preservation of our past.

Your generous and kindly donation of time, effort, and certainly expertise, conducting this special post-season tour, was greatly appreciated by all concerned. It remains our distinct pleasure to have this continued association with you and the Society.

Very truly yours,
Jack Worley

chamber chatter

By Paula Knowles
Cohasset Chamber of Commerce

Here we are at the holidays again. Thanksgiving is here, and Christmas and New Year's not far away. In these tough economic times it would seem that businesses have little to be thankful about. But that really is not true. Aside from the fact that we are still alive and doing business, we in the Cohasset Community have many reasons to give thanks.

The last year to 18 months has seen some wonderful additions and changes in our business family. The Children's Exchange, driven from North Scituate by fire, has found a home in the center of the Village, along with the Bread Shop and the Village Gourmet. Cards & Shards has revamped, redecorated, and added some exciting new lines, including some terrific children's wear. A new bakery is coming to the old Central Market building, Nuthin' More Natural has expanded to both sides of its Brook St. location, and Judy's Candyland in the harbor has become the hit of the year. Now the Village merchants, under the leadership of Joan Call of the new Little Harbor Book Store, have gotten together to put on an old fashioned Christmas season kick-off on the 29th – the night after Thanksgiving. Five percent of all sales on that night went to the PSO writing lab fund.

On 3A things are happening too! Both Cohasset Music and Party Etc. have become hits with all ages, Buttonwood Books and Toys, Sea 'N Cheese, and the Consignment Shop have all expanded. Dunkin' Donuts has added a branch at Cohasset Plaza, and was joined by Appleseed's just a few months ago. Tedeschi Plaza's facelift worked wonders, and drew two great additions in CVS and Victoria's II. The Barn at Boundbrook brings us McKenzie-Child originals, as well as exhibits featuring talented local artists; and next to Sestito Florist you can now find Coastline Tool and Fastener, a great place to shop for Christmas gifts for the handyman or tradesman in your life.

Some other additions from area businesses are easier to see, but not really business related – at least not in the sense that they will bring in sales or income. Hubert Vanderlugt of Hub Shipping bought the old Bread Shop building and plans to raise and rehab it to house his expansion. It would be easier and less expensive to simply tear it down and rebuild, but Mr. Vanderlugt, God bless him, wants to save the old building, and is willing to pay the price. The beautiful job he did on the existing Hub building is a shining example of his dedication and ability in this regard. We wish him nothing but good luck and sunny weather when this project begins. Paul Barry, despite the opposition mounted against the expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill, has done an outstanding job in reclaiming and landscaping the once blighted land he purchased on the front of Rte. 3A. We tip our hats to Mr. Barry for going far beyond what was necessary. The old cars, refrigerators, boulders and rotting trees and brush have been cleared away. The area now resembles a park or refuge, and greatly enhances the entrance to our Town.

For these changes and additions we are grateful this year, and for your continued support and patronage. Happy Thanksgiving from the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

Retirement party was a treasure

To the Editor:

I want to thank everyone who came to my retirement party and all those who helped in any way to make it a night I will treasure forever.

Special thanks to Honorable State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray for taking the time to attend and for her kind words and citation from the House of Representatives.

To the Water Commissioners past and present who were there for their kindness and the beautiful wall clock presented by Chairman Ron Goodwin.

It meant a lot to me to have so many town department heads, employees, co-workers, friends and so many of my dear relatives there to spend a very special evening with me.

Thanks also to Superintendent Joe Hamilton and Supervisor Bill McAuliffe for helping my daughter, Ann Wheeler, put this surprise party together. You did a super job, Ann. I am so proud of you and sincerely grateful for that wonderful night.

Thanks again, Ann, for helping me so much the past ten years at the Water Department. It made my job much easier with you there.

Statement on Reinstating death penalty in Commonwealth

To the Editor:

We need major criminal justice and court reform now to address the crisis in our criminal justice system. However, the death penalty has no place in this reform effort. It is a simplistic, arbitrary, misguided, ineffective, and costly response, cloaked in the guise of a remedy to the brutalizing violence that angers and frustrates us all.

I am firmly opposed to the reintroduction of the death penalty in this state. As the son of a minister, I have always been personally opposed to the death penalty. As Attorney General and a former District Attorney, I believe, as a matter of professional and public policy, the death penalty serves no legitimate purpose. My reasons follow.

First, I believe that the public focus and reliance on the death penalty as a potential solution to the problem of violence diverts attention from efforts to implement real solutions. Many people have grasped at the death penalty as a quick-fix remedy to address the inability of our criminal justice system to protect the public and deliver swift, firm, fair and equal justice.

Second, contrary to those who portray the death penalty as a deterrent, studies in states with the death penalty have not proven that the death penalty is a deterrent to crime. My twenty years of experience in the criminal justice system have borne out the conclusion of research on the subject that the vast majority of heinous crimes are not the result of calculated planning, but rather the result of irrational and spontaneous acts, with the offender considering neither the possibility of apprehension nor punishment.

Third, supporters of capital punishment frequently argue that death is the ultimate and appropriate penalty for taking the life of another. To both the deterrent argument and the "ultimate penalty" argument, the answer is, and should be, life imprisonment—without the possibility of parole—for first degree murder.

Fourth, proponents of the death penalty claim that capital punishment is cost-effective—that is, if the person is executed, the state no longer will have to pay the costs of incarceration. In reality, the experience in other states has shown the cost of capital punishment

Ballet performance

The Children's Repertory Ballet Company of Hingham and the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra perform selections from "Nutcracker" at Holiday Pops!, Dec. 7 at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m., Dec. 8 at 2 p.m., in Memorial Hall, Plymouth. Call (508) 746-8008 for tickets.

Junior Voices concert

Children from six surrounding towns, including 4 from Cohasset, will be presenting their holiday concert as members of Junior Voices Tuesday, Dec. 10 at 7 p.m. The concert is short and geared for children and their parents who love to sing; half of the program is rounds and carols which the Junior Voices will perform with the audience. The concert takes place at Second Parish Church in Hingham (685 Main Street) and is free.

Carolyn and Maren Cameron, Mareth Collins-Wooley and Laurel Ingraham of Cohasset are among the 35 children who sing Tuesday afternoons under the direction of Margo Euler, who is also director of the Broad Cove Chorale and Unicorn Singers, based in Hingham. The children are learning to read music as well as to perform for the children at Plymouth River School in Hingham, for the residents of nursing homes in Hingham and Norwell, for the Seniors at the Lincoln School apartments, and at Brandon Woods.

The Junior Voices program is open to children grades 2 to 7 who love to sing, and will be accepting new members in time for second semester, which begins Tuesday, Jan. 14. Parents with children interested in the program are urged to attend the Dec. 10 program. For more information, call Susan Cameron at 383-1549.

Cohasset Village Fair

The 51st annual edition of this joint benefit event sponsored by four Cohasset churches: Second Congregational, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic, St. Stephen's Episcopal, Panagia Greek Orthodox. In church and public buildings around Cohasset Common, Saturday, Dec. 7, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Telephone 383-0578. Features all types of hand-crafted holiday gift items, wreaths, decorations, children's clothes and novelties, home-cooked food and candy, Greek specialties, Bargain Bazaar, raffles, "Secret Room" for children shoppers, Snack Bar, Santa Claus, Village Fair Dinner (advance ticket sales only).

Homecoming writing lab

The Thursday, Dec. 12, performance of "The Homecoming" will be a fund-raiser sponsored by the PSO to help finance the writing lab at Cohasset High School. This is the perfect holiday play for the entire family. It will be performed by the Cohasset Drama Club, with a cast that includes parents and children from the community.

Tickets are $7 for adults, $5 for ages under 12 and over 65. To obtain tickets or for more information, please call Donna O'Donnell, 383-6113 or Helene Thornton, 383-2341; or send a check payable to Cohasset PSO to Donna O'Donnell, 196 Fairoaks Lane, Cohasset, MA 02025. Seating is limited.

Snowflake Fair

The Beechwood Congregational Church, Church St., Cohasset, will hold their Snowflake Fair Saturday, Dec. 7 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Fried bread dough will be served in the morning as well as donuts, along with coffee or tea. The lunch menu will be clam or corn chowder, hot dogs, cold drinks, and holiday cupcakes for dessert.

The aroma of fresh pine wreaths will fill the Church Hall which will be on display and for sale. Also, a variety of Christmas arrangements and poinsettias will be available to choose from.

Shop at one of our many tables, fancy work, white elephant, food, plant, Christmas ornaments, or candy.

Once again our famous "Beech Glass Candy" will be on display and for sale. Decorated in small glass jars, this candy makes a nice gift to give at Christmas time.

Santa's chimney will be filled with grabs for the children.

Christmas Bazaar

Cohasset Knoll, 1 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Cohasset, is sponsoring its annual Christmas Bazaar Saturday, Dec. 7, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Crafts, baked goods, white elephant, lunch and special raffles are planned. All proceeds go to resident council activity fund.

C.H.S. Holiday Concert

The C.H.S. Annual Holiday Concert will be held on Wednesday, Dec. 18 at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium. As always, admission is free.

In addition to the offerings of the various instrumental and choral groups, this year the concert will include something from every aspect of the Living Arts Department. A few examples of the extra treats in store are: musical accompaniment by the electronic music students to a slide show of computer graphics produced by the Art and A.V. departments. From Home EC, the gingerbread houses they've been making will be on display and they will also be selling cider, cookies and breads after the concert.

This year promises to be something that you shouldn't miss. Come with your family and friends and join us in celebrating this holiday season while showing your support for our teachers and students.

recreation report

Recreation registration

YOUTH BASKETBALL

Late registrations for any boy or girl in grades 1 to 9, who wishes to play basketball, will be accepted at the recreation office at town hall.

LATE REGISTRATIONS

Anyone wishing to register for ski lessons held at Blue Hills on Thursday afternoons, Jan. 9 to Feb. 6, should call the recreation department office at: 383-6791 immediately. The fee for bus transportation and five, 1 and 3/4 hour lessons is $75 per person. Classes are offered to children and youth. Rentals of equipment are available for those requiring it.

CHRISTMAS VACATION

Special Cohasset Recreation Department, Christmas vacation programs will be held during the school vacation period between Monday, Dec. 23 and Friday, Jan. 3.

LAST CALL FOR DRAMA

Drama workshops begin Saturday, Dec. 7 at Cohasset High School and only a couple of openings remain in both workshops.

Furniture restoration

The recreation department will accept telephone registrations for a furniture restoration-refinishing-revitalization class, to be taught by Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country Workshop, by calling the recreation office at 383-6791.

Sessions are five weeks in duration, meeting on Wednesday or Saturday mornings, 9 to 11 a.m. The fee for this ten hour program is $53 per person, and classes are restricted in size to allow for individual attention.

Participants should select a piece of furniture that is relatively portable, for class work. A chair or small table is ideal. Participants will not only learn the arts involved with restoration and refinishing, but will also have a completed piece of furniture by the end of the session.

Sargent has been a professional refinisher for a number of years in Cohasset, and has taught the art of restoration and refinishing to a number of classes over the years.

Participants will be required to bring some supplies with them to class. When you call to register, please indicate what piece of furniture you will be bringing to class. Non-residents will be accepted for enrollment upon a space available basis. The next session is scheduled to begin Wednesday, Jan. 8 and Saturday, Jan. 11.

Christmas concerts

The Broad Cove Chorale will present a Christmas concert at Broad Cove House, Hingham, Friday, Dec. 13, at 8 p.m. The concert's centerpiece, A Winter Cantata by Vincent Persichetti, features Gene Roma of Cohasset on Marimba. The work evokes the many moods of winter as described in the Japanese haiku chosen by the composer; the orchestration of flute and marimba with women's voices makes for a unique and evocative composition. The Chorale will also perform a suite of Appalachian carols, and a joyful collection of familiar carols set by Kirke Mechem. Chamber music of Bach and Telemann for flute, oboe and piano, plus carol singing for all, complete the program, which will be followed by a candlelight reception in the spacious music room at Broad Cove House. Tickets, $7, are available at Noble's Camera, Hingham Square, or by calling 749-0056 or 383-1549.

Cohasset members of Broad Cove are Lisa Koed, Deedee Rousseau and Susan Cameron.

The Unicorn Singers, under the direction of Margo Euler, will present a Christmas program Dec. 14 at Old Ship in Hingham at 4 p.m.; Dec. 15 at First Parish in Cohasset at 4 p.m. and January 4 at St. Andrew's in Hanover at 7 p.m. entitled A Day For Dancing. The centerpiece of the concert will be the piece by the same name, which is a collection of familiar carols arranged for chorus with wind trio, flue, oboe, bassoon and percussion, parts of which will be interpreted by a youthful corps of dancers in the sanctuary. There will be other seasonal carols sung by the Unicorn Singers, several festive carols arranged for choir and audience together, and selections from the Christmas Oratorio by J.S. Bach. Tickets for the various performances, which go to support charity, are available from the church offices. Dec. 14, Old Ship Church, tickets can be purchased at Nobles Camera in Hingham Square.

The Unicorn Singers are a select ensemble of 23 experienced singers from 10 South Shore communities, who rehearse at Broad Cove House in Hingham, and perform four full programs each season, in addition to weddings and special engagements.

Recently, a gentleman came into our shop and asked for twelve lords a-leaping, eleven ladies dancing, ten pipers piping, nine drummers drumming, eight maids a-milking, seven swans a-swimming, six geese a-laying, five golden rings, four calling birds, three french hens, two turtle doves, and a partridge in a pear tree. Clearly a very tough customer!

We were fresh out of maids a-milking, so instead he carefully selected twelve lavender frogs a-leaping, eleven vases flowering, ten goblets sparkling, nine fish platters swimming, eight grapevine angels twining, seven candles glowing, six kitten carvings, five napkin rings, four ringing bells, three french soaps, two perfume doves, and a porcelain rabbit tureen which we happily gift-wrapped and shipped to his loved one.

Holiday gifts and attractions abound at Cohasset Village Fair

Some early birds may have started their Christmas shopping on the day after Thanksgiving, but crowds of others geared to handcrafted gifts, home-cooked goodies and attic treasures, will again throng buildings around Cohasset Common next Saturday, Dec.7, beginning at 10 a.m. when four local churches present the 51st annual edition of the Cohasset Village Fair. The fair will close at 3 p.m.

All the familiar features of a church benefit, augmented by the efforts of volunteers from four congregations, will be offered. The four sponsoring churches are headed this year by St. Anthony's Roman Catholic, with the Second Congregational, St. Stephen's Episcopal and Panagia Greek Orthodox as participants.

Shoppers for the popular wreaths will have an opportunity to jump the gun on the 10 a.m. opening of the fair. Chairperson Jean Manganaro of the wreath committee has announced that wreaths may be purchased beginning on Thursday, Dec. 5, at the rear of the Second Congregational Church where wreath decorators have been working all week adding colorful bows, ribbons and cones in sessions beginning at 9:30 a.m. On fair day the wreaths will be sold outside the church.

While the town hall will again be the central focus of the fair, major attractions will also be located in the Community Center and the Second Congregational Church. A pavilion on the Common will house the Snack Bar, while the Fair's traditional evening wind-up dinner will be served in Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's "on the rock."

Although doors of the town hall and other buildings will open at 10 a.m., an event of special interest to youngsters will be the arrival of Santa Claus on a fire truck about 10:45 a.m. He will then set up his listening post in a sleigh in the Community Center, taking down the wish lists of tots and posing with them for Polaroid photos. The arrangements for Santa's visit to the fair are being handled by Craig Muir.

The Community Center will also be the site this year of another prime attraction for the young. This is the Secret Room where hundreds of small gifts, ranging in price from 25 cents to $3, will be available to children while parents must wait outside. The children will be helped in making their selections by members of youth groups from the churches and the purchases will then be gift-wrapped ready for the tree. Kathy Pratt and Lynda McCarthy head the workers putting on the Secret Room.

The Community Center will also be the location of the Chowder Bar. This year it will have the first floor auditorium for serving the chowder, grilled cheese sandwiches and beverages. An added feature on the menu this year will be pizza slices.

In the rear of the auditorium beyond the Chowder Bar, Louis Atathamaiou and some young helpers will be offering activities for children that will include face-painting and various crafts of special appeal to the young.

The Boutique, with handcrafted gifts and novelties created by members of each of the congregations, will be the centerpiece of the the town hall attractions. Sheila Wallingford and Gail Brooks of St. Stephen's Church, have headed up the groups producing items for the Boutique. Nancy O'Hara of St. Anthony's and Carol Sandblom and Marsha Silvia of the Second Congregational Church have organized the work session in each of these churches.

Also in the town hall will be the grabs, the doll raffle run by June Simeone with 50 dolls dressed by members of the various congregations which are given away. One side of the town hall auditorium will be given over to the Bake and Candy Table which will be laden with home-cooked pies, breads, cakes and cookies. Grace Donahue has headed the solicitation of donations of these goodies, while members of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church will be offering a variety of traditional Greek pastries. A fair fixture of long standing will be the sale of selected cheeses brought to the event by Ham Tewksbury. Plants will also be on sale in the town hall through the efforts of a group headed by Sharon Costas.

The town hall will also be the site for sale of tickets to the general raffle whose long list of prizes will be topped by a color TV set, but will also include articles donated by local merchants as well as sports and theater tickets and gift certificates for lunch or dinner at a number of South Shore restaurants. Chris Kierce heads the Raffle effort.

Bates Hall on the first floor of the Congregational Church will house the attic treasures and basement bargains of the Bargain Bazaar. These usable, useful items have been assembled, organized and priced by a group headed by Sharon Moody, Annette Sawchuk and Debbie Anderson of the Second Congregational Church. Stored during the weeks leading up to the fair in the basement of St. Anthony's Rectory, they will be brought to Bates Hall for display and sale. A prominent place will also be reserved in the Congregational Church for the Book Tables where Helen Hooper and Betty Enders will be offering bargains in good used volumes of fiction, mystery, non-fiction, adventure, travel and children's books.

Between the town hall and the Community Center, absent inclement weather, a pavilion on the Common will house the Snack Bar, where a crew under Bob Moody will be dispensing hot dogs, hamburgers and beverages.

Finale in the fair's food department will be the Village Fair Dinner in Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Church at 6:30 p.m. Tickets at $15 are on sale by representatives of the four churches with attendance limited by the seating capacity. The menu will have a gourmet Italian motif featuring appetizers donated by Sea 'n' Cheese, antipasto, minestrone, lasagna, and spumoni. The kitchen and serving crew has been organized under the direction of Rose Kierce.

Overall planning and operation of the Village Fair has been handled by a Central Committee headed by Rose Kierce as Chairman. Assisting her from St. Anthony's Church are Georgine Butman as secretary and Deanna Mulligan as treasurer. Representatives from the participating churches are John and Gail Brooks, Bill Broe and Sally Avery from St. Stephen's; Jean Syrmopoulos from Panagia Greek Orthodox; and Sharon Moody and Debbie Anderson from Second Congregational.

Recreation seeks to expand

The Cohasset Recreation Commission is considering a number of new programs that will be conducted via the expanded scope of our Revolving Account Fund for 100 percent self-supporting programs.

While municipal recreational services most definitively include children/youth sports programs, sports are only one aspect of overall programming and children/youth are one segment of our range of services.

During the past two decades sports programs have been the matrix of our programming as a relatively high level of demand has been established for these services.

However, arts; such as dramatics, arts and crafts, music, etc. have also been offered and it will be a focal point to introduce more opportunities of this sort for all aged residents. Further development of sports and athletic programs, including physical fitness needs of all aged residents through definitive and precise programming, is also planned.

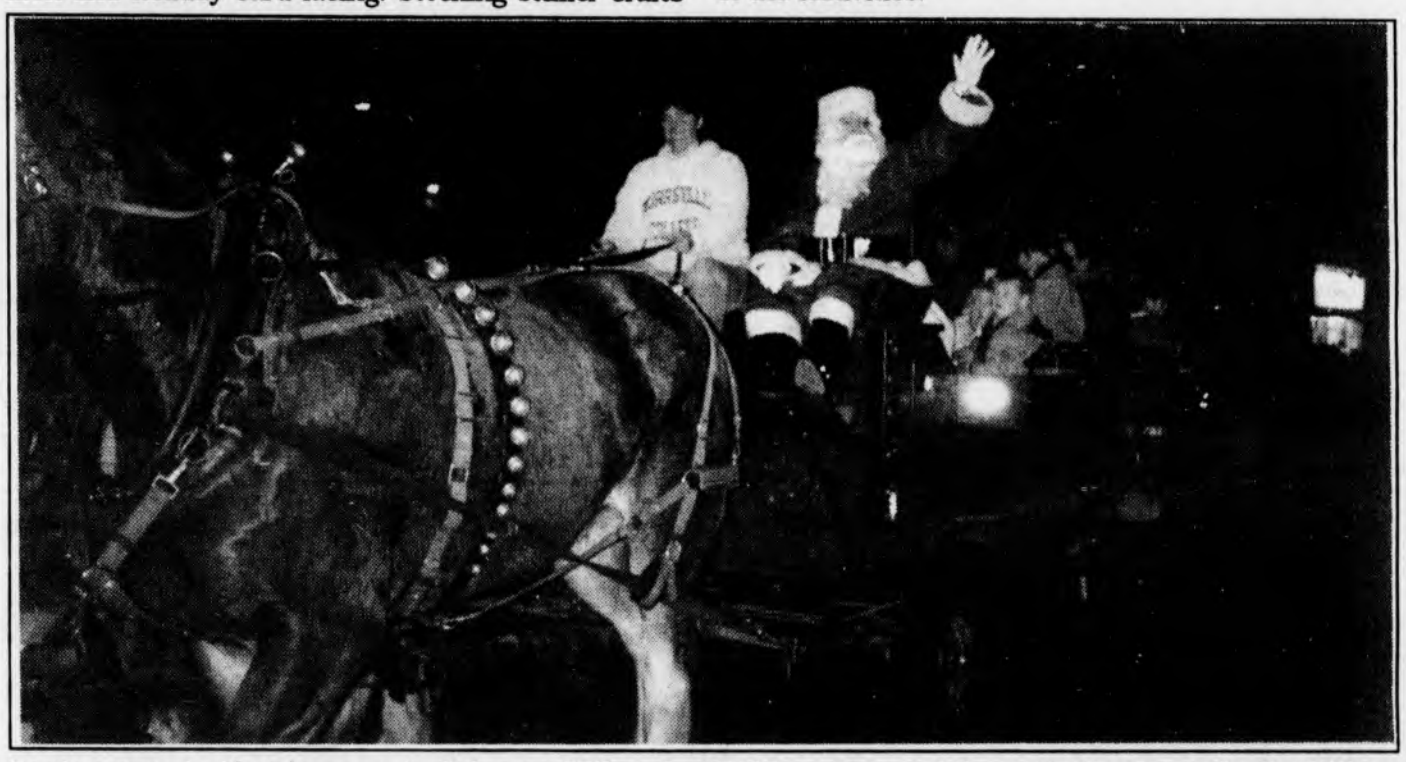
Programs such as Step Training, Circuit Training, Aerobics, etc. can be modified to age/ability appropriation, serving a wide-spectrum of the population.

Anyone interested in teaching or supervising a specific program or activity, may call the Cohasset Recreation Department office for further details. Further, anyone who has interest in sharing a hobby skill, art, or ability with others, on a compensated basis, should also call the recreation office, 383-6791.

Holiday activities at Cohasset Community Center

The Cohasset Community Center will be celebrating the holiday season with four timely programs sure to make holiday time a stress-free and less hectic season of the year.

The Center sponsors an Our Gang Playgroup for ages 3 to 5 from 11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., a teacher-supervised playground during this pre-holiday week to give you that additional time to shop or wrap gifts in a leisurely manner. Pre-registration is necessary. You may register for one day at $15 or for the three-day schedule of Monday, Wednesday and Friday at a fee of $72 for the month.



Each day will consist of free play, a craft activity, storytime and outdoor play. The children will bring lunch and eat at the Center.

A fun course for children, "Chocolate for Kids" is planned for Wednesday, Dec. 11 from 3:30 to 5 p.m. Cost of the course is $10. Children will be taught how to make their own pops and candy bars. Special chocolate gifts for family members for the holidays will be created.

A Christmas Cookies 'n Things course will be held Dec. 4, 11 and 18. Marianne Smith will teach children, ages 3 to 5, how to concoct delicious mouth watering delicacies for the holiday feast. Classes will be held from 9:30 to 11 a.m. on Wednesdays for three weeks at a cost of $22.

Dec. 14 pre-school youngsters will have a special treat, Breakfast with Santa, an annual holiday fest. The menu will consist of homemade muffins and breads, fruit salad, donut holes, milk and fruit juices, coffee. Children will be enthralled as Mr. and Mrs. Claus and their elves tell stories. Tots will sing songs and be able to pose for photos with Mr. and Mrs. Claus. They will also be able to make a small Christmas gift to take home. Additional activities include the making of Christmas wreaths, cookie decorating, fashioning holiday necklaces, craftstick puzzles, paper gingerbread men and holiday card lacing. Stocking stuffer crafts will also be covered. A holiday raffle will conclude the program. Cost of this festive occasion is $3 for adults and $2 for children.

Please call the Center at 383-0088 for more information or to make sure of your participation in any of the festivities.

Santa waves to the shoppers in Cohasset Village last Friday at a special event. Merchants in the Village brought Santa greet youngsters and run the horsedrawn wagon for local shoppers.

It's Coming...

Winter is on the way.

The snow. The ice. The slush.

This winter, don't be left out in the cold. Take the Hingham Commuter Boat to work. It's just 35 minutes to Rowes Wharf. Plus, you can enjoy the comfort of a heated cabin where you can snooze, read the paper, have a cup of coffee, maybe do a little work.

Not to mention that you'll save yourself the frustration of fighting your way through messy winter traffic jams.

Try the Hingham Commuter Boat. After all, winter is coming.

Fire chief . . .

rest of the board over the selection. Laugelle at one point made a motion that other candidates should be interviewed. The motion died for lack of a second.

At least two of the other selectmen — Jane Goedecke and Diana Kornet — made it known that their second choice was the candidate from Ohio.

"I don't think it's fair to ask a man to come that distance at his own expense if there isn't a chance he'll get the job," Goedecke said. She added that she wasn't ready to vote on an appointment. She said she wanted to question Nadeau at greater length before voting.

Laugelle argued the merits of the candidate from Randolph — Paul Anderson.

A representative of the fire union asked selectmen whether the candidates were questioned about their knowledge of fire science and the state codes and civil service law.

Selectmen said the initial interviews were confined to talking about management style.

Tebbetts said a consultant, working free, had helped the subcommittee weed out the top applicants. More than 60 people applied for the position. Laugelle and Goedecke worked with the consultant to evaluate the resumes.

"It's never been done this way before," Laugelle said as he protested the fact only one candidate was being asked back for a second interview.

"This is hogwash. What the hell is going on. So if he's the man, why don't you just vote it tonight?"

Laugelle criticized Nadeau for saying he eventually wanted to become a lawyer. He said Anderson was the more professional candidate.

Laugelle said he would rather have someone who would come to Cohasset until he retired, that he wasn't interested in a chief who would use the job as a stepping stone.

"We have a basic philosophical difference," Goedecke said. She said she wouldn't want to see someone come to the job expecting to coast.

Laugelle said Nadeau belonged at the head of a city department, like Springfield. He said Anderson was ruled out by the other selectmen when he said he felt there should be more firefighters on the Cohasset department.

Tebbetts pointed out that with all his time in the retirement system Anderson could retire in about three years.

Merle Graham, left, and Jean Manganaro, work on ribbons for wreaths for the Cohasset Village Fair this Saturday, Dec. 7.

Kite . . .

Kite explains how the use of computers breaks the negative cycle associated with the production of written work. "A computer is just a tool. It doesn't do the work." It does however keep students from being bogged down by poor handwriting, poor spelling and the indictment of the red marks on their pages that go along with the correction of errors. Students self-correct with the aid of the computer and go on to produce work that can be corrected on the basis of the ideas.

What Kite is planning, however, goes beyond the benefits he is seeing now. He has written a proposal for a complete writing lab which would serve an entire class at once. The entire lab would have 24 identical machines so students could all be working at the same time. Software such as Writers' Helper would assist students the same way an individual tutor, a dictionary, and a thesaurus would. Student work could be edited, corrected, edited and corrected in the space of a 40-minute class, a process that normally takes 4 or 5 days of classes and homework. "The student would have instant feedback, get over the hurdle of the corrections, learn from his errors and move on to develop further as a writer."

Does it sound like teachers would be optional? Would they interact less with students?

"Actually we'll be seeing much more student interaction, since each student would be working on their own project simultaneously and the faculty could work individually without holding up others. The excitement and give and take generated by this kind of learning environment is increasing the human contact in the classroom."

What about students with learning disabilities?

"Dyslexic students can really benefit from a writing lab. The program can identify and clean up any reversal or spelling problems in a way that is much less painful than receiving a returned corrected paper. When the student self-corrects and does it frequently, he or she learns better."

Is this only for use in the study of English?

"Absolutely not!" Kite emphasizes. While the English Department has been the energy behind the movement to obtain the lab, "any class could use it and any student project could be produced with it. I have seen students here in the mini-lab after school who had before rarely stayed after school to work. Now they're here, working on projects in many subjects.

"The English Department would continue to coordinate and monitor the lab, and in fact two faculty members have become certified in Mac and Apple repair, and this has already saved us money in repairs. I am happy to report that so far, there has been the need for only one repair. The lab is generally kept open, is generally in use and has been maintained carefully by the students, I think because it has been so valuable to them."

So what else is needed? Right now a collection of unmatched machines assembled through the past few years makes up the mini-writing lab. Kite's goal is the purchase of 24 identical computers, a few printers and the necessary software and this would mean a full scale and fully operational lab that would serve an entire class at once. Last year's capital budget request was for one half of the lab costs. It made it to the ballot and only missed a townwide approval by six votes. This year, the PSO has taken on the lab as a special project. They have embarked on a campaign to educate the community, fund raise and apply for grants. Collaboration with the Chamber of Commerce and local businesses has provided some start up funds. The Dec. 12 performance of "The Homecoming" by the Cohasset Drama Society will benefit the project. As the effort continues, Bill Kite envisions a writing lab the school can be proud of and he couldn't be more pleased.

Lowering the cost of education for college

The Cohasset Community Center is sponsoring an important one-night workshop for parents of college bound students.

Bonnie Hepburn, a Certified Financial Planner with Moneysense Financial Planning in Westford, will show you how to lower the cost of college, nursing or technical school and save thousands of dollars. No matter how high or low your income, no matter what the cost of the school, you can make it financially possible for your child to attend any college or university in the country. Topics include: maximizing your eligibility for Federal and State financial aid, making the equity in your house work for you instead of against you, and selecting investments that help fund an education rather than increase the cost. This workshop will be held on Thursday, Dec. 12 from 7 to 9 p.m. The cost is $15 for members of the Cohasset Community Center and $25 for the general public. Please call Judy at 383-0088 to reserve a space in the workshop.

200 attend retirement party for Lester Hiltz

By Judy Enright
Mariner staff

Norwell is a strange town, the MC said. It's the kind of town where the trash collector leaves a mint on the garbage can after collecting the rubbish.

"And now you're having a dinner for one of the most abusive, abrasive and annoying people in town," he joked, as last Friday's roast of Norwell's retiring health agent rolled into full swing. "I think you're celebrating the fact that you'll never have to listen to that laugh again."

The crowd of some 200 well-wishers broke up when MC Chuck Wallace of Scituate added that Hiltz "looks like a TV evangelist with that damn hairdo."

But amidst the frivolity were state and national commendations, an ode from fellow town hall workers, as well as praise and thanks for the man who has enforced the town and state health regulations for the past 10 years.

Hiltz, a Cohasset resident, received a commendation from President George Bush for 42 years of public service: 2 years in the Marine Corps, 20 years in the Air Force, 10 years as Cohasset's Civil Defense director and 10 years as health agent for Norwell. He was also cited twice in proclamations from the legislature, once by Rep. Jan O'Brien, D-Hanover, and once by Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset.

Among the speakers was Paul Mirabito from Ross Engineering of Norwell. He said working with Hiltz over the years had been "a lot of fun. I'll miss you."

Other speakers included:Dick Simmons, former Hanover health agent; Jennifer Lamb, Scituate health agent and Norwell Building Inspector Skip Joseph.

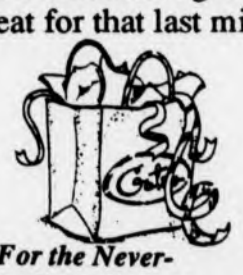
Selectman Chairman Don LeClair presented Hiltz with a proclamation and said, "you always carried out your duties in an ethical and professional manner." Former health board member Arthur Garceau said it was "a wonderful experience" working with Hiltz. "You've done a fine job."

Chet Horte, health board member, reminisced about Kay Fuller, a former member, who died recently. "Kay loved Lester," Horte said, and presented him with a plaque for dedicated service to the town. "You did an excellent and honorable job."

BSC engineer Rennie Chapman added. "Although I disagreed with Lester many time, I always thought his decisions were made for the better of Norwell and the citizens of the community." "Lester's a hard act to follow," acting health agent Jim Jenkins said.

Hiltz said he was speechless. "I'm really pleased and honored by your presence here."

Hiltz and his wife, Barbara, celebrated 39 years of marriage on Nov. 11.



Lester Hiltz and his wife Barbara, center, enjoy the well wishes of hundreds at his retirement party recently. From left are: Roger Hughes, Chester Horte, both members of the Norwell health board, Hiltz and his wife, and Howard Brickman, also a member of the Norwell health board.

obituaries

William H. Parmenter

A memorial service for William H. Parmenter, 72, who died Dec. 1 at home will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 5, at the Second Congregational Church.

He was buried in Wadsworth Cemetery in Sudbury.

Mr. Parmenter was a conservationist and railroad enthusiast. He was treasurer of the Boston chapter of the National Railway Historical Society. He worked with Back on Track, a group working to restore the Old Colony line through the South Shore. He was a member of the Conservation Commission and a deacon at Second Congregational Church.

He taught math and electronics for 20 years at Newton High School and taught electronics for 30 years at Northeastern University's evening division. He had also worked at Boston radio stations including WMEX, WORL and WBET. He was a research engineer at Baird Atomic and also did research at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute.

Mr. Parmenter leaves his wife, Dorothea (Devine) Parmenter; two daughters, Patricia A. Foye of Maryland and Susan Logan of Needham, seven grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Arrangements were by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Officers elected

The Cohasset Historical Society recently elected its Officers and Directors for the coming year 1992. Chosen as President for 1992 is Burtram J. Pratt; First Vice President is T. Gerard Keating; Second Vice President is Martha Hurtig; Secretary is Doris K. Flint; Treasurer is Gordon E. Flint; and Assistant Treasurer is Arlene E. Orr. Elected to the Society's Board of Directors for the coming year are: Douglas Peck, Noel A. Ripley, Jeff Steele and Penny Redfield. Directors already serving on the Society's Board are John F. Hartshorne, Robert B. James, Patricia Murphy, John O'Toole, Roger Porter, Glenn Pratt and David Pottenger.

The Cohasset Historical Society maintains three historical buildings; the Maritime Museum and Capt. John Wilson Historical House at Cohasset village, and the Caleb Lothrop House on Summer Street. Its headquarters is at the Lothrop House where an extensive archive and library of local and area history are maintained. The Society pursues an active program of activities related to local and area history, and has extensive collections displayed at its museums. Founded in 1928 by a group of interested citizens, the Society today has a mailing list of more than 400 persons in Cohasset and across the nation.

Anyone interested in the history of this small New England seacoast town may become a society member by contacting the society at its Lothrop House headquarters, 14 Summer St., 383-6930.

CDC presents 'The Homecoming'

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present Earl Hamners' "The Homecoming" for their holiday production. A timeless tale of family and friendship, it inspired the movie "Spencers Mountain" and the popular television series, "The Waltons."

Performances are Thursday, Dec. 12 at 7 p.m., Friday, Dec. 13, 7 p.m.; Saturday, Dec. 14, 2:30 and 7 p.m.; and Sunday, Dec. 15, 2:30 p.m.

Proceeds from Thursday's performance will benefit the Cohasset PSO.

Tickets are available at the Cohasset Hardware Store and Sea 'n Cheese grocery.

Directed by Gayle Varallo, the play has the atmosphere of a holiday show — a church scene with singing, a heart-warming street scene, carollers and of course, a tree.

60 Plus Club

The Christmas Party for the Sixty-Plus Club of Cohasset will be Thursday, Dec. 12. This party will be held at Kimballs-By-The-Sea. The social hour begins at 11:30 a.m. Reservations are a must. Call 383-1130. Join in singing Christmas carols. The meal is $11.

Syma's hidden treasures open some eyes

(Editor's note: Syma is the artist who worked with students at the Deer Hill School several years ago to create the corridor art work.)

By Kathleen Driscoll Kroll
Special to the Mariner

To the passerby the house at the end of Hersey Lane in Hingham is deceptively small and ordinary and unremarkable. But to open the door to artist Syma's combination home/studio is to open a window on a working artist's wonderfully eclectic environs.

For instance: Ever had an urge to stuff an old lover and sit him by the fireplace forever? Say no more. Syma has done just that. And you can come visit him during the artist's upcoming open house. "Oh, yes, he's still here," laughs Syma. "He's just sitting here in his easy chair awaiting a new home."

Of course, she didn't really stuff him, she just recreated him, using a life mask for added realism. After the initial shock of seeing Handsome wears off visitors often remark that he seems quite natural and lifelike sitting there - toga and all.

Behind Handsome is his constant companion, Outasight, a seven foot tall Big Bird clone. Thus did the studio get its name: The Bird's Nest. Bird, who is fashioned of hammered nails, keeps watch over Handsome's hairy head. Syma (rhymes with glimmer) keeps watch over them both.

As a child she filled her bedroom walls with murals. "My mother had a fit but my grandmother thought it was just wonderful," laughs Syma as she waves her wand-like hands at the walls of her grown-up home which are covered with her current creations

One room has been magically transformed into a gallery filled with huge Grecian urns earmarked as "Vessels to Hide Men and Money" - and other things your heart may covet. There are "Pockets of Hope" to hang on your wall. "These are meant as antidotes to the various pockets of despair and depression we all host occasionally," says the artist. . The former can cost over $1,000, but you can take home a Pocket of Hope or a goddess mask pin for $10 or less. "And of course I do have my bargain box and the postcard-size prints are only fifty cents each."

Visitors are invited to jot down secret wishes and deposit them into a special vessel for eternal safekeeping. The bowl overflows with slips of paper representing the hopes and dreams of many who have entrusted their inner thoughts to the universe within this studio.

Masks are everywhere. Masks with feathers, masks with autumn leaves fluttering from headbands, masks with ceremonial totems hidden within the imagery of the mask itself.

"Each mask has its own story to tell," says their creator "I create them in times of transition, "gray times," and they capture whatever emotions I'm experiencing at the time.

"Sometimes the mask has a force of its own and will speak to a buyer before I'm even finished with it." Such was the case recently when a man fell in love with the mask she was working on as he was browsing in her studio. "He simply had to have it," says Syma. "He said, 'Just price it and I'll take it when it's done. I simply must have it.'

"From that day forward all I ever wanted was to create forms that would be so powerful that looking at them would be like speaking or making music. Someone once asked me how I know when a piece is done. When they stop stop speaking to me - that's when they're done!" she says with a laugh. "Non artists might think that's crazy but that's really how the process works."

Some of Syma's pieces are frivolous and fun. Some are deep and disturbing, like her most recent mask which depicts a woman screaming while a man's hand holds a gun to her head.

"I just felt I had to get it all out," says Syma who works three days a week at McLean Hospital with women who have survived abuse. "There is something inside each of those women, inside all survivors of abuse, that gives them hope and pulls them through. I felt they deserved a mask to acknowledge their strength as well as their pain." She points to the small image on the mask of a woman "reaching down inside herself where the abuser cannot reach."

Finally, life-size "goddesses" line the room. All are for sale, of course, including a Cinderella who was left holding a dirty workboot atop her satin pillow.

Syma, who lives at the end of Hersey Lane with her 17-year-old daughter Dori is opening her house/studio for her 11th annual Open Studio and Gathering of Friends next Sunday, Dec. 8. From 1 to 5 p.m. the public is invited to browse, sip cider and nibble on cheese and crackers with the artist and her friends. "Every year after it's all over I collapse and vow 'never again!' but then the holidays begin to roll around and I find myself organizing 'just once more.!'

"And every year there's at least one surprise visitor, one long lost face I wouldn't have seen if I hadn't had my annual open studio It's fun, I enjoy it and it gives me an excuse to organize and display my latest work.

"Maybe next year I'll take a break. And then again maybe I won't." Ah, it's great to see the artistic temperament alive and well and living right here in Hingham - at the end of little Hersey Lane.

Titus: Vo-Tech must recruit to survive

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

In an all-out effort to counteract declining enrollment, Vo-Tech officials are already busy recruiting students for next year, Pam Titus, guidance director said.

"We just settled the freshmen class and we're in the midst of recruiting again," Titus told a recent meeting of the regional school committee.

Titus cited the fact the school attracted 32 "new upperclassmen" as a positive occurrence.

"That's a huge number to us. It's due in part to the change in the academic department. Our academic offerings are incredibly important," she said.

However, Titus warned that recruiting students for the regional high school, which draws from eight area towns, is more critical than ever.

As the number of school-aged students decline and funding for education declines, attracting kids to Vo-Tech is a challenge.

"In the past we weren't competing for eighth graders. We didn't have to. But because of the declining numbers and lack of money and competition from (public) high schools and parochial schools, the pie is getting smaller," Titus warned.

One of the most noticeable declines in numbers is from Hanover. In 1986, Hanover sent 75 students to Vo-Tech; this year there are only 19 students from Hanover, a 75 percent decline.

"The social structure of Hanover has changed," Titus said referring to the type of housing being built in the town.

She also said that towns have an increasingly "mobile population" and therefore the school cannot be sold on "word of mouth" as in the past.

Titus said Vo-Tech has mailed informational brochures about the school to all parents of eighth graders in the district. School officials have already talked to 1,200 eighth graders in groups of less than 20 students at a time at local junior high and middle schools.

"We need to advertise our image by getting information directly to parents," she said. Titus said the school is also trying to get on the agenda at PTO meetings.

"Our survival is dependant on all of us, at all levels of the school. We have all got to take ownership of promoting our school. I feel very strongly that the school committee make it a top priority to promote the image of the school right now," she said.

Titus noted that this year's freshmen class is "one of the most stable ever." She said only one freshman had left the school and that was because his family moved. In a typical year, we lose 1/2 dozen freshmen, she said.

C M L Contest Results

The first CML test for the year 1991-1992 was held Thursday, Nov. 7 at Cohasset Junior High School. The test is given six times a year and students compete with other students from all over the state. There are two divisions of questions. The tests are six question tests requiring mathematical skills and logic. Students have 25 minutes to complete the tests and scores range from 0-6.

In the Pythagorean Division, which is given to students in the Honors class, the following students scored very well. The high scorer with 5 points was Erin Devine. She was followed by Abigail Pease, Caroline DeLima, Katie Medinger, Megan Fahey, Danielle Nohe, Katie Ross and Kevin Wright with four points.

In the Euclidean Division, which is given to students in the Advanced class, the following students scored 4 points: Keeley Dwyer, David Hansen, Matthew Morris, Amie Theriault, Michael Coates, Lauren DeVito and Jessica Hurley.

Spring soccer registration

Final registration for the 1992 spring soccer season will be held on Saturday, Dec. 7, during recreation basketball at both the Deer Hill School and the Jr./Sr. High School from 9 a.m. to noon.

All interested players, both boys and girls, ages under 8 (born after 1/1/85) through under 19 (born before 8/1/72), are urged to register. Registration forms may be obtained at the Main Office of either the Jr./Sr. High School or the Deer Hill School for those planning to register by mail.

The Cohasset Soccer Club must inform the Coastal League by January, 1992 relative to the number of teams to be entered in the various age groups. Please note: there are still openings in most age groups, so make sure you register no later than this Saturday. Also, after Dec. 20, there will be a late registration fee of an additional $10 per player.

The fee will be $30 for the first child, $25 for the second child, $20 for the third child, no charge for any additional family member.

Make checks payable to Cohasset Soccer Club.

Registrations are accepted on a first come, first serve basis.

Every effort will be made to accommodate any child wishing to play spring soccer that may not be able to pay the full registration fee by the Dec. 20 deadline date. Any questions, please feel free to contact Larry Shultz at 383-0597.

Lagrotteria excels

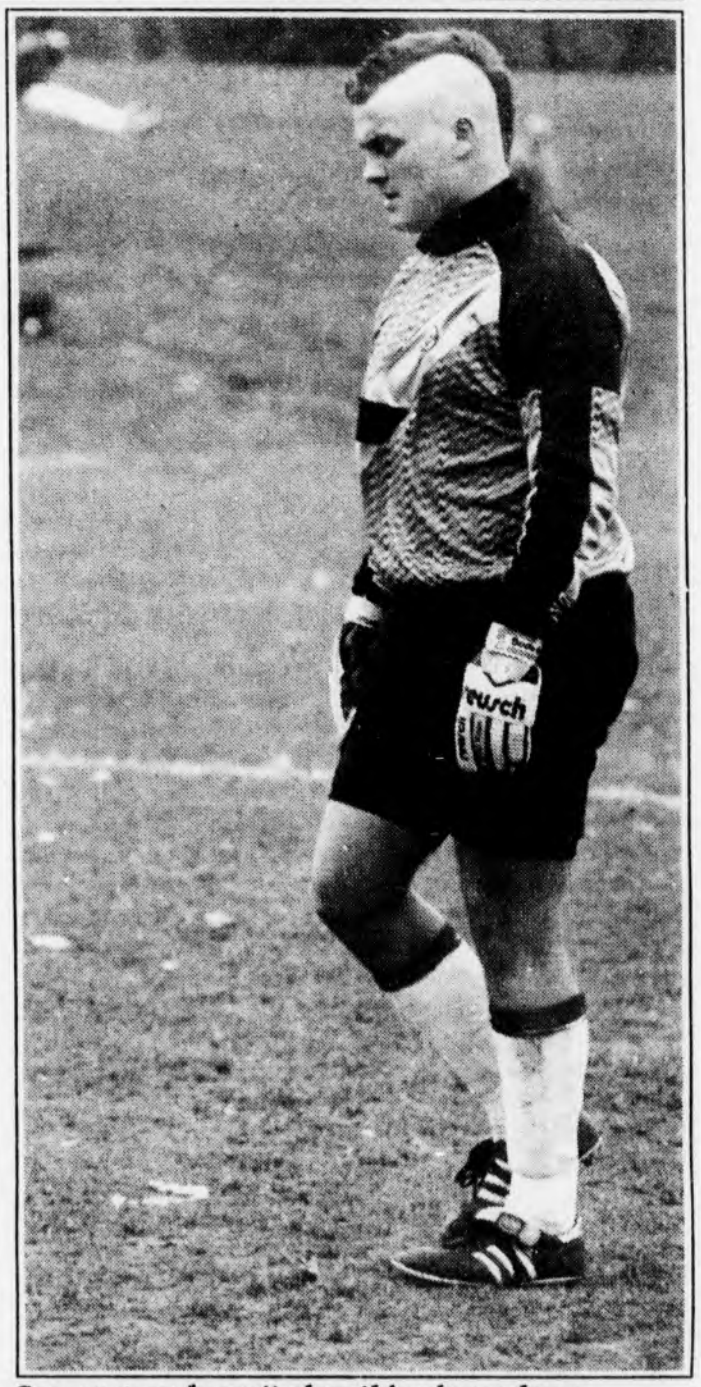
Barbara Lagrotteria of Cohasset, played a major role for the 1991 Wheaton women's field hockey team. The freshman forward's constant speed and hustle led her to score nine goals and to hand out three assists. As a first-year starter, Barbara was a main asset to the Lyon's as she controlled the offensive game and created many scoring attacks.

Barbara was recently selected "Rookie of the Year" in the NEW 8 Conference. This outstanding athlete has a very bright future in store for her at Wheaton.

Under seventh-year coach Heidi Pike, the team was extremely successful this year, posting a record of 13-5-1. Wheaton finished the season ranked tenth in the Northeast Division III standings and third in the NEW 8 (New England Women's 8) with a conference record of 4-2. The Lyon's had a fine showing in the NEW 8 playoffs, beating Babson, 1-0, before succumbing to first-seeded W.P.I., 3-1. They also made the first appearance ever by a Wheaton team in the E.C.A.C. tournament. Wheaton, seeded eighth, lost to top-seeded Trinity, 3-0.

As a freshman, Barbara majors in political science and is the daughter of James and Dorothy Lagrotteria.

New officers



There was an organizational meeting of the Cohasset Little League on Sunday, Dec. 1, 1991, at the Deer Hill School Cafeteria.

Election of the Board of Directors for the 1992 season took place at that time. The nominating committee has nominated the following individuals for election:

President - John Carr
Vice President - David Leahy
Treasurer - Paul Rooney
Secretary - Bill Baird
Player Agent/Umpires - Brian Rossi
Senior League - Kevin O'Connor
Clinics - Jay Caron.

The seven member board is responsible for the management of the League.

Anyone interested in volunteering for the 1992 season should attend. Volunteer forms will be handed out. The League needs help in many areas including coaching, fund raising, concession stand, publicity, parade, picnic, equipment, fields, safety, etc.

Soccer gear doesn't slow this player down.

Dr. Mark Friedman selected by scholars program

Dr. Mark Friedman of Cohasset has been among the 23 physicians selected to participate in the University of North Carolina KRON Scholars Program.

KRON is a management training program created for physicians concerned with the organization and delivery of medical care. Similar to a full MBA curriculum, the KRON Scholars program offers active physicians a chance to add health care management to their existing clinical skills.

This blend of skills is in greater demand today with the enormous pressure on the health care system to appropriate limited resources for expanding medical needs.

Friedman is an attending emergency room physician at Jordan Hospital, Plymouth and founder of the Brighton Group, Boston, which assists other medical professionals with billing and practice management services. Dr. Friedman, a Cohasset resident, earned a BA with honors from the University of Chicago; his MD from the University of Chicago; interned and did his residency at Michael Reese Hospital and Medical Center, Chicago, Illinois.

The Brighton Group maintains offices at 159 Cambridge Street, Boston.

Local company offers college help

The College Funding Network, a new education information service, announces the immediate availability of a unique scholarship matching program which can provide valuable financial help for students planning a college education after graduation from high school.

Based in Cohasset, College Funding Network has access to a nationwide database which contains information about hundreds of scholarships available from little-known sources of funding as well as those offered by many distinguished and prestigious institutions.

There are scholarships for students of military personnel including veterans disabled or killed as a result of military service. Scholarships are also awarded athletics, hobbies, leadership and involvement in school affairs as well as for Eagle Scouts, minorities, people with different ethnic backgrounds and handicapped persons. Scholarships are given on the basis of name, religion, ancestry, scholastic major, occupation and gender. There are even scholarships for left-handed individuals.

According to the National Commission on Student Financial Assistance, as much as $6.6 billion in student aid from corporations has gone unclaimed because people did not know the money existed or how to apply for it. Other reports figure that around $135 million in student aid will go unused this year.

Using the latest computer techniques to access literally hundreds of scholarships, College Funding Network guarantees to provide every applicant at least six sources of scholarship funding. Many of these sources do not require a financial need or a demonstration of scholastic achievement. The cost for this money-back offer is $89.

Currently, college costs for Ivy League schools run around $24,000 per year; private colleges cost around $16,000; and state-owned schools are between $6,000 and $8,500 per year. Graduate and doctoral programs cost even more.

College costs are constantly on the rise. Between 1989 and 1990 alone, costs rose 7 to 9 percent. The year 1989 marked the ninth year in a row that college costs rose higher than inflation. In fact, Opinion Research Corporation reports 82 percent of the general public agree that rising college costs will soon make higher education an unreachable goal for most people.

To solve the problem, thousands of students, annually, turn to the many federal and state financial aid programs which are usually awarded on the basis of need. However, as much as 80 percent of private aid does not require proof of need.

Knowing how and where to apply for these and many other scholarships is difficult and time-consuming for parents and students. That's where the College Funding Network provides an important service for today's college-bound student.

Most students who want a college education qualify for aid in one form or another. The College Funding Network provides access to a database filled with scholarships to both colleges and trade schools which many people do not know about. The CFN also lists scholarship contests and internships. Once the student's background information is fed into the computer, the database matches the student data to a number of scholarship possibilities.

Hundreds of different types of college scholarships are now available to south shore students through the College Funding Network. Interested students and parents should contact Barbara Dube at the College Funding Network: 383-6632.

Lottery . . ., .

However, how much is actually wagered in a specific town does not directly relate to the amount of lottery funds distributed to that town.

For example, Hanover's lottery distribution on the state cherry sheet for FY'90 was $449,091 or about 11 percent of the amount wagered in the town. Abington received $868,355 or about 15 percent in lottery distributions. Cohasset's distribution was $185,537 or about 18 percent.

The state takes the total assessed valuation of the town and the population into account when distributing lottery funds.

Lottery monies represent about 13 percent of the total direct local aid paid to cities and towns — and it's the only local aid funding source to increase each year since 1984, the report states.

STATE IS DEPENDENT

But the report warns that the state has become precariously dependent on lottery dollars.

"The state is in no shape to fill in the gap," Parker said. "If lottery monies crash, the state is not going to pick up the difference.

"If per capita spending drops it would be as if the state got a tax cut."

The report concludes that lottery revenue growth has slowed since 1984.

"A further erosion in lottery growth rates could force the Commonwealth to absorb a precipitous revenue decline," the report states.

The following solution is recommended:

• The Massachusetts State Lottery should consider incorporating video game wagering, sports betting, or another segment of the illegal gambling revenue stream into its portfolio. It is estimated that the ratio of dollars wagered illegally to dollars wagered legally is at least 2:1.

• Manipulating the current lottery portfolio is an option but research reveals that would result in more shifting present revenue than in attracting new revenue, the report states.

"It's a disgusting way to run a railroad," Parker notes about the state getting into betting that is now illegal. And he said it would divert monies that currently go to bookies.

"But with the amount of money ($265 per capita yearly) currently being played (in the existing state lottery games); we can't expect much more to go to that source," he said.

Parker explained that the 57-page report, prepared by the Senate Post Audit and Oversight Bureau, chaired by Sen. Thomas C. Norton (D-Fall River, should initiate discussion and raise concern about the state's dependence on lottery funds.

The per capita spending in the state is even more startling when one takes into account the children, babies and adults who don't play at all, Parker said.

The lottery was created by an act of the legislature in 1971. During FY'93, its first year of operation, the state lottery sold more than $70.5 million worth of tickets. In FY'90, the state revenue from lottery tickets exceeded $1.5 billion for the second consecutive year.

Town Clerk Marks returns

Frances Marks, town clerk, was back at her job at town hall last week after her recent hospitalization.

Marks is retiring from work at the end of this month.

She said she feels fine and plans to spend more time with her family after she finishes out the work.

Selectmen recently appointed Marion Douglas, who is now assistant town clerk, as the appointed town clerk upon the retirement of Mrs. Marks.

"This job needs someone full time," Mrs. Marks said in reference to some discussion over whether the position might be changed to part time. She pointed out the workings of the town clerk's office are regulated by the state.

"It isn't something you can come in and do off the street," she said. "You have to have the knowledge to handle elections and all the other work we do." She pointed out that next year there will be state and national elections.

Holiday Vacation Program

The Cohasset Recreation Department will be hosting an eight day school vacation program at the Deer Hill School, Sohier Street, Cohasset. The program will run Monday through Friday, Dec. 23 to 27 and Dec. 30 to Jan. 3, excluding Wednesday, Dec. 25 and Wednesday, Jan. 1. Youngsters aged 5 to 12 may attend from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Special rates are available for eight-day registration and family discounts, daily rates are also available. The program will be co-ordinated by Ted Carroll and staffed by Summer Playground personnel. The program consists of sports and games, arts and crafts, and more. To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791.

Nadeau, top candidate, looks for challenges

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

John Nadeau gave the selectmen a quick lesson in firefighting Monday. It seemed he also impressed a few of the members of the fire department who gathered in the meeting room at town hall.

The group followed Nadeau out of the room and had to be asked to move along or quiet down so the meeting could proceed.

There was no formal vote on hiring the deputy chief from Sanford, Maine. But then he is the only candidate that has been offered a second interview and that didn't change after the board's questioning.

The board spent time in executive session after the meeting — but failed to return to public session after the private discussion, something that would have allowed a vote on the issue.

The town will be without a fire chief Jan. 1 since the selectmen have failed to renew the contract of Daniel Brock, who has been chief for three years.

Nadeau was one of four finalists chosen by a subcommittee consisting of Selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Jane Goedecke. All but one of the finalists were from out of state, which was the reason some members of the board gave for asking only the top candidate back for a second interview.

In applying for the Cohasset job, Nadeau said: "My strong professional work ethic, 15 years of fire service experience, two college degrees, graduate work in executive leadership, proven work history and emphasis on customer service are personal assets that I'll employ to achieve your community goals and objectives."

He spoke at length about getting the staff involved in the decision-making process and he talked about doing some marketing for the department. He said that training is the key to getting the best from a small staff and talked about how call firefighters, if properly trained, can provide back up for the career firefighters.

"Volunteerism is alive and well but it's not going to replace professional firefighting," Nadeau said. He said the call men help the most with working building fires are do not often respond to accidents or smaller fire calls.

He talked about various ways of attacking a fire and pointed out that there is a need to make decisions based on the circumstances.

While he said he believed regionalization could work, he also pointed out that this part of the country is reluctant to give up the sovereignty involved.

Nadeau has been deputy chief in charge of operations of the Sandford, Maine, fire department for just a year.

He holds an associate's degree in fire science from the Southeastern Maine Vocational Technical Institute and a bachelor's of science degree in vocational and personnel management from the University of Southern Maine.

From 1985 to 1990, he was deputy state fire

Roy Fitzsimmons says regional plans bear fruit

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

Roy "Troubleshooter" Fitzsimmons.

For years major company CEOs, hospital presidents, and boards of directors have paid Roy well to troubleshoot and untangle their morass of problems. But he works for the town at no charge.

For the last 16 years Roy has participated in town government through serving (via appointment) on the kinds of committees which analyze government through the collection of hard-won data, and propose solutions so the town may run more efficiently and effectively.

Presently, Roy's serving a second term on the town government structure committee, of which he is chairman.

The Fitzsimmons family lives on Doane Street. Scott and Sean Fitzsimmons will both graduate from college next year – Scott from the UMass at Amherst, Sean from North Adams State College. Fitzsimmons family members at CHS are junior Colleen, frosh Andrew and 7th-grader Kathleen.

Roy and Judy grew up together in Hyde Park. "I've known Judy since she was in the third grade," Roy said, adding that he was a close friend of Judy's brother in those days.

"She went to nursing school. And then when I went into the Marines she joined the Peace Corps and taught hygiene and delivered babies in the Northern mountains of Brazil. After her tour, we started dating, and six months later we were married (in 1967)."

In 1968 Roy and Judy moved to Cohasset. Their Doane Street home, nestled on a quiet street abutting conservation land, has undergone several additions since those early days.

Roy's first interest in the government of the town was through the school committee, as he was interested in the kind of education his children were receiving. Sometimes he was the only audience the school committee had (except for a reporter or two) and for many years he was the only townsperson who actually read and understood the entire school committee

Pearl Harbor remembered — 50 years of memories

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 9146 and the members of the George Mealy American Legion Post remembered Pearl Harbor Saturday, Dec. 7, the 50th anniversary of the Japanese attack.

As Stephen Wigmore, commander of the Legion post, said in his opening remarks the day was planned "to pay tribute to those who have so dearly paid for our freedom."

The speeches were brief. The winds were cold. There was a prayer. Brian Conant played taps. Three volleys were fired by the honor guard over the harbor. Flower girls — Cassandra Douglas, Jackie Reid and Jennie Reid — tossed flowers into the water in honor of those who died at sea.

Gerard Keating laid a wreath at the Veterans Memorial.

Ralph Perroncello, commander of the VFW post, kept him remarks to a minimum. The Rev. John Keohane of

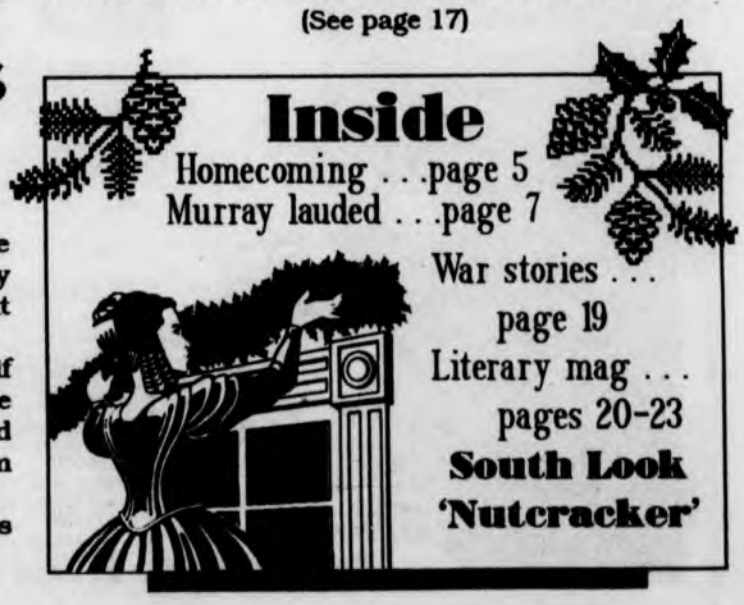
New funds sought by school officials



By Judith Denzer Cooper
Mariner correspondent

Monday, Supt. Stephen Hart led the school committee through a discussion of three fiscal programs that may have significant impact on the community in the next few years.

Hart reported on the options available to the town if it wishes to form a Local Education Fund. The state Office of Community Education has gathered information that towns may use to implement a program of private support for public institutions.

Cohasset's week

O'Neill honored

Sen. Robert Hedlund, along with the Norfolk County Lung Association, honored Sally O'Neill of Cohasset recently with awards for being named a "local hero" for her efforts in creating "ecology" homes.

"Sally O'Neill's ingenuity and creativity are greatly appreciated by those with severe allergic responses to certain chemicals, and today her efforts are being duly recognized for that important contribution to the health care of other citizens," Hedlund said. There were seven other recipients at the Norfolk County Lung Association's "Local Hero" award.

Early release day

Dec. 12 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools for Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill Schools only. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Buses depart: Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; Joseph Osgood School, 12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all schools.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff to hold parent conferences.

Town hall holiday hours

Town hall will close at noon on Christmas Eve, Dec. 24. The building will be closed again on both Christmas and New Year's days. On New Year's Eve town hall will operate on its regular schedule.

Meanwhile the selectmen plan to skip meeting during the week of Dec. 23 and Dec. 30. There is a possibility a meeting could be arranged if an emergency occurs.

High Line license in limbo

The liquor license for High Line Liquors, formerly located at 97 Elm St., was renewed this week as selectmen voted 3-2 on the issue.

Selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Martha Gjesteby were opposed to the action.

The package store closed last year. The license is now held by US Trust which foreclosed on a business note. The bank sent a letter to selectmen asking that the license be renewed so a potential new owner might apply for a transfer of the license.

The license has no address at this time.

All other liquor licenses in town were renewed Monday by the unanimous vote of selectmen.

Social Service League $$$

Stop & Shop donated $1,002.49 to the Social Service League as part of the company's Food for Friends program. Customers of the store provided the funds for the project during a fundraiser that ran from Sept. 15 to Oct. 12. The money donated was matched by Stop & Shop.

Fitzsimmons . . .

read and understood the entire school committee budget. And that was not considered a friendly thing to do.

Trained in administration and finance, Roy could easily see excesses and oversights which escaped the average non-financial taxpayer. i.e, Roy said: "When I was vice president of administration and finance at Med-Tac in Wellesley, we were involved in totally automating their claims processing systems, which relieved the principals of the company from the tasks which automation handles easily."

Currently, Roy is employed as vice president and director of operations for Continental Health Care (a subsidiary of Continental Wingate Co.) located in Boston. Continental Health is involved in development, management and operations of nursing homes. Upcoming projects include multi-level nursing homes in Andover and New York. Another subsidiary of the company services Housing and Urban Development (HUD) loans and manages 12,000 apartments in the eastern section of the country.

Roy says his company's looking at a 46 percent increase in worker compensation this year, and he's looking for different ways to get things done for his company and his town.

"This year, legislator Richard Voke told me there's going to be a $900 million state deficit. And for years we've been only looking at regionalization in Cohasset. Selectman Diana Kornet is talking about the same ALS (advanced life support) we were talking about in 1984 (when Roy was a member of the ambulance study committee)."

Jean Muir is the newest member of the government structure committee, comprised of Wilson Pile, Dennis Roth, Jim Whelan, Jack Bryant and long-time member Pat Facey. Roy says his committee is very interested in the 1991 Mass. Department of Revenue information which shows Cohasset spending 17.68 percent of its total budget for safety, as opposed to 11.68 percent spent by average cities and towns.

"Hard decisions have to be made," Roy said. "Selectmen have looked to others to do the work they should be doing. And there are inefficiencies in town. Equipment is left out in bad weather and when selectmen are notified, they don't seem to be interested in doing anything about it. I've observed emergency vehicles making coffee runs. For years the town has had plans for regionalizing safety and fire services," but leaders have to enact the plans, Roy said. "They are all nice people," but Roy feels they don't understand the urgency of the town's business.

As an example, Roy said, "The selectmen are in charge of the fire department running card. They determine how many vehicles go out. If the selectmen took the ladder truck off the running card, one or two men would now be off the card."

Another statistic the government structure committee has available is fire response numbers over the past five years. Every aspect of fire service is down except for ambulance calls which have doubled from 1986. Roy feels this is because Hull and Scituate are relying on Cohasset's ambulance more and more.

Roy laments that the town's planning days are coming to an end, and "We seem to have missed every opportunity.

"I'll always remember Gilbert Tower on two canes - and he could do a lot of things in spite of those two canes," Roy said, wondering how, after all these years, the town has been a prisoner of its plans, unable to move forward or retreat.

"An override is not likely to pass next spring. Town officials have to realize the party's over. The (regionalization) ideas we've had about central prisoner drop-off, 911, the dump, ambulance, central dispatching must be inaugurated."

Children's advocates sought

The South Shore and Coastline Councils for Children are having a meeting on Tuesday, Dec. 17 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at 35 Arbutus Avenue, Braintree.

The Councils are volunteer groups of people who are interested in improving services for children and adolescents and who live or work in Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate, and Weymouth. They were created to make government accountable to its youngest citizens. Members are people who are concerned about children, but have limited time. This group works together to help each other keep informed and to work on ongoing projects that improve children's services.

The meeting will be a Holiday Gathering, a review of the Councils reports, and an outline of work to be done.

The Council is seeking new members. Membership in the Councils will give access to information on child related issues, a forum for ideas, and the support to be an advocate for children. Please call 848-3056 for directions.

"The Homecoming" opens

Thursday, Dec. 12, 7:30 p.m. is the opening night for the cast of Earl Hamner's play "The Homecoming," set in the depression on Spencer's Mountain in Virginia. The play is based on the book which gave rise to "The Waltons," a popular television series still in syndication on the Family Channel. The Cohasset Dramatic Club picked a timely play, as families are being tested with hard times and striving to embrace simpler time and more fundamental values. The father of this family of eight children is missing in a Christmas Eve snowstorm. As the oldest, Clay-Boy is sent to look for his father, whom he doesn't understand, to be practical or to follow one's dream, argue the two.

Homecoming performers are set for this weekend. Among those involved are the Rev. Gary Ritts, Kathy Haase and Molly Hochkeppel, right.

The cast includes:

From Cohasset: Tobey Horn in the lead as Clay-Boy; Ron Nicynski as his father, Clay; Bob Julian as the Poacher Charlie; Molly Hochkeppel as Ivy Godsey; Gary Ritts as Hawthorne Dooly; Kathy Haase as the City Lady; Bobby Meehan as Matt; Ronnie Nicynski as Mark; and Joseph Nicynski as John.

From Scituate: Deborah Carleton as the Mother (Olivia); Dawn Rota (Grandma Ida); Joe Rota (Grandpa Homer); Julie Holland (Becky); Steve Holland (Sheriff Bridges), and Laura O'Brien (Patty-Cake) with Joyce Finegan as Stage Crew Manager.

From Norwell: Jeff Clarke as Luke Spencer, (Jeff's mother Julie Clarke is Stage Manager for the production, and Andrew Clarke is Lighting Assistant and Sound Manager).

From Marshfield: Sara Garland as Shirley Spencer.

From Hanover: Jeannine Guillelmo as Emma Staples; (Julia Szulerowski working stage crew behind the scenes).

From Pembroke: Carolyn Roche as Etta Staples.

From Allston: Bob Grey as Bird Shot.

The cast includes townspeople and churchgoers from Cohasset and Scituate. "The Homecoming" is being directed by Gayl Varallo, assisted by Rhonda Myers and Scott Ketcham, and produced by Peggy Corrigan and Lisa Fichtner, with assistance by Angi Walsh. Lighting Design by Clark Young. Set Design by Greg Julian. (All of Cohasset).

"The Homecoming" runs Thursday through Saturday evenings, 7:30 p.m. with matinees Saturday and Sunday, 2:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. Tickets are at Party, Etc. in Cushing Plaza, Route 3A or Cohasset Hardware in Cohasset Village; $7 adults, $5 under 12 or over 65. Tickets will also be available at Town Hall Box Office before the show. For further information call 383-0296.

School . . .

emphasized that these funds would be a supplement for the schools and that they "would not replace the community's obligations to its schools." Hart concurred and pointed out that the Parent School Organization (PSO) is already carrying out many of the proposals mentioned in the state report.

The PSO community relations committee is exploring the possibility of establishing a Local Education Fund. Questions to be answered will include: Is there a need for a separate group or should the fund be a part of the PSO? School committee member Ralph Kidder said there will be a formation meeting during the week of Jan. 13. Hart and Kidder will both attend this meeting.

Hart said he sees the Local Education Fund "as a mechanism to provide additional support for the schools." Kidder pointed out that the new program would not be designed to compete with existing school fundraising activities such as the phonathon and Christmas tree sale. Kidder said, "We could look away from annual fundraising as is done now and look for endowments such as bequests from individuals or corporations."

"The bill now being discussed on Beacon Hill will fundamentally restructure education for all Massachusetts children."

Hart concluded by noting that the new fund "Gives us the possibility of broadening our base. (We can include) the corporate sector and others not directly involved with the schools...we can expand our sphere of influence and (at the same time) inform the community about its schools."

LOCAL PURCHASING POLICY

The School Committee unanimously adopted a policy that will encourage the purchase of goods and services from local businesses whenever possible. The committee joined the selectmen who have also adopted this policy which was developed by the local Chamber of Commerce.

Hart said, "Whenever there is an opportunity to purchase from local businesses we will certainly make that effort." Hart pointed out, however, that there are certain limitations where state regulations and bidding procedures may control the choice of supplier. He added that the school department will cooperate to every extent possible and that he would appreciate hearing from any local companies about types of project bids in which they can be involved.

EDUCATION REFORM BILL

Supt. Hart presented an overview of the Educational Excellence and Accountability Act which is presently before the state legislature. Hart said, "The bill now being discussed on Beacon Hill will fundamentally restructure education for all Massachusetts children."

Hart said there are nine major areas of change discussed in the bill. Topics range from setting academic standards to increasing the power of school principals and establishing a program of school based management. Other issues such as the elimination of teacher tenure, the addition of school choice programs and revisions in the state school funding formulas are also dealt with in the proposal.

One suggestion in the bill is to limit school administrative costs to no more than 15 percent of the annual budget. Bliss pointed out that Cohasset would have no problem meeting this standard as its administrative costs are "well below 15 percent."

The reform act would establish a basic foundation of funding that a community would have to meet. At present the state per pupil expenditure ranges from $3,000 to $10,000 depending on the specific community. Bliss noted that Cohasset, at approximately $5,000 is just about the state average. Hart added that "(this bill will make) a fundamental change in the way we look at the governance of schools and the way education is funded." Hart added that there is also a law suit seeking to equalize educational expenditures before the state courts. The decision in response to this suit may also have a significant impact on funding for public education.

"(this bill will make) a fundamental change in the way we look at the governance of schools and the way education is funded."

The school committee agreed that in its present form the plan presents some radical reforms but that it is vague and incomplete, especially in the area of funding. Hart will continue to monitor the bill and keep the committee posted on its progress. There was a consensus that no specific action by the committee was appropriate at this time.

The committee went in to executive session at 9 p.m. to discuss collective bargaining issues.

The next meeting of the school committee will be Monday, Jan. 13 at the high school.

Recently, a gentleman came into our shop and asked for twelve lords a-leaping, eleven ladies dancing, ten pipers piping, nine drummers drumming, eight maids a-milking, seven swans a-swimming, six geese a-laying, five golden rings, four calling birds, three french hens, two turtle doves, and a partridge in a pear tree. Clearly a very tough customer!

We were fresh out of maids a-milking, so instead he carefully selected twelve lavender frogs a-leaping, eleven vases flowering, ten goblets sparkling, nine fish platters swimming, eight grapevine angels twining, seven candles glowing, six kitten carvings, five napkin rings, four ringing bells, three french soaps, two perfume doves, and a porcelain rabbit tureen which we happily gift-wrapped and shipped to his loved one.

Governor honors women veterans

Dec. 4 Gov. William Weld honored four women veterans for their service in the United States Military. Sponsored by the Women in Military Service Memorial Foundation (WIMSA), the awards are part of a National Tribute to women veterans taking place in numerous states across the U.S. The Massachusetts State Chair awarded recipients for their National WIMSA Tribute. Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray coordinated the ceremony in Massachusetts. Congress designated Nov. 4 through 10 National Women Veterans' week and Nov. 11 Veterans' Day.

The women honored by WIMSA and Gov. Weld are World War II Navy veteran Dorothy M. Dickson; Marine Corps veteran and State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray; Vietnam Era Army Nurse Corps veteran Sheila Spicer; and Korea and Vietnam Army Nurse Corps veteran Edythe Sheridan.

Speaking of the award and tribute, Gov. Weld commented: "I take great pleasure in supporting this national tribute to American service women and veterans. The State of Massachusetts is home to 29,900 women veterans – who all deserve this service, both for their continued service to their community, to the State of Massachusetts and to the American people as a whole."

Brigadier General Wilma L. Vaught, USAF, (RET.) and President of WIMSA said: "It is the goal of the Women In Military Service Memorial Foundation to not only build a national memorial to the women who have served with courage, bravery and sacrifice, but to shed light on the history of their deeds and service – a history that has long been ignored or forgotten. Through this memorial, your contributions to the United States Armed Forces will be forever documented."

WIMSA is a national, nonprofit organization founded to build the memorial, at the gateway to Arlington National Cemetery, to the women who have served throughout history – from the American Revolution to Operation Desert Storm and beyond. WIMSA's goal is also to locate and register the 1.8 million women, or their descendants, who have served since the American Revolution in order to capture their memories and histories to be recorded in the memorial's register – a computerized data base of the photos, military histories and memorable experiences of all those who served.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray is a veteran of the United States Marine Corps State Chair for WIMSA and an eight term state representative to the Massachusetts State Legislature. Rep. Murray's involvement with civic and community service is vast. She is the first woman elected as President of the Massachusetts Legislators Association, Past President of the American Legion Auxiliary, Home Service Chairman of the American Red Cross, and past President of the Cohasset Women's Club. Her other memberships include: VFW Auxiliary, American/Region, Catholic Youth Organization, Cohasset Drug Education Committee, Women' Republican Club of Norwell and the South Shore and Little League Secretary and Canteen Chairman. She is the 1981 recipient of the Disabled American Veterans' "Certificate of Merit."

For more information about the Memorial, or to register a servicewoman – past or present – please call 1-800-I-SALUTE or Dorothy Dickson at the Massachusetts State House, 727-2966.

around town

• The Cohasset Gridiron Club held its "break-up dinner" last weekend, and it was a fine one. Nice to be able to celebrate a season, after not having a schedule for a while. You can bet that Pat McCarthy was thrilled by the whole event. The club and the team honored him for his many years of service...he was a member of the Gridiron Club since it began. Pat will be "retiring" from it this year, as his boys will have both graduated by next season, and he will want to spend time at college with them. As a former mother, a fan, and a person who loved hot coffee at the games, I salute you too, Pat. We love you.

• Last week we wrote briefly about Sally Sisson and her marriage to David A. Game. Now, here's more of the story. Ruth Sisson has just returned from San Francisco, Calif. where she attended the wedding that took place Nov. 16. Other Cohasset residents attending were Judith Vanderlught, Linda Diegman Newton and Jonathan Foell, all 1979 Cohasset High School graduates (as, of course, was Sally). Judith Vanderlught is a Cohasset resident, Linda Newton lives in Mashpee and Jonathan Foell lives in San Francisco. As well as being a wonderful wedding, it was a happy family reunion as Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sisson of Sterling Heights, MI, and Mr. and Mrs. Gary Sisson of Orcas Island, WA, and their three children, Cole, Molly and Sophie, were all in attendance. Sounds like it was great fun.

• Happy birthday greetings to Laura Pompeo, who managed to get back to good old Cohasset, Mom's cooking, Jeannine and Tom's baby and Mimi's congo bars for the event. Laura lives in Syracuse now, and loves to get back to our fair town whenever she can.

• Everyone is sure excited for Cameron Hynes this week, and with very good reason. Cameron will be playing Clara Dec. 7 to 22 in the "Nutcracker." Cameron is 13 years old and a member of the 8th grade class at CHS. She is dancing with the Ballet of Boston and the performances are to be held at the Emerson (College) Majestic Theatre. This is an alternative to the performances at the Wang that you might want to explore. It's a great performance at a lower price. Cameron's parents are Karen and Ken Topalian and her grandfather is the former mayor of Boston, John B. Hynes. And you can bet all of those folks are proud of her. As are we. Go see Cameron as Clara. You'll be glad that you did.

• While last month Chris Keating had the honor of being inducted into the Sports Hall of Fame at the University of Maine, this month he has been notified that he passed the Massachusetts Bar. Chris prepared for his bar exams by going to Suffolk Law School evenings. He presently resides in Rochester, N.Y., with his wife Nancy and their three children. He is vice president of Manning and Napier, an investment firm.

• Katherine L. Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Harris of Cohasset is a 1991 graduate of Hartwick College. Katherine earned a bachelor of arts degree, with distinction in individual program in elementary education and was named to the spring term's dean's list. Although you graduated in May, Katherine, we want to congratulate you and hope that you are happily ensconced in the job of your choice.

• Nineteen students who entered the University of Maine for the fall semester are the recipients of minority students awards of $2,000 a year. Minority student awards, based on a combination of academic performance, rank in class, and standardized tests, are designed to encourage enrollment by minority groups. Alyson James of Cohasset was one of the recipients, and we are proud of her and her efforts.

• Mark Friedman, M.D., FACEP, FACP, attending physician at the Emergency Room Jordan Hospital in Plymouth, has formed the Brighton Group to assist other medical professionals with billing and practice management services. Using state-of-the-art computer software and hardware as well as experienced collections personnel, Dr. Friedman is helping professionals cut through the red tape related to complicated patient and third-party billing. The Brighton Group offers both diskette and modem billing, and will help the medical professionals concentrate on what they are trained for, healthcare. Dr. Friedman is a Cohasset resident, and earned a BA with honors from the University of Chicago; MD from the University of Chicago; interned at Michael Reese Hospital and Medical Center, Chicago, IL; and did residency at Michael Reese Hospital and Medical Center Chicago.

• Did we tell you that three Cohasset residents are members of Boston University's Class of 1995? James Rosano, Douglas Moe and Tara Volungis are the students we are talking about...good luck, study hard, and bring home some stories for "around town."

• That's the news for this week. Please let us know what is new with you.

Sallyann Chatterton

Walter Johnson, left, of Cohasset, chairman of the physics and engineering department at Suffolk University, was recently honored for 20 years service to the school during the annual dean's reception at the Kennedy Library. He accepts a citation from Michael Ronayen, dean of the college of liberal arts and sciences.

The last issue published before Christmas of the Cohasset Mariner comes out on Thursday, Dec. 19. Because Mariner workers have families too, the deadline news copy for the issue that is printed Christmas week is Friday, Dec. 20, at 5 p.m. Our production schedule is advanced to avoid working on the holiday. The paper will be on the stands on Thursday, Dec. 26.

Joe Gagliano, Cohasset High School, was first runner-up in the District finals of the National Veterans of Foreign Wars Voice of Democracy Competition.

During November, 16 South Shore High Schools and local VFW Posts had conducted contests. Joe won the Cohasset Post 9146 competition and his Broadcast Script "Meeting America's Challenge" was entered in the VFW District competition. Finalists met at Rockland High School on the evening of Dec. 6. A panel of VFW judges listened to each student's presentation. Bob Riedenbach, District Chairperson, lauded the high quality of presentations by each of the 16 contestants. He noted that Joe's achievement was especially significant since this was the first year that Cohasset Post 9146 had entered the competition and Joe almost took Cohasset on to the state finals. Joe's competitors included students from school systems as large as the City of Brockton as well as all of Cohasset's neighboring towns including Hingham, Scituate and Hull. The winning entrant was from Abington. Joe's Post and District accomplishments earned him $150, an attractive certificate of recognition, a trophy, medal and Voice of Democracy insignia patch.

Joe Gagliano

Joe is a senior at Cohasset High School and he plans to pursue a naval career. He has applied for admission to the United States Naval Academy. His hobbies include the study of foreign policy and military history. He has been active in a variety of extracurricular activities at Cohasset High School including the school newspaper, captain of the soccer team, and a member of the golf team. He lives on Forest Avenue with his parents, Sam and Carol Gagliano. His father is a retired navy captain.

editorial

It would be nice to be more open

It would be a blessing to have a more open government. It would be a joy to find public officials who want public access to happen.

It's not a major piece of anyone's puzzle but we wish we understood why parts of the information the selectmen vote upon is omitted from the folder available to the press.

The press folder happens to be a manilla cardboard affair with various tidbits of information. This week there was a detailed analysis of the past five years of town receipts provided by the town accountant, a few letters back and forth from Thomas Churchhill, US Trust and a Braintree lawyer over the liquor store license for the defunct High Time Liquors that once existed on Elm Street, a copy of the upcoming agenda, a request from the Chart House to extend its license until 2 a.m. New Year's Eve, some other liquor licensing renewal information and some other papers that didn't make a lasting impression.

What wasn't there was any information about the plan of Sun Oil for the service station at the intersection of King Street and Route 3A — in the meantime three members of the selectmen had signed off on commenting on the plan which is ready for planning board action on a site approval.

Another item that wasn't there was a proposal from John Modzelewski of Civil Designs of Boston for engineering work to repair the damage done by the Halloween storm. There was no actual amount for the work on the form the selectmen voted on Monday. Prices were per task.

Apparently the selectmen had the letter last week — it wasn't in the press folder at that time either.

Greg Doyon, the executive secretary, said it wasn't in the folder last week because it was just a proposal and was subject to negotiations.

The point of keeping matters in negotiations a secret is to prevent the other agency from observing the town's hand. Obviously Modzelewski knew full well what his proposal was. So what was the point of keeping the public in the dark?

Not that the Mariner or the Patriot Ledger were chomping at the bit to print the whole proposal.

Hey, we aren't even printing it this week — it's too boring. But knowing there was a proposal and spelling the names accurately — maybe even quoting some prices for engineering work involved — might have been worth the ink.

We are missing some point here.

Just this week we paid 25 cents a page — the going rate for copies at town hall — for copies of the resumes of the four finalists for fire chief. We got the opportunity to buy the resume copies a week after filing a written request.

We wish we could spend more time writing the news and less time arguing over whether information should be released.

We do the best we can with the resources available to keep the community informed.

Our resources are limited. We would like to believe that it is in the best interest of the whole community for information to flow freely.

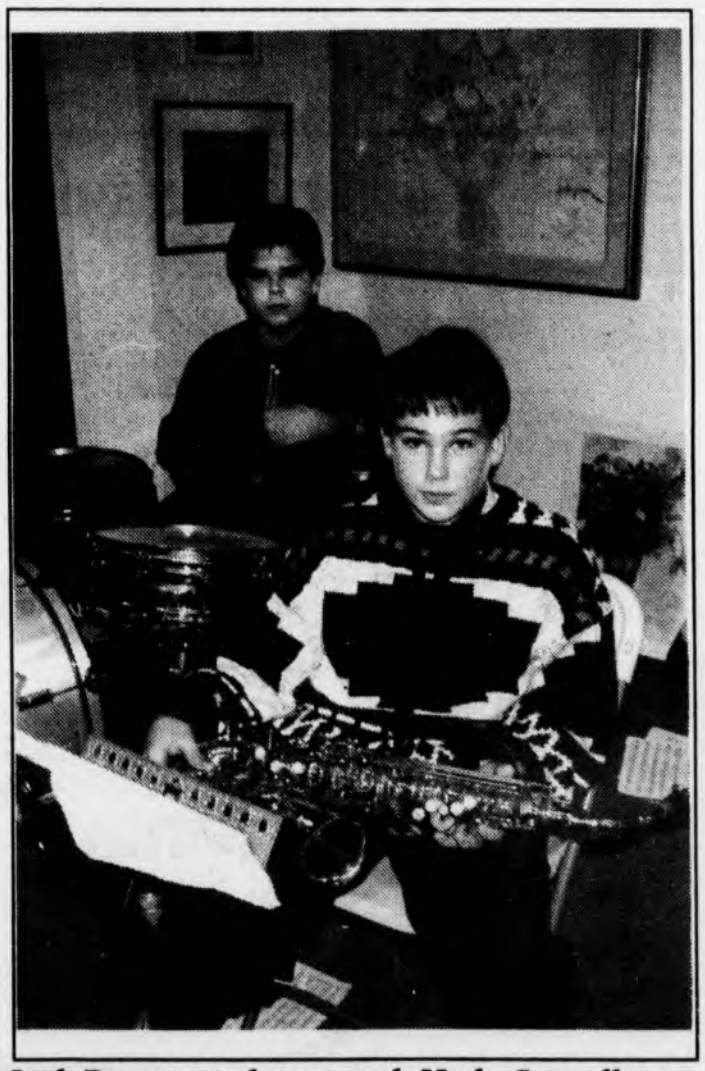
State House Report

By Robert Hedlund
State Senator

The storm with no name came to our coastal communities one fall day and left in its wake a disaster of greater magnitude than that of the Blizzard of 1978. I was able to survey the extensive damages rendered throughout the night of the storm and the following day. Many areas were inaccessible by normal means, so riding with the National Guard was essential.

Along with selectmen and local civil defense officials, I was able to view first hand the carnage in Scituate, Marshfield and Hull. After this experience, it was my immediate objective to have Lt. Governor Paul Cellucci visit our district in order to facilitate a gubernatorial request for Federal Disaster Assistance. The lt. governor agreed to visit our district. We drove and walked the lt. governor through Scituate and Hull and pointed out the need for assistance. Subsequent to this tour, the governor officially requested that the President declare our area a "Federal Disaster Area." There is presently a disaster center set up in Scituate as well as one in Marshfield.

Temporary housing and grants for family assistance as well as low cost loans to cover uninsured property losses are some of the benefits that are available due to President George Bush's declaration of the storm as a major disaster.



I would just like to take this opportunity to thank all of the local officials and state emergency officials whom my office worked closely with throughout this natural disaster. Their hard work and dedication was vital to the coastal towns affected by the storm.

Legislative Update

The Police Consolidation Bill is making much progress through the legislature. It has been approved by the Committees on Public Safety and Public Service, and was passed by the House of Representatives. I look forward to its arrival to the Senate. Consolidation of all state police forces has been proposed for over two years, but had been stalled in the legislative process. I am optimistic about its passage. It represents an attempt by state government to render an important service more efficiently.

Other major pieces of legislation that are expected to be addressed before the end of this year's legislative session are Workers' Compensation Reform, Hospital Finance Reform, an Early Retirement Plan for State Workers and legislation affecting the State Unemployment Insurance System.

If you have any questions or concerns regarding these or any other issues, please contact my office at 722-1646.

Correction

(Editor's Note: We apologize.)

Dear Mariner,

I am Ashley Ulmer. I was on the front of the Mariner on Thursday, November 21, 1991. You put Mrs. Montuori's name but my teacher's name is Mrs. Atkinson. I hope you can fix it.

Sincerely,
Ashley Ulmer

The last issue published before Christmas of the Cohasset Mariner comes out on Thursday, Dec. 19. Because Mariner workers have families too, the deadline news copy for the issue that is printed Christmas week is Friday, Dec. 20, at 5 p.m. Our production schedule is advanced to avoid working on the holiday. The paper will be on the stands on Thursday, Dec. 26.

This year's Village Fair Santa was especially busy hearing wish lists from everyone.

commentary

After watching the selectmen's Dec. 2 movie it has become clear to this observer that they will not hold a Christmas party this year, unless Chairman Ned Tebbetts has scheduled something private with the Scituate Fire Chief. Several movie fans thought Selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Jane Goedecke might become a bit friendlier, after working on the fire chief team with the mystery consultant.

Alas, it seems they're growing even further apart. So if there's going to be a party, it's going to be very (you guessed it) tiny.

Continental Cable picked up hundreds of new Selectmen fans Dec. 2 when for about a half hour (7:30 to 8 p.m) Channel 03 was the only channel Tinytowners could get on their televisions. Some, who had never seen a selectmen's film in their entire lives, tuned in, and stayed tuned in after 8 p.m. because, as one Tinytowner said: "It was by far the best show on Monday night. Really funny!"

Some suspicious Tinytowners say they wouldn't put it beyond Cable executives to have managed the channel-wide breakdown in order to convert new 03 viewers.

Important note: "Cablebob" is Robert V. Davenport of Sohier Street. "Black Horse Bob" is Robert M. Davenport of Black Horse Lane. Cablebob has a lot to say and is quoted weekly in every newspaper. Black Horse Bob is basically a quiet sailor type, you couldn't meet a nicer guy. There is a third person in Tinytown who could be Black Horse Bob's twin, but whose name is not Bob Davenport. He is Dick Pratt from North Main Street. Like Black Horse, Dick is a good sailor, attends lots of high school sports events, and rides a bike around Tinytown. If sometimes you've waved to Black Horse on his bike and he hasn't waved back, it was probably Dick Pratt.

When I spoke to Black Horse Bob about all of the above, he noted that I could well be calling him "Snowbob," had Black Horse Lane not reverted to its original name sometime in the 1930s, he thinks. And he said yes, he and Dick Pratt have discussed the fact that they do look alike and they agree they look alike, which is very unusual. Usually when people tell someone they look like someone else, that person can't see the resemblance at all.

"Black Horse Lane is one of the earliest streets in town, circa middle 1600s. It was used primarily to haul the salt hay down to the barges, which then took the hay to Hingham where it was used to feed the cattle," Black Horse Bob said. According to Black Horse Bob (quite a good amateur historian) sometime in the mid-1800s Sea Captain Snow built the large home at the end of the lane and renamed the lane Snow Place. Some time in the 1930s the name of the lane reverted back to Black Horse. Hmmmm.

I am really pleased the selectmen put Harborfest people Bob Martin and Jim Lagrotteria in charge of vendors for next summer's fest - you must remember how selectmen licensed 4,000 vendors for Sandy Beach last summer, and then for six weeks no one even saw a vendor. If the selectmen had remembered the old adage "Too many freezer trucks spoil the ice cream," they never would have licensed a million beach vendors.

In any case, last year's Harborfest was fun...now selectmen want to hire "Popsicle Police" to control what Diana Kornet calls "garbage vendors." The way the economy's going, we may all be reduced to selling our wares on the streets of Tinytown. One person's garbage is another's living.

* * *

For the second week in a row Tinytown selectmen were unable to decide if they were able to accept a gift of a giant Christmas Tree from Cablebob and Company.

The tree was one of the "bigger" issues they discussed in their Dec. 2 film - something like 30-35 feet.

It just shouldn't take this long to decide whether or not you're going to put up a Christmas Tree. Christmas could be gone before the selectmen make up their minds about this. If they would just finish anything before the year's over.

* * *

Just a quick comment on the selectmen's lengthy and loud debate on hiring a new fire chief. The person four of the five selectmen chose as their first choice is an extremely overly-qualified candidate. You don't hire an executive secretary to be a file clerk. The fire chief's job in Cohasset is in no way a crem de la creme position.

Alternatively, Rocco's choice is too close to retirement.

It is my feeling there's a third guy in that group of 60 who would be the ideal man for the job. Jim Hamilton's choice (Smokey the Bear) would in fact be excellent, but I hear he's a cartoon.

* * *

There is a way selectmen could help to defray the town's upcoming deficit. They could sell/lease/rent their films either at the Cohasset News Company, or through Stop & Shop's video department. My suggestion is they edit two tapes full of their best statements, skits and snits. I would be very happy to assist the selectmen in this effort, and feel a two-tape package could be sold for $19.99 at the least. Laugelle's electricity lessons should be included, as should the on-going Christmas Tree dilemma, the summer of a thousand beach vendors...so much good stuff just waiting for an editor!

Tales from suburbia

By Charlene Vandini

'Tis the season for lots of over-eating and too much cooking. There are all sorts of delicacies that I reserve for this time of year.

Anything with shrimp, for instance.

Towards that end, I scan the recipes in the "food" pages of the local daily newspapers, as well as the "ladies" magazines. I've detected a disturbing trend.

Yogurt.

I don't care what anyone says; yogurt is disgusting. It is even more so when used as a substitute for sour cream, ice cream, cream cheese, or mayonnaise.

I'll take my chances with cholesterol.

I think we're all being suckered in by this bacteria-infested substance. I personally know some otherwise intelligent people who have fallen victim to this cruel hoax, that yogurt tastes just like ice cream.

Last summer, my friend Cindy and I made the supreme sacrifice of going for walks after dinner, three or four nights each week. We'd walk a few miles and on occasion find ourselves strolling through Hingham Square.

Anyway, Cindy suggested we indulge in a small cup of frozen yogurt.

"This stuff is really good. It takes just like ice cream. I even like it better than ice cream," she said to the look of revulsion that crossed my face.

We continued our walk, she with her cup of yogurt in her hand, when we came to the local ice cream parlor. I figured that if she was going to eat that stuff, what the heck, I'll have an ice cream cone.

One scoop of mocha-chip with jimmies.

After a few minutes, Cindy said, "Y'know, that really looks good. Can I just have a little taste?"

Sure, I said, and passed the cone over to her.

A look of sheer rapture and complete delight crossed her face. There was no mistaking THIS for yogurt.

She later, quite sheepishly, admitted that no, frozen yogurt does not in fact taste as good as ice cream.

Let's face it, nothing really does.

recreation report

Furniture restoration

The Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a furniture restoration-refinishing-revitalization class, to be taught by Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country Workshop, by calling the recreation office at: 383-6791.

Sessions are five weeks, meeting on Wednesday or Saturday mornings, 9 to 11 a.m. The fee for this ten hour program is $53 per person, and classes are restricted in size to allow for individual attention.

Participants should select a piece of furniture that is portable, for class work. A chair or small table is ideal. Participants will learn the arts involved with restoration and refinishing, and will complete a piece of furniture by the end of the session.

Sargent has been a professional refinisher for a number of years in Cohasset, and has taught the art of restoration and refinishing to a number of classes over the years.

Participants will be required to bring some supplies with them to class. When you call to register, please indicate what piece of furniture you will be bringing. Non-residents will be accepted for enrollment upon a space available basis, and the next session is scheduled to begin on Wednesday, Jan. 8 and Saturday, Jan. 11.

VACATION PROGRAM

The Recreation Department will be hosting an eight day school vacation program at the Deer Hill School, Sohier St. The program will run Monday to Friday, Dec. 23 to 27 and Dec. 30 to Jan. 3, excluding Wednesday, Dec. 25 and Jan. 1. Youngsters aged 5 to 12 may attend, the hours of the program are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Special rates are available for eight day registration and family discounts, daily rates are also available. The program will be coordinated by Ted Carroll and staffed by Summer Playground personnel. The program consists of sports and games, arts and crafts, and more. To register, call the recreation department at 383-6791.

Recreational basketball

Late registrations for any boy or girl in grades 1 to 9, who wishes to play basketball, will be accepted at the recreation office, Town Hall.

Late registrations for skiing

Anyone wishing to register for ski lessons held at Blue Hills on Thursday afternoons, Jan. 9, to Feb. 6, should call the recreation department office at: 383-6791. The fee for bus transportation and five, 1 and 3/4 hour lessons is $75 per person. Rentals of equipment are available.

Aero-Circuit Training

Classes are on-going and you may register at any class, for Aero-Circuit training. Classes meet in Town Hall's auditorium Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6:15 to 7:15 p.m. Margret Watson, instructing.

Cable development

Homeowners warranty services seem to be a developing trend in today's real estate marketing approach. Paul Wonson, President of Homeowners Marketing Services, will be Gail Bell's guest on "The Home Center" Tuesday, Dec. 17. His firm offers a type of insurance covering all major systems and appliances during the marketing of a home and for one year after purchase, thereby reassuring the home buyer that the home they are buying will have few surprises. "The Home Center" can be seen on Tuesdays at 8 p.m. on Channel 53.

CHANNEL 53

Tuesday, Dec. 17

6 p.m. Children's Corner: Bob Detwiler reads special Christmas stories. Tune in and discover what Bob has found in Santa's pack of goodies!

8:30 p.m. Bob Detwiler's Journal: Greg Godek, author of the newly published book, "1001 Ways To Be Romantic" shares with Bob's viewers his tips on how to develop and maintain romantic relationships.

TUESDAY, DEC. 24

6 p.m. Children's Corner: Santa Claus comes to read special Christmas stories.

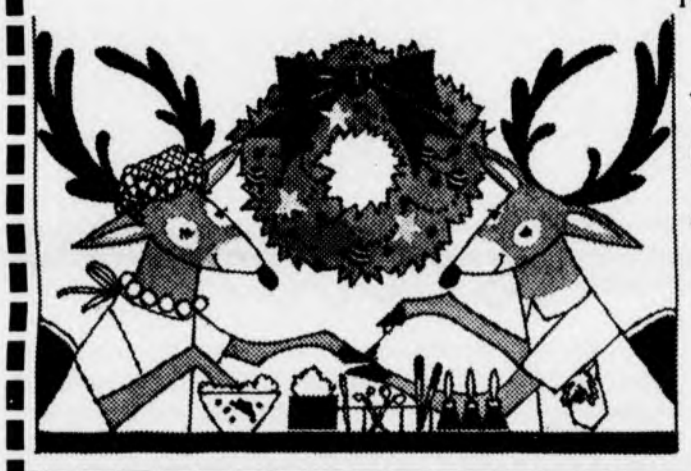
8:30 p.m. Bob Detwiler's Journal: Theresa Moran, one of Bob's volunteers, talks about origami and demonstrates with Bob how she makes origami Christmas ornaments.

Cable guests

Thursday, Dec. 12, Host Wigmore Pierson's guests on Pierson to Person will be Dr. G. Logan Eaton, a resident of Scituate with his practice in Norwell, who will be discussing the latest trends in eye care.

The second segment guest will be Bradford W. Ketchum Jr., Editor of "The Walking Magazine," and a Cohasset resident. Topics include walking as the exercise of the '90s, a sound walking program, and where to walk on the South Shore.

The Pierson to Person television show is broadcast live each Thursday, 8 to 9 p.m. from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, and Scituate and on a tape-delayed basis in Marshfield, Weymouth, and Quincy.



Those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m.

For further information about upcoming guests and additional show information contact the Pierson Show's Executive Producer, Robert Belliveau at 545-0643.

senior corner

By Kathy Bryanton
Senior Center Director

Dec. 18 - Wednesday — The Cohasset High School Music Department has extended an invitation to all our Senior Citizens to attend their annual Holiday Concert Wednesday, Dec. 18 at 7:30 p.m. Let's all make a special effort to attend this festive concert which is always so well done by the Cohasset High School students under the expert direction of Bryan Marks, Choral Director and Colleen Wheeler, Band Director. The senior shuttle will be available to all those seniors who might need transportation. Call the center now and make reservations.

Dec. 20 - Friday — Our annual Christmas Party — The Cohasset Council on Aging is once again sponsoring this annual event. This year, our party will be held at the Second Congregational Church, at 43 Highland Avenue. Come and join us as we have the traditional carol "Sing-a-long"; enjoy the delicious refreshments prepared by the wonderful, well known, Gourmet Club; see the Arts and Crafts on display and for sale; help us welcome Santa and his Elves; and many other surprises.

Dec. 21 - Saturday — Christmas Pops — Reservations and preparations have been made for all those interested to attend the Annual Christmas Pops at Boston Symphony Hall. The bus will leave Cohasset at 12:30 p.m. and stop at Copley Place and then on to enjoy the Pops. This is always a memorable and festive event. For more information and tickets, please call the Cohasset Council on Aging at 383-9112.

A SPECIAL MESSAGE — As many of you all know, our Senior Shuttle Van was in for repairs for approximately three weeks. I'd like to take this opportunity to thank all the Seniors for their patience and understanding and a big "Thank You" to all of our drivers who so generously gave of their own time and vehicle. It is sincerely appreciated by all.

OUR REGULAR TUESDAY LUNCHEONS

Dec. 17 — Another third grade class will be our guests. As usual, the children seem to enjoy our company as much as we enjoy theirs, as it's always fun to have them join us.

There will be no Tuesday luncheon Dec. 24 or Dec. 31.

New addition to play area

Children attending the Cohasset Community Center Nursery School are having a fun time as they play in the playhouse which Rick Lordan of Cohasset, a parent volunteer, has recently constructed on the grounds of the Center.

The playhouse is a sturdy clapboard housefront facade complete with windows and an open door. It is framed in such a way that it creates the illusion of a four-sided house. Children can play inside on the sand floor which can be likened to an indoor garden area.

Nutcracker performance wins new battles

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Grace, beauty and holiday spirit summed up the joint performance of Hingham's Children's Repertory Ballet Company and the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra last weekend.

Using the stage of Plymouth's historic Memorial Hall as a backdrop, the students of Nan Keating thrilled the audience as they danced with precision to excerpts from the Nutcracker as part of the Holiday Pops show.

Marissa Ventre was exquisite as Clara. Chad Wolfe was skilled as the Nutcracker.

The entire cast was spectacular.

Sarah Edson as the Dewdrop Fairy was elegant.

Sarah Case of Norwell danced a Russian number with skill and flair.

Kathryn Mikus, also of Norwell, was as graceful as a flower in the wind as she danced in the Chinese tea ceremony.

The other members of the ballet company — all of whom were wonderful — include: Joseph Morrissey, Alexis Battikha, Brittany Braga, Jacqueline Ouellette, Diana Locke, Andrea Sylvester, Jillian Amonte, Patrick Keneally, Noel Flynn, Ameliaranne Sutton, Matthew Connolly, Jacqueline Briggs, Dan McCabe, Kate Gifford, Courtney Schultz, Katie Walsh, Jenny Carberry, Brienne McGreevy, Kimberly Brown, Clara Sceery, Monica Fee, Tricia Sullivan, Victoria Harrington, Theresa Johnson, Leah Johnson, Meghan King, Emily Libby, Juliette Markowitz, Catherine Howlett, Laura Mangurian, Diana Madden is ballet mistress. Beth Bogush and Karen Brown are on artistic staff. Carole Taylor is arts administrator.

There were variations in the cast over the course of the three weekend performances. Rudolph Schlegel conducted all the performances with skill. His musicians were fantastic.

Santa Claus seemed a trifle late on his cue — demanding bells by the hundreds to herald his arrival — but he made up for his reluctant entry by shaking hands around the room.

Frosty was jovial. And Rudolph was a delight.

The music was a joy. The dancers were a dream.

'It seems a shame the performance doesn't move around to other South Shore locations to give a wider audience a chance to enjoy the magic.

The dance company is professional. The orchestra is superb.

Grace, beauty and holiday spirit summed up the joint performance of Hingham's Children's Repertory Ballet Company and the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra last weekend.

Using the stage of Plymouth's historic Memorial Hall as a backdrop, the students of Nan Keating thrilled the audience as they danced with precision to excerpts from the Nutcracker as part of the Holiday Pops show.

Marissa Ventre was exquisite as Clara. Chad Wolfe was skilled as the Nutcracker.

The entire cast was spectacular.

Sarah Edson as the Dewdrop Fairy was elegant.

Sarah Case of Norwell danced a Russian number with skill and flair.

Kathryn Mikus, also of Norwell, was as graceful as a flower in the wind as she danced in the Chinese tea ceremony.

The other members of the ballet company — all of whom were wonderful — include: Joseph Morrissey, Alexis Battikha, Brittany Braga, Jacqueline Ouellette, Diana Locke, Andrea Sylvester, Jillian Amonte, Patrick Keneally, Noel Flynn, Ameliaranne Sutton, Matthew Connolly, Jacqueline Briggs, Dan McCabe, Kate Gifford, Courtney Schultz, Katie Walsh, Jenny Carberry, Brienne McGreevy, Kimberly Brown, Clara Sceery, Monica Fee, Tricia Sullivan, Victoria Harrington, Theresa Johnson, Leah Johnson, Meghan King, Emily Libby, Juliette Markowitz, Catherine Howlett, Laura Mangurian,

There were variations in the cast over the course of the three weekend performances. Rudolph Schlegel conducted all the performances with skill. His musicians were fantastic.

Santa Claus seemed a trifle late on his cue — demanding bells by the hundreds to herald his arrival — but he made up for his reluctant entry by shaking hands around the room.

Frosty was jovial. And Rudolph was a delight.

The music was a joy. The dancers were a dream.

'It seems a shame the performance doesn't move around to other South Shore locations to give a wider audience a chance to enjoy the magic.

The dance company is professional. The orchestra is superb.

Nadeau . . .

administrator for Maine Fire Training and Education. Between 1982 and 1985, he served as supervisor of the Maine Fire Service Training. From 1976 to 1982, he worked for the Sanford Fire Department, achieving the grade of captain.

Sanford is a city of about 23,000.

His department managed to get throught the year without major layoffs due to a wage freeze agreed to by the union there.

In response to questioning about the length of a commitment he was willing to make to Cohasset, Nadeau said he liked what he had seen and had no plans to look elsewhere.

"I wouldn't be interested in less than three years," he said.

He added that he needs to be challenged and wants to be happy in his work.

"I like to be part of an aggressive firefighting team," Nadeau said.

Nadeau pointed out that firefighting is the most dangerous occupation.

He brought out some questioning from Laugelle when he talked about the problems firefighters encounter when police arrive first at a fire scene, park the cruiser in front of the burning building, and attempt to go into the building.

He said the police, untrained and unequipped to enter the building, can become victims of the fire. He also said the fire trucks need clear access.

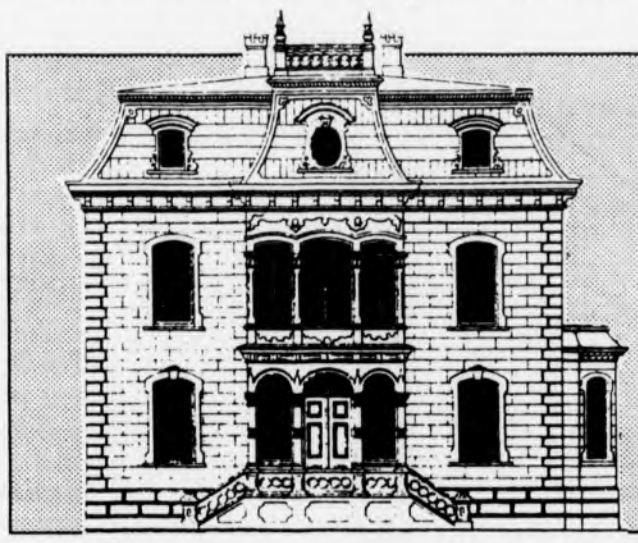
He talked about the common areas fire and police can work on and said that substance abuse is the greatest cause of fires in his hometown.

Nadeau said he thinks the 42-hour work week the firefighters in Cohasset have is probably ideal. In Sanford, the fire department works a 48-hour week.

He said he could be brought up to speed on this state's fire code in a half hour to an hour.

The resume Nadeau submitted to selectmen included 12 pages of information. Most of the information involved courses he has taken over the years.

There were more than 60 applicants for the position. The other finalists are:



• Paul D. Anderson Jr. is deputy chief of the Randolph fire department. He holds an associate's degree in fire science from Massasoit.

• John D. Shaw Jr. is the former fire chief of the Lebannon, NH, fire department. He also served as fire chief in Brewer, Maine. He is working outside of his field now. He holds as associate's degree in fire technology and administration from Thomasvalley Technical College in Connecticut.

• Robert B. McKenna is the assistant chief in Newark, Ohio. He holds a bachelor's degree in history from Dennison University in Ohio.

Anderson was the top choice of Laugelle. The other four selectmen said before the final interview that Nadeau was their choice. At least two of the other selectmen favored McKenna as the number two selection.

Anderson is a 1952 graduate of Thayer Academy who spent four years in the Air Force. He has 20 year experience in an administrative role in the Randolph Fire Department. Since 1986, he has served as acting fire chief whenever the present chief was out of town. He is that department's training officer. He serves on the staff of the state Firefighting Academy.

Remember to return your SAFE Homes contract! The contracts are due. Even if you took part last year, you need to send back a new contract to take part in the program.

Pearl Harbor

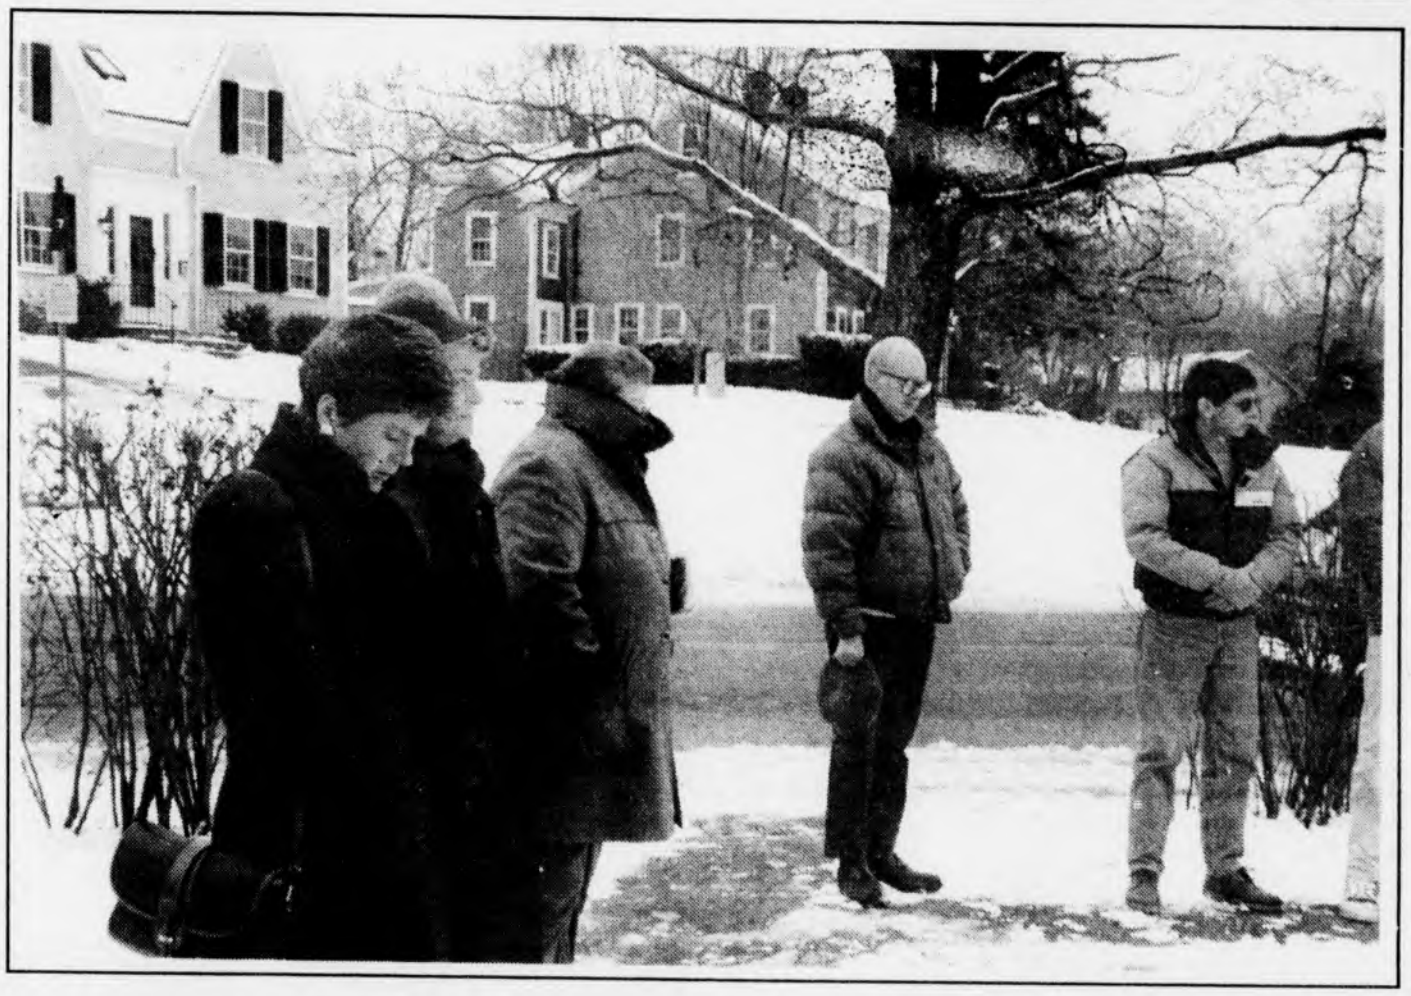
St. Anthony's offered a prayer.

Selectmen Chairman Ned Tebbetts told the gathering he remembered well where he was standing when he heard the news of Pearl Harbor. He said he was standing close to the current President George Bush. Tebbetts graduated from high school in 1943, two years after the war began, with a class of 200. Five of the 200 were killed before the end of the war. He said the day has another significance for him — it marked his 44th wedding anniversary.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, who served in the Marines, marched with the veterans.



A small crowd of residents stood in the cold to participate in the ceremony. Selectmen Rocco Laugelle, Jane Goedecke and Martha Gjesteby were among them.

The Sons of the American Legion, commanded by Thomas Wigmore, also participated in the service. The Ladies Auxiliary of the Legion, commanded by Brenda Innis, provided lunch at the Mealy Post after the speeches.

"Fifty years ago this morning the sky over Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, was filled with Japanese planes. When the last wave of attacking aircraft rejoined the Japanese fleet, 1,178 lay wounded and 2,403 lay dead or dying. A great portion of the US Pacific fleet was in shambles," Wigmore said.

"Thus began America's entry in World War II — 5 years that changed the world. The United States

Pearl Harbor commemorated: 50 years of history

The honor guard awaits the cue to fire their guns over the harbor.

ire Chief Daniel Brock stands behind the color guard at the Pearl Harbor Remembered services.

Pearl Harbor

returned from World War II as the world's greatest military and economic power. America was the world's peacekeeper and a symbol of freedom and liberty for all. But today, we are here to pay homage to those who paid the price for America's greatness.

"That morning at Pearl Harbor, men were killed as they ran to man their battle stations. Families across our nation listened in horror as the radio announced the destruction and death. For those men and women and their families, we are gathered today.

"For the next 44 months, spouses and children watched as their fathers and mothers answered the call to arms — 292,131 of those men and women never saw their families again. For those and their families, we are gathered today.

"Beginning at Pearl Harbor and throughout World War II, American soldiers, sailors, marines and airmen suffered injury, many which they carry today. It is for those, we are gathered today.

"For those who escaped death and physical injury, World War II has also changed their lives forever. It is for those we are gathered today.

So as we gather to remember those lost on this 50th anniversary of Pearl Harbor, it is to say thank you. Thank you to the 2,403 for whom the beginning was also the end. To say thank you to every man, woman and child who paid a price so that we might stand here today.

As living Veterans of Foreign Wars and members of the American Legion, we have paid a price to enjoy the freedoms of today. We asked you to join us in our grief over friends lost and in sympathy for the servicemen and their families who have suffered. Join us in recalling their sacrifices, their bravery, and their commitment. But also join is in our joy for having served the greatest nation on the face of the earth. For all who have served, for all who have suffered and for all who have died, join us as we say, May Almighty God bless them . . . and may God bless America."

The Rev. John Keohane of St. Anthony's Church prays during the ceremony to mark the anniversary of the Japanese bombing of Pearl Harbor as a group of veterans, including Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Selectmen Chairman Ned Tebbetts and Selectman Rocco Laugelle, stand at attention.

The honor guard heads back toward the Legion building after the ceremony Saturday morning at Cohasset Harbor.

Pearl Harbor isn't forgotten

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The men and women who gathered at the Veterans Memorial Dec. 7 knew where they were back 50 years ago when this country found itself under attack by the Japanese.

A crowd of several dozen turned out for the commemoration ceremony despite the frigid winds that whipped flags to attention and left young people huddling out of the cold.

It was a Sunday morning in 1941 when this country realized the attack was underway.

The Japanese began bombing Pearl Harbor in Hawaii at 7:55 a.m. Dec. 7. In this part of the country, that amounted to 1:55 p.m.

Most of the men and women who gathered to commemorate the start of the war were people whose lives were profoundly affected by the fighting.

Thomas Haley lived in South Boston when the war broke out. He remembers being in the cellar, shining shoes when he heard the news of Pearl Harbor.

"It was one of my chores for the family," Haley said. "I was 15. My first thought was I hoped it would last until I could get into it."

He enlisted at 17. His brother-in-law, Robert Jason, died in the service in1944. Haley had three brothers of his own in the service. They returned. It was while he was in the service that he began visiting Cohasset. He met his wife, a cousin of his friend from those military years.

The Haleys dated for four years before marrying. Tom remembers falling asleep on street cars and missing his stop in those courting years, years before he owned a car.

Haley decided to join the reserves after the war. He ended up being called to fight in Korea.

Ralph Perroncello, commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars post, was still in high school when Pearl Harbor was bombed 50 years ago.

His brother who was only a year older enlisted right away. Perroncello said he knew right away he would be called to fight in the war.

He was a member of the graduating class of 1942 from Cohasset High School. As he remembers it there were 20 girls and eight boys in the class. He went into the service after graduation and became a heavy machine gunner with the Army's 66th Infantry. He earned two bronze stars during the war. He didn't mention the medals — one of the other members of the post pointed it out.

He served in France and Germany

Perroncello also holds medals for three campaigns and the combat infantrymen's badge.

Rocco Laugelle, another WWII veteran, said in those days he was at church on Sunday mornings.

"That's just how it was then," he said.

Stephen Wigmore was only 7 when America went to war. He remembers the day. He went on to fight in the Korean War.

Ernest Sullivan was 16 years old and a junior in high school when the war broke out. Sullivan served in the Marine Corps in the Pacific, enlisting when he turned 17.

Thomas Hernan remembers finding out about the attack on Pearl Harbor at the movies in Scituate. They stopped the show to announce the surprise bombing.

Hernan was just 16 at the time, his birthday is in October. He spent the time between his 17th and 20th birthdays in the service, having enlisted as soon as he could.

Leo Kurtz was 15 when the when Pearl Harbor happened. He was living with his family in Montana. He was one of 15 children in that family. Two of his older brothers enlisted right away.

When he turned 16, Kurtz' father signed papers so he could join the Merchant Marine. He went on to serve in the Army and in the Coast Guard. He served in the Coast Guard during Korea as well. While stationed at Point Allerton in Hull, Kurtz "met a local girl and married her." He's lived in town ever since.

Kurtz and five of his brothers served during the war. Not one was injured

"That's something," he said.

Kevin McArdle was also too young to go to war immediately after Pearl Harbor. He was 14 at the time.

McArdle enlisted when he could and joined the Coast Guard. His first ship assignment was the USCG Taney, one of the ships that had been stationed at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941.

"Kids couldn't wait to get into the service back then," McArdle said. He earned a military diploma, having left school before the graduation ceremonies.

He pointed out that when he enlisted there was no choice about the branch of service.

"There was one physical and they told you who needed replacements the most," he said.

Death On the Doorside

By Topher Henderson

The blade of the reaper falls on my back and I fall.
The grim master of death takes his toll.
Darkness surrounds my form and the cold chill passes through one more time.
I gasp for air but am suffocated
by my desire to live.
My blood is like ice in my veins
as I hear for the last time the demeaning laugh of hate.
A gray shroud falls upon my stiff body
as my soul is yanked away.
As I see my corpse I desperately reach out for one more chance.
A being from somewhere grasps my lifeforce and pulls me towards the reddish light.
Suddenly a feeling of remorse fills my soul as the hot flames of Hell pass through.
As I float up, I hear a gentle voice whispering my name and I follow with great anticipation.
I am eye to eye with my maker and my eternal keeper.
All my life's problems rush out of my soul, making it even lighter as I rise forever in hope of my heavenly asylum.

Earth Day Begins In My Bedroom

By Nicholas Terry

Author's Note: This is a passage from a story I wrote on the subject of Earth Day for a large and powerful federal bureau.

At Los Angeles, environmentally conscious actor/director Robert Redford gave the keynote address. I, as well as a few other listeners, dozed off, but these are some of the things he mentioned:

"We must dream...I see limitless horizons...Our urge to explore...As a child, I collected chewing gum foil and made them into automobiles." I was so stunned when I heard the thunderous applause, I fell out of my chair.

"Outstanding," said one observer.

"Beautiful," remarked another.

Dressed in twigs and leaves as a symbolic tribute to Earth Day similar speeches were made by speakers, including Paul Newman, who plugged, "Buy my salad dressing at a store near you."

President Bush went to the podium and took out a dictionary. "I-tin-er-ary," he began, complete with brilliantly created hand gestures, "the course or plan of action for a trip, outing, etc."

Then the Vice President got up and made his best Road Runner impersonation. He went, "Meep! Meep!"

"Excellent," one person stated.

Another one said, "Provocative."

Somebody told me I was up next, but I had not prepared a speech. I decided to wing it. These are my ideas for solving the homogeneous environment problems. The speech went as follows:

"I have thought up a way to solve both the problem of chewing gum that collects on the bottom of school desks everywhere, and the increasing amount of chipped glass. I have decided to start the first used chewing gum and chipped glass eyeglasses factory. First, used chewing gum will be collected. Then, chipped glass will be rounded and made into prescription lenses. I don't know the specifics, but from just looking around at people who wear eyeglasses, thin lenses will be made for near sighted people, thick lenses will be made for far sighted people, and extremely thick lenses will be made into bullet proof eyewear.

"Recently, I have been thinking about the fastly disappearing Ivory-Tusked African Elephant, and I think I have a solution. Ten elephants will be tranquilized so that we can take their tusks. It has been calculated out that one elephant tusk makes about one thousand miniature tusks. Therefore, with twenty tusks, (two tusks per elephant) twenty thousand miniature tusks can be made. Pairs of these tusks will be glued to the heads of slugs, which would then be placed in Africa. With twenty thousand ivory-tusked slugs roaming the plains of Africa, poachers would give up hunting the elephants, and slaughter the slugs instead. I am sure the world would not mind the senseless killing of slugs, considering that unlike elephants, slugs are not cute and cuddly, and cannot be incorporated into children's books. Thank you, and drive safely."

As I finished, the audience rose with deafening applause. It was a standing ovation, or a standing O. Literally, everyone stood up with their arms shaped as O's, chanting, "Oooooohhh." Don't ask me where they came up with the idea.

"Outrageous," stated one observer.

"Magnificent," exclaimed another.

It's Coming...

Winter is on the way.

The snow. The ice. The slush.

This winter, don't be left out in the cold. Take the Hingham Commuter Boat to work. It's just 35 minutes to Rowes Wharf.

Plus, you can enjoy the comfort of a heated cabin where you can snooze, read the paper, have a cup of coffee, maybe do a little work.

Not to mention that you'll save yourself the frustration of fighting your way through messy winter traffic jams.

Try the Hingham Commuter Boat. After all, winter is coming.

Whispers and Shadows

The Wind

By Joey Slotnick

The caressing wind buffets the people lying in the sun.
The grass stirs out of its sweet winter sleep.
Trees rock in rolling waves, dancing to the wind's song of spring.
The wind ruffles kids' hair, singing spring is in the air.
The wind comes with warm air on its wings, waking creatures and flowers in every knell and dell

Winter Poem

By Nik Hawks

The winter wind whistles through the trees,
And the ice will slowly freeze
The fish will go down deep where they can get some well-earned sleep
The birds will all fly south
So they don't get taken in by winter's hungry mouth
The white snow will soon fall
Creating a priceless pure white shawl
Which covers the land both night and day
Until it slowly melts away.

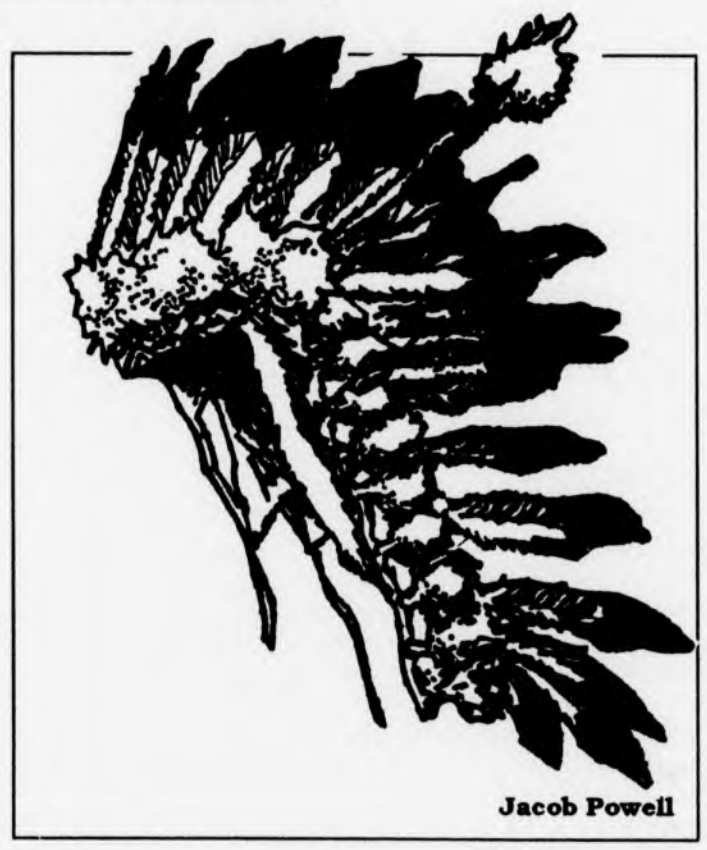
Green and long
Rain will come
April noon
Spring is here
Summer soon

Lost



By Jessica Snow

The little black bugs roaming everywhere but going nowhere, scattering under the bridges of grass and towers of clover,
Coming to the dandelion to find nothing
Nothing but a lost jungle of weeds and soil-
Going everywhere but nowhere
LOST

Two stars in the sky that can't meet
Two rivers running parallel reaching to join-

Cohasset Community Center

Registration time

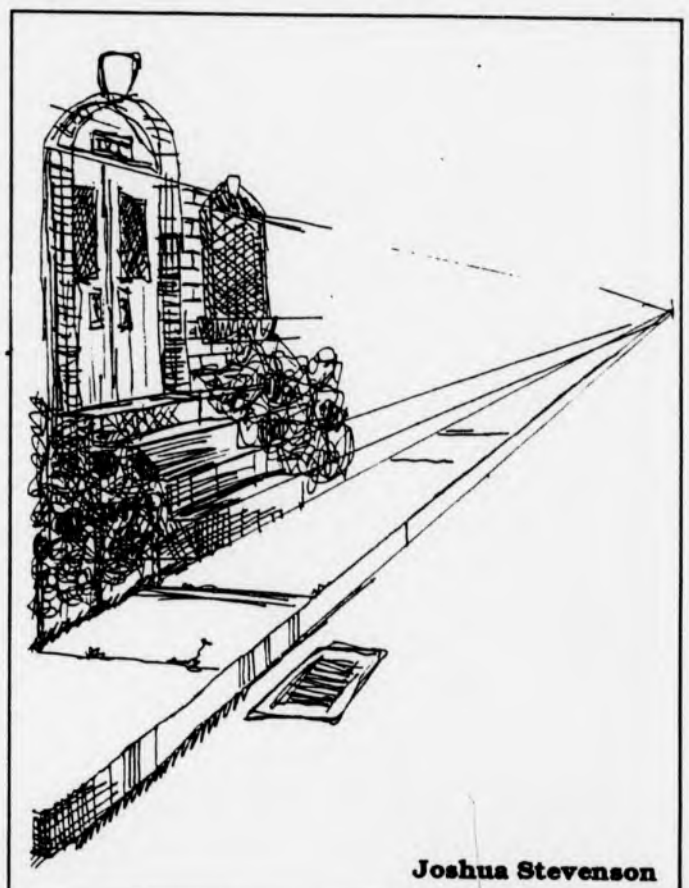
The Cohasset Community Center is now conducting registration for the winter session of courses.

Tai Chi for Beginners with Jimmy Morris has just started its new session. Classes are held for a ten-week period on Wednesdays from 7:45 to 8:45 p.m. at a cost of $55. For those more advanced and who have studied with Morris, the advanced class is held from 6:45 to 7:45 p.m.

Always popular are our Aerobics Courses which are held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 8 p.m. and Saturdays from 8:30 to 10 a.m. with Normandie Nigh. Low Impact Aerobics with Mary Doherty is held on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, from 9 to 10 a.m. Babysitting is available.

A CPR course will be given on Jan. 30 with Dr. Michael Equi and Linda Farrag, RN, from 7 to 11 p.m. This course covers emergency resuscitative techniques for cardiac and/or respiratory arrest and procedures for alleviating airway obstructions. An American Heart Association Certificate is awarded upon completion.

A few openings are left for four-year olds in our gymnastic classes.



A DOS class to be held on Thursdays from 8 to 9 p.m. will be starting soon.

Our Computer Center at 9 Depot Court has several computer courses available for children and adults. Call for further information.

A class in Lotus will be starting Saturday, Jan. 18 for a five-week period.

Gym Dandy classes start on Jan. 28. Tiny-Tot Chef and Pre-School Nature classes start on Jan. 15. Babysitting Course for teens starts on Jan. 22.

Please call the Center at 383-0088 for further information and registration of any of the above-listed courses.

Concert at First Parish

The First Parish Church in Cohasset will hold its annual Christmas Concert on Sunday, Dec. 15 at 4 p.m. in the Meeting House on the common in Cohasset. The concert, entitled "A Day for Dancing" will feature the Unicorn Singers conducted by Margo Euler. They will present a festive carol suite interpreted by young dancers in costume accompanied by flute, oboe, bassoon and percussion excerpts from Bach's Christmas Oratorio with soloists and orchestra. Tickets are $5 and a can of food, and can be purchased at the church office Monday through Friday between 9:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. or at the door. Proceeds from the concert will benefit Wellspring, Inc., a multi service center in Hull, and the can of food will go directly to the food pantry developed by Wellspring which suffered damage during the Oct. 30 storm.

The concert will feature dance for the first time in its history. Traditionally, the concert ends with the audience joining the Unicorn Singers in a round of familiar carols sung in various arrangements and conducted by Margo Euler. Not only is one cheered by the performance, but one is swept into the joy of the season by being led into a burst of song. Over the years, both the group in the audience and the group for whom the ticket sales raise funds benefit tremendously from this concert!

For more information, or to reserve tickets call the church at 383-1100.

Cancer benefit

The South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society has opened a "Poinsettia Pavilion" in a store at Marina Bay, Quincy, and will be selling these colorful flowers weekends until Christmas to help support the program of service, education and information which the unit carries on in nine South Shore communities.

The store, donated by the management of Marina Bay, will be open on Fridays from 4 to 7 p.m., and on Saturdays and Sundays 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

"We know that the hundreds of residents of Marina Bay will want to shop for their Christmas flowers here and thereby also help in the fight against cancer," Barbara Sullivan, president of the South Shore Unit stated in opening the Pavilion, "and we hope that others will take this opportunity to help while also visiting the Marina Bay shops and restaurants." The South Shore Unit serves the communities of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth. Volunteers enlisted by the Unit provide programs of public and professional education, public information and services including free transportation of cancer patients to area and Boston hospitals for treatment.

Acupressure seminar

Local Advanced Acupressure practitioner Laura Wight will offer a comprehensive eight week training seminar on the Advanced Acupressure healing method. Wah Lum Academy of Cohasset, located on Rte. 3A, will host this series of classes, scheduled to begin on Jan. 14. No previous experience is necessary to participate. Class will meet each Tuesday from 8:30 to 10 p.m. The cost is $60 and preregistrants should contact host, John Loupos at 383-6822 for further information and to ensure space availability.

Gift of art

Just when you thought the economy wouldn't let you buy a gift of art, the South Shore Art Center is making it difficult not to! The Art Center and many of its exhibiting artists have lowered their commissions and prices to make art purchases more feasible for holiday shoppers this year. Some prices have been reduced by as much as 40 percent.

The Folk Art Exhibit, on display at the Art Center through Dec. 21, has many pieces available, now at sale prices. Choose from original paintings, wood sculptures, baskets, and painted furniture, all created by local artists.

The Art Center, located at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, is open Tuesday to Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information, please call 383-9548.

Coffee House

There will be a Christmas party for Developmentally Challenged Adults at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave., Cohasset.

It will be held on Sunday, Dec. 15, from 2 to 4 p.m. and will include entertainment, a craft project, and refreshments.

Please call St. Stephen's Church at 383-1083 if you have questions or need more information.

Amateur gardeners

Members of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet on Tuesday, Dec. 17, 1 p.m. at the home of Connie Kurtz for a Christmas party and gift exchange. Jean Syrmopoulos will be co-hostess.

Aid Books at Library

The 1991-92 edition of the Handbook on Admissions and Financial Aid at Independent Colleges in Massachusetts is available at the library.

The Handbook tells students and their parents how and when to apply for college financial aid. The Handbook describes the state, and federal college supported financial aid programs, and it contains college admissions information and application deadlines.

"The federal government is currently dealing with the reauthorization of students aid programs and the state has drastically cut its scholarship program (from $84 million FY89 to $26 million FY92). This makes it more important then ever for parents and students to understand how a college education can be financed," Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said.

VNA house tour

On Thursday, Dec. 12, the Norwell VNA will host a House Tour — On the Holly Trail — from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Eight Norwell homes are lined up for this holiday special. Tickets are limited. Admission is $15. There will be no refunds.

After Dec. 5, call 659-2505 or 659-7745 to reserve any remaining tickets. These will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the door (First Parish Church, Norwell Center) on the day of the tour.

Associated with the tour is a raffle of one of Sally Mederos' famous needlepoints, with a value of $500. The winner will be able to designate his or her house and family activities or the local historical building of choice as the subject of the work. These needlepoints are of heirloom quality, and some of Sally's work can be seen hanging at the Cushing Center in Norwell. The prize would make an excellent gift. Raffle tickets are available from VNA Board members at $5 a ticket or five tickets for $20.

Call Susan Carson, 659-2505, for information. They will also be available the day of the tour from noon to 2 p.m. at the First Parish Hall. Drawing will take place on Dec. 26, making a raffle ticket a perfect Christmas gift for some lucky person.

Cardinal Cushing dinner fetes two humanitarians

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Dr. Gerald Doyle and George Williams stood in the darkened doorway at the entrance to the decorated gymnasium at Cardinal Cushing School Friday evening greeting old friends and accepting the good wishes of strangers.

Williams, who once played professional football, but who is more recently known for his entrepreneurial skills in the Assinippi area and the Hingham doctor were the joint recipients of the schools Humanitarian of the Year Award.

Between 300 to 400 people braved the cold and wet weather to honor the two humanitarians at a dinner that ultimately honors the school for the mentally handicapped.

The school's chorus, looking smart in their navy blue sweaters, sang a medley to set the tone of the evening. A huge mirrored orb blasted pieces of light into the dim room.

The chorus marched into the room in step to the music of a live orchestra playing "Hey, Look Me Over." But the group sang with only a piano accompaniment.

There was a slide presentation about the school which was founded by the late Cardinal Cushing to help handicapped youngsters reach their potential.

And there were the speeches. The school provides education and training for 140 special students, most of whom live on the grounds.

Charles O'Donnell, chairman of the school's board of directors, had kind words to say about both of the award recipients. O'Donnell has been on the board of directors of the school for 17 years. Neither of the award recipients is a member of the school's board. But O'Donnell said he would be happy to see them both appointed.

He pointed out that Williams was the recipient of two Bronze stars for heroic action during the Vietnam War. He also mentioned the local real estate developer was drafted by the Pittsburgh Steelers football team when he was just out of Notre Dame.

He went on to talk about Williams accomplishments in moving from holding down two jobs to converting to Assinippi post office into a business that has expanded over time.

Williams was visibly embarrassed by his new title. "Gerry Doyle is the real humanitarian," he said as he shook hands with the party-goers and prepared for the evening's entertainment.

In his speech he gave credit to his wife, Mary, for having worked to overcome opposition from residential neighborhoods to community residences for the graduates of the school. He talked about the benefits of hiring a Cardinal Cushing student — saying there is no risk because as employees the students produce good work.

Williams introduced his children, George and his wife Jennifer, Mary Kate and her husband Jonathan Hewitt, Kristen and her husband Joel Maloy and Matthew.

O'Donnell talked about the fact that Dr. Doyle still makes house calls.

Dr. Doyle, who begins his days at 4 a.m. jogging around his South Hingham neighborhood, fills his days with medical work and winds up making house calls on his way home in the early evening.

His own acceptance speech was filled with praise for the school.

"The Cardinal Cushing is a very special school that believes in the potential that lies dormant waiting for discovery within each of us," Dr. Doyle said.

He told a couple of success stories about the school. In one case, a young woman who is now a legal secretary was tutored at the school for five years as a child for reading problems. He mentioned Chris Clubb, who has Down's Syndrome, but is a TV actor on "Life Goes On" today, having spent six years at the school.

"The point is that we all find what we're looking for. If you look for areas of exceptional talent or strength, you'll find them just as surely as if you look for areas of deficiency, you'll find them too.

He went on to talk about the importance of self-esteem — something nurtured at the school.

At the awards dinner at Cardinal Cushing School Friday night are from left: George Williams, Dr. Gerald Doyle, both named as humanitarian of the year; Charles O'Donnell, chairman of the board of directors of the school; and John Shyne, the school's executive director.

William Hunt Parmenter :A Tribute

Dear Bill:

You filled all of the church last Thursday.

Your conservation friend, Pam Wolfe from Hull, sat in the last pew with me.

Pam asked how I knew you. I said I thought I met you last spring when you asked me to sign your train petition. But maybe it was when you asked me to write a letter to some of your favorite people — a letter you decided to not send. Pam said she was a much older friend, and she was going to miss your help with the train.

The Rev. Gary A. Ritts said:"There is someone missing in our church now, yet we will still share the laughter and memories he gave us — tears mixed with smiles is what loving is about.

"He could be gruff, blunt — but we always knew where Bill stood. He could also be gentle; he had a soft, gentle warm heart."

Rev. Ritts found himself thinking so much about you during this past week because there was something he wanted to talk with you about:

"Bill stopped by every week — he always had an article for me to read. Recently he said he thought science was losing the mystery it once had...and that it had lost touch with God.

"Unfinished business comes to a head at times like these. It's not unlike the very season we're in. Unfinished business is what life is all about. But Bill Parmenter's business is done. He has made it to the manger. Bill's fine."

I don't know if you knew how colorless these last few weeks had become. Everything was brown and green, with berry vines adding only the tiniest of color to the woods. The bittersweet had been picked over for the church fair; and then it had been so warm the tips of the blueberry bushes had bloomed. The woods were like a bug dusty closet; even the sky was brown.

But last Friday it snowed and it was as if God had made a special sun just for Wheelwright Park — a star performance. Bravo! I whispered to this wonderfulness.

"Bill has drawn us into a beauty we can't ever imagine. We will get there if we try, but we must love one another as He has loved us," Rev. Ritts said.

I was up so early that morning I was sure I'd be the first one in the woods. But I had not come to the woods alone, I realized, as I walked in the tracks of a cross country skier.

"He goes to prepare a place for you. Where I am, you may be also," Rev. Ritts said.

Isn't it funny how people always think they're the very first ones to set foot somewhere — and then they climb to the top of the mountain and run smack into God? Allen Thomas was organist. Ushers were Frank Wheelwright, Joe Sandblom and Lot Bates.

Cardinal Cushing dinner fetes two humanitarians

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Dr. Gerald Doyle and George Williams stood in the darkened doorway at the entrance to the decorated gymnasium at Cardinal Cushing School Friday evening greeting old friends and accepting the good wishes of strangers.

Williams, who once played professional football, but who is more recently known for his entrepreneurial skills in the Assinippi area and the Hingham doctor were the joint recipients of the schools Humanitarian of the Year Award.

Between 300 to 400 people braved the cold and wet weather to honor the two humanitarians at a dinner that ultimately honors the school for the mentally handicapped.

The school's chorus, looking smart in their navy blue sweaters, sang a medley to set the tone of the evening. A huge mirrored orb blasted pieces of light into the dim room.

The chorus marched into the room in step to the music of a live orchestra playing "Hey, Look Me Over." But the group sang with only a piano accompaniment.

There was a slide presentation about the school which was founded by the late Cardinal Cushing to help handicapped youngsters reach their potential.

And there were the speeches. The school provides education and training for 140 special students, most of whom live on the grounds.

Charles O'Donnell, chairman of the school's board of directors, had kind words to say about both of the award recipients. O'Donnell has been on the board of directors of the school for 17 years. Neither of the award recipients is a member of the school's board. But O'Donnell said he would be happy to see them both appointed.

He pointed out that Williams was the recipient of two Bronze stars for heroic action during the Vietnam War. He also mentioned the local real estate developer was drafted by the Pittsburgh Steelers football team when he was just out of Notre Dame.

He went on to talk about Williams accomplishments in moving from holding down two jobs to converting to Assinippi post office into a business that has expanded over time.

Williams was visibly embarrassed by his new title.

"Gerry Doyle is the real humanitarian," he said as he shook hands with the party-goers and prepared for the evening's entertainment.

In his speech he gave credit to his wife, Mary, for having worked to overcome opposition from residential neighborhoods to community residences for the graduates of the school. He talked about the benefits of hiring a Cardinal Cushing student — saying there is no risk because as employees the students produce good work.

Williams introduced his children, George and his wife Jennifer, Mary Kate and her husband Jonathan Hewitt, Kristen and her husband Joel Maloy and Matthew.

O'Donnell talked about the fact that Dr. Doyle still makes house calls.

Dr. Doyle, who begins his days at 4 a.m. jogging around his South Hingham neighborhood, fills his days with medical work and winds up making house calls on his way home in the early evening.

His own acceptance speech was filled with praise for the school.

"The Cardinal Cushing is a very special school that believes in the potential that lies dormant waiting for discovery within each of us," Dr. Doyle said.

He told a couple of success stories about the school. In one case, a young woman who is now a legal secretary was tutored at the school for five years as a child for reading problems. He mentioned Chris Clubb, who has Down's Syndrome, but is a TV actor on "Life Goes On" today, having spent six years at the school.

"The point is that we all find what we're looking for. If you look for areas of exceptional talent or strength, you'll find them just as surely as if you look for areas of deficiency, you'll find them too.

He went on to talk about the importance of self-esteem — something nurtured at the school.

At the awards dinner at Cardinal Cushing School Friday night are from left: George Williams, Dr. Gerald Doyle, both named as humanitarian of the year; Charles O'Donnell, chairman of the board of directors of the school; and John Shyne, the school's executive director.

Football Awards Banquet

The Cohasset Gridiron Club held its Annual Awards Banquet honoring the Cohasset High School Varsity Football Team on Sunday, Dec. 1 at Kimball's By The Sea.

More than 135 players, cheerleaders, coaches, parents and guests were in attendance to recognize the achievements of our 1991 Varsity Football team who compiled an impressive record of five wins and only three losses.

Coach MacDermott and Coach Silvia presented the 1991 awards to the following Varsity players for their performance throughout the season:

Best Offensive Player: Ray Jones; Best Defensive Player: Chris "Roli" Rolandelli; Best Lineman, Tim Conroy; Most Improved, Charlie Shields; Unsung Hero, Steve Harrington; Most Valuable Player, Ray Jones; Coaches Award, Brendan McCarthy; Coaches Award, Erik Waal; Golden Helmet Award, Brendan McCarthy, Jed Terry and Kevin Mulcahy.

It was a total team effort which enabled each player to develop their skills and work together to become a team.

The evening highlighted a successful "Rebirth" of Varsity Football in Cohasset, thanks to the efforts and support of our school administrators.

Hanging out with Kevin McHale

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Boston Celtic all-star Kevin McHale looked at ease as he strolled across the bar room floor at the Varsity Club last Thursday.

In fact he looked like he was performing in yet another Cheers episode for NBC.

However, McHale was not at the Hingham bar in search of Norm and Cliff, instead he was there to sign autographs and talk sports.

And he didn't disappoint as he stayed for more than two hours.

McHale, dressed in a blue jeans and a green Celtic sweater, sat in the corner of the room and showed no ill-effects from his ankle injury as he signed autographs and posed for pictures.

But the injury was on his mind as he talked to the Mariner.

"The ankle's not very good," he said when asked how he was feeling. "I'm only able to practice every other day or every third day and that's not good."

Asked how long he would be out of action, he said, "I really don't know. I was hoping to be playing by now, but I rushed things and I have to rest. But hopefully within the next few weeks I'll be able to play."

McHale laughed and joked with the crowd which gathered around his table.

He was at ease with the crowd and laughed about signing an autograph on the back of an American Express receipt.

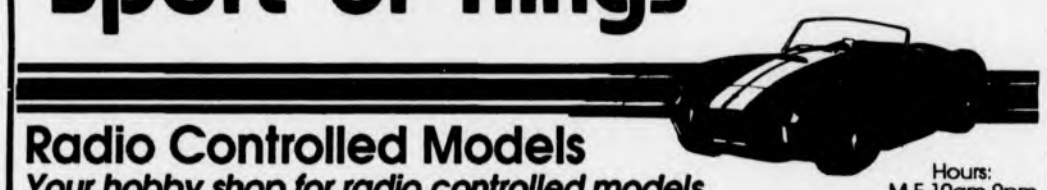
Seeing he was in a bar, the Mariner asked about his experience on Cheers.

"I had a lot of fun," he said. "The whole cast and crew made me feel at ease and I liked everything about it."

Asked if was going to appear on any more shows, McHale said, "Hey, I'd like to but that isn't in my hands."

McHale was asked about the Celtics chances of winning another championship before he stopped playing.

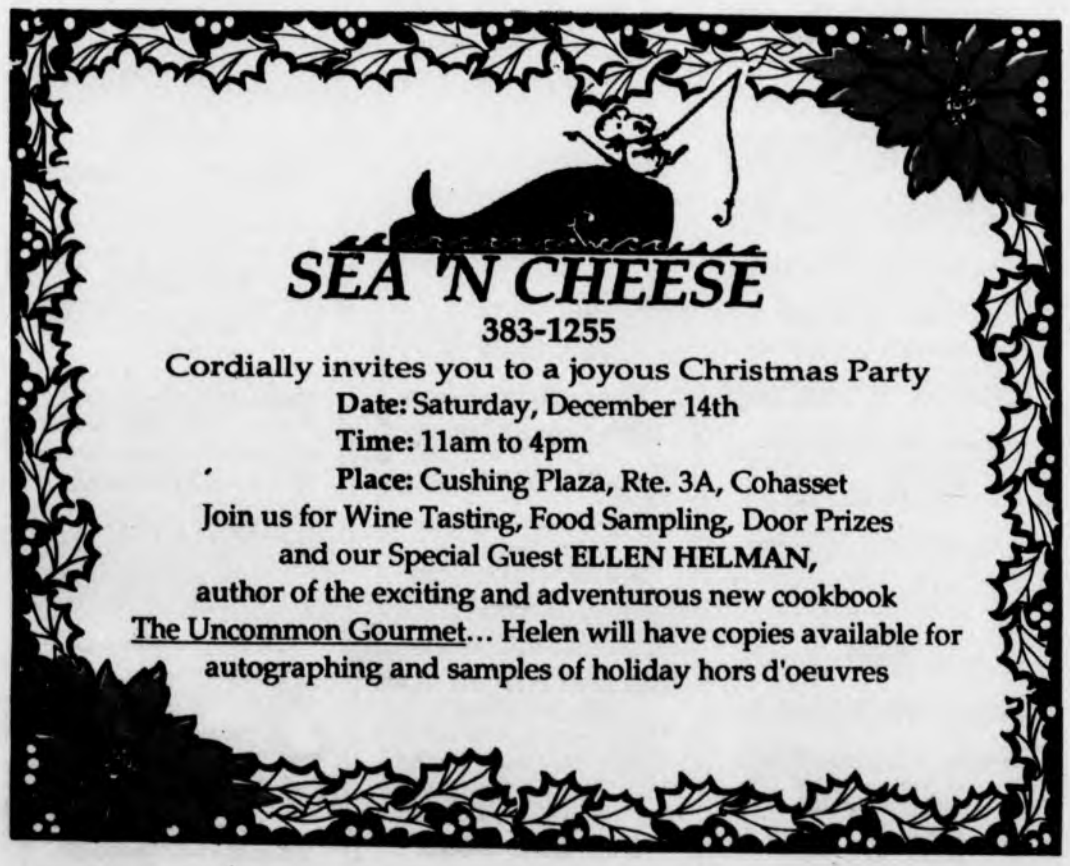
"Hey, let me get back in the line-up first," he said. "No, I think we can. We have some talented younger players who can help us. I think it's just a matter of getting everyone healthy. Last year we were all healthy early in the season and unhealthy later. Maybe this year, it will be the other way around."



He was asked a final question by the Mariner about signing autographs and meeting fans.

"I enjoy it," he said. "A lot of people are uncomfortable, but I enjoy meeting the people and talking to them."

Varsity Club general manager Thomas Briggette was excited about having McHale in Hingham.



More than 200 people came by to meet McHale over the course of two hours.

RTF tree chipping

Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Facility personnel wish Cohasset residents a Happy Holiday Season. Through the cooperative efforts of the Tree and Park Department Christmas trees will be chipped again this year at the RTF. The following guidelines have been set for safety of the chipper operators and must be followed:

No wreaths will be accepted. No metal of any kind on trees. No commercial tree sellers are allowed.

The last chipping day will be Friday, Jan. 10.

CHS assembles to talk about date rape

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The Social Service League and PSO are jointly paying for a high school assembly on date rape, scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 19.

The program involves an assembly for grades 9 through 12, according to Michael Gill, health coordinator.

Gill said the decision to offer the asembly wasn't tied in to the Willie Smith trial.

"It's a necessary and neglected issue," Gill said.

He said there had been some discussion of doing an assembly of the kind last year.

There was a script that Ron Emmons had access to that was considered. But the script was withdrawn before anything actually happened.

The assembly for the CHS students will be produced the Underground Theater, a small group from Tufts University.

The program, "When No Means No: Respecting Choices," will last about an hour. It includes a question and answer period where the students can ask questions of the actors while still in character.

According to Gill, the goals of the program are to:

• help students understand that rape is not always violent and committed by a stranger.

• illustrate that acquaintance rape can be partly a function of miscommunications.

• assist students in realizing that when thoughts and feelings are not expressed and limits are not set, there is too much room for misinterpretation.

• help students understand they have a right to control their own bodies.

• empower students so that they may be better able to evaluate a situation that they may be exposed to later on in life.

• help students understand how an innocent date can lead to rape, and to assist them in clarifying any misconceptions they have about rape.

Gill said movies and much of society lead young people to have the wrong ideas about the word no.

The assembly is to emphasize that no means no, he said.

Afterwards the students who attend the program will be given a "safe dating guidebook" that will go into more depth on the issue of drawing lines when dating.

The guidebook is also being paid for by the Social Service League and the PSO.

"We are getting into issues like these because there is an attitude in the community that they want us dealing with serious issues," Gill said.

"We couldn't do it without their suppoprt."

Auto plates for Veterans available in March

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, (R-Cohasset) a Marine Veteran, was at the presentation of Veteran Auto Plates with Registrar of Motor Vehicles, Gerald Gnasso. Rep. Murray sponsored the legislation for the issue of distinctive license plates for veterans. These soldiers will be recognized for their defense of our country. The plates will be available in March or April to the qualified women and men.

There are approximately 675,000 women and men veterans in the Commonwealth. The Registry of Motor Vehicles is currently taking requests. The veterans will receive an application with the requirements needed to establish verification as to which plate they qualify for, either the Regular Veterans, Pearl Harbor or Purple Heart. The cost for a two-year plate is $80, $40 which will go to the two Massachusetts Old Soldiers Homes in Chelsea and Holyoke. The other $40 will be retained by the registry. Plates will be distributed on a first-come first-served basis.

Aegean Fare transfer

The common victualler's license of the Aegean Fare was transferred Monday from Michael Vallas to Dolores Vera.

The business was sold to Vera in November. The hours have changed with the new management. The shop is no longer open Sundays.

Cohasset Imports license put on hold

While nost licenses were renewed by selectmen Monday night, the used car license of Cohasset Imports, which is located in a residential zone on Route 3A, was held up.

The old license expires Dec. 31. Selectmen are not planning to meet again until Jan. 6.

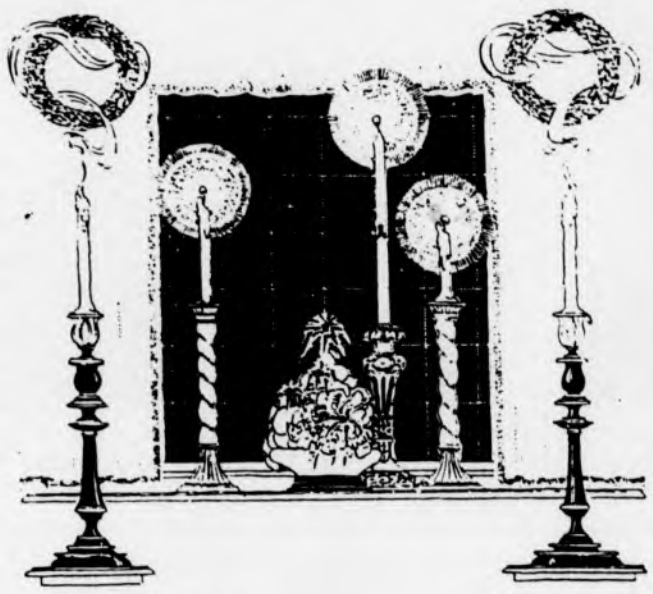
Cohasset Imports is owned by Peter Capozzoli who plans to meet with the selectmen during the first week in January.

The business will continue to operate in the meantime.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson told selectmen Monday that if they wanted to close a licensed business, a hearing would have to be held. Selectmen did not ask Henderson to pursue that option. The board voted on all other licenses and merely failed to renew the used car license of Cohasset Imports.

Henderson was asked to look into the issue.

Capozzoli said he did not attend the meeting Monday because he had an appointment in Plymouth, made two weeks before. He said he became aware there was a problem about the license renewal at 3:30 p.m. Monday.



Building Inspector Robert Egan inspected the premises at that time to count the cars on the lot. The dealership is limited to 20 cars for sale on the lot.

Egan counted 24 cars on the lot and four unregistered cars on adjacent residential property. Under the zoning bylaw, only one unregistered car is allowed on a piece of residential property.

Capozzoli said three of the cars are driven under dealer's plates.

He sent the selectmen a letter that arrived during the course of the meeting to explain his viewpoint on the situation.

Marge Ritter, who lives nearby, attended the selectmen's meeting, and complained about the operation. She complained because the board has increased the license in recent years.

'Homecoming' delivers warm and fuzzy feeling

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

"The Homecoming" is a story of love and poverty — it's about pride and Christmas spirit.

It was a wonderful gift from the Cohasset Dramatic Club, CDC, to all of us. If you didn't take advantage of the offering, you lost out. Sitting through the show, enjoying the talent of the group of seasoned and not-so-seasoned actors was a lesson in simple appreciation.

Sitting in the auditorium at town hall, it was easy to picture the world of the depression.

Watching the cast of the CDC bring the era to life was a delight. Witnessing the story of a family caught in true poverty brought home the point that the depression was different from the current recession.

The play was skillfully directed by Gayl Varallo. She used some well known local actors to give substance to her version of the production. But the true stars — no offense, old troopers — were the children.

The young stars in the cast deserve some strong accolades.

Tobey Horn played Clay-Boy Spencer with polish and precision. The rest of the Spencer children were also adept at working on the boards.

Tobey is 14 and a grade 8 student at Derby Academy in Hingham. He is the son of Richard and Carolyn Horn of Cohasset. The role is his first with CDC but he has been in other plays elsewhere.

Deborah Carleton played the children's mother with a tense energy that made her motherliness quite believable. She has appeared before with CDC and That New Theatre. According to the play book, she made her debut at seven.

The rest of the Spencer stage children include: Bobby Meehan, Julie Holland, Sara Garland, Ronnie Nicynski, Joseph Nicynski, Jeff Clarke and Laura O'Brien.

Bobby Meehan, incidentally, is an honors student at Cohasset junior/senior high school. He has appeared in the Priscilla Beach Theatre's production of the "Nutcracker"; as the lead in "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory", in "Kids of Konahasset" and as the Prince in "Snow White." He served as stage manager for CDC's "Cheaper by the Dozen".

Ronnie Nicynski is 11. His brother Joseph is 9. Both have a series of credits to their names. The brothers, who live in Cohasset, had the chance to appear with CDC as their off-stage father, Ron Nicynski, made his stage debut as their stage father — the man who appears only at the end of the play. Ron, who was Clay Spencer, the man forced to work 40 miles from his family's home, gave a strong performance.

Bob Julian, a veteran CDC player, was perfect as Charlie, the poacher. His brief performance proved the old adage: There are no small parts. Talent will, indeed, out.

The congregation including Valerie Dolan, Robert Davenport, Melanie and April Duval, David and Elizabeth Ingber, Jennifer and Barbara Meehan, Sarah Nohe, Karen O'Brien, Ben Peterson, Taylor Strecker, Ron and Meaghan Sutherland-Rota takes a bow.

The cameo role of Molly Hochkeppel as Ivy, the bartender, was another example to prove the adage. She brought a professional air to the stage. She has a heavy background in community theater and regional professional productions with parts to her credit in other CDC plays, Curtain Call Theatre and Darling Productions.

Kathy Haase as the city lady was sweet and naive, as she was supposed to be. The portrayal offers thought for any of us in the position of providing some relief to those who have little but their pride. Kathy, who lives in Cohasset, is a recent graduate of Southeastern Massachusetts University. Her background includes roles in college productions. She is seeking her master's degree from Bridgewater State College.

Bob Grey was a joy in the comic role of Birdshot.

Jeannine Guillelmo and Carolyn Roche as the bootlegging Staples sisters were fine examples of character players.

The Rev. Gary Ritts, minister of the Second Congregational Church, was convincing as an evangelical minister, the Rev. Hawthorne Dooly. According to the play book, he has a background in acting dating back to his days as a student but this was his first community theater role.

Dawn Rota, as the grandmother, and Joe Rota, as grandpa, were delightful.

Steve Holland played the sheriff with a strong dose of required gruffness.

The townspeople were played by: Paula, John and Steven Cianciarulo, Angi and Leigh-Anne Walsh, Jessica Eaton-Bruce, Kara Gaughen, Brian Krupczak, Brie McKenney and Liz Myers.

The church congregation included: Valerie Dolan, Robert Davenport, Melanie and April Duval, David and Elizabeth Ingber, Jennifer and Barbara Meehan, Sarah Nohe, Karen O'Brien, Ben Peterson, Taylor Strecker, Ron and Meaghan Sutherland-Rota.

The role of Joseph was alternated between David Ingber and Ben Petersen.

The role of Mary was alternated between Elizabeth Ingber and Taylor Strecker.

Many more workers assisted behind the scenes.

There were no mangled lines. No mumbled phrases. No missed entrances.

It looked as if the cast and crew were enjoying the performance. I hope they did. Because the audience enjoyed the production.

around town

• There is more news on Dr. Mark Friedman this week! You may remember that he was written about recently. He was the founder of the Brighton Group which assists other medical professionals with billing and practice services. Attorney General Scott Harshbarger has invited Dr. Friedman to join a new Medicaid Advisory Group being formed by him. Harshbarger is restructuring the "Medicaid Fraud Control Unit" to more efficiently contend with the fraud, waste and abuse in the Commonwealth's Medicaid Program. The doctor will join other medical experts on the panel to advise the Attorney General's office on how to more effectively monitor the $2.7 billion Medicaid program in Massachusetts. It sounds like more of the "ask a busy man," and we congratulate you, Dr. Friedman.

• A couple of weeks ago there was an article in the Quincy Patriot Ledger about Kevin McNulty, a three-year-old in Norwood who has a rare form of leukemia. His only hope is a bone marrow transplant, and his folks are trying to raise $50,000 to make the operation possible. Some of Cohasset's musicians, under the direction of Bill Coleman, are planning a fundraiser to help Kevin. They are going to hold a night of entertainment at the American Legion on Saturday, Dec. 28 from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the cost of $5 per ticket. Bill, Mark Mincolla, Ed Sorrentino, and Scott Daniels will be there, plus other Cohasset "All-Stars" as they were called "around town" a few years back. Bill found a printer, Garrison House Press, that will be making up posters and the tickets for the event at no cost, so there are a lot of people trying to help Kevin. Please do your part to help these folks help Kevin. Check a poster for more details and set aside Dec. 28. It will be a night of great music, great fun and all for a worthy cause!

• Happy birthday to Roger Pompeo, who will undoubtedly enjoy this birthday more than any other now that he has his grandson Tommy to help him celebrate. Have a great day and many more.

• We'll bet that Jonathan Hunter and Rebecca Jordan, CHS 1991 grads, are looking forward to Christmas vacation this year. We hear that they are loving college life at Dickinson College in Pennsylvania! They should have a great time comparing college life with fellow graduates, and we know that their first semester was a successful one.

• Congratulations to Jim Rooney, the son of Paul and Mary Rooney of Lantern Lane, who recently passed the Maryland Bar examination. Jim, who earlier this year graduated from Boston College Law School, is a 1988 graduate of Dartmouth College and a 1984 graduate of Cohasset High School. He is presently practicing with the law firm of Hunton and Williams in Washington, D.C.

• Congratulations go to Mike Gill and his wife this week, on the recent birth of their son.

• Joe and Carol Sandblom must be beside themselves with happiness over their latest news. Their son Scott and his wife Rhondi presented them with their first grandchild, a boy. His name is Derick. Scott and Rhondi live in California so you can bet that the skies will be a bit busier with trips back and forth. Wonder who will be where for Christmas? Congratulations to you all, love that baby.

• Happy birthday greetings go to Becca Lehr.

• Ellery Clark has been busy. On Dec. 6, as his late father's representative, in his name he received a gold ring and was inducted into what the National Track & Field Hall of Fame call "the class of 1991" which contains the four people elected into the hall this past June. Now he is busily training for the 1992 season, including the Cohasset Rotary 10 kilometer walk in April, the Quincy Senior Olympics in May and the New England Masters' Championship meet in the summer. Ellery also reports that Grace is making good progress at the Pleasant Living Convalescent Center, and we hope that she continues.

• We have learned that Peter Doggett, son of Tom and Polly Doggett of Hugh Strain Road, has recently completed climbing the 272 peaks of Southern California in less than two years – something of a record! Peter, a '75 graduate of CHS with a Master's in engineering from B.Y.U., is living in Long Beach, CA and enjoys the challenges of mountain climbing with Sierra Club friends.

• Among those watching the Red Sox trade picture are Phil and Joan Shockman, the owners of Dazzle at the South Shore Plaza. Mo Vaughn was one of the players who went to their store to get his ear pierced (he had to be sure that the earring was centered so that #42 would fit just right). Naturally once you meet one of the players you watch him with interest, as all of those at Dazzle are doing. If he remains a Red Sox player, you can watch for the diamonds to dazzle in his ear, too.

• Finally, to help you get into the Christmas spirit, make sure to attend the CHS Holiday Concert on Wednesday, Dec. 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the high school auditorium. There will be various instrumental and choral groups and something from every aspect of the Living Arts Department. There will be lots of extras and great surprises to be enjoyed by all, so bring the whole family and support your students and their teachers.

• During this busy season there is plenty of news so be sure to let me know the happenings in your family.

Have a very merry

'Tis the season to give away real and imaginary presents.

We at the Cohasset Mariner wish we could give everyone of our readers a gift for the holidays. Rick Small, editor of South Look, the regional section of the Mariner's has been able to come up with a special gift this week. He was able to obtain the right to reprint the full version of "A Child's Christmas in Wales" in this week's issue.

Incidentally, South Look will not be published New Year's week.

We have some less tangible gifts we want to send around town this week — gifts of the spirit.

We offer these presents with good humor and wishes for a happy holiday season.

To Ned Tebbetts, we send a peace pipe.

To Diana Kornet, we send a five-year subscription to the best newspaper in town — the Cohasset Mariner.

To Martha Gjesteby, we send the opportunity to work on a regional fire service committee.

To Jane Goedecke, we send an abatement.

To Rocco Laugelle, we send an invitation to tea with the queen of South Main Street.

To Jim Hamilton, we send a new fire chief to immortalize.

To Alix White and John McNabb, we send new environmental issues to vault after.

To Commonwealth Electric, we send a crash course in public relations.

To the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, we send an bylaw demanding that all town purchases give preference to the local bidder — provided prices are comparable.

To Joe McElroy, we send a signed and sealed agreement for the duplex at Government Island — with design review by the Historical Society as the only condition.

To Tanna Kasperowicz, we send the energy to take on the rest of the world now that she has taken most of town and state government to task.

To Greg Doyon, we send a copy of the public documents law.

To Dori Dwyer, we send a longterm employment contract.

To the town employees, we send a slice of reality — the choice is simple — jobs or raises. Pick one.

To Polly Logan, we send a few more Republicans looking for work.

To Sen. Robert Hedlund, we send a cake walk for '92.

To Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, we send an Eagle scout badge — anyone that has sat through as many Courts of Honor as she has deserves her own award.

To Mary Dennehy, we send a flock of new advertisers.

To Alan Chapman, we send photo assignments that happen on time.

To Betsy McGrath, we send appreciation for the current layout of the Cohasset Mariner.

To Nancy O'Toole, we send two more grandchildren.

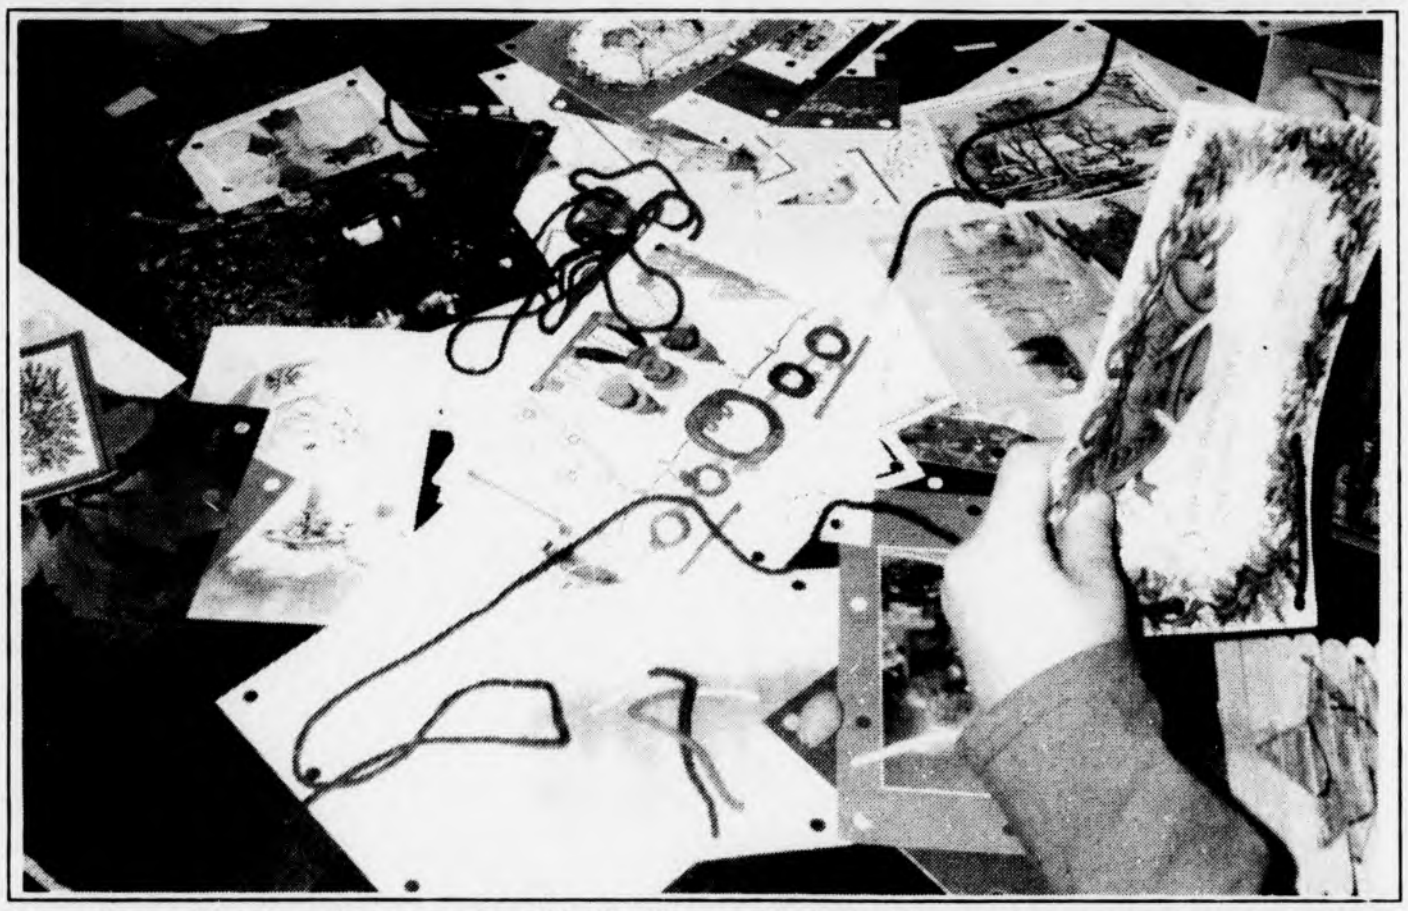
To Stephen Hart, we send a book on financial wizardry.

To Richard Henderson, we send our own legal opinions.

To the recycling committee, we send thousands of pounds of newsprint on an annual basis.

To the owners of Cushing Plaza — whoever they may be — we send a septic system that works.

To William Weeks, we send a flock of resumes from highly qualified candidates for appointive office.



To the entire population of Cohasset, we send our best wishes and hopes the holiday brings peace of mind.

letters

To the Editor:

As the dust settles and my life returns to normal, I can look back at my car accident on September 6 with some clarity.

The first thing that comes to mind is how fast I got help. I want to thank the people who were at the scene that called the ambulance and who stopped to help.

It seemed like only moments until the police and EMT's were there. (I'm grateful that Cohasset has its own ambulance). The police and firemen were very kind and professional. I want to thank them very much.

I was overwhelmed with all the cards, phone calls, flowers, and kind offers from the people in my life. What a great help it was for the PSO to put together a network of families to cook dinner for me and my family. Thank you all for the delicious meals.

It is a wonderful feeling to live in a town and community with so many caring people. I heard of churches, groups, and individuals that were praying for me, my daughter and my family. Both my daughter and I have healed with no permanent damage. I feel like a testimonial of the power of prayer. Thank you all for your prayers and thank God.

Sincerely,
Julie Hassan

Setting up a system to fail

To the Editor:

As a single parent, attending Massasoit Community College, I would like to pass along some important information about the Welfare Department and Gov. Weld's new reform; which will take your hard-earned tax money and fund a program that is set-up to fail.

First of all there is a program already in effect called E.T. This stands for employment training, which also enables A.F.D.C. recipients to attend college. Those of us who want to get off of Welfare—for good—are attending college and pursuing degrees toward this goal.

Our college education does not cost the taxpayer any money. What we do require is the child-care and transportation that allows us to get to school. Please do not let this administration stop this program.

What they want to do is close to criminal not only for us on Welfare; but for you who so desperately want to cut Welfare rolls. This new proposed program will not allow us to attend school. What it will do is deny over 3,000 students throughout Massachusetts the education we so desperately need by denying us child-care and transportation.

Gov. Weld proposes a mandatory 8-week training

chamber chatter

By Paula Knowles
Cohasset Chamber of Commerce

Twas the night before Christmas and all thru the house, not a creature was stirring not even a mouse. The stockings were hung by the chimney with care with hopes that....hey wait, what the heck have we here?

These stockings are gorgeous, and come with a card. It says here quite clearly, they're from Cards & Shards! Inside each new stocking I can make out just fine, a certificate for breakfast at the great Log & Line. And one here from "Carmines" – the Strawberry Parfait, and Papa Gino's and Bergson's and the Village Gourmet! The Bread Shop, and JJ's and Victoria's II; Dunkin' Donuts the old and Dunkin' Donuts the new. With Richards, the Red Lion, and the Chart House are there, along with fine Kimball's and the Aegean Fare. From a sandwich at Roberts' to Pizza at the "House," Santa's got it all covered, and no one can grouse. An eggroll at Koko, fresh fish at Sea 'n Cheese, Penny Candy at Judy's as quick as you please. Nuthin' More Natural's a mouthful – but good for your health; now it's time to peek further at this Yuletide wealth.

Let's turn up the lamps in the parlour real low, and see what is waiting under wrapping and bow. The tree!! oh, how lovely, the tinsel, the lights! Only from Sestito's could have come such a sight. A Camera from Nobles, from Good Sport a stick, to add to the skates with the tag that reads "Rick." The new King book from Buttonwoods for hard to please Jack, a Scanner for Grampa from Radio Shack. Liquors Unlimited, Cohasset Plaza and, yes, Curtis too, have provided a wine list that's fit for Who's Who! New "jammies" from Woolworths, from King's the right beads, to go with the blouse from the new Appleseeds. Cohasset Jewelers' "Lalique" will bring Gramma such joy, like the Walkman from Walgreen's will bring little Roy! A UNICEF doll from Little Harbor Books, with a Julia Child "bible" for Mama, the cook! Here's Art Center Jewelry, all handmade, exquisite, and a sign from Dave Hassan to help those who visit. There's "Artist's Son" prints all matted and framed; for the wind chimes and calendar Kit 'n Kaboodle's to blame. Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy – a T-shirt it gave us, with the "Church Lady" logo that's certain to save us...(when a cousin arrives unannounced with a box, containing a sweater and two matching sox!). Some perfume, a record, a clock gently beeping...an alarm clock, a buzzer. I must have been sleeping!!

What a dream! Oh so lifelike, so alive and so vivid. I think my mind's telling me it's time to get with it. Just one week til Christmas, not much time to go; but that dream was a god send, my plans now I know – from the village to 3A to the harbor and more, I plan to hit every restaurant and store. My shopping will take me not too far from home: but the perfect presents I'll find...plus an end to this poem!!

THE MORAL TO THIS YULETIDE TALE?? You guessed it – Shop Locally, and save yourself time, gasoline, aggravation, and headaches. You won't really pay more, the unrushed atmosphere and helpful clerks and salespeople (often the business owners themselves) will bring a smile to your face and a sense of caring and warmth to this happiest of seasons. And don't be afraid to let your fingers do the walking. If you are rushed, call ahead and make sure you will find what you are after. But if you have the time – and shopping close to home gives you a few precious extra minutes – look around, see what's there. You may find yourself doing more shopping than you expected!

Andrew Sullivan, 5, lets Santa Claus know his heart's desire at the Cohasset Village Fair earlier this month. Santa was found at the Cohasset Community Center.

Finnegan chews phone cords, Mary smokes

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

commentary

Two years ago...a few days before Christmas, my friend Mary said "I think I need a cat again. I opened up the box of Christmas ornaments last night and a mouse jumped out."

You go away a lot, I told her. You don't want a cat hanging around the house. They go in, they go out. They shed; if they're black they shed on white stuff. If they're white they shed on black stuff. And they eat a lot. They eat more than a dog.

"But I obviously need a cat. And I need a cat to sit on my lap" she said. She wondered if I knew of a particular cat, or where she might get one.

I tell her to sleep on the cat, try to forget about him. "You'll feel differently about a cat in the morning."

It was the afternoon before Christmas two years ago. I had come back from shopping and turned on my tape to get my messages, when Mary's voice purred. "I have something very interesting at my house. Come quickly. I need advice."

Well, after living as many years as I have, I've learned that people usually get what they want. And Mary had.

She was wrapping some presents and thought she heard someone at the door. When she opened the door she discovered a tall, skinny white cat with one of the longest tails she had ever seen.

"Look, I think he's been blessed," Mary said of her cat, who was all white with a blond mark in the shape of a hand on his lower back. When I met him he had already lived in the Deveney home for 24 hours, had his face washed, and had been rubbed down with warm water and Skin-so-Soft ($10 a bottle) and had already shown a preference for Sheeba cat food ($1 per half ounce).

The advice Mary needed from me was a name for what she thought was her three or four-month old kitten.

This is definitely not a kitten, I told her, looking at this foot-tall cat with a two-foot tail. "This is a cat, not a kitten...a fully-developed male cat."

"Oooooh, but look at his sweet little face; I know he can't be that old."

You have absolutely no idea where this cat came from. For all you know he's on the Lam. Maybe he's trying to change his ways, wants to settle down in a nice home with a nice family and sit on somebody's lap. But you have no idea where he was before you found him at your front door, I said, reaching over to pet him as he sat on Mary's lap with that adorable expression cats have when their tongues are half out. She was tickling him behind his ears.

She babbled baby talk to him and they sat there on the sofa, quite content with one another.

Finding a good name for a cat is hard for several reasons. First of all, cats have a first, middle and last name.

They can never use the last name of the family they live with. For example, our dog's name is Truman Kasperowicz. But our cats' names are: Solo Stray Songbird and Flower Stray Songbird. Their mother's name was Dosie May Stray. Kittens always take their mother's last name as their middle name.

Because of the season in which he had come Mary was getting all gooey over Christmas names. "How about Angel?" she said. "How about Angel Hair?" I replied. "Look at all the white cat hair on your purple throw."

Over the next several days many names were submitted: Gabriel, Cookie, Spirit, Tinsel, Sugar Plum, Jesus Christ (that was my idea, because I told her she'd be saying that to him a lot anyway—and I wouldn't be wrong).

But a week later Mary had discovered her own name for him, which was Finnegan-Finnegan-Out-Again-In-Again-Dennehy (Dennehy was her grandmother's maiden name). Finnegan's formal name would be Finnegan O. Dennehy with O. standing for Out Again In Again.

At first Finnegan did go in and out a lot, as all cats do, just to make sure you really will open the door each time. And he was sweet and Mary and her daughter Meredith loved him. Sometimes he played chase with Mary in the house; he'd go and hide and she'd find him, then he'd find her.

And then spring came and summer, and Finnegan's true personality began to make itself known.

The chase games had become violent.

Mary was outside gardening one day when Finnegan ran across the back yard, grabbed her ass and bit her.

By spring, Mary had replaced several phone cords. By fall the Deveneys would have replaced 12 phone cords. Again, I was called for advice.

How about keeping the ruined phone cords and using them as decoys? Hang them all around the house, see if he goes for them, I said.

Mary had a party. One of her guests looked, puzzledly, at the spiral phone cords hanging from her refrigerator door, her stove door, her inside front door, chair legs. They were everywhere. And for a while the decoys worked. Finnegan was confused. But within a month he had figured out which ones were live, and which decoys.

Mary had bad habits, too. But after two years together next Tuesday, I'd say they've learned to live together. He chews phone cords, she smokes. Sometimes his nips aren't affectionate, sometimes she's late feeding him.

Last week Mary left a message on my tape and said: "I have to tell you this, but I think your dog is controlling your life. You'd better watch it."

That message was from Mary Deveney, who last spring changed her last name to that of her cat, and who is now Mary Dennehy. I called her tape back, because she is a busy Mariner advertising rep, and oftentimes we talk a lot through our message tapes. I said:

"Mary. Don't do it! Don't put the house in Finnegan's name!"

Setting up a system to fail

program, in which we will still need child-care and transportation to attend, for all Welfare mothers; at the taxpayers' expense. What job can be found that would pay for a roof over our heads, utilities, clothing, food, child-care, and transportation costs with only 8-weeks training? Where will the jobs come from for just us students alone, when there is so much unemployment?

What will happen is that in 2 to 4 years, all of us who attend school now will still be on Welfare in one form or another, instead of working and contributing to society. And there will only be more excuses on why the Welfare roll is so high.

Please give me and others the chance to regain our dignity and become productive citizens again. Do not let this administration perpetuate this degrading lifestyle. We are not nameless faces, we are your neighbors, friends, students, sisters, and daughters. Give me the chance to thank and repay the friends and strangers who gave me and my child warm clothes for the winter.

letters

There will always be deadbeats in society, but they are not all on Welfare. Think of Mr. Sununu and others who flaunt their positions at the public's expense; or the fathers of our children who can be the worst deadbeats of all.

We single parents, who are attending school and trying so hard to get off Welfare, are victims and our children are the most innocent victims of all. Our only crime is leaving an abusive or intolerable situation and trying to raise our children in a safe and loving home.

Convicted murderers have more rights than we do; and they are fed, clothed, and kept warm in the winter.

Please do not allow Gov. Weld to do this. Contact your legislators and representatives. Give us, who truly want to get off of Welfare, the chance to do so. Thank you.

P.S.O. news

The seventh grade is once again participating in the Continental Mathematics League, Pythagorean and Euclidean divisions. For the first meet in November Amanda Lang, Rachael Begley, Justin Buckley, Burke Davis, Ely Kahn, and Angela Parisi represented the class in the Pythagorean contest. Mark Whitman, Karen Niessink, Larry Adams, Matthew Conley, Jarrod Batts, and Chad Whitman were the representatives in the Euclidean contest.

In December the team for the second Pythagorean meet was Monique DeVoe, Justin Buckley, Burke Davis, Amanda Lang, Robert Meehan, and Rachael Begley. The team for the second Euclidean meet was Douglas Cameron, Chad Whitman, David Noble, Eric Snow, Taylor Devin, and Lauren Cassini.

High scorer after the first two meets in the Pythagorean division was Amanda Lang. In the Euclidean division Chad Whitman and Mark Whitman are tied for high cumulative score.

Student of the month

In the short time that I have come to know Jason Thayer, he has proven to me to be a student of rare qualities. As a member of the Advanced Woodworking class, he was a driving force behind easing the transition for me, and a big help in establishing a working environment for all of us in the Technology Education Shop. Jason has also produced two vanities that will be used in the bathrooms near the cafeteria. These vanities are an example of Jason's superior craftsmanship, found mainly among much more experienced woodworkers, his diligent work ethics and his devotion to excellence while meeting the needs of the entire school community. He willingly sacrificed his time, time that he could have used to build something for himself, and opted to make this contribution to the school.

Jason Thayer's efforts, attitude, and character are the epitome of the school's desire for all of us to "Strive for Excellence" and be better people in all aspects of our lives.

PSO Xmas tree fund raiser successful again

The Cohasset PSO Christmas tree and wreath sale was spectacularly successful again this year due in part to the assistance of Cohasset High Assistant Principal, John DeLorenzo. Mr. "D" recruited nine members of the High School Student Council to assist in distributing the trees and wreaths to the 150 customers that participated in the sale.

The net revenue of $2,500 was a 25 percent increase over last year's net revenue of $2,000. Adult participants in the tree project included Assistant Project Manager, Dennis Ford, Connie Afshar, Nancy Kinchla, Susan Pile, Dale Dickinson, and Doranda Edwards.

Students participating in the project included: Brendan and John Kinchla, Dan Baird, Joe Andrade, Peter Collins, Mike Riley, Matt Banks, Nate Fiore, Willie Adams, Ben Chittick, Gerth Lubitz and Jamilah Afshar.

Scouts honor their own

The Boy Scouts of Troop 28, Cohasset recently held their Court of Honor.

Congratulations to all of these boys for the following achievements.

Jay Nothnagle: Environmental Science Merit Badge.
David Christoffel: Small Boat Sailing Merit Badge.
Tony Bramblett: Advancement to Second Class Rank.
Joshua Preston: Advancement to Star Rank.
Jay Nothnagle will be the troop historian.
Joshua Preston will hold the Quarter Master position.
Tony Bramblett and Mark Whitman will be Den Chiefs to assist with the Webelos.
Lodourco Sestito and Ryan Bishop will be patrol leaders.
Chad Whitman will be Senior Patrol leader.
Buck Hubbel and Scott Van Harteveli were officially welcomed into the troop.
Mothers also received special pins for the same rank their sons have achieved.

A surprise award was given to Jay Nothnagle for his devotion to scouting and to his community. This is the Howard Reid Award in memory of Dr. Reid, a local physician many years ago, who devoted endless hours for scouters and faithfully attended summer camp to be of assistance without compensation.

This is not an annual award. Jay's name will be engraved on the Dr. Howard Reid Plaque located in the Cohasset Savings Bank.

Thanksgiving is the time to reflect to give thanks, to share and to help others.

Many compliments go to these Boys Scouts of Troop 28, Cohasset, who spent their Thanksgiving Day participating in the Little Brothers, Friends of the Elderly in the South End of Boston, delivering meals: Chad and Mark Whitman, Ryan Bishop, Dave Christoffel, Frank Abadie, Buck Hubbal and father John Hubbal, Jerry Cogill.

COA connection

By Kathy Bryanton
Senior Center Director

INFORMATION FROM SHINE — Medigap Insurance rate relief - In the December Senior Vista News, there was an article on MEDIGAP Relief and Massachusetts House Bills 5530 and 6100. These bills included measures to subsidize Medigap Insurance for low income Senior Citizens.

These two bills, now known as House 6307, have been reported out favorably and passed by the House and are now in the Senate awaiting Senate vote. Please call or write our Senator, Robert Hedlund, at 722-2030, State House, Room 43, Boston, Massachusetts 02133, for his support.

It is nice to know that our representative, Mary Jeannette Murray, not only co-sponsored one of these bills, but that she also cast her vote in favor of H6307 and the Lambert Amendment which would establish a trust fund to subsidize Medigap premiums. For more detailed information, call the COA at 383-9112 and talk with Pat.

Those of you who attended the recent performance of Robin Lane, portraying some of our First Ladies, will all agree her performance was superb! It certainly was a wonderful way to spend a Sunday afternoon. Thank you to all who made this event so enjoyable. However, a special thank you should be noted to Karin Bartow, Marge Murphy, Libby Pompeo, and the "Friends of the COA" who coordinated this wonderful event.

Dec. 20 - Friday, Christmas Party — This year, our annual Christmas Party will be celebrated with a Christmas Tea Party to be held at the Second Congregational Church Hall. This promises to be a great time for all so please join us and make this event a festive fun which should be fun for all. The time is from 1 to 3 p.m. The Committee has been making plans for the past several weeks and are looking forward to sharing this day with all of our Seniors. Mrs. Alice Hall will be at the piano for the traditional sing-a-long (hope everyone will join us with their best singing voices); there will be raffles; arts and crafts made by our own Dorothy Bryanton's classes, will be on sale, and it now appears that Santa will arrive. A great afternoon to really get us all into the Holiday Spirit. Looking forward to seeing you all there!!!

At this time, I would like to thank the following people for their time, help and cooperation in preparing this party:

Anna Abbruzzese, Virginia Anderson, Henry and Mary Brennock, Margaret Casey, Regina Dunlap, Anne Leonard, Helen Murphy, Libby Pompeo, Marguerite Ritterhaus, and June and Lou Simeone.

In addition to the above mentioned, the COA is grateful indeed for the generous donation received from Thomas J. White, to enhance our Christmas Tea and other activities. Tom has been an ardent supporter of the Cohasset Council on Aging since he first received our annual report three years ago. He has great admiration and is genuinely impressed by all that is achieved and accomplished by the COA under the fine guidance of our Director, Kathy Bryanton. The entire COA Board enjoys working with Kathy and with Gerard Keating, the Chairman of the Board. Thomas J. White is the brother of Margaret Casey, our Program Coordinator. We are most grateful for his support.

* * *

And last but not least, it seems fitting indeed, to extend our thanks and appreciation to Sue Connolly, our Outreach Program Coordinator, and to Patricia Ryan, our SHINE Coordinator, for the wonderful work they have accomplished. They certainly must add much peace of mind to all those whose lives they have touched. Thank you both.

Nadeau given the nod as new fire chief

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

John Nadeau of Sanford, Maine, will be offered the job of fire chief.

The selectmen voted unanimously Monday to make an offer to the candidate. Selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Jane Goedecke will represent the board in attempting to negotiate a contract with the man.

In the meantime, Fire Chief Daniel Brock will continue to run the fire department. After Jan. 1, Brock will serve as acting chief, working week to week by the unanimous vote of the selectmen.

Selectmen interviewed four finalists earlier this month. Nadeau was the only candidate invited back for a second interview. Last week he talked with the board at length. He also toured the fire station and spoke with members of the firefighters union.

Nadeau has been deputy chief in charge of operations of the Sandford, Maine, fire department for just a year.

He holds an associate's degree in fire science from the Southeastern Maine Vocational Technical Institute and a bachelor's of science degree in vocational and personnel management from the University of Southern Maine.

From 1985 to 1990, he was deputy state fire administrator for Maine Fire Training and Education. Between 1982 and 1985, he served as supervisor of the Maine Fire Service Training. From 1976 to 1982, he worked for the Sanford Fire Department, achieving the grade of captain.

Sanford is a city of about 23,000.

His department managed to get throught the year without major layoffs due to a wage freeze agreed to by the union there.

In applying for the Cohasset job, Nadeau said: "My strong professional work ethic, 15 years of fire service experience, two college degrees, graduate work in executive leadership, proven work history and emphasis on customer service are personal assets that I'll employ to achieve your community goals and objectives."

When he was interviewed by selectmen he spoke at length about getting the staff involved in the decision-making process and he talked about doing some marketing for the department. He said that training is the key to getting the best from a small staff and talked about how call firefighters, if properly trained, can provide back up for the career firefighters.

"Volunteerism is alive and well but it's not going to replace professional firefighting," Nadeau said. He said the call men help the most with working building fires are do not often respond to accidents or smaller fire calls.

He talked about various ways of attacking a fire and pointed out that there is a need to make decisions based on the circumstances.

While he said he believed regionalization could work, he also pointed out that this part of the country is reluctant to give up the sovereignty involved.

In response to questioning about the length of a commitment he was willing to make to Cohasset, Nadeau said he liked what he had seen and had no plans to look elsewhere.

"I wouldn't be interested in less than three years," he said.

He added that he needs to be challenged and wants to be happy in his work.

"I like to be part of an aggressive firefighting team," Nadeau said.

Nadeau pointed out that firefighting is the most dangerous occupation.

He brought out some questioning from Laugelle when he talked about the problems firefighters encounter when police arrive first at a fire scene, park the cruiser in front of the burning building, and attempt to go into the building.

He said the police, untrained and unequipped to enter the building, can become victims of the fire. He also said the fire trucks need clear access.

He talked about the common areas fire and police can work on and said that substance abuse is the greatest cause of fires in his hometown.

Nadeau said, in his interview, he thinks the 42-hour work week the firefighters in Cohasset have is probably ideal. In Sanford, the fire department works a 48-hour week.

He said he could be brought up to speed on this state's fire code in a half hour to an hour.

The resume Nadeau submitted to selectmen included 12 pages of information. Most of the information involved courses he has taken over the years.

There were more than 60 applicants for the position.

Open invitation

Friday, Dec. 20 at 9:30 a.m., a discussion on college adjustment, campus life and classes will be presented by a panel made up of several members of the Class of '91. The high school guidance department extends an invitation to all Cohasset High School graduates to come in, visit, and share their college experiences with our CHS seniors.

Book cover display

Book cover Posters created by third grade students in Mrs. Atkinson's class at Osgood School are currently on display in the children's room at the Paul Pratt library. The illustrations were created using a variety of media under the direction of art teacher Linda Stevens to promote National Book Month. The display will continue through December.

1991-92 holiday vacation program

The Recreation Department will be hosting an eight day school vacation program at the Deer Hill School, Sohier Street. The program will run Monday to Friday, Dec. 23 to 27 and Dec. 30 to Jan. 3, excluding Wednesdays, Dec. 25 and Wednesday, Jan. 1. Youngsters 5 to 12 may attend; the hours of the program are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Special rates are available for eight day registration and family discounts, daily rates are also available. The program will be coordinated by Ted Carroll and staffed by Summer Playground personnel. The program consists of Sports and Games, Arts and Crafts, and much more. To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791.

Art Center offerings

A New Work Exhibit by Mary Waring Barnes and Robert Harvey opens at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Jan. 7 and remains on display through Feb. 8.

An opening reception for the exhibit will be held Thursday evening, Jan. 9 from 6 to 8 p.m. The reception and exhibit, which includes a Gallery Artist show and SSAC faculty feature Julie Hawkins-Burnham is free. Gallery hours are Tuesday to Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

January also marks the start of a new term of adult and young artist courses and workshops. Brochures are available (call 383-9548) and registration opens to the public Jan. 9. Classes begin Jan. 21.

New this term are classes for youngsters in grades 6-9 and Saturday workshops for adults. "Fabric Art: Quilts and Collage Design" will be offered to 6-9 graders on Tuesday afternoons while "Drawing and Painting" will be taught Saturday mornings. Noted portraiture artist Constance Pratt teaches her specialty in the first Saturday adult workshop on Jan. 25. The one-day workshops run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and will include "Faux Finishes," "Monotype/Monoprint," "Watercolor," "New Directions in Clay," "Seagrass Market Basket," and "Hand-made Paper."

Charles Sovek will teach a four-day workshop Jan. 14-17. The renowned artist, who has been featured on television, radio, and in numerous publications, will concentrate on catching light in paintings.

Joni Jensen's two-day workshop on matting and framing will run Jan. 16 and 17. Students should bring one or two projects to class and must register by Jan. 8 to allow a pre-workshop consultation with Jensen.

For more information on SSAC programs, call 383-9548.

Businesses invited to 1992 Harborfest meeting Jan. 14

As a result of the overwhelming success of the 1991 South Shore Art Center Art Festival and Cohasset Harborfest, which brought over 10,000 visitors to Cohasset and prompted many requests for participation possibilities, the SSAC Festival/Harborfest steering committee is inviting interested local businesses and organizations to join the 1992 events.

Business and organizations interested in participating should attend the Jan. 14 meeting of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, at 7:30 p.m. The meeting will outline Festival/Harborfest participation guidelines and fees. Festival/Harborfest space will be limited to a first-come, first-served basis.

The Art Festival/Harborfest, which will again include exhibitions of fine and hand-crafted art, raffle, chicken barbecue, and a host of activities, is a wonderful opportunity to reach new audiences. For more information, contact Charlene Sullivan or Lanci Valentine at 383-9548.

William R. Cox

William R. Cox, 50, who administered poverty programs for the state in the late 1960s and recently worked for the welfare department, died at Boston City Hospital of complications from pneumonia.

Mr. Cox was born in Boston and graduated from Matignon High School in Cambridge in 1958. He earned a bachelor's degree from Stonehill College in 1962, attended Boston College Law School and earned a master's degree in philosophy from Boston College.

From 1966 to 1970, Mr. Cox administered a variety of poverty programs for the state through Commonwealth Service Corp. He then worked for the Community Services Administration of New England in Boston until 1984. In 1981 and 1982 he also worked for Sen. Edward Kennedy's office in Boston. Most recently he worked for the state welfare department in Boston.

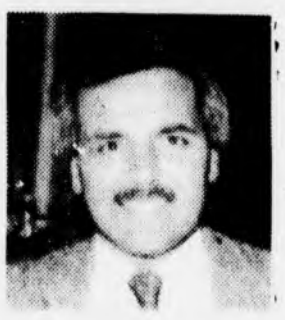
Mr. Cox lived in Hyannisport from 1965 to 1970 before moving to Cohasset. He returned to Barnstable in 1984. He was a member of Our Lady of Victory Church in Centerville, the Cohasset Yacht Club, the Hyannis Yacht Club and the National Cat Boat Association. He was active in the Cohasset community and served on town boards there. He was also a member of many professional organizations.

Survivors include his wife, Roberta (Quirk) Cox of Barnstable; five sons, Christopher W. Cox, Daniel J. Cox and Patrick W. Cox, all of Barnstable, Matthew T. Cox of Croix, France, and Michael P. Cox of Newport, R.I.; two daughters, Kathleen L. Cox of Scituate and Bridget A. Cox of Black Hawk, Colo.; a sister, Maureen Cox of Peabody; an aunt; and several cousins.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Dec. 11 at Our Lady of Victory Church in Centerville. Burial was in Lothrop Hill Cemetery, Barnstable.

Larry Murphy

A funeral Mass for Larry Murphy, 50, of Berkeley, Calif., will be celebrated Friday, Dec. 20, at 10 a.m. in St. Jerome's Church on Lake Street in Arlington.



He died Dec. 12 in California of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

He leave his mother, Helen Murphy; three sisters, Mary Dennehy of Cohasset, Helen Minihane and Lee Heisner; a brother, Robert Murphy; eight nieces and one nephew.

church news

Caroling at St.Stephen's

Christmas at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., will include caroling, worship, and a church school pageant. Parishioners will gather to go Christmas caroling on Sunday, Dec. 22 at 3:30 p.m. We will visit nursing homes and parishioners' houses to sing out our "joy to the world!" Carolers will then return to the church for hot cider and cookies and will hang the greens in church in preparation for Christmas. Christmas music will be in the air. Afterwards we will gather for a simple dinner. All ages are welcome.

Christmas worship will take place Christmas Eve, Tuesday, Dec. 24 at 5 and 11 p.m. The Family Service will be held at 5 p.m. The Children's Choir, Junior and Youth Choirs will sing at this service. There will be a candle lighting after communion for the singing of "Silent Night." The homily will be a children's story.

At 11 p.m. we will celebrate our Festal Christmas Eucharist. Prelude music will begin at 10:30 p.m. and include carols and anthems sung by the Adult Choir. The violinist, Anne Hooper, will join in the prelude and communion music. The worship will include sermon and communion followed by candle lighting for "Silent Night."

On Christmas Day, Wednesday, Dec. 25, worship will take place at 10 a.m. in the chapel. The Eucharist will be celebrated with homily.

The church will celebrate St. Stephen's Day on Sunday, Dec. 29 by joining St. Stephen's Church in Boston's South End for worship and a potluck supper. We will leave from Cohasset at 2 p.m. and experience the diversity of the Episcopal Church in a worship that is bilingual.

Epiphany is our celebration of Christ's appearing to the Magi who journeyed to Bethlehem to bring their gifts before the Christ child. The church school will offer an Epiphany pageant and evensong at 5 p.m. on Sunday, Jan. 5. The service will conclude with a candlelight procession out of the church into the courtyard where worshippers will sing accompanied by the bells of the carillon. "A stable lamp is lighted" and "What star is this."

Private pension offered part timers

To save money, the town wants to drop out of the Social Security for its temporary and part-time employees.

Selectmen voted unanimously Monday to offer the employees the option of getting into a private pension plan using the Public Employees Benefit Services Corp., PEBSCO.

The plan is optional. It will be up to the individual — at least initially — whether they are enrolled in Social Security or the PEBSCO.

The plan would allow employees to take the money with them if they leave. The amount deducted from an employees pay would be the same under either system but the town would not be required to contribute to a private system.

Social Security requires a deduction of 6.2 percent from an employee's pay. The PEBSCO system would require an employee contribution of 6 percent for the first year and then 6.2 percent in future years.

Since July, the town has been paying for the Social Security system. The full-time employees do not participate in Social Security.

Treasurer/collector Elizabeth Ripley said the town can save $24,000 a year by participating in the system. She said the town needs to take some action or there will not be enough money in the budget to cover the cost.

Recently, a gentleman came into our shop and asked for twelve lords a-leaping, eleven ladies dancing, ten pipers piping, nine drummers drumming, eight maids a-milking, seven swans a-swimming, six geese a-laying, five golden rings, four calling birds, three french hens, two turtle doves, and a partridge in a pear tree. Clearly a very tough customer!

We were fresh out of maids a-milking, so instead he carefully selected twelve lavender frogs a-leaping, eleven vases flowering, ten goblets sparkling, nine fish platters swimming, eight grapevine angels twining, seven candles glowing, six kitten carvings, five napkin rings, four ringing bells, three french soaps, two perfume doves, and a porcelain rabbit tureen which we happily gift-wrapped and shipped to his loved one.

The tangled web of lobster pots is still problematical

By Andrew MacLellan
Mariner staff

A tangle of lobster pots, fused together by the Oct. 30 nor'easter, have formed two-story mountains of wood, wire and rope in Greater Boston Harbor and are creating a navigational hazard for passing vessels, state officials say.

More than 22 "clumps" dot the sea bed from Boston Harbor and Broad Sound off the coast of Nahant up to Marblehead, according to Massachusetts Lobsterman's Association executive president, William Adler of Marshfield.

While the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has been slow to admit to the problem, at least a half-dozen state and federal agencies and the U.S. Coast Guard are concerned.

U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Cohasset, met Monday with several agency representatives at the MLA office on in Scituate to discuss how the necessary cleanup funds will be raised.

According to Adler, the mess was formed when currents uprooted lines with 10 to 25 traps apiece which snowballed across the ocean floor, picking up additional trawls until the sheer weight prevented further movement.

Alternately, trawls might have become snagged on rocks, acting as a magnet for passing lines.

The clumps consist of as many as 400 traps and 30,000 feet of line but represent only a fraction of the 200,000 pots estimated to have been lost in the storm, Adler said.

Some of the clumps are flagged with a morass of floating buoys, but others are concealed just beneath the waterline, he added.

Edward Thomas, the Federal Emergency Management Agency disaster recovery manager, asked Studds to appeal to the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of the Army to declare the area a hazard to health and public safety, thereby securing federal emergency funds for the cleanup.

If the Army Corps of Engineers is not persuaded, Thomas suggested lobbying state officials to pass legislation ordering trap removal.

In this case, the federal government will pick up 75 percent of cleanup costs under FEMA's public assistance program.

If all else fails, the state must foot the entire bill through an expensive mission assignment with the Army Corps or contract the job out to private salvage companies.

Private salvors charge up to $300 per hour, Adler said, and could remove only one large clump per day.

The Army Corps is suggesting the state leave the clumps and mark them with navigational buoys, an idea officials rejected because the traps will likely shift to a new location in the next storm.

Some local fishermen volunteered to pick through the rubble to salvage any usable stock, line or intact pots, Adler said.

Adler said the clumps are too heavy for commercial lobster haulers to raise and may require a barge and a monstrous crane to heave the bulk ashore.

Frank Mirarchi of Scituate, president of the Massachusetts Draggerman's Association said area draggers are cooperating with lobstermen on an informal basis.

"Some individual draggers are working with lobstermen to remove some of the smaller clumps," he said.

"The area off Boston is closed until midnight Dec. 31. After that we expect getting large quantities of lost lobster pots.

"We've contacted the Boston Harbor Lobsterman's Association and told them to stand by with boats to receive the gear."

Mirarchi noted that while the clumps represent a threat to mobile dragging gear, picking up lost pots is nothing new.

"It's not a unique phenomenon," he said. "It's happens every year."

Adler hopes the problem is addressed soon, as the Sail '92 celebration scheduled next summer for the Boston area is expected to draw up to 30,000 boats, Adler said.

Sailing from Spain, 150 Tall Ships are slated to anchor in Broad Sound, raising concerns that the heavy anchors could become lodged in the submerged mass.

Government Island lease moves

The Cohasset Lighthouse Corporation and selectmen seem to have come to an agreement on the form of a lease for the duplex at Government Island.

The selectmen voted 4-0 in favor of the form of the lease, which allows no change made in the building without selectmen's approval.

Joseph McElroy, president of the nonprofit corporation set up to run the duplex, said final plans for the building are not yet complete — but he expects models and plans will be released sometime in January.

A student from the Boston Architectural Center, Matthew Leak, has been working on the plans for several months. His work is complete but now the architectural team of George Kovach, Richard Grinnell and James Shipsky will work with Wayne Sawchuk, Steven Webber and William Higgins to refine more details.

Hamilton Tewksbury wrote to the selectmen recently urging that no change be allowed in the exterior appearance of the building. His letter specified that windows be kept in the same detail and that the color of the building be white with a red roof.

McElroy said he believes everything can be worked out in renovating the building to accomodate meeting halls on the first floor and two apartments on the second floor.

Selectmen asked McElroy to begin to work out details with the present tenants, people who have lived in the building for about 17 years.

McElroy said the present tenants would be allowed to stay if they were satisfied with the details of the renovations. They would have less space.

He thanked everyone for the work to date.

Volunteers deliver help — COA sends thanks

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Over 120 people attended the Cohasset Council on Aging's Volunteer Recognition Luncheon Wednesday at Kimball's By the Sea.

The event was organized to thank volunteers like Margaret (Peg) Smart, who helped a retired teacher recover $2,000 from Medicare for the cost of prescriptions which were reimbursable. And Helen Cody, who recovered $1,000 from Medicaid for a man who had just buried his wife using scarce private funds.

"It's a joy to work in Cohasset, the people are positive and willing to share. The volunteers in this town give 10-fold," Kathy Bryanton, the council on aging's (COA) director said.

Bryanton's 10-fold comment was more fact than fiction, according to Emmett Schmarsow, program manager for the 343 councils on aging in Massachusetts.

"Cohasset's Council on Aging has 251 volunteers, eight times the state average for another community its size," he said. If Cohasset reflected the average COA volunteer rate in Massachusetts, it would have only 30 volunteers.

Schmarsow said COA volunteerism around the Commonwealth had increased six percent this year, but added that state appropriations to COAs was down.

The council paid special tribute to the late Raymond Remick, who was the coordinator for the senior shuttle service from 1980 - 1990. Remick was remembered as a hands-on coordinator."When there was no one to drive the shuttle, Ray did," shuttle volunteer Joseph Buckley said. His wife Dorothy accepted a plaque and gift from the council in his memory.

Coalition explores feasibility of creating fire district

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

For the past two months, local town administrators and executive secretaries from the South Shore Coalition have been discussing creating a fire district.

Coalition director Jean Christensen said 14 communities in the Metro West district — which includes Wellesley, Framingham and Natick — have been looking at new ways of doing business, of delivering services, for several months.

"We're interested in getting a document in place whereby communities could enter agreements to provide services," she said.

Christensen is acting as a facilitator, providing information to the South Shore communities about what has been going on in Metro West.

"We're not promoting it," she said.

The South Shore Coalition includes Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

She said not all coalition towns are interested, and two other non-member communities — Kingston and Plymouth — have expressed an interest in exploring the concept.

Scituate town administrator Richard Agnew said last week the coalition is looking at putting together a joint service agreement that selectmen then could enter.

"It's more substantial than mutual aid," he said. "But obviously, the towns would have to be contiguous."

Agnew envisions some sort of pact among Scituate, Norwell, Cohasset and Hull — and perhaps Hingham.

"I'm interested in Marshfield because of Humarock," he said.

A small fire station is located in Humarock, but other emergency equipment from Scituate would have to travel about 10 miles to reach Humarock.

A lot of questions would have to be answered if it is determined a fire district is feasible, said Agnew.

How would insurance rates be affected, what controls would there be — who would administer it — what about finances, how could labor hurdles be overcome, those are some of the questions, he said.

"We don't want to give the impression we are creating an authority. We are not."

Agnew added that funds for a fire district would be outside the limits set by Proposition 2 1/2.

"This is not just to save money, although that may occur," said Agnew who was Needham executive secretary before coming to Scituate a year ago.

Previously he was town administrator in Marshfield and assistant executive secretary in Plymouth.

"We're trying to get more bank for the buck. We may be spending the same buck."

Scituate spent nearly $2.058 million for the fire department budget in fiscal year 1991.

The present year's budget of $2.063 million does not reflect any wage increases for the firefighters. Contract negotiations are at the point of fact finding.

Safe homes update

Parents from 151 households (involving over 250 students) have registered their homes for the Safe Homes Program to date.

"The Drug and Alcohol Committee would like to thank those who have made donations," said Keith Knowles, chairman of the committee.

"If you have not received a Safe Homes pamphlet or misplaced it, you may pick one up at the Cohasset Town Hall. Parents who registered their homes last year should send it in again this year for the annual update. The committee will continue accepting Safe Home returns through Jan. 1. " he said.

The number is up from last year's level of participation and Knowles said he considers the increase quite successful.

The official list of Safe Homes will be mailed to participants the week of the Drug Free Weekend (Jan. 31 to Feb. 2).

The address to return a signed pamphlet is to: Safe Homes Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, 02025.

"If you have any questions concerning the Safe Homes program, please call any member of the Drug and Alcohol Committee: Ted Carroll, Elaine Davis, Robert Jackson, Sandra Kent, Ralph Kidder, Keith Knowles, Linda McCarthy, Kathleen O'Sullivan, Susan Shumaker, Ellie Waal, and Tom Wigmore," Knowles said.

Winter afterschool recreation

The Recreation Department will begin accepting registrations on Monday, Jan. 6, for Pre-K to Grade 6, Afterschool Recreation activities, to be held at Deer Hill School, daily, Monday to Friday, 3:30 to 5:30 p.m., starting the week of Monday, Jan. 27, for a 6-week session.

Monday to Thursdays are programs for Grades K to 6. A child may register for as many days or programs offered. Fee rates have been established to allow for children to participate in multiple programs.

Fridays are dedicated to Pre-K children, age 4 and 5 and two program options exist, arts or games. Registration and program information forms will be coming through the schools, for Grades K-6 during the week of Monday, Jan. 6.

Office hours

The Cohasset Recreation Department office will be open on an intermittent basis through the holidays, due to vacation schedules.

Special School Vacation Programs and some adult programs will continue meeting through the period of Monday, Dec. 23 to Friday, Jan. 3. All programs resume their usual schedules Monday, Jan. 6. Regularly scheduled children's programs do not, however, meet through the school holiday vacation period except children's programs scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 21, will meet.

Afterschool recreation

Registrations for Afterschool Recreation Programs for children, Pre-K through Grade 6, will begin Monday, Jan. 6. Registration forms and program details will be coming home, via schools, for Grades K-6, during the week of Monday, Jan. 6, and programs are slated to commence, each day of the week, Monday to Friday, the week of Monday, Jan. 27, from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m., Deer Hill School.

Remember, registrations do not begin until Monday, Jan. 6, and children will be enrolled on a first to register basis, as all class sizes must be restricted.

Aero-Circuit Training Classes

Aero-Circuit Training classes usually held on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 6:15 to 7:15 p.m., at Town Hall Auditorium, do not meet on Tuesday, Dec. 24, Dec. 31, but will meet as scheduled Thursday, Dec. 26, and Jan. 2.

and Advanced groups, do not meet during the last two weeks of December. A new session is scheduled to begin during early January, and registration info will be forthcoming.

Other Adult Programs

Program participants in other adult Recreation Department programs should consult their individual program instructors for information regarding any program schedule modifications during the holiday period of Monday, Dec. 23 to Sunday, Jan. 5.

Landscape Design Course

Due to the overwhelming popularity of the December Landscape Design Course, taught by professional landscape design architect, Greg Bilowiz, a second session class will be formed during January and is scheduled to begin in late February at Cohasset High School.

Furniture Refinishing Classes

The Recreation Department is pleased to announce that Kenneth Sargent, of Country Workshop, will again offer Furniture Repair-Restoration-Refinishing classes that are scheduled to start during January. Registration for this program is ongoing, as new sessions are formed about every five weeks. Call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791 for either more details, or registration.

Ski Trip Program Survey

Any student in Grades 5-12 who has not received a ski trip program survey and would like to participate, may pick up a survey in the foyer of Town Hall, right outside the Recreation Office.

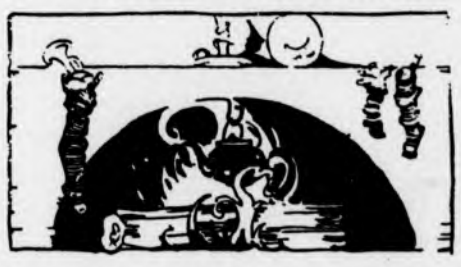
The survey is designed to help us keep abreast of changing community needs. Your participation in this survey will help us to better serve you. Both skiers and non-skiers are encouraged to participate.

January Ski Trip

Registration information, regarding a January Ski Trip, for youth age 10 to 18 years, will be forthcoming, via local news media in early January. Please watch for details regarding the January Ski Trip, which will be to Wildcat Mountain. Remember, a number of program registrations for both children and adult services, will begin in early January, the week of Jan. 6.

Summer sports camps

For planning purposes of participants the Cohasset Recreation Department will publish a general outline for summer 1992 sports camps. Camps will be offered for Lacrosse, Soccer, Basketball, Baseball, Movement Exploration and Softball during various weeks, throughout the summer, beginning in late June, through August. Camps will be for both girls and boys and encompass ages 4 to 18 years.



Bernard Audit named visiting professor

Bernard Audit of Cohasset has been named a visiting professor of law at Boston University's School of Law.

Audit, who specializes in commercial contracts and international business transactions, comes to Boston University from the University of Paris, where he is a professor of law. He has also held teaching positions at the Tulane University School of Law, Universite Rene-Descartes, the University of Nanterre and the University of Angers.

In 1987, Audit served as director of the Center for Studies and Research in International Law and International Relations at the Hague Academy of International Law. He is a member of the International Law Association, the Comite Francais de Droit International Prive, and serves as executive secretary of the Centre d'Etudes Juridiques Europeennes d'Urbino.

Audit received a diploma from Ecole des Hautes Etudes Commerciales in 1963 and continued his studies at the University of Paris. He graduated from Harvard Law School in 1969 and received a diploma from the Hague Academy of International Law in 1970.

Marie C. Price's a.m. kindergarten class delivers the meaning of Christmas:

...People have good Christmas trees up. Santa Claus, different colored lights on bushes and on the houses.

Mark Adams

...Santa Claus is coming. It snows and there are beautiful lights on the trees.

John Andrade

...I feel good about Christmas and I feel good about my family and friends.

Timothy Anton

...We put the lights on our tree. Santa Claus and Grammy and Grampy come to visit. We go sledding, make a snowman and build a fort. And sharing and going to church.

Eric Belz

...My birthday. I like Christmas trees and snowball fights.

Jake Berger

...My Grandparents come to visit for Christmas. Santa Claus. Pretty Christmas ornaments to hang on the tree. I like Christmas food.

Jennifer Buckley

...Decorating the gingerbread house and then eating it.

Conor Buick

...I like when we play snowball fights and I like it when we put the ornaments on the Christmas tree. I help my Mom cook Christmas cookies.

Ryan Cannistraro

...I go to my Grandma's for Christmas. We help my Mom decorate the tree. I like going sledding and skating and making snowmen. I like it when Santa comes to my house.

Shelly Carter

...Bright lights and Christmas dinner with my family.

Christopher Clark

...We go over my cousin's house. I feel happy at Christmas time, I like to put decorations on the tree and I like it when I can go out in the snow.

Nicole Durant

...Mom puts Christmas songs on the radio. I get cookies from Grandma's bakery.

Jennifer Fiori

...I think about Santa Claus and where he lives. I like to decorate the house especially the fireplace. I like it when it snows and I like to make snowmen. I like it when all my family comes over.

Michael Hajjar

...Having good friends. Having a nice family and a good Christmas tree. Going sledding and seeing Santa and someday I want to see his elves.

John Higgins

...I like to tear open the wrapping paper. I like to put the decorations on the tree and go outside and look at all the snow and Christmas lights.

Jonathan Lang

...I really love having a big Christmas tree. I love my family and I like to go skiing.

Jamie Litchfield

...I like playing in a snow fight with my Mom and Dad. Christmas trees. I like playing with my brother — he's one year old. I like making Christmas tree decorations.

Caitlin McArdle

...Grandpa Joe comes to take pictures. Its fun. I bake cookies.

Tiana Montoya

...Christmas makes me think of Rudolph. I like to decorate the Christmas tree and the house. My Grandmother sleeps over for Christmas — I have fun with her.

Brenna O'Donnell

...I think Christmas is fun. My brother and sister are home for Christmas. We go to see Santa Claus and we decorate our house with sparkles and nutcrackers and an angel in the living room.

Johnna Redick

...Going to the Mall to see Santa. Making Christmas cookies. Rudolph and decorating my Christmas tree.

Summer Richards

...I like Christmas. Christmas trees, reindeer, snow and putting lights on the tree.

Kenn Silvia

...Christmas makes me feel happy. It makes me feel that my family loves me very much. My uncle and aunt and Grandma come to visit.

Emily Simmons

...Reindeer, Santa Claus, Granny and Grandpa take me to Child World. I go to see "The Nutcracker" with my family.

Gillian Simons

Amanda Delorey, 3, beems as she poses for a photo with Santa and Mrs. Claus. The Clauses are also known as Henry and Mary Brennock. (PLD photo)

Wrestling season opens

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The wrestling season for the Skippers begins this week and Coach Torrin Sweeney is predicting a good year.

The first match was scheduled for Wednesday night, after the Mariner press time. CHS meets Norwell on the mats.

Sweeney said he expects the Norwell match to be a close one.

The Cohasset High School wrestling team is hosting its first tournament in nearly 10 years later this week.

The 10-town tournment begins at 10 a.m. Saturday in the CHS gym, according to Coach Sweeney.

The teams involved in the matches include: Cohasset, Holliston, King Phillip, North Attleboro, Norwell, Rockland, Roxbury Latin, Scituate, Sharon, Somerset.

The coach said he expects his team should do fairly well in the tournament scoring.

He said he predicts the CHS wrestlers will fall into the middle of the pack against the group invited to the tourney.

"Anything else would be nice," Sweeney commented.

The last wrestling tournament hosted at CHS was in 1982 which was a year Coach Sweeney graduated from the school.

This year the wrestling team includes 28 grapplers. Of the 28, about 22 are coming back, according to the coach.

He wasn't ready to comment on individual players before the season actually began but he promised to keep The Mariner informed over the course of the season.

because so many coming back no names.

"The experience level quite high," Sweeney said. "There's a good amount of experience."

"I'm looking forward to a good dual meet season."

The team is picking its captain or captains this week.

Rick Rourke is assisting the coach again.

Rourke has been coming back, working as assistant coach on a volunteer basis since he graduated from CHS five or six years ago.

Rourke was an ace mat man for CHS and Coach Sweeney.

"People are concerned," Sweeney said. "They give time."

Towle scores hole-in-one

Richard W. Towle, Jr. of Cohasset has scored a hole-in-one at Cohasset Golf Course in Cohasset and entered the 31st annual Drambuie Rusty Nail Hole-in-One Sweepstakes. The 139 yard ace was scored at hole #6 on Sept. 21.

Towle, Jr. and Gene Peterson, the golf professional who validated the sweepstakes entry are both eligible to win the grand prize, a one-week trip for two to Scotland, VIP tour of the Drambuie Liqueur Co. Ltd. and $1,000 cash. Second and third place prizes include five personalized, professional golf bags and 100 sets of a dozen Titleist golf balls.

The sweepstakes runs through Dec. 31. All entrants will receive a customized Hole-in-One bag tag from the Drambuie Liqueur Company Ltd. in Edinburgh, Scotland.

To receive your free 1991 Drambuie Rusty Nail Hole-in-One calendar including the 1991 tour schedule, please write to: Drambuie Rusty Nail Hole-in-One Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 2777, Stuart, FL 34995-2777.

CHS Rowers 2-and-0

The Cohasset Alternative School rowing team breezed to its second victory Dec. 7 in an open-water youth rowing competition sponsored by Chelsea High School.

Rowing the John Warren II in the Big Boat category, the crew completed the 1 1/3-mile course in 17:59 finishing ahead of Chelsea High School. Overall, Cohasset finished third among ten open-water rowing crews from Boston-area high schools and a crew from Connecticut on Chelsea Creek, Boston, in what is the only race of this type in the country among high school students.

The team included Alternative School students Jason Curtin, Joe Clements, Mike Equi, Jason DeMoulin, John Kisiel, Chris Bartow, and Harry Curtin (alumnus); and Erin McAllister, coxswain, and Adam McNamara.

Their record this year now stands at two wins, no losses. Cohasset won the Weir River Row Oct. 26 and set a new course record in the Surf Boat category. Their next competition will be the Snow Row in February.

Real estate market begins to blossom

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Thirty-four percent more single-family homes were sold in Cohasset this year than last.

That figure is an anomaly among those gathered by the Plymouth Board of Realtors for a study the board released last week on the South Shore real estate market.

The study tracks sales and price trends for 18 communities in the Plymouth-Quincy market areas, including Cohasset. The board's study showed that single-family home sales for those areas were up this year over last, by 14 percent on average. Cohasset home sales represent more than double the South Shore average.

The study divided single-family homes into three categories: homes under $150,000, homes between $150,000 and $275,000, and homes over $275,000. The only type of homes the study concluded that did not sell as well in 1991 as they did in 1990 were those in the $275,000 and over category. Despite the fact that category experienced a three-percent drop in sales this year, the average price of the homes which sold in Cohasset for 1991 is $294,451.

Executive Officer of the board, Marilyn Moran, partially explained Cohasset's non-conformist statistics by the sales of a few million dollar homes. The million dollar figures skew the statistics, she said, which are based on averages. Moran added, though, that Cohasset continues to be one of the most popular towns for transferees.

"With transferees we are normally talking upper management, and ocean towns are going to have drawing power for those coming into the area," Moran said. She added that upper-level managers have felt the effects of the recession less than other managers and can afford to buy more expensive homes.

Chris Ford, owner of Hallmark 100 Properties in Cohasset said in the long-run he believes Cohasset homes will hold their value better than other comparable ocean-side communities because "there is virtually no remaining buildable land."

Bob Mullins of Dwyer and Mullins Real Estate of Cohasset agreed and said the scarcity of homes ensures Cohasset's long-term value.

Cohasset's 1991 average sales price fell eight percent from that of 1990. The decrease reflects the study's conclusion home sales prices for the South Shore, which also averaged an eight percent decrease.

The drawing power of Cohasset's beauty for prospective buyers is matched by its school system. Approximately eighty percent of Cohasset's High School Class of 1990 went to a four-year college, and another five percent attended two-year schools. Bob Smolko, owner of Atlantis and Smolko Realty in Hanover, said the key to maintaining property value in Cohasset is to keep the schools competitive, and to do that he advocates overriding Proposition 2 1/2.

"It is a real test for the community. Schools are a real factor for someone coming to Cohasset and spending $400,000 on a house," Ford agreed.

Cohasset recently voted down a proposal to overturn 2 1/2.

In addition to its school system, Cohasset is popular with executives because it's 20 miles from Boston.

1st Wrestling Tournament

By Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset hosted its first annual Wrestling Tournament in the Sullivan Gym last Saturday, and placed 5th overall in a field of 10 towns.

Nate Fiore took first place in the 135-pound competition by besting Scituate. Additionally, Cohasset won a second and third place and three fourths in the tournament. Steve Harrington lost a close match against North Attleboro for the 140-pound championship, and Jason Thayer claimed third place in the 152-pound competition in what assistant coach Richard Rourke called "the most exciting tournament match."

"Jason won third place with no time left on the clock," Rourke said. "He was down by a point and he pulled a reversal for two points at the very end; it was a great match."

Carlo Lagrotteria (119-pound), Jed Terry (145-pound) and Danny Baird (160-pound) each took fourth place in their respective weight class.

Assistant coach Richard Rourke was pleased with his team's performance and the tournament's success.

"We did really well," Rourke said. "The season looks very promising because we have a lot of really good underclassmen. I expect us to do well this year." The team will lose Terry, Thayer and Lagrotteria to graduation this year.

The tournament is Cohasset's own, and Rourke is happy to host again next year.

"We were involved in other tournaments, and last year we just decided to put one together here," Rourke said. "Assistant principal Jack DeLorenzo did an unbelievably large amount of work for us. The three of us (including head coach Torin Sweeney) were running around like maniacs, but it went well."

The following towns, from first place to last, participated: North Attleboro, King Philip, Holliston and Roxbury (tie), Sharon, Cohasset, Somerset, Scituate, Rockland and Norwell. North Attleboro wrestler Neil Gouck was named outstanding wrestler by the coaches.

Varsity, JV Hoop Teams are 2-0

By Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset varsity and J.V. teams defeated Hull last Friday night in front of what many might call a "capacity crowd." The varsity squad kept coach Arnie Reppucci happy by continuing to score over 60 points per game, defeating the Pirates 75-63. J.V.'s 56-33 victory leads coach Ron Ford to believe that "Cohasset basketball's future is nothing but bright." Reppucci is only slightly more enthusiastic.

"You wanna talk about a team effort," Arnie beams. "What you're seeing here is real team basketball."

When no means no

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Date rape is an issue that wasn't talked about much in the past.

But Dec. 19, the students in grades 9 through 12 at Cohasset High School sat through an assembly that dramatically portrayed the issue with all its trauma and miscommunication.

The Tufts Univerisity Players — four actors who care about the issue — went through a simple scenario on the auditorium stage. A sofa was the primary piece of stage furniture. The curtains were left drawn throughout the simple skit.

The acting wouldn't have won prizes anywhere. The lines were hackneyed.

But it was dynamite.

What was amazing was that the scene was happening on the stage of CHS.

The program was paid for by the Social Service League of Cohasset and the PSO. It was offered as part of the health curriculum.

It was the first time the Tufts Players had ever performed for a high school audience. The group got started in response to a problem of campus rape at Tufts. All four of the players — two women and two men, students and former students at Tufts — said they decided to get involved after a friend was raped.

They usually perform for college audiences.

The story opened with two young people making a date. They were clearly interested in each other.

The pair separate. She talks to a girlfriend. He talks to a male friend of his own.

The scene moves to the date, a party. He brings her a beer she said she didn't want. But she accepts it anyway. They decide to go to his place to listen to a record album he says he just got.

They go to his place. She kisses him as they talk. He comes on more. She says no. He keeps trying.

The stage lights darken.

He says: Trust me. She says: No.

In the shadows, the couple seem to struggle.

The lights come up and the young woman bursts in on her girlfriend, who

"We were involved in other tournaments, and last year we just decided to put one together here," Rourke said. "Assistant principal Jack DeLorenzo did an unbelievably large amount of work for us. The three of us (including head coach Torin Sweeney) were running around like maniacs, but it went well."

The following towns, from first place to last, participated: North Attleboro, King Philip, Holliston and Roxbury (tie), Sharon, Cohasset, Somerset, Scituate, Rockland and Norwell. North Attleboro wrestler Neil Gouck was named outstanding wrestler by the coaches.

Varsity, JV Hoop Teams are 2-0

By Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset varsity and J.V. teams defeated Hull last Friday night in front of what many might call a "capacity crowd." The varsity squad kept coach Arnie Reppucci happy by continuing to score over 60 points per game, defeating the Pirates 75-63. J.V.'s 56-33 victory leads coach Ron Ford to believe that "Cohasset basketball's future is nothing but bright." Reppucci is only slightly more enthusiastic.

"You wanna talk about a team effort," Arnie beams. "What you're seeing here is real team basketball."

When no means no

By Patricia Desmond

Date rape is an issue that wasn't talked about much in the past.

But Dec. 19, the students in grades 9 through 12 at Cohasset High School sat through an assembly that dramatically portrayed the issue with all its trauma and miscommunication.

The Tufts Univerisity Players — four actors who care about the issue — went through a simple scenario on the auditorium stage. A sofa was the primary piece of stage furniture. The curtains were left drawn throughout the simple skit.

The acting wouldn't have won prizes anywhere. The lines were hackneyed.

But it was dynamite.

What was amazing was that the scene was happening on the stage of CHS.

The program was paid for by the Social Service League of Cohasset and the PSO. It was offered as part of the health curriculum.

It was the first time the Tufts Players had ever performed for a high school audience. The group got started in response to a problem of campus rape at Tufts. All four of the players — two women and two men, students and former students at Tufts — said they decided to get involved after a friend was raped.

They usually perform for college audiences.

The story opened with two young people making a date. They were clearly interested in each other.

The pair separate. She talks to a girlfriend. He talks to a male friend of his own.

The scene moves to the date, a party. He brings her a beer she said she didn't want. But she accepts it anyway. They decide to go to his place to listen to a record album he says he just got.

They go to his place. She kisses him as they talk. He comes on more. She says no. He keeps trying.

The stage lights darken.

He says: Trust me. She says: No.

In the shadows, the couple seem to struggle.

The lights come up and the young woman bursts in on her girlfriend, who

Have a mammogram

Judy Fitzsimmons, public health nurse, announces that Cohasset Social Service League is again sponsoring a mobile mammography service. This fully-equipped office van makes it easier for women to have mammograms.

Most women who have not had one, give inconvenience and cost as the reasons. This service is convenient, inexpensive and is accredited by the American College of Radiology. The best means of controlling breast cancer is through early detection. The survival rate for breast cancer approaches 100 percent if detected early.

It takes only 20 to 30 minutes of your time. The one thing worse than having breast cancer is having it and not knowing it. All women are at risk, do something before it's too late.

MAMMOGRAPHY SCREENING

Saturday, Jan. 11, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., the van will be located in front of the Congregational Church (near Town Hall).

Appointments are necessary.

WHO: American Cancer Society recommends that women 35 to 39 years have one baseline mammogram; 40 to 49 years have a mammogram every one to two years; over 50 years have a mammogram every year; under 35, a doctor's order is required.

HOW: Mobile Diagnostics, Inc., of Wellesley provides a fully-equipped coach which is comfortable, private and staffed by registered female technologists. The equipment is state-of-the-art low dose mammography unit. The x-rays are read by board certified radiologists and the results will be sent to you and your physician.

COST: Recent Massachusetts legislation mandates that, with a few exceptions, insurance companies must provide coverage for mammograms. The average area cost for mammography is $120 to $200. The total cost with Mobile Diagnostics, Inc. is $102 and they will bill your insurance company. If you have no insurance or your insurance does not cover this test, you can take advantage of the $80 cash price, payable on the day of the exam only, by cash, check, MasterCard or Visa. Some HMOs require you to have a mammography at their own facility. All HMOs require written permission or referral forms. Beginning last January, Medicare covers the cost of a mammogram every other year. It is each woman's responsibility to find out her insurance coverage. If Mobile Diagnostics, Inc. bills your insurance company and they do not pay, your bill will be $102.

APPOINTMENTS: Call the Cohasset Social Service League at 383-0771.

What's Open or Not

Wednesday, Jan. 1, 1992 is New Year's Day.

On that day, there will be no mail delivery and all banks will be closed, as will state and municipal offices, schools and libraries.

Retail stores and supermarkets will be open along with liquor stores and taverns.

The Mariner extends to its readers wishes for a happy and healthy 1992.

Reading is an adventure at Deer Hill

By Christine Phinney
Mariner correspondent

Should you ever find yourself stranded in the Canadian wilderness, fighting off bears, searching for your next handful of berries, and seeking shelter from the rain, it would be a good idea to have one of Katherine Whitley's fifth grade students as a companion.

Inspired by the novel Hatchet, by Gary Paulsen, this Deer Hill School reading group has become experts in survival.

Hatchet is the fictitious story of Brian Robeson, the 13-year-old sole survivor of a single-engine plane crash. On his own for 54 days, Brian's key to survival is his hatchet, a going away gift from his mother. Paulsen uses description and accuracy to make Brian's courage and triumphs believable.

"It seemed like we were in the story," Alex D'Urso said. "There was so much detail. It seemed so real."

Four weeks after reading the book, the fifth graders were still eager to discuss Brian Robeson. They spoke thoughtfully, as if discussing a classmate.

"He's kind of a normal kid," Ben Ketchum said.

Brian Morgan added that Brian Robeson was terrified.

"He never gave up though. He kept trying," Karyn Gray said.

Mrs. Whitley chose this book because she felt it was a survivors story. She thought this age group would enjoy the adventure.

Judging from her classroom, she appears to have been right. Covering walls, shelves, and tables are elaborate Hatchet projects including models, shadow boxes, and diaramas.

Alyssa McNamara and Katie Walsh made a three-dimensional paper-maiche model of the wilderness complete with the L-shaped lake, trees, sand, and Brian Robeson. Next to this model stands Ronnie Nicynski's Hatchet book cover. Inside is a colorful felt display of the wilderness.

Sitting on a table is Ben Littauer's own survival pack: egg and cheese breakfast, Peach-Whip dessert, Kool-Aid, Dial soap, fishing line, and Swanson's white chicken.

In addition to these projects, some students chose to write a newspaper story about Brian Robeson or an itinerary of his days in the wilderness.

Luke Caldwell played the character of Brian Robeson and was the guest star on the Nick "Geraldo" Herzog show. They discussed weapons, the importance of keeping a fire lit, and Brian's family.

They all agreed that Hatchet is one of the most exciting books they've ever read.

"It had a lot more feeling than other books," Ben Ketchum said.

The class has sent letters to Paulsen, a Minnesota resident. Also, they have videotaped their projects and special messages to the author who made such an incredible adventure seem so realistic.

All of Paulsen's books are in high demand these days at the Deer Hill School.

"Once they've read one of his books, they just want more and more," librarian Marjorie Murphy said.

The class may read Hatchet's sequel, River, later in the school year.

Clearly, these fifth graders developed a respect for this author's writing style and for his own experiences in the wild. As they'll tell you, Paulsen conquered the Iditarod trail, a grueling 1,049 mile sled-dog race across Alaska.

Even an adventurist like Paulsen would have to feel safe with this crowd, hatchet or not. He should title the key to this group's survival "Innovation."

Dance ballerinas, dance!

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

Ballerinas certainly have a lot more to do than dance.

We caught these busy Cohasset Community Center ballerinas putting together their costumes for a recital which they will perform for their biggest fans—their mothers and fathers.

Not too many of the little ballerinas had dealt with glue before, so instructor Michelle Krebs had to give lots of instruction on not sticking it in their hair, not eating it, and so forth.

Some of the ballerinas were a little unclear about what is was they would be doing for their recital. Others reported exactly what would be done, who was coming to the concert to see them, and what they were going to be whey they grew up.

I don't know how often it is any of us see little girls who are between four and five. But just being in a room with ten of them, for one whole hour, is a fixating experience. Just a note. Katie Stangl was sick last week, and we sure hope she gets better soon. We're sorry we missed hearing what she wants for Christmas, but we know Santa knows.

Elizabeth Goodman, a vivacious brunette, has a pony tail on top of her head. During the practice I noticed she paid rapt attention, and she's also a good gluer. She wasn't sure what the Christmas dances were exactly about, but she said there was only one thing she wanted for Christmas: the game "Guess Who."

Kate Kuppens was very talkative and reminded me a little of Carol Channing. She said she wanted a pink tea set (she was dressed in pink), games and something called the Hippo games, I think. When I told her I was so old I didn't know about these games Kate said "Well, I'm not very old, I'm four."

Brook Harrington insisted there is a special sewing machine made for four and a half year olds, and she needs this for Christmas. Also, she wanted a Cinderella doll and a circle make-up kit. She said the recital was going to consist of "Tap and ballet" and sing-along records. She wasn't sure about the costume.

After Christmas, Christine Sowyrda will turn five, she said. She wants a bike, a ballerina doll (she already is one) and books. "I can read Good Night Moon by myself, she said. She is not studying to be a ballerina, and she likes tap better than toe.

Willowly Ariel Thibault is four and a half and is studying to be a ballerina. When asked if she would like to dance Clara in the Nutcracker she quickly agreed she would. She said she attends other schools but she is not sure where the school is, although she tried hard to think of the street. She would like a little "Miss Singing Doll" and a baby doll.

Working very diligently on her red crown and red apron, Alicia Preston thought she'd mostly like dolls for Christmas...a baby doll and a Barbie doll. At home, Alicia plays soccer. When asked what her teacher, Michelle, might like for Christmas she thought she would like a doll too.

Bridget Charles was very secretive about gifts she was giving and/or gifts she'd like to get. A Barbie house would be nice. But all in all, she's a very private woman, thank you.

Bridget Charles was sitting right next to Lauren Putnam who wasn't even sure she wanted to tell me her name. I asked if she wanted a baby doll, she wouldn't even answer. Then, her mother arrived with two month old Nicholas and it was obvious she already had her baby doll. Although Nicholas is the apple of Lauren's eye, she wouldn't mind receiving Ariel the Singing Mermaid. When she first met Ariel Thibault she thought Ariel Thibault was the singing mermaid.

Now, let me tell you about meeting ballerina Andrea Beylyea. She is four and a half and the rest of her life is planned. I had to ask no questions, just said I was a reporter and she opened up:

Andrea said: "I play with toys. I play robber, but I am just a pretend robber. I would like a toy train and a little toy drum and toy flute, because I want to march in a parade. And when I grow up I want to be a doctor." She says her two year-old sister Emily would like an ordinary doll to be called Raggedy Ann. And I have no doubt Andrea will be a doctor.

When asked what she thought her tap and toe instructor would like for Christmas she knew, instantly: "Michelle would like a video camera and a movie camera and new tap shoes."

Bridget Laffin would like a Cabbage Patch kid, a hockey stick and a ballerina doll for Christmas. She saw Beauty and the Beast and yes the Beast sure did scare her, but at the end she was sad when the Beast turned into the Prince. Because Bridget had fallen in love with the Beast.

And so did I.

And I fell in love with the little Ballerinas, too.

• Krissy Pozatek sure had a visit from Santa early this year, that is to say that she can enjoy his coming even more than usual. Krissy has been accepted, early decision, to Middlebury College in Middlebury, Vt. That is good news for Mom and Dad, Zig and Ellie, as they won't have to do any worrying about acceptances all winter. Krissy will be right in her element there, she is quite the skier. She is currently on the Alpine Ski Team for Holderness, and is ranked 26th in the United States by the United States Ski Association in Slalom and Giant Slalom Ski Racing. She will also be skiing Varsity at Middlebury. A perfect example of working hard at the books as well as working hard at a sport. We are sure to hear more about Krissy, both on and off the slopes, and we wish her well.

• Theresa A. and Thomas W. Littauer of 72 Jerusalem Road are certain to have a wonderful Christmas this year ... they received their present a little early, on Dec. 5, when Theresa gave birth to a baby boy at South Shore Hospital. Hope Santa is good to you all, you are sure off to a great start.

• If you are wondering where they went, Colpitts Travel Agency has moved to 115 Ripley Road. Stop in and see their new home and ask Peg about bargains coming up in winter vacations. Judging by recent weather, we will all need one.

• Hats off to Elena Sestito Florist on 3A, who is donating $1 of every sale to the PSO for every tree sold. Between them, and the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce who donated $1,500 to the PSO/High School writing lab, and the PSO's own Christmas tree sale, it shows that people really do care about our students.

• If you don't think that class reunions are grand, just ask the CHS Class of 1937. Last week they held their reunion at the Red Lion Inn where they all met for lunch, with Libby Pompeo in charge of calling "the girls", and Burt Pratt in charge of calling "the boys". There were 25 people there (including spouses) and they claim that it was the best time yet. Arthur Lehr, Gerard Keating, Jeanette McNeill, Eunice Bushnell, Grace Pratt Wynoski, Eleanor Fulton, Jack McCellan, Florence Maynard Baker, Mary Rose Nardo Calvi, and Foster Cadose were all there. Here's to next year folks, may it be even better.

• We send birthday greetings to two Pompeos this week! Holly Pompeo, daughter of Roger and Ann, and Lynn Pompeo, daughter of Hap and Leah. Hope that you two wonderful gals have a super day and a super future, you are both special and you deserve it.

• Great news for Osgood students. Although everyone will miss Mrs. Kealey a lot, they will be happy to hear that Torin Sweeney will be taking over her job. Lots of you know Torin either through his athletic prowess when he was at CHS as a student, or more recently as the wrestling coach for CHS. Everyone knows that blond head and friendly smile, and know him for the hard worker that he is. Torin has been at the school all week getting to know the students, and will begin full time on Jan. 6. Be happy kids, he's great. We know that Torin will be happy, this is what he has aimed for all these years.

• Looking for a gift that will last forever? For a $20 deposit, you can reserve the 1992 CHS yearbook and receive a gift certificate to give your child. Total cost is $35. Call the High School office at 383-6100 through Tuesday, Dec. 24. Also available for $15, yearbooks from 1989 and 1990.

Santa and Mrs. Claus, sometimes known as Henry and Mary Brennock, listen to the Christmas lists provided by Robert Silvia, 2, and his cousin, D.J. Silvia, 4, during the Breakfast with Santa. (PLD photo)

Dear Santa

(The following letters from Santa were recently delivered to Marie Price's Kindergarten classes with the help of the students in Jo-Ellen Wood's Grade 8 English class.)

Dear John,

Ho!Ho!Ho! Merry Christmas! I'm glad to see you've been a good boy lately! Up here at the North Pole, it's very cold and it's snowing! My elves are getting very excited about Christmas and yesterday they let some of their energy out by having a gigantic snowball fight. However, Mrs. Claus put an end to that, and now they're back in the workshops, busy making beautiful things for all the good little boys and girls. My reindeer are hurrying to exercise for our long trip, and Rudolph's polishing his nose.

I'm very happy to hear that you helped to put the lights on the Christmas tree. I love coming down the chimney and being greeted by all those beautiful lights. Skating is one of my favorite things to do, and I'm glad to hear you like it, too. It makes me proud to hear that you enjoy buying presents for your family, for that means you are a very generous boy. I believe my elves are making something very special, just for you. Have a wonderful Christmas, John!

Love,
Santa
Meaghan McNamara

Dear Mark,

It is so busy here as Christmas-time gets closer and closer. I am afraid we are a bit behind schedule this year. The weather is awfully cold and no one wants to go outside or do their work.

Mrs. Claus says I must lose some weight or else the sleigh won't be able to get off the ground!

We had a terrible accident yesterday in the paint factory. Poor Luther, one of the elves, was stirring a big pot of red paint. By accident, he hit it with his elbow and the whole pot spilled all over him. Mrs. Claus is doing her best to wash him up.

Tell your sister Amy "Merry Christmas!" for me and be sure to give her a nice present.

Love, Santa Claus

P.S. Merry Christmas

Abby Pease

Dear Alicia,

Thank you for writing to me. I was very happy to hear from you. Everything is going well in the North Pole. The elves are busy helping me, and the reindeer are getting excited for Christmas. They are already practicing for their long journey.

Oh, I have something to tell you. We had a bit of a scare recently. Rudolph decided to go for a little walk, but he didn't tell anyone where he was going. Luckily one of his friends noticed that he was missing, so we all went to search for him.

Well, we did finally find him and he told us what had happened and apologized for taking off and scaring everyone. I guess he fell into a little ditch and was covered with snow and his nose lost its light. Then it got dark and without his nose to help him he got lost. When we found him he obviously had a cold, so Mrs. Claus started making some medicine for him.

Rudolph is fine now, so there is nothing to worry about. We are all very excited to visit your house on Christmas and hope you will be happy with what we bring. Merry Christmas.

Love,
Santa Claus and all in the North Pole
Special Elf-Jill Day

Dear Alex,

You have been a very good girl this year. I can't wait to visit your house for Christmas!

Right now Mrs. Claus and the elves are making some toys. Rudolph and the other reindeer are making some dinner for themselves. Everyone here in the North Pole is very excited about Christmas!

Yesterday after lunch the elves and Rudolph were outside playing in the snow, and guess what! Dancer got stuck in the snow. Well, everybody ran outside to help Dancer. With cooperation everyone pulled him out. Dancer was brought inside and Dancer warmed up next to the fireplace. All the reindeer are getting ready now.

Have fun playing in the snow with Sarah, David, Sean, and Kara this winter. Keep up the excellent work in Mrs. Price's class. And be very nice to Mommy, Daddy, and Kara.

Merry Christmas!

Love,
Santa

Special Helper-Jill Day

Dear Ken,

I live here in the North Pole, and its very cold. Mrs. Claus and I like to watch the elves skate, sled, and ski. Right not we are getting ready for December 24th, Christmas Eve, when I deliver presents to you and the world. The elves are making things to send, and Mrs. Claus and I are buying the runners for my sleigh.

Rudolph, with his bright nose, is always guiding the other reindeer with the map of the world so we don't mess up. They are going to get new harnesses from the elves this Christmas because their other ones are old.

One of my elves, named Kevin, wraps gifts with bows and ribbons. He also labels the gifts because he loves kids. Kevin was also one of the elves who helped the shoemaker and his wife make shoes overnight for the customers.

Well, bye-bye I have to go right now because the North Pole is a very busy place. So remember, Merry Christmas and have a Happy New Year.

Love,
Santa Claus
Kevin Wright

Dear Mark,

Thank you for the great picture and letter Mrs. Claus taped to our refrigerator. The elves have been working extra hard to make sure the gifts are super special this Christmas. The snow up here at the North Pole is beautiful and fun to play in. Have you had fun playing in the snow?

Last week I was helping Mrs. Claus decorate our tree. The ornaments look really pretty on the tree, but I would not find my special ornament. This ornament was a Christmas gift from a little girl in China. She had mailed it in a small box addressed, "Santa Claus North Pole." I opened it and inside was a doll with a white cotton beard, rosy glittering cheeks, a fat belly, a soft red suit, and shiny black boots. It was me, I loved it! I just couldn't find it! I began searching through all our boxes. After hours of searching, I found my precious ornament. An elf named Holly got up on the ladder and put it right up at the top. I stood back and looked at the tree. It looked so pretty.

Your dog sounds really silly, but he's cute. Take good care of it. Have fun in the snow! Merry Christmas.

Love,
Santa Claus
Alison Ritts

Dear Kristen,

Ho!Ho!Ho! Merry Christmas! I was very happy to get your picture and letter. We have something in common, you know. We both like to decorate our trees! It took us all day to decorate our tree this year because it is 100 feet tall and 50 feet wide. We had to have Dancer fly to the top of the tree to put the star on. There are so many ornaments on the tree! Candy canes, bows, angels, just about anything you can imagine is there.

There is a pond right next to my house and I can watch all the little elves ice skate. Once in a while, when I have the time, I go ice skating, usually with Mrs. Claus. She is a very good ice skater. She can glide around and do all sorts of jumps. One time, when I was watching the elves ice skate, one of the elves, named Jingle, hit a bump in the ice and went up in the air and did a flip. He landed right on his bottom. Don't worry; he's all right. I have to go now because I have to see what the elves are up to. Be good Kristen!

Love,
Santa
Tafana Fiori

Dear Matt,

I hope you also have a Merry Christmas. I really enjoyed your tree last year. It was very well decorated. Did you help decorate it? It is great that you are able to walk with your mom and dad.

It is so busy at the North Pole this time of year I barely have enough time to eat. I work twenty hours a day reading and writing letters, checking if children are naughty or nice, and making sure things run smoothly for Christmas. It is very cold this time of year at the North Pole, and one of our reindeer, Donner, has a cold. My chief stable hand has been nursing him back to health. He should be fit and trim for Christmas Eve. Merry Christmas and have a cool Yule.

Love,
Santa
Ryan Sawchuck

Dear Michael,

Thank you so much for your nice letter and beautiful picture. I love getting letters from children all around the world.

I see you are going to your Gram's for Christmas. You can be sure I will bring all your presents there. I also am glad to see that you enjoy skiing with your Uncle Bill. I myself enjoy skiing. In fact I spent all last week at a large ski mountain not too far from my home. I had a lot of fun there except that it was very cold. I had to wear my old winter jacket and my new one to keep warm. I had a lot of fun, but am glad to be home to my reindeer, elves, and Mrs. Claus.

You like to decorate your Christmas tree? Well, so do I. In fact, right now all my elves are in the living room decorating our huge tree with multi-colored lights, streamers, and other decorations. There will also be a large glowing star at the top. My tree is so big that it will take all day to decorate, but the results at the end of the day will be quite remarkable.

I am glad that you enjoy Christmas dinner. I like turkey, potatoes, beans, and stuffing with a glass of hot chocolate for my Christmas dinner. Mrs. Claus is the best cook and spends all of the day in the kitchen making Christmas dinner for us all here at the North Pole.

Anyway, I see that you have been a good boy this year and so you shall find some of the toys you want under the tree and in your stocking Christmas morning. Once again, thank you for your nice letter and picture. Stay good.

Love, Santa Claus

. . . comfort ye my people

In America the tide swells at Thanksgiving, crests at Christmas and breaks with the New Year. Five to six weeks that is our traditional "Holiday Season."

While Thanksgiving and New Year's are non-denominational civil holidays, Christmas is, after Easter, the most important event on the Christian calendar. With the strong Judeo-Christian underpinnings of our culture, it was inevitable that Christmas would highlight so much that is good in our society.

In the blending of secular and sacred that is uniquely American, the flow of this season is as a stream with particular islands (holidays), that command attention.

Ironically, when our economy is at its best—when the good times roll—the spiritual values of Christmas are most scant. Sure there are the obligatory TV scenes of the homeless being fed "all the fixin's" but the mood of the general populace is, "Why don't they get a job?"

In hard times, as these are surely for some that have never been down on their luck, people—all of us—feel more vulnerable. If Harry at the Cosmo-Never-Default Co. has lost his executive position, is anyone safe?

This year people seem more reflective about the less fortunate. We all know that but for the grace of . . . it could be us. It is in times as these that Christmas becomes that more meaningful. After all, part of its message is the fulfillment of the promise of salvation, renewal and hope. The event grows out of the prophetic tradition of Israel and the completion of such sentiments as those in Isaiah, 40:1

Comfort ye, comfort ye my people.

Who needs comforting? In a real sense we all do. There is no one who does not bear some burden or some secret pain and suffering—no one.

Whenever one of us would fall into the self-pity mode, my mother would trot out the well-worn saw: "If everyone hung their sorrows out on the clothes line at night ... in the morning they'd take their own troubles back." As with all cliches, its essence is truth.

Look around, while your load may be heavy, others are being crushed—literally. It's easy to give-in to the despair and cynicism of the dominant culture. Harder to live the message of Christmas, which celebrates the birth of a poor child ... in a barn. The joy of Christmas is the gift, not necessarily material (although this is not to be sneered at), but the giving of self — the giving of hope to those without.

As Matthew quotes Christ in the Beatitudes::

Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven...

Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy...

When thou dost alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth...

The wisdom of a child for every one. . .

—Richard Small

Red Cross sends thanks

The South Area office staff of the American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay would like to extend their best wishes at this holiday time to the many Red Cross volunteers who without, we could not serve the community. Below is a tribute to volunteers we came upon and wish to share with you.

As the old man walked along the beach at dawn, he could see someone, far down the beach, flinging something into the ocean. Time and time again, the person would bend-over, pick up something, stand up, and throw it into the water. Finally the old man caught up to the young man, and asked him why he was doing this. The young man replied that the stranded starfish would die if left in the morning sun.

"But the beach goes on for miles, and there are millions of starfish," reported the old man. "How can you really make a difference?" The young man looked at the starfish in his hand and then threw it into the safety of the waves as he replied, "It makes a difference to this one."

When working as a volunteer, it is tempting to say, but what difference can I, just one person, really make? But it really makes a real difference to that one life you touch, because of your efforts and that makes a REAL difference to the "Star Throwers" of the world. Thank you for being a Red Cross Star Thrower.

Another New Year's Eve approaches, and the old problem of "What are we going to do?", and "Where are we going to go?" once again raises its ugly head.

Years ago, dressing up and going out for the evening, party hopping, overeating and drinking — all was de rigueur, expected, demanded. But things are different today. It has become the norm for people to choose their own method of celebrating. Drinking to excess is frowned on, and people are staying closer to home. So if you and your "significant other" or special group of friends have not yet settled on plans for the evening, maybe I can give you a few suggestions.

For that traditional New Year's Eve of elegant partying and toasting the New Year in with dining and dancing, why not try Kimball's famous New Year's Eve package. A four-course meal featuring Kimball's incomparable cuisine, dancing all night, a New Year's toast, and no need for a designated driver — a room for the night and buffet breakfast to ring in the new year is included in the price. Call Kimball's at 383-6650 for details and reservations.

If dining out sounds just right, but you want to end the evening at home by the fire, how about the Chart House or the Red Lion Inn? Eat at your leisure in a relaxed and friendly atmosphere, and walk home under the stars! Or maybe veal parmigiana with spaghetti and a nice Chianti Classico is more your style. You can't do better anywhere on the South Shore than With Richard's. Call them at 383-0544 for menu options and reservation requests. You'd rather something a little different this year? How about a PuPu platter at KoKo Island. Eat in or order to take home, either way you'll have a great selection of the best Chinese food around.

What about those of you who are staying home for the evening? Having a party, you say? You're in luck. Cohasset has an overabundance of food options for you. Sea & Cheese, the Village Gourmet, The Strawberry Parfait....hors d'oeuvres, main courses, finger foods....they have it all, and for any budget. How about an Italian Night? Victoria's sub shop, Cohasset House of Pizza, Papa Gino's — take your pick or try something from each one! Or a Pizza and Antipasto party! The Aegean Fare is just waiting for your order. Put out a deli plate from Stop & Shop or Robert's Food Mart, and watch everyone dig right in.

What about those of you who are having friends in after dinner, or need something to finish off a pot luck supper? Take a chance! Be a little daring and sinful on this last night of the year. Try something really gooey or triple chocolatey or smothered in real whipped cream or caramel. The new French Memories bakery, or the Bread Shop, or the Strawberry Parfait can tempt and tantalize anyone's tastebuds! And they are terrific places to "window shop" before ordering. The fresh baked aromas are almost worth paying admission for! And don't stop at dessert. New Year's morning needs your attention also. Pick up your fresh baked muffins at the Log & Line, doughnuts at Mr. Donut, croissants at Stop & Shop, and torts and pastries at The Bread Shop or French Memories — but pick them up the night or afternoon before. Very few places are open on Jan. 1!

Call them this week for their holiday schedules and to order in advance. Start out 1992 in one of the nicest places on earth — Cohasset; and Happy New Year from the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

commentary

Their last meeting of 1991 was their worst one. They were horrid, spiteful children in their Dec. 16 film. Not a sympathetic character in the group.

Agenda item: car/repair service licenses. Selectmen bring in a man applying for a used car dealer's license and discuss whether or not he's paid his taxes. Selectmen appear to have no facts. Nothing new, selectmen seldom have facts. He said he's paid his taxes; it would appear paid taxes would have been pretty easy to check out before the meeting. But our selectmen don't check anything. Nah. They wonder aloud.

Next license renewal: Cohasset Imports and Peter Capozzoli. Since 1984 Peter's sold a lot of good cars and made a lot of good friends in Cohasset. But the town's been watching his business very closely these days. Selectman Rocco Laugelle said "This guy has more tricks than an actor." Well, Rocco should know. He's one of Tinytown's best. In my role as Agatha Christie, here's what I discovered last week.

At 3:30 p.m. Dec. 16 the building inspector whipped into Cohasset Imports like a bat out of hell to count cars. (You'll best remember the inspector from "the barber chair in the forsythia bush incident" last summer. When critical things are happening in town - forsythia bushes and such - he can be there on a moment's notice.

The building inspector discovered (alas!) 28 unregistered cars at Cohasset Imports, owned by Good Guy Peter Capozzoli (not a native).

There's a trick here. The information is not wrong. Neither is it right. Mostly, it is not explained. You're thinking - Wow! 28 cars! Wrong. That's the story they wanted written. And it's true Cohasset Imports has a used car license which allows it to show/sell 20 unregistered.

So. Let's start with the alleged eight additional unregistered cars. Four of those unregistered cars were not on the lot of Cohasset Motors. They were on adjacent residential land which Peter Capozzoli recently purchased. Peter has four dealer plates, and four of those cars on his personal property were cars being driven by his wife, two children and himself.

The Capozzoli family is permitted one unregistered car at their residence so Peter only used three of his dealer plates at his residence that afternoon. Remember. This is the nature of the car dealer business. Doctors deliver babies at rotten times; car dealers are always buying, selling, moving cars around on their lot. Maybe it's messy. But business invariably is messy. Not as neat as town government.

So, now that we've given a dealer plate to one of the four unregistered cars (four cars over the 20 allowed) on the property of Cohasset Imports, all we need to account for is three unregistered vehicles.

Shortly before the building inspector arrived that afternoon two cars from dealers had been delivered and Peter was in the process of taking care of them. Two other vehicles were yard vehicles, neither of which is for sale or is on display. So, the only violation I could find during an investigation of the facts was an excess of one unregistered car for one hour.

This is really not confusing. It becomes confusing when the selectmen mix it up, for their own purposes, because a friend asked them to mix it up.

Also, it must be noted that Cohasset Imports makes repairs on registered cars, too. Many people who buy cars from Peter go back to him for service on those cars. And there is no limit to the number of registered cars Cohasset Imports can have on its lot. When it was reported a neighbor produced a photo showing 42 cars on the Cohasset Imports lot - well, so what? What does that prove? Absolutely nothing.

Now. We all like to do favors for our friends. And that's a good thing. But when you're a Tinytown selectman you have an obligation to make good decisions for the town. You have a legal obligation to be impartial, fair, equitable. This is because you oftentimes act as both judge and jury on licensing issues.

Selectmen are very proud of their "power"; that's obvious because they talk about their power all the time, and how no one should take it away because it's theirs, and how they have to continually watch out for the advisory committee which likes to steal power. While it's true they have power and certainly have the right to use their power, they do not have the right to bedevil anyone in their homes or their places of business. By virtue of their being the law, they can't misapprehend it.

During the emergency inspection made on Cohasset Imports on Dec. 16 the building inspector didn't find a lot wrong at Cohasset Imports, and he knew it, which is why he told Tinytown selectmen it was a licensing issue and not a zoning issue. What he meant was it was a political issue.

Selectmen had planned a quick cable execution the night of the 16th - a Cable TV first. Only Capozzoli couldn't make it on four hours notice. If I were his lawyer, I wouldn't have let him go either.

Selectmen will be holding a hearing on the Cohasset Imports license sometime in January. I think the whole town should attend.

Tales from suburbia

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner columnist

My daughter announced recently that I drink-and-drive.

A telephone conversation with a classmate's mother informed me that her daughter had made a similar accusation. I suspect my daughter made this statement at school, probably in the presence of the principal and the PTO board of directors, thereby doing the most possible damage to my reputation and casting serious doubt on my abilities as a parent.

It won't be the first time that my daughter has embarrassed me, and I sure that it won't be the last.

I suspect that this accusation is a result of in-school drug-and-alcohol-awareness-programs. Which isn't a bad idea at all; it just doesn't go far enough.

It doesn't differentiate between a vanilla frappe and a bloody mary; or a Pepsi and a beer. Therein lies the problem.

Yes, I'm guilty as charged. I do drink and drive. A can of soda, a McDonald's shake, iced tea. But I have never consumed an alcoholic beverage while behind the wheel of my car. Or immediately prior to getting behind the wheel of the car.

But, to a six-almost-seven-year-old, drinking is drinking is drinking, and her mother is pond scum.

Her father fares no better: a request to fetch dad a beer from the fridge while he's sacked out on the sofa watching the basketball game results in a lecture on the Demon Rum.

It's like living with the latest convert to the cause of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Another problem with the drug-and-alcohol-awareness-programs is that there is no allowance made for an occasional drink, consumed in a responsible fashion, by an adult of legal age, at home or in a social setting, that does not result in intoxication. In other words, as far as I'm concerned, there's no harm in a beer at Fenway Park; a glass of champagne at a wedding; a glass of a good white wine with dinner.

There's a neo-temperance movement that's becoming very obnoxious and invading my home in the most insidious manner: through my daughter.

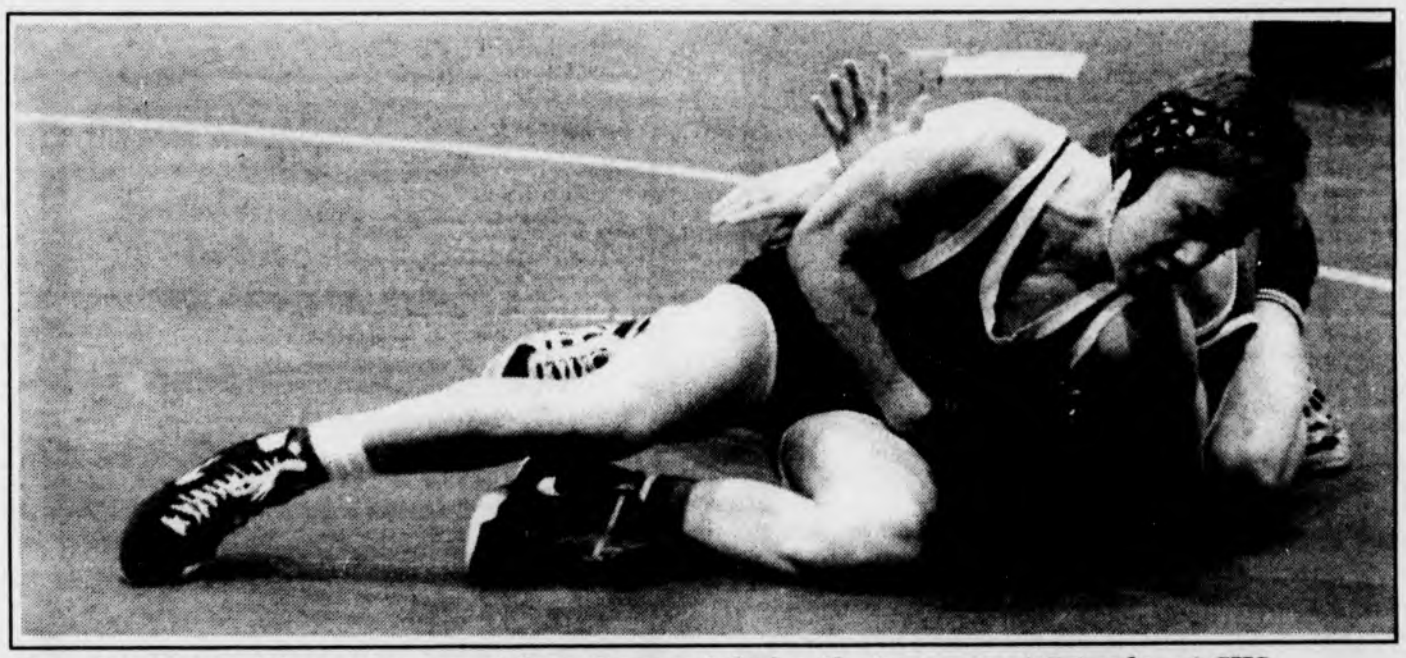
It's small comfort that I'm not the only one in this position. I just don't know quite what to do about it, except say, "Oh Caroline, lighten up."

A friend of mine vowed to swear off all alcohol after her teenage daughter had an unfortunate encounter with beer at a prom.

"That's it! I won't have it in the house anymore. How can I expect her not to drink if I drink?" my friend ranted and raved.

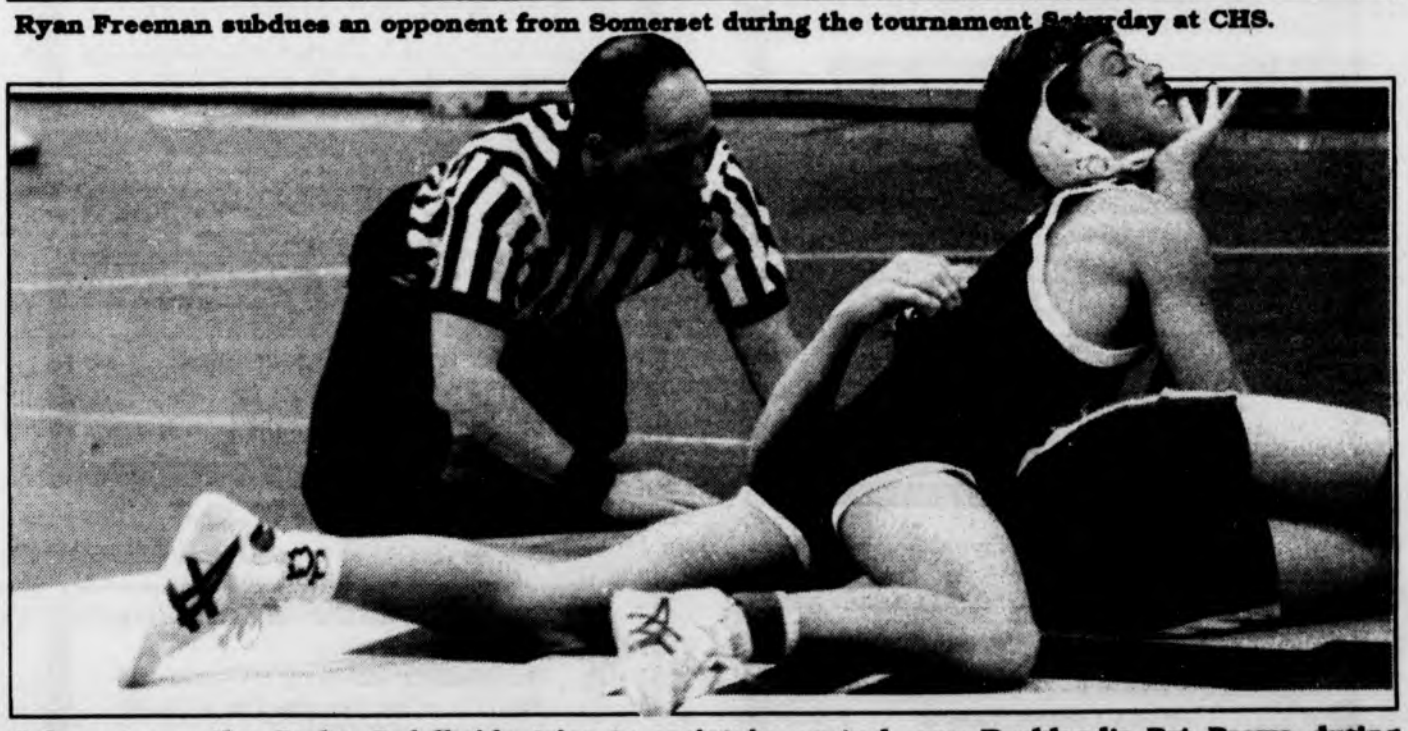
Well, the short answer is that you're over 21 and she isn't, I replied.

The longer answer is that my friend is a responsible person who does not drive or operate machinery after a beer. Nor does she allow other people to do so. My friend is able to have a couple glasses of wine, in her home, and suffers no ill effects from it.



I'm not talking about how much alcohol impairs a person, or about some arbitrary standard at which point a person is presumed to be impaired. I'm talking about the most innocuous consumption of a beer or a glass of wine or a drink by a person who does not drink alcohol with any regularity nor to any point where it endangers anyone, physically or emotionally. A casual, responsible adult drinker.

This is the message that didn't get across to my daughter in school. This is my job to convey it at home, by word and by action, and with the caveat that it's okay to NOT drink, but it's also alright to drink, at age 21, in a responsible manner.



This is NOT a black-and-white issue. It's about six different shades of grey.

Somewhere along the line we've forgotten one of those little hints we learned in school—the one about guessing answers on multiple choice tests. Eliminate answers that say "all," "none," always," and "never," as in "All alcohol consumption is bad," "Never consume alcohol," and "Alcohol consumption always results in intoxication."

No, of course alcohol is not necessary for human survival. Neither is ice cream. Too much alcohol makes you drunk; too much ice cream makes you fat. So, what's the solution? Moderation and responsible behavior. I don't know if that's taught, or if it can be taught, to first graders. I just hope that IS taught pretty soon, and prohibition can be repealed at my house.

Ellery Clark accepts Hall of Fame ring

Friday, Dec. 6, before a record crowd of 1,050, to cheers and shouts, the late Ellery H. Clark was inducted into the Hall of Fame.

His son, Ellery H. Clark, Jr., a spring and summer resident of Cohasset, accepted the gold ring his father would have received, had he been alive at 117, as well as the framed certificate and plaque of election to the Hall.

Clark achieved a number of firsts; first Cohasset man, first Harvard graduate, first Boston A.A. athlete ever to be elected, first American athlete from the first Olympic team to be so honored.

Ellery Clark, Jr., 82-year-old current National Champion in ten Kilometer racewalk, made the acceptance speech and presented four items to the Hall in his father's memory: the framed diploma for winning the high jump in Athens, 1896, which brought a rising murmur of astonishment and awe from the audience, then three medals, all requested by TAC; the 1897 point record-making national and world record for the National All-Around Championship of America, a special gold medal from the Boston A.A., and two gold medals, one won by him in 1930 at 56, the other by the junior Clark, 1991, then age 81, for a record 137 years for one father and son, both representing the B.A.A. It was a great, living moment in the history of American track and field and Cohasset had its deserved place.

Rep. Murray announces grants

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R- Cohasset, was notified recently by Elder Affairs Secretary, Franklin P. Ollivierre, that all three of her towns were awarded grants from the "Council on Aging in Massachusetts."

Cohasset's grant is to purchase a computer and defray utility (telephone) costs of senior center.

The town of Hingham will receive funds to continue the part-time Outreach Worker position, and provide for conference and training cost, dues and volunteer recognition.

The formula grants, based on each community's elderly population, provides municipal Councils on Aging funds to operate a variety of programs and services for the state's more than one million residents over 60.

Councils on Aging are a major component of Elder Affairs' service to Massachusetts elders. EOEA's grants are designed to supplement other local and federal resources.

The Councils serve as focal points for seniors to take advantage of a variety of services.

Services include: health screenings, information and referral, transportation, volunteer coordination and community outreach.

Established by the Legislature in 1971, the Executive Office of Elder Affairs is the principal state agency responsible for mobilizing the resources and establishing innovative programs to maintain the dignity and independence of elders.

The New Year's issue of the Cohasset Mariner will be on the stands Tuesday, Dec. 31. The deadline news copy for that issue is Friday, Dec. 27, at 5 p.m. Our production schedule is advanced to avoid working on the holiday.

Varsity J.V. Hoop . . .

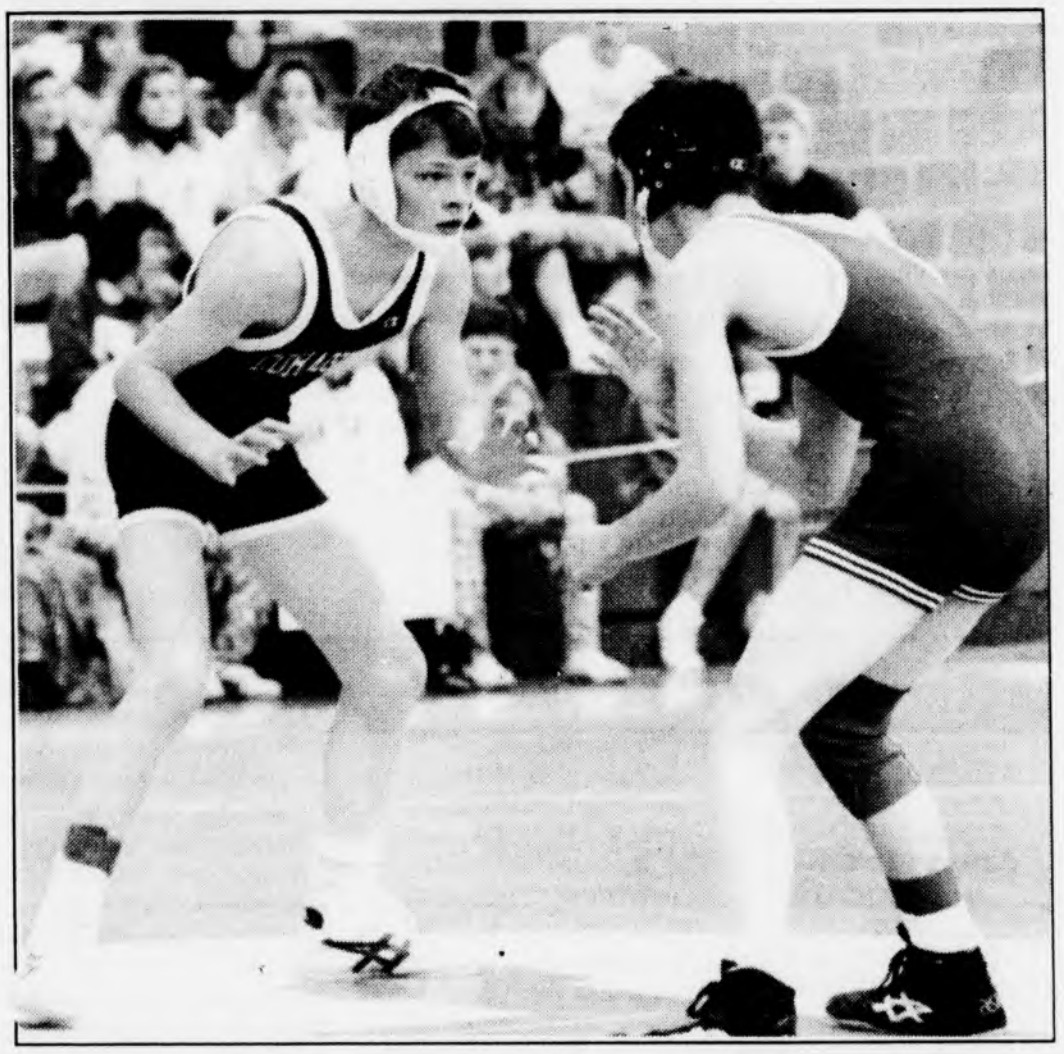
Up 71-60 in the waning seconds of the game, Cohasset went to the line after a frustrated Pirate drew a technical by shoving Bill Jordan, who drained both foul shots. Jordan put his team up two more from the line after another foul, and a last second Pirate three pointer was too little too late.

Kiwan Edwards' last-second three-pointer in the first half gave Cohasset a 38-28 lead by half-time; the Skippers would lead by at least six for the remainder of the game. Cohasset jumped out on the Pirates early in the first half with a 10-3 run that gave them the lead for good.

"Two guys that made a special effort tonight were Mack Campbell, who came off an injury, and Doug Ellinger," Reppucci said. "They didn't score a lot of points, but they played key roles tonight by moving the ball well and playing tough defense."



Edwards continued his scoring assault with 31 points and 13 rebounds, followed by Sheldon Morgan with 22 points. Freshman Dorian Bryant had an amazing 14 rebounds, 11 in the first half, and 7 points. Kevin Bishop ignited the team in the second half with 6 points and a couple blocked shots, and finished with 9 rebounds.

"I want to thank the crowd for their support, and I hope to see more of them," Reppucci said. Varsity basketball beat Norwell two days before the Hull game 66-64. "We've beaten two good teams, both of which are projected to be in the top five."

Coach Ford, a recent graduate of Bridgewater State, is looking forward to the next few years in Cohasset. "We have a young, tall, explosive team," Ford said of the junior varsity, pointing to Brian Patterson's 15 point, 18 rebound performance against Hull. "We played all 15 kids, so it was a total team effort." Joe Slotnick followed Patterson with 10 points, and Scotty Teriault scored eight. The junior varsity team beat Norwell 44-38.

The toughest opponent for the girls' varsity and J.V. has been health, according to J.V. coach Paula Knowles. While many starters are out, Knowles said there are good signs.

"We lost to Norwell, but we scored 17 points in the last four minutes," Knowles said. "And we played a dynamite game in Hull with only 8 players. We have a terrific defense." Both the J.V. and the varsity, coached by Laureen White, are 0-2.

recreation

Vacation Program

Parents who wish to register children for the School Vacation program, being held at Deer Hill School from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., may do so at Deer Hill any day during program hours. Fees will be calculated daily, or pro-rated for parts of a day.

Other Registrations

Registrations for a number of adult and children's recreation programs will commence Monday, Jan. 6.

Included in those registrations will be after-school sports games, arts and crafts, drama, basketball clinics, etc.

Late registrations will be held for Blue Hill ski lessons (until the bus is filled), basketball programs, furniture refinishing/repair, restoration classes and ski trips.

Afterschool program

The recreation department accept registrations Monday, Jan. 6, for Pre-K to Grade 6, Afterschool Recreation activities, at Deer Hill School, for the program that runs Monday to Friday, 3:30 to 5:30 p.m., starting the week of Monday, Jan. 27, for a six weeks.

Monday to Thursdays are programs for Grades K to 6. A child may register for as many days or programs offered. Fee rates have been established to allow for children to participate in multiple programs.

Fridays are dedicated to Pre-K children, age 4 and 5 and two program options exist, arts or games. Registration and program information forms will be coming through the schools, for Grades K-6 during the week of Monday, Jan. 6.

Aero-Circuit Training Classes

Aero-Circuit Training classes usually held on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 6:15 to 7:15 p.m., at Town Hall Auditorium, do not meet on Tuesday, Dec. 24, Dec. 31, but will meet as scheduled Thursday, Dec. 26, and Jan. 2.

Dog Obedience Training Classes

Dog Obedience Training classes, for both Beginners and Advanced groups, do not meet during the last two weeks of December. A new session is scheduled to begin during early January, and registration info will be forthcoming.

Other Adult Programs

Program participants in other adult Recreation Department programs should consult their individual program instructors for information regarding any program schedule modifications during the holiday period of Monday, Dec. 23 to Sunday, Jan. 5.

Landscape Design Course

Due to the overwhelming popularity of the December Landscape Design Course, taught by professional landscape design architect, Greg Bilowiz, a second session class will be formed during January and is scheduled to begin in late February at Cohasset High School.

Furniture Refinishing Classes

The Recreation Department is pleased to announce that Kenneth Sargent, of Country Workshop, will again offer Furniture Repair-Restoration-Refinishing classes that are scheduled to start during January. Registration for this program is ongoing, as new sessions are formed about every five weeks. Call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791 for either more details, or registration.

Ski Trip Program Survey

Any student in Grades 5-12 who has not received a ski trip program survey and would like to participate, may pick up a survey in the foyer of Town Hall, right outside the Recreation Office.

The survey is designed to help us keep abreast of changing community needs. Your participation in this survey will help us to better serve you. Both skiers and non-skiers are encouraged to participate.

Art Center exhibit

A New Work Exhibit by Mary Waring Barnes and Robert Harvey opens at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Jan. 7 and remains on display through Feb. 8.

An opening reception for the exhibit will be held Thursday evening, Jan. 9 from 6 to 8 p.m. The reception and exhibit, which includes a Gallery Artist show and SSAC faculty feature Julie Hawkins-Burnham is free. Gallery hours are Tuesday to Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

New this term are classes for youngsters in grades 6-9 and Saturday workshops for adults. "Fabric Art: Quilts and Collage Design" will be offered to 6-9 graders on Tuesday afternoons while "Drawing and Painting" will be taught Saturday mornings. Noted portraiture artist Constance Pratt teaches her specialty in the first Saturday adult workshop on Jan. 25. The one-day workshops run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and will include "Faux Finishes," "Monotype/Monoprint," "Watercolor," "New Directions in Clay," "Seagrass Market Basket," and "Hand-made Paper."

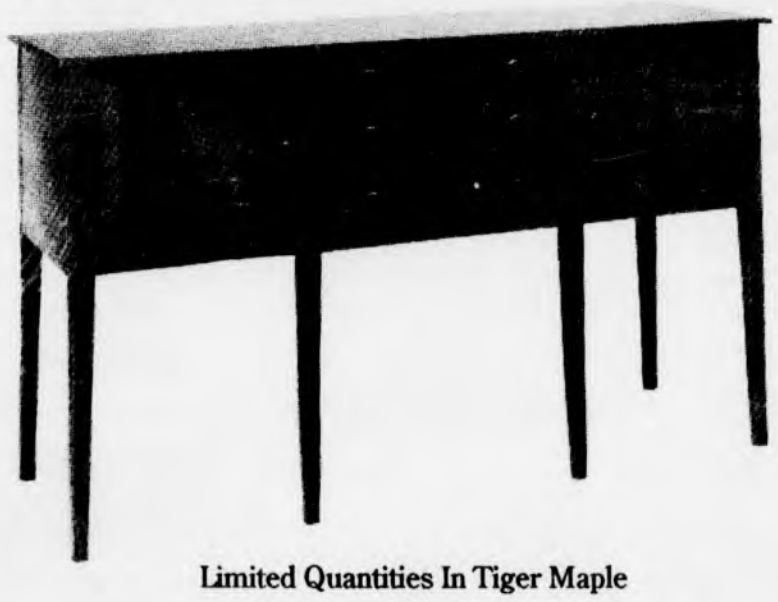
Charles Sovek will teach a four-day workshop Jan.

Cohasset Library story hours

Registrations are currently being accepted for winter story hour at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The series begins Jan. 30 and lasts for six weeks. There will be no story hour during February school vacation week. Sessions will be offered at 10 a.m. on Thursdays and Fridays. Each 45-minute program consists of several picture book stories and simple fingerplays, songs and crafts. Children must be at least 3-1/2.

To register, stop by the Children's Room, or call the children's librarian at 383-1348.

SSL offers cancer program



On Jan. 7, the Social Service League of Cohasset will present Dr. Dixie Mills, breast surgeon affiliated with the Faulkner Breast Center of Jamaica Plain and the Dana Farber Cancer Institute of Boston.

Dr. Mills' program will consist of a slide presentation and talk followed by a question and answer period.

One out of ten women will develop breast cancer. Early breast cancer detection means a better chance for treatment and cure of this disease.

The program will be presented at Walton Rodger's Hall, St. Stephen's Parish, 16 Highland Ave., Cohasset, at 7:30 p.m. There is no fee for this program.

The Finest Quality Authentic 18th Century Handmade Reproductions Available Today

Six Leg sideboards of this design were seen in rural areas of New England throughout the later part of the 18th century. While the tapered legs and stamped brass drawer pulls are characteristic of theFederal Period, the overall simplicity of this piece suggests an informal origin.
